

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1858.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER I.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

From the Atlantic Monthly.
Love fell in a little path Running through the meadow,
Holding in the tub she played Scrubbing by the shadow.
"Come, sweet, to love and reason,"
He said, "I'll be your reason."
"By and by," she mused reply;
"Love's still in season."
Years went, years came;
Light mixed with shadow;
Love met the maid again,
Dreaming through the meadow.
"Not so coy," urged the boy;
"List, in time to love and reason."
"By and by," she mused reply;
"Love's still in season."

Years went, years came;
Light changed to shadow;
Love saw the maid again,
Waiting in the meadow.
"Pass no more, my dream is o'er;
I can listen now to reason."
"Keep thee coy," mocked the boy;
"Love's out of season."

We publish the following examination of the legality of the Mormon Institution of Polygamy. It was addressed by an officer of the Army in Texas to a distinguished officer of the Army in Washington and which was published in a late number of the National Intelligencer:

POLYGAMY IN UTAH:

Or Squatter Sovereignty vs. the Common Law of the States.

The opinion has thus far prevailed among all who are strict in construing the Constitution, or, in other words, among a large majority of the nation, that even the abomination of Polygamy in a Territory is too strongly entrenched under the rights of squatter sovereignty to be reached by any prohibition of the General Government. The fruits brought forth, however, in Utah and Kansas by this kind of provincial independence, working under the immunity wherewith the ideas of the day invest it, warn us to seek diligently for some safe principle under which local abuses in the Territories may be curbed without taking ground for unwarrantable interference. New and untired it might be, but sound and constitutional it must be to take effect among a people so jealous as ours of aught that may compromise local institutions; yet there is such a principle, never yet mentioned, so far as I know, in this connection, which I believe would afford the needful ground for action without stirring up in the most morbid mind its growing fears of Federal intervention.

It is what, by a new application of an old term, might be called the common law of the United States. There are many legal principles and points of law which are common to all the States, and have been since their existence, and which are applicable to all localities, and which are the common law of the States, must necessarily be the law of the common domain. What is forbidden by law in every State cannot be legalized, and what is allowed by law of inherent right in all the States cannot be restrained in the Territories, which are their joint possession. This of course includes not political rights, which are peculiar to State Sovereignities, though common to them all, nor other things that are locally inapplicable; but the points of moral law and social right, on which the States are unanimous, suit every region. This principle has always been vaguely felt by the people, and recognised to some extent in a social and practical, though not in a broad legal sense. I am no lawyer nor much acquainted with the history of precedents, and I do not know that it has more than once been even partially or indirectly recognized by any court; but once, in a limited way, it was by the highest tribunal in an important case—that of Dred Scott. The grounds on which the decision therein was made were not only that the right of property involved was constructively sanctioned by the Constitution, but that it was founded on what was originally the common law of the States or Colonies, which had only been locally repealed with regard to some of the States and still had effect in the Territories. The Federal Constitution merely recognised what that common law had established, and, had it been silent on the subject, I believe the right would have sustained by the same court as pre-existent to the Constitution and not repealed by it. That court, I opine, recognized but a single point in a principle of national law which has never yet come broadly before it; for if this common law of the States is valid in a Territory as to a right of property, it must be valid as to rules of right and wrong which concern the general welfare as deeply and the people more universally; and if a right of property becomes valid in a Territory because it once existed in all the States, and still does in a portion, more surely ought my social right or moral restriction to become valid in the Territories, when it always has, without interruption or exception, existed in all the States. Polygamy is a crime by the laws of all the States, and even has been. No man, rich or poor, carries with him from any State to a Territory the right to plurality of wives; but every man, poor or rich, carries with him a right to one wife, which polygamy, as a monopoly of the rich, would impair; and every woman so migrating carries with her a right to that social equality and freedom which polygamy is known to destroy. Consequently, polygamy cannot be legalized in the common domain, because repugnant to the common law of the States. If a Federal court could not, merely on this deduction, punish it as a crime, it could, I believe, on this alone pronounce on its illegality and release those who are oppressed or restrained by it, and it is to this extent the difficult matter of polygamy is reached by law already.

What is by the Constitution of the Union or the universal law of the nation unlawful in its common domain, the common Government of the Union has a right to prohibit and consequently punish. Congress could not exempt a Territory from the common law of the States, because no such powers, express or implied, were granted to it; but when once that common law is recognized, Congress has the same implied right and duty to carry it out in the Territories which it has to provide them with executive and judicial officers, with garrisons, and other means of order and safety. It has in a late instance acted on this principle; for, though it was not named, the action could be based on nothing else. Why did Congress forbid the Territory of Kansas to legislate on the subject of slavery? Because it presumed; as the Supreme Court afterwards decided, that the old common law of the States on that subject already existed there, and was paramount to any law Kansas could make. It could with the same propriety forbid Utah to modify any other domestic institution over which the same common law is paramount. Squatter sovereignty could as safely be restrained from polygamy as from abolition. In the Territories their lack of basis is identical, and yet the stricter constructionists, who live in dread of imaginary usurpation, have assimilated the right of a polygamist to that of a slaveholder.

A Federal statute to prohibit polygamy would not long be wanting were the people convinced that one could be passed without impairing the principle which guards the safety of local institutions. Such fears might well be entertained if in such enactment Congress were governed merely by its own will. But how could the danger arise from a law of the Union which takes the unanimity of State law as its guide? or how could any State be aggrieved by a National law to punish beyond that State's jurisdiction what she herself would punish within it?

Robbery within each State is punished by its own laws; robbery on the ocean is punished by a law of the Union, and no State is injured by it. A law from the same source to punish polygamy in the common domain of the States could involve no more danger of usurpation than does the law to punish piracy on the common highway of nations; nor could such a law involve any more peril if directed against any other practice which the States repudiate in common. I do not cite the cases of piracy and polygamy as identical throughout, the one being against the common law of nations, and the other against the common law of the States; but they are perfectly analogous so far as concerns the safety of allowing the General Government to punish any crime committed outside of the States, which all of them would punish within their respective bounds.

The most that squatter sovereignty can claim is the right to all local legislation not incompatible with the Constitution and laws of the United States; and the common law of the States as here defined is, I assert, as much a part of the unwritten Constitution of the land as is any other principle too nationally inherent to need parchment for its basis. Such a principle may long remain latent, as this has done, till events call it into action. For half a century after the written Constitution covered without quenching it, it was not even discussed, and when it became a theme for agitation only one bearing of it was perceived; and it was long before even that was judicially admitted; but I am convinced that it only bides the approaching time of its need for recognition in its broad application. The single bearing of it which the written Constitution constructively confirms was naturally the first to be recognised; and those which it does not repeal will follow at the call of events.

The rights of squatter sovereignty to licentious abuse have been defended on mistaken grounds of liberty of conscience; but that liberty which every emigrant carries with him from a State to a Territory does not allow him to sanctify what, by the law of all the States, is a crime. As he cannot go from his own to another State and adopt polygamy as a part of his religion, he cannot do it on going to the common domain; neither can a foreign emigrant bring with him a greater license than is possessed by a native citizen. Neither Utah nor any Territory we have acquired brought with it any old local rights incompatible with the common law of the States; nor could any such be lawfully guaranteed by treaty, especially in any acquisition intended to become any thing more than a subject province. Polygamy, though not so high a crime, is as much within the category of crimes in every State as murder, and the one is in our country as repugnant to religious sanction as the other. We may at some future day acquire a territory on the Pacific sufficiently open to the Asiatic emigration to give it a majority of Hindoo population; and they under the glorious rights of squatter sovereignty may establish a more venerable though not a purer than our institutions; for who could refuse to the mythic Brahmin what is allowed to the unpoetical Joe Smith? If the followers of the latter can sanctify polygamy, those of the former may as justly legalize the burning of the polygamous widows by the dozen and the car-crushing of mad devotees by the score. Yet, if the common law of the States against crime is to be powerless before squatter sovereignty, religious murder will enjoy the same immunity as priestly brothels.

It may be argued that the extension of a prohibitory law over the Territories would eventually prove insufficient, since the abuses it aims at, though for the time being repressed, could revive in the same region under a State Constitution. In reply I would say let early prevention obviate the need of a remedy which later could not reach the disease; let the early planting of wholesome law root out the germ of future corruption; or, if such preventative fail, let no sovereignty be allowed to germinate along with such pestilent growth. Among the fallacies wherewith the ideas of the day have invested squatter sovereignty is one which may be called the right of intrusion. Because by the Constitution new States may be admitted by the Congress with a republican form of government, it follows on strict construction that every pretender of a State must be admitted, if, without any other element of fitness, it presents that empty form which even a Haytian Republic could offer. When a depraved and lawless frontier province, whose sovereign mob counts but half the constitutional basis for one representative, has per force to be admitted as a State because it presents a certain parchment form, the work perhaps of only one faction of its rabble, then truly strict construction strains at a gnat and swallows a camel. But this right of intrusion is an absurdity which must disappear before the necessities of our growth. The right to admit implies the right to reject; and the admitting power must be the judge of fitness, in all requisites save the two that are named. There must be a republican form of government and no trenching on the jurisdiction of other States. The naming of these two does not bar the use of discretion as to others which experience may show to be essential, nor make the lack of those two the only objections to be considered. The framers of the Constitution had no eye to "manifest destiny" when they produced their few meagre provisions relative to Territories and new States; yet this vagueness, being adaptable to a wide range of conditions, was doubtless better suited to a future whose wants they could not foresee than any specific rules they could then have framed. If our domain continues to widen as it did during the first half of this century, we must ere long have Territories which will have to bide a longer pupillage and a more thorough renovation of population than any have yet done, before they can presume to claim admission to the family of States; and we will probably have others which will never become eligible for that adoption. The right to acquire domain carries with it the right to govern, and the consequent right of adapting the Territorial administration to the capacity of the governed, and of continuing it as long as circumstances require, though the term be endless. The inherent right of the people to local self-government is, in a Territory, subordinate to the inherent right of the General Government to rule over what it holds or acquires for the States, whose common interest it must guard; and either of those rights can cede to the other according to the ability of the inhabitants to make and execute their own laws. Our Constitution does not recognize in all races the inherent right of self-government, nor does reason recognize it in any so long as the inherent capacity for it is lost. A fragment of population in which that capacity is undeveloped or extinct is not of 'the people' in the constitutional sense of the word. No one would claim that rank or quality now for a savage tribe or a penal colony, nor will it a few years hence be claimed for any population which approaches the condition of either. Should we, then, hereafter have provinces in a permanent and deserved state of pupillage, they would have little grounds for complaint and we as little for apprehension, so long as State law continues unanimous in all essential rules of right and wrong, and extends those wholesome rules over the common domain. It is that unanimity of State law in all that most concerns the social fabric, which, more than the Federal Constitution, makes us one people, and when it ceases no compact can preserve the bond of union.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, JUNE 24, 1858.

About two weeks after I had finished my late article under the above title, I was told that my argument had been anticipated five years ago by Mr. Chas. J. Peterson in Graham's Magazine for May, 1853; but on reading his able essay for the first time, I perceived, though there were points of identity in both arguments, their bases were different, as they assumed two distinct principles of law for meeting the case of polygamy. Though the difference ought to be obvious, it might not be so to a hasty perusal; and hence a brief note to explain it may not be amiss. Mr. Peterson argues that as the basis of our colonial and State legislation was the common law of England, the main body of the same, as such, and under its old denomination, must still be in force in the Territories; but he gives no rule whereby to determine what portion remains unrepealed. The persistent refusal of the Federal courts, however, to recognise such a principle, at least with any breadth of application, renders it hopeless that Pagan abuses in the Territories can be reached by it; and the jealousy of a portion of the people as to things which the body of English common law might interfere with would prevent its being taken up as a guide for Federal legislation on the Territories. There would be no such objection to taking for that guide the unanimity of State law, which all would understand, none need be shy of. The common law of the States, which, as I assume, must necessarily be the law of their common domain, is not the common law of England, nor any thing derived exclusively from it. It consists of all legal principles and points of law on which the States are unanimous, and which are applicable to all localities, whether originating from colonial or State statutes from general and established American custom, or adopted portions of English common law, or French and Spanish civil law. Neither does it matter, so long as the States are unanimous on any one point, whether they take it from one source or not. If all the States have laws against polygamy, derived in different ones from all those sources, the unlawfulness of the practice is still as much the common law of the States, and ought just as much to extend over the Territories as if the prohibition were all taken from a single code. Portions of English common law enter into this common law of the States not because they have come from the Saxon portion of our ancestry, but because they now belong to us; not because they have been for ages English, but because they have become universally American. The decision of the Dred Scott case, made, as I conceive, under the common law of the States, could not have been based on an application of English common law to the Territories.

TEXANUS.

WASHINGTON, July 26, 1858.

I have read with pleasure and profit your interesting paper on the polygamy of the Mormons, also the article in Graham's Magazine on the same subject from the pen of Mr. Peterson, to which you refer in your note of the instant. You, I think, are right as you go, and Mr. Peterson, though his paper is one of great ability, is wrong.

There is no common law of the United States as a separate and independent Power; but every State has its common law. That common law was principally derived from the mother country. It was the birthright of our ancestors, and emigrated with them to the colonies—or so much of it at least as was suited to their circumstances. There were three elements in the common law of England at the exodus of our fathers: the Roman, the Saxon, and the Norman, or feudal. The Norman element was left behind; or if any portion of it was brought over, finding a congenial soil, it, like a sickly plant, withered and died. The maxim of the Norman element of the common law, "Nemo potest exuere patriam," so cherished and strenuously defended by the mother country, has never for a moment been recognized here; and it was in opposition to that favorite maxim of England that we made the war of 1812.

We, as well as our fathers, have always recognised the Roman element of the common law, that "every one is at liberty to choose the State of which he wishes to be a member." This is the maxim in the code of the Roman republic so beautifully eulogized by Cicero in one of his orations—I think it was for Cornelius Balbus, for it is over forty years since I read it, when he was exclaiming, "O glorious laws, when no one, contrary to his will, can be deprived of his citizenship; when no one, contrary to his inclinations, shall be obliged to continue in that relation." "The power," he adds, "of retaining or renouncing our rights of citizenship is the best foundation of our liberties." The common law, as it has been naturalized here, is a part of the law of every State; it comprehends and includes the social customs and moral relations of the whole people, and in some measure their religious habits, though not the creed. But, apart from this common law, which belongs to each and every State of the Union, there are laws, recognized by all civilized and Christian nations, which apply not only to each of them as a separate and independent State, but to the Union as a single State. These are the laws of nations. The General Government is not authorized by any provision of the Constitution to acquire or govern Territories not organized into States; nor was such a provision necessary; for the Constitution constitutes the States of the Union, for certain specified purposes, a separate and independent political Power. The General Government has, under the laws of nations, the same rights, within the terms of that Constitution, which England, France, Russia, or any other independent Power possesses; and it may rightfully, therefore, not only acquire territories and colonies, but provide for their government when so acquired.

Had the Constitution of the United States not been adopted the several States would have been so many sovereign and independent nations under the laws of nations. They are so still, where the Constitution has not modified those laws, and the laws of nations thus become a part of the municipal law of the Confederacy. Any domain acquired belongs, therefore, to all the States, not under the Constitution, but under the laws of nations; and every person in every one of the States of the Union has the right to go into the common domain with all the rights he or she has at home; but with no more nor greater rights. And under no circumstances, either of law or policy, can that which is a crime, and punishable by the laws of the separate States, be allowed in the common domain as the right of any body. As you justly remark, every man is entitled, in every State, to one wife and no more; so every woman is entitled to one husband, not a part of a husband. Now, this is an absolute right, and the ninth amendment to the Constitution secures to the people, women as well as men, all their rights. And so long as that amendment forms part of the Constitution, polygamy, even were it not a crime by the laws of every State in the Union, could not be legally established or even countenanced in portion of the common domain, because it nullifies the rights of an entire sex, constituting one-half of the whole people.

SIDNEY.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, NOVEMBER 5, 1858.

Custom has made it necessary upon the advent of a new paper, that the Editor should present himself before the foot lights of public opinion, and indicate his course and policy. We shall not trouble our readers with any lengthy disquisition. Our salutation shall be short, and we trust understood.

We have embarked in the enterprise of publishing a paper in this Valley, because we believed the interests and wants of a large portion of the people of the Territory, required an exponent differing essentially from any hitherto published in their midst, that the necessity of a "newspaper" in its true signification was demanded, local in its nature catching the current of events upon its mirror and reflecting them back to the people.

We did not come here to make war upon "this people," but it is our intention so far as our efforts and abilities can extend, to aid in correcting abuses and errors, and particularly those relating to the administration of public affairs. We are satisfied that many exist, and in the discussion of them we shall be guided by their rules of courtesy, which should always be manifested in an open fair argument. People are appealed to, through their reasoning faculties and discussion is the legitimate means used to accomplish it—the barrier of exclusiveness which has so peculiarly surrounded the people of this Territory, should be broken down and a more free and candid interchange of sentiment be maintained. If in developing the resources of this Territory and thus contributing to the prosperity of the people, is a matter of consideration, then all proper appliances to bring about this result, should be encouraged. The spirit of exclusiveness which views a brother with a jealous eye, disturbs the harmony of the political system and creates distrust.

This Territory is the common property of the people of the United States, and any attempt by Legislation or otherwise, which seeks to violate it, interferes with individual and constitutional rights. Emigration should be invited and the emigrant should be met, not with barricades and bloody hands, but in the spirit of friendship.

There are questions peculiar to "this people" which must from necessity assume a local and political aspect and we shall discuss them fearlessly and fairly.

We design so far as we are able to make our paper eminently local and present from week to week a faithful record of events and condition of affairs generally, thus endeavoring to present to the people, far removed from us and those at home a true and faithful transcript, and not leave them to draw their own conclusions from the too often highly colored representations of correspondents.

We shall endeavor to present to our readers a summary of interesting news generally so far as our limited space will permit. With this declaration upon our part, we submit our case and will await the verdict.

OUR CHRISTENING—VALLEY TAN.

This name will doubtless excite some curiosity in the "States" as to what it signifies, and we will therefore make an explanation.

Valley Tan was first applied to the leather made in this Territory in contradistinction to the imported article from the States; it gradually began to apply to every article made, or manufactured, or produced in the Territory, and means in its strictest sense, home manufactures until it has entered and become an indispensable word in our Utah vernacular, and it will yet add a new word to the English language. Circumstances and localities form the mint from which our language is coined; and we therefore stamp the name and put it in circulation.

Errors.—There will doubtless appear in this issue, many typographical errors, but haste and confusion must be our apology. We shall have more time hereafter to be more accurate.

OUR PAPER.

We are not disposed, neither do we intend to make an apology for this our first number, circumstances themselves will furnish an explanation, and if need be a justification. The train containing our materials arrived last Saturday, boxes had to be opened; materials distributed; Press set up, &c. Without stands, and short of cases, we used boxes, and in some instances the flour, a very uncomfortable condition of things, but which our Composers had the backbone to accomplish, so that it can readily be understood the confusion of affairs we are in, and the disabilities we labor under.

Our Frontispiece, looks naked and blank, but it was the best we could do, and if its bleakness strikes the eye of the critical observer, let him charitably conclude that we are in the Rocky Mountains, and "Pass our imperfections by."

Our Paper is not as large as we have been used to, or as we intended, but our remote distance from the States, requires that we should economize. In this connection we will state that we are prepared to execute plain job work and blanks at reasonable prices.

We trust that our friends at the Camp will let us hear from them often and give us such matters of interest as may transpire.

Our annual subscription price for the present is as published. Single copies twenty-five cents. This may appear high; but it must be recollected that we are in Utah. We shall send several hundred copies to the following persons, and would ask the favor that they will act as agents and receive subscriptions for us at Camp Floyd, viz: Messrs. Livingston, Kinkead & Co., Radford, Cabot & Co., R. H. Dyer & Co., C. A. Perry & Co., Gilbert & Gerrish, and Miller, & Russell & Co.

Camp Floyd.

Such is the good order and discipline manifested at this camp, that the stranger within our gates would scarcely know that an armed and efficient garrison was quartered in the Territory. Drunkenness and rowdiness, those supposed incidents in the train or "progress of civilization" certainly has not been exhibited from this locality, on the contrary, the most strict discipline and rigid rules have been enforced.

Genl. Johnson has by his military and police regulations brought about this result, and the people of this Territory are thus not only protected in their rights, but we have not as yet heard of any conduct that was particularly annoying upon the part of the soldiery. The presence of the army here has been a blessing to "this people," it has opened a market for their produce, given employment to their mechanics and laborers and put gold into their pockets, which in its turn affords "food and raiment."

Lumber, wood and hay from the canyons have met with ready sales at high prices, and for cash, while the very dirt has been moulded into adobies, and a city has been reared. In this utilitarian age it is not fit for philosophic crakers to plead abstract questions of morals and conjure up ghostly speculations in social economy, when not only the facts do not warrant accusations that have been made but on the contrary, "civilization" as it is flippantly called has brought about great good and relief to the people of this Territory.

Mule Emetic.

A horse is an animal that may have some "sense," but we are altogether skeptical about mules. On Tuesday a man who was undertaking to break in a young one was pitched about fifteen feet and came very near landing in Mr. Dodsons' yard. Professor Rarey's system of kindness may do for a horse, but nothing short of spurs and black-snake whips can educate a mule. We have about the same love for the animal that we experienced for hard Boston crackers in crossing the plains and would dispose of them equally as summarily.

"Adobies" crackers for breakfast should be well soaked in water all night and then thrown away the next morning, and a vicious mule should be bridled and saddled and then shot.

PROGRESS.

We hail with peculiar interest the growing spirit of enterprise recently to develop in the increased facilities for the transportation of our over land mails. Doubtless much of this is due to the sagacity of the distinguished head of the Post Office Department, but it would be unjust to overlook the indomitable energy and perseverance of the contractors on each end of the route, who, regardless of labor and cost, and in the face of obstacles that have hitherto been regarded as insurmountable, seem determined on a successful compliance with either contracts at the sacrifice of every other consideration. It is now correctly believed, and in a few weeks, the fact will be thoroughly demonstrated that a new and more southern route between this city and Carson Valley, will be established whereby the distance on this line will be abridged 150 or 200 miles, avoiding the Goose Creek, and Humboldt Mountains, with grass and fuel, at convenient camping distance, and for the establishment of suitable posts. The only obstacle opposed to the entire practicability of this route is a few beds of alkali which it is presumed will be too soft to admit of animals passing over them in the wet season of spring. The eastern terminus of this route points to Provo Canyon, through which a new and valuable road has been opened this season. And it is the opinion of men, of celebrity here, who are familiar with the country, that a shorter and much more practicable route than the one now used by the contractors, on the eastern end of the line may be found on a direct line east from Provo, through the Valleys of the Uinta and White Rivers. About 100 miles south of Bridger—and passing through an extensive region of country, much of which is susceptible of settlement and cultivation. I this opinion should prove true, we may reasonably assert that the tedious distance between Missouri and California, may yet be shortened not less than 300 or 350 miles, a consideration of too great importance to be overlooked.

In this connection we would state that a number of gentlemen of this city have already laid out a city at or near the mouth of Provo Canyon, to be called Brown City in honor of the present efficient post master general. A survey has already been made, the parties have "located" and buildings are in the course of erection, and shortly a plat of the lots will be made.

This is no "antiquarian city" dug up from Provo bench but a genuine city, and one which instead of being discouraged, should meet with the favor of "this people." An enterprise of this character which promises the foundation of a new city and the influx of population who by their industry and wealth contribute to the general prosperity of the Territory, should not to say the least of it be scoffed at. No matter, this enterprise as well as many others is bound to go ahead.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY PORT.—As we are far removed from the Ocean and River, Marine, we nevertheless have a plains commerce of our own, the motive power of which even, if it is not steam that "fleshless arm" whose pulses beat with floods of living fire is at all events oxen and mules. No wharves or docks are required, they "land" and discharge their cargoes and our "powder horn horse" levee—the ox—presents a very business aspect. We have thought of engaging a Reporter to copy manifests and give us ox and mule intelligence, by our overland highway, in the absence of a river, and with this view offered a situation to Capt. A. B. Miller, of the firm of Miller, Russell & Co., who is an old steamboat man, but he declined it. We had ocular demonstration of the fact that he was entirely too busy, there were to many trains unloading goods, selling, &c., for us to insist. We therefore dismiss our overland ox and mule list by premising that the "consignees" for the last week, are Gilbert & Gerrish, Kit Brannon, Miller, Russell & Co., all of whom received a great many packages, too numerous to count, but not more than they want.

The next arrivals will be "packet" trains for Messrs. Livingston Kinkead & Co., and John M. Hockady & Co., and Charles A. Perry & Co.

It may be well to record that while none of the wagons have been snagged "or blown up," the mule and ox machinery have suffered some, and will be a total loss, but which these "wreckers" of the plains, the wolves can save, upon all of which there is no insurance.

PAY UP.—We would remind our readers and subscribers, that we expect them to pay in advance. We have been at much trouble and expense in starting this enterprise and as we intend to pay our employees in cash, the necessity of prompt payments will be apparent to our friends.

A Rush.

Early yesterday morning we saw a large crowd standing in front of the store of Messrs. Gilbert and Gerrish, the first idea that occurred to our mind was, that there was a mob, or, at all events a "Mise" on hand, and we instinctively "mixed in." We were most agreeably surprised to find that there was no Row, on the contrary, the Store was literally jammed with ladies, who did not like Othello cry "blood blood Iago" but—Cotton Yarn; their train which has just come in had a large lot of this most important article in domestic economy, so much needed for months past. Such was the excitement that they were absolutely begging the privilege to buy, and in the short time we were present, we heard eight and ten dollars offered for cotton yarn packages weighing not more than five or six pounds.

There is plenty of Wool in this Territory, and the women possess the superior merit of being industrious. Fine samples were exhibited at the late Fair, the evidences of their energy and skill, but important materials have been wanting for months past—hence the excitement.

In this connection we would state that representations have been made in the "States" designed to injure the merchants in this City, representing that there was an excess of goods, &c., more than enough to last four years, when the facts are, that there is not a merchant in this City, whose Stock will be sufficient to meet the demand, and our mercantile houses would do credit to Main, or Second streets in St. Louis. Our merchants have had many difficulties to overcome, and statements made intended to reflect upon their integrity and credit in the "States," or to create distrust, should be contradicted, and we voluntarily assume to do it from a personal knowledge of the facts.

PERSONAL.—We had the pleasure of meeting yesterday Judge Cradlebaugh, of the second judicial district court of the United States, in this Territory. It will be gratifying to his friends to learn that his seven weeks tour upon the plains, has not in the least impaired his health, although his trip to some extent was a hard one; and his hands were frost bitten. Judge C., will enter upon the official discharge of his duties as soon as possible.

Magnolia Minstrels.

We yesterday had the pleasure of meeting our old friend Charlie Crocker. Charlie has come amongst us for the purpose of giving concerts, and we can safely say, that there are few better performers extant than him. Mr. C. is assisted in his undertakings by his brother Frank and a company of talented performers whose music and fun will enliven the long dreary winter evenings that are approaching. In our next issue, we shall be able to state when and where the Magnolia Minstrels will make their first appearance.

INDIAN INTELLIGENCE.

Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian affairs returned a few days since from a visit among the Goose Creek and Humboldt Indians, where he was summoned nearly two months ago in consequence of reported robbery of the U. S. Mail, and other hostile demonstrations by the Indians in those regions. The Doctor reports the Indians very numerous on the route, but quiet and apparently inoffensive, and very destitute and degraded. We learn from Agent Hurt, and others, that our recent difficulties with the Utahs residing on the Spanish Fork, and Sanpete reservations will most likely be amicably adjusted in a short time; they having returned to the latter place, and manifested a disposition to come to terms.

We design making the future columns of the "VALLEY TAN," the medium of useful information at all times; relative to the movements of the Indians within our borders; as also to entertain our readers from time to time with such incidents in the lives and habits of these creatures, as many appear interesting and characteristic.

Lager Beer.

"Civilization" in its progress has developed here what is not considered criminal in the "States," to either make or drink; Lager Beer. Messrs. Mogo and Burr, at a convenient resting place between this and Camp Floyd, have in successful operation their Brewery. It is a "Valley Tan" production, and tastes first rate. The materials for the article can be grown here, but should they get hard up, we would suggest that they can in all probability import some of Xanippe's hops from St. Louis.

Military Intelligence.

We learn from the Missouri Republican brought by the last Mail, that Col. E. V. SUMNER, of the Cavalry and Staff, and Lieut. Col. MARTIN BUNKS, third Artillery, have arrived in St. Louis, on their return from the Utah Expedition. The former has been intimately associated with military operations on the Plains for a long period while Lieut. Col. BUNKS returns after several years arduous duty performed in the more distant. Shortly after the wreck of the Steamship San Francisco, with that regiment on board, he repaired to California and has since been in active service there and in New Mexico, and other positions of the Department of the Pacific.

Zoology.

There are a great many peculiarities in this country interesting to the Naturalist, there are Grizzly Bears in the canyons, Kiotes, in the Valleys, and Trout in the Jordan, and the Sportsman whether of the Nimrod, or the Isaac Walton School, can enjoy himself to his hearts content. We have had peculiar demonstration of the fact, that the Platte mosquito is not to be scared by fire and smoke, while the Utah Fly is equally as invulnerable to cold. For some weeks we have had frost and ice, yet the Fly still exists with a tenacity of life worthy a more important creature. Shakespeare said—or something like it—that when a mans brains were out, there was an end of it—he was dead—but the Utah specimen of the genus musca makes no such surrender of its existence; but provokingly continues to live on. Job says: "Man is born to trouble as sparks fly upward," we think that he meant the fly in the text, not motion or velocity, but the "articulate" animal itself. Had we not been particularly bothered; we should not have indited this paragraph.

PREACHING.—A gentleman who has been traveling in different sections of the valley, for several days past, informs us that he came across several places where religious exercises were being held. Why can we not have something of the kind in this city—the business metropolis of the Territory.—Throw open the temples and let the "word be dispensed."

INDIAN MATTERS.—We learn from Major Brooke, who arrived in this city on Wednesday, from Cache and Malade Valleys, that a deputation of "Utes" had been in the latter locality, for the purpose of getting the co-operation of the "Snakes" in a foregoing expedition against the whites and the (Army?) The proposition was rejected and the rumor was in Malad Valley, when our informant left that a deputation of "Utes" had gone to the Navajoes to enlist their assistance.

Some difficulty and dissatisfaction has also we understand occurred at Fort Hall, arising from the fact that some piratical Indians, killed or stole from Messrs. Burr and Powell traders, a fine cow and that they subsequently made a reclamation, which produced some excitement and that they left the Fort and retired to Beaver head, a distance of about one hundred miles.

KILLED.—Information has been received in this city, that McDonald who, some two weeks since brutally murdered Policeman Cook, has met with a just retribution, having been killed in an altercation by a Mr. E. P. Jones. The affair occurred at Black's Fork, one day last week. McDonald, as might have been expected from his reckless and desperate conduct in the occurrence where Policeman Cook lost his life, was the assailant in this instance, and met his just deserts.

SUPPOSED BURGLAR SHOT.—Last night, between 12 and two o'clock, Mr. Richard James, the private watchman employed by Miller, Russell & Co., saw some one in the back yard of the store apparently attempting to force an entrance. The watchman fired upon the supposed burglar, and the shot brought him down, the ball taking effect in the thigh, creating a severe, but it is thought not a dangerous wound. Only a few nights previous a sack of flour and other articles were purloined from the same lot. A few doses of lead properly administered cannot fail to exercise a healthy effect upon the "burglarius system."

Streets.

We would suggest to the proper authorities the propriety of authorizing the names of the different streets to be painted and placed at the different corners. It would be convenient, not only to business men, but acceptable to strangers; we venture to say that there are but few even of the oldest citizens who can give the names of the various streets and their localities, without first referring to the laws which first christened them.

United States District Court.

The United States Court, for this the Third Judicial District, Hon. Charles E. Sinclair, presiding, met on Monday last, the 1st inst., pursuant to an adjournment from the First Monday in October.

The appointment, oath of office, &c., of David A. Burr, recently appointed Clerk of this Court, vice Samuel Gilbert, resigned; having been read, the Grand and Petit juries were called, and then adjourned by the Judge until Monday, the 15th day of November, next.

It being the desire of the Judge, to have his Court completely organized before entering upon any business, he will await the arrival of the U. S. District Attorney, for this Territory, who is now on the road from the States, and who is expected to arrive in a few days.

The excuses of those summoned for failing to attend upon the Grand and Petit juries at the last meeting of the Court, were heard, and rules having been awarded against those absent at this Session. The Court adjourned until the 15th prox.

South Pass and Honey Lake Wagon Road.

Colonel Landers, who recently made a survey of this road, has returned to the States and as his report has not yet been published, we give the following items in reference to the same, which was kindly furnished us by Mr. Campbell who accompanied him upon the expedition.

The Road leaves the South Pass at the foot of Rocky Ridge, on Strawberry Creek, between the parallel of 42 degrees 30 and 43 minutes, passing through a country of extensive meadows, largely timbered, and with no Alkali waters. It crosses Green River, above the forks, into the Canyon of Poney Creek, thence up Eabarge, to the foot of Thompson's Pass, of Wahsatch Mountains, to head waters of Smith's Fork of Bear River, thence head of Salt River, thence Blackfoot Fork, of Snake River, thence Port Nuef, to Fort Hall.

This route is far superior to many California trails, on account of its great facilities for water, grass and wood, the peaceful disposition of its Indians, its coal and iron, its great abundance of game, Elk, Deer, and Bear. After fording Green River, (a most excellent ford,) emigrants can camp at any hour of the day, always with those great essentials wood, water, and grass.

Colonel Lander deserves great credit for energy and "go-aheadtiveness" in proposing this route for the next seasons emigration.

THE LEGISLATURE.—This body will convene at the Capitol, Fillmore City, on the second Monday in Dec. and in all probability as we hope adjourn to this City. While the law most unquestionable requires that they should meet in the place designated by the organic act, yet for the sake of personal comfort to the members and officers, and convenience to the Territory, we trust that they will feel justified in holding their session in this city.

Frozen.

We are informed that the dead body of a man, supposed to be a teamster, was found day before yesterday, near the summit of the big mountain, and it is thought that he perished from cold exposure.

ARRIVED.—Mr. Wilson, United States District Attorney, accompanied by his lady, arrived here this (Friday) evening.

We give place to the following communication from Mr. Perkins. We feel satisfied that he has been misrepresented and his name has been confounded with another, an imputation which he very justly does not wish to remain under.

To the Editor of the "Valley Tan."—Sir:—In the New York Weekly Times of September 25, 1858, I read a paragraph under the head of "Interesting from Utah" which says, "One of these gentlemen, Mr. Ute Perkins, was caught, on Saturday last, walking out of one of the 'gentile' stores, with a hat stuffed under his shirt bosom," &c.—This is news to me; such a thing has never occurred to my knowledge; and my known respectability will shield me from the scandalous assertions of a lying anonymous scribbler.

Yours, respectfully,
UTE PERKINS.
G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.

It is an old saying, that you must go way from home to learn the news, and the following item gotten up by a Washington City Correspondent to a New York paper will be worth here, at least, as far as any difference of division exists among the Federal officers. We know of nothing that would justify any "such advices" and the inference is a voluntary conclusion of the writer. He says:

Advices from Utah are not very flattering, and Mr. Buchanan has serious apprehensions as to the result of the policy pursued by Governor Cumming. It is understood by the Administration that the civil officers of the Territory are divided among themselves as to the proper course to be followed. Gov. Cumming, with the Secretary of State, and Forney, the Indian Agent, favors a moderate conciliatory policy, while Chief Justice Eckles, and the United States Attorney wish to hold the Mormons to strict accountability in all matters whatever. The Army officers side with Judge Eckles, but, at the request of Gov. Cumming, Gen. Johnston has enforced the most rigid discipline, and not a soldier is permitted to approach within eighteen miles of Salt Lake City. Thus stands the dispute between the Federal Officers of the Gentiles, while the Mormon Chief boasts that his people have the finest country on earth, and that Utah will be the first nation in a few years. The President is not by any means pleased with the prospect.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY.

Nov. 4th, 1858.

K. ANDERSON, Esq.,

Sir:—Early in September last, I, with others signed a letter addressed to Judge Eckles, tendering him a dinner, previous to his departure for the East. I presume the letter was merely an invitation to a dinner, without either applauding or condemning his Policy. The gentleman who requested me to sign the letter, assured me it was merely an invitation to a dinner, consequently I signed the letter without reading it. The following is contained in said letter.

"That regret, however is lessened by their belief that your presence at Washington will do much to remove misapprehensions which seem to prevail there, and to cause measures to be taken for the better security of the persons and property of loyal citizens of the United States, who are residents in this community."

I had no design to cast reflection, even by my implication on this, or any other community, especially not in such an oblique manner. Much less was it my design to call in question the official policy of any Federal Officer in this Territory.

Yours truly,
J. FORNEY

SECRETARY'S OFFICE, Oct. 3rd 1858.
UTAH TERRITORY.

ALBERT CARRINGTON, Esq.:—

EDITOR DESERVES NEWS:—

Sir:—Your letter of 2nd inst., is before me, for which please accept my thanks.

In relation to a letter addressed to the Hon. Judge Eckles, which a short time ago appeared in the California "Bulletin," I have to say, I signed it after merely glancing over its contents, but not with the slightest idea that there was an expression contained in it to cast reflection, even the smallest, on any Community or person—nor did I suppose for a moment, that the letter was to be used as it has been, to subvert a political purpose.

I, as did many others of the signers of the letter referred to, put my name to it, in the full confidence that it was only what it purported to be, an invitation to take dinner.

I hear that an answer to the letter has been published—this I know nothing about. As yet, no answer, verbal or written, has reached me.

Very Respectfully,
JOHN HARTNETT.

RUSSIAN SERFDOM.—The following statistics of serfdom are taken from a late report of the Minister of the Interior: "There are in Russia 30,000 slaves who are not connected with the soil. They are called ludi bassemalet (people without land). Their owners are about 5,000 in number, and when the slaves do not labor for their masters they are compelled to pay them twofifths of the product of their work. They can also be sold from their families. There are 49,807 land proprietors owning from one to twenty serfs apiece, and the serfs number 742,420. The proprietors having from 21 to 100 serfs are 36,024, with 3,371,648 serfs. Wealthy proprietors with from 100 to 1,000 serfs, are 19,808, with an aggregate of 7,507,000 serfs. Proprietors with from 1,000 to 2,000, are 2,468.—Proprietors with over 2,000 serfs number 1,447, with 6,567,966 serfs. The report concludes with the statement that of the twenty-three and a half millions serfs belonging to the nobles more than thirteen millions are mortgaged to the Crown until the payment of 397,979,458 rubles.

PLACERVILLE—Overland Mail and Telegraph.—It is a matter of general remark that Placerville has not, for years, presented so lively, bustling, healthy an appearance as at the present. Our traders, hotel keepers, miners and mechanics, seem hopeful, cheerful and happy. The old town is improving in every direction, increasing in business, wealth and population daily, and our citizens are made up of that class that are all energy and liberality, and prosperity smiles upon all their efforts. Never before has there been a time when the future appeared more promising.

The reasons for this are obvious. First and foremost, our gold mines are an inexhaustible as the everlasting hills which encircle and hold them. The wagon road work is being pushed forward vigorously, and will soon be completed, and when completed, must monopolize the land travel between California and the older States. The immigration will naturally follow the route. The overland telegraph is wending its way to the East as rapidly as capital, willing hearts and strong hands can carry it. The success of the overland mail line is a "fixed fact," and it is quietly accomplishing more for the permanent benefit of California, and especially for this part of it, than anything which has hitherto been said or done. New Canals are being constructed, which will greatly reduce the price of water, and throw open for mining purposes a vast region of mineral lands, heretofore valueless solely on account of the scarcity of water. In short, our future is full of bright promise, and we feel like crow.

Placerville Democrat.

Important Battle in Washington Territory.

We mentioned in this morning's edition of the Alta the arrival of Mr. Pierson, an expressman from Fort Vancouver, at Shasta, with dispatches from Gen. Clark, with information addressed to the officers at Fort Reading. The Shasta Republican, from which we obtained our notice of the express, stated that Mr. Pierson brought news about the battle of the Four Lakes, the only items of interest, in addition to what we had before, being that Col. Wright had captured 900 horses.

We learn this morning, however, that these statements of the Shasta Republican are very incorrect. Mr. Pierson brought dispatches with news of a second battle, which resulted in a complete defeat of the Indians, and the suing for peace by the Cœur d'Alenes, the most powerful of the hostile tribes. The dispatches from Gen. Clark, at Fort Vancouver, and Col. Wright arrived here late on Monday night, and were addressed to Washington, whither they were forwarded on the Golden Gate by Major Allen, to whose care they were brought. We learn from Major Allen, that, accompanying the dispatches, he received a hasty letter from the Assistant Adjutant General of the Department, stating that an important battle had been fought by Col. Wright's command, the news of which had just been received at Vancouver. The language of the letter was that "a great many Indians had been killed, and the enemy completely routed." Nine hundred horses, besides other cattle were taken. Such was the number of cattle that the command was burdened with them, and most of them were shot. It was understood that the Cœur d'Alenes, one of the three hostile tribes engaged in the battle (we presume the Pelouse and Spokane were the others, as at the Four Lakes), sued for peace, immediately after their defeat. The command, however, was, at the latest moment, still vigorously pursuing the retreating Indians.

The expressman who brought the dispatch, states that 70 Indians were killed, among whom were 3 chiefs. We have no information as to the place or date of the battle. Probably, however, it took place between the Snake and Spokane rivers about the middle of September. Great importance is attached to the battle. It is supposed to have crippled and scared the Indians of the eastern division of Washington Territory, so that they will be glad for peace now on any terms which our government may see fit to dictate to them.

TRANSFERENCE OF VITALITY.—The transference of vitality which seems to occur when young persons are habitually placed in contact with the aged, is well attested by very competent authorities. A distinguished author, Dr. James Copeland, says: "A not uncommon cause of depressed vital power is the young sleeping with the aged. This, however explained, has been too long remarked. I have occasionally met with the counterpart of the following case. I was, a few years ago, consulted about a pale, sickly and thin boy, about four or five years of age. He appeared to have no specific ailment, but there was a slow and remarkable decline of flesh and strength, and of the energy of the functions. After inquiring into the history of the case, it came out that he was a very robust and plethoric child up to his third year, when his grandmother, a very old person, took him to sleep with her; that he soon after lost his good looks, and that he continued to decline progressively, notwithstanding the medical treatment to which he was subjected.

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.

The undersigned would most respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same uniform rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKAD, & CO.

In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with a certainty concerning our train so long expected.

L. K. & CO.

LOOK HERE.

A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI FORM BOOK" has been borrowed from the office of J. Harnett, Secretary of State. He earnestly requests the person having it to return it without delay.

"GLOBE" RESTAURANT.

Table d'Hôte every day at 11-2.

FIRST CLASS BOARD FURNISHED.

DAVID OANDLAND.

GLOBE BREAD AND CRACKER BAKERY.

Wine, Milk, Boston, Butter, Soda, Anti-Dyspeptic, Light bread always on hand.

R. GOLIGHTLY.

GLOBE SHAVING AND HAIR DRESSING SALOON.

Shampooing, Hair Dyeing and Wig making on scientific principles.

F. GAD.

LAW OFFICE.

W. J. M'CORMICK. T. S. WILLIAMS.

MCCORMICK & WILLIAMS, ATTORNEYS AT LAW.

Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.

OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co's store.
G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858.

Missouri Republican and N. Y. Herald will please publish 3 months daily, and send bill to this office.

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC.,

At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt City, U. T.

NEW GOODS.

JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market.

GILBERT & GERRISH.

WAGONS.

A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale

by

WORK CATTLE.

100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by

GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSEL & CO.,

Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES,

Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps,

HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS, and outfitting goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figure, for Cash or Country Produce.

Hot Springs, Point of Meeting, South of City.

Hot Springs, Point of Meeting, South of City.

Hot Springs, Point of Meeting, South of City.

Hot Springs, Point of Meeting, South of City.

Hot Springs, Point of Meeting, South of City.

Hot Springs, Point of Meeting, South of City.

COW STRAYED.

ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick rope tie around her horns, horns small was giving milk, think she was branded Atwood on the horn, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis B. Bolton, 15th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and be well rewarded.

MAIL LETTINGS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1858.

PROPOSALS for conveying the mails of the United States, from the 1st of February, 1859, to the 1st of July, 1860, on the following routes in the Territory of Utah, will be received at the Contract Office of this Department until 9 a.m. of the 16th December next to be decided by the Bid of the same month:

UTAH.

12803 From Salt Lake City, by Lehi City, American Fork, Provo City, Springville, Payson, Santaquin, and Salt Creek to Fillmore City and back, twice a week.

Leave Salt Lake City Monday and Thursday at 9 a.m.

Arrive at Fillmore City in 96 hours.

Leave Fillmore City Monday and Thursday at 9 a.m.

Arrive at Salt Lake City in 96 hours.

Bidders to state the distance.

Bids to extend to Cedar City, 280 miles in all, will be considered; also, bids to run tri-weekly; also, bids to run by different schedules from the foregoing, to be specified by the bidder.

12805 From Salt Lake City, by Union, Draper, Lehi City, Gadsden's Mills, American Fork, Pleasant Grove, Provo City, Springville, Spanish Fork, Payson, Santaquin, Salt Creek, and Ephraim, to Mant, 140 miles and back, once a week.

Leave Salt Lake City Thursday at 6 a.m.

Arrive at Mant Saturday at 8 p.m.

Leave Mant Monday at 4 a.m.

Arrive at Salt Lake City Wednesday at 8 p.m.

12804 From Salt Lake City, by Stoker, Centerville, Farmington, Kayville, and Ogden City, to Brigham City, 66 miles and back, twice a week.

Leave Salt Lake City Monday and Thursday at 6 a.m.

Arrive at Brigham City next days by 12 m.

Leave Brigham City Tuesday and Friday at 2 p.m.

Arrive at Salt Lake City next days by 6 p.m.

12805 From Salt Lake City, by Taylorville, Pleasant, West Jordan, Fort Herrick, and Garfield, to Mant, 140 miles and back, once a week.

Leave Salt Lake City Thursday at 6 a.m.

Arrive at Cedar Valley next day by 12 m.

Leave Cedar Valley Friday at 2 p.m.

Arrive at Salt Lake City next day by 6 p.m.

Bids to run twice a week are invited; also, for tri-weekly service.

12806 From Salt Lake City, by Nedra's Mills, Mill Creek, Mormon, and Halliday's Settlement, to Alpine City, 60 miles and back, once a week.

Leave Salt Lake City Thursday at 6 a.m.

Arrive at Alpine City next day by 7 p.m.

Leave Alpine City Friday at 8 a.m.

Arrive at Salt Lake City next day by 7 p.m.

12807 From Cedar City, by Harmony and Pine Valley to Santa Clara, 70 miles and back, once in two weeks.

Leave Cedar City every other Thursday at 8 p.m.

Arrive at Santa Clara next Saturday by 3 p.m.

Leave Santa Clara every other Monday at 8 a.m.

Arrive at Cedar City next Wednesday by 3 p.m.

INSTRUCTIONS, INCLUDING CONDITIONS TO BE ENDED IN THE CONTRACTS.

1. Fines will be imposed, unless the delinquency be promptly and satisfactorily explained by certificates of postmasters, or the affidavits of other credible persons, for failing to arrive in contract time; for neglecting to take the mail from or deliver it into a post office; and for suffering it (owing either to the unsuitableness of the place or manner of carrying it) to be wet, injured, destroyed, robbed, or lost.

2. The Postmaster General may annul the contract for repeated failures to run agreeably to contract; for violating the post office laws, or disobeying the instructions of the department; for refusing to discharge a carrier when required by the department to do so; for assigning the contract without the assent of the Postmaster General; for running an express; or for transporting persons or packages conveying mailable matter out of the mail.

3. The Postmaster General may order an increase of service on a route by allowing therefor a pro rata increase on the contract pay. He may change schedules of departures and arrivals without increase of pay, provided the running time be not abridged. He may also, at partial or discontinuance of the service, in whole or in part, compensate on the amount dispensed with, whenever, in his opinion the public interests do not require the same, or in case he desires to supersede it by a different grade of transportation.

4. Payments will be made for the service by collections from or drafts on postmasters, after the expiration of each quarter—say in February, May, August, and November.

5. The distances are given according to the best information; but no increased pay will be allowed should they be greater than advertised, if the points to be accomplished be correctly stated. Bidders must inform themselves on this point; and also in reference to the weight of the mail, the condition of roads, hills, streams, &c., by which expense may be incurred. No claim for additional pay based on such grounds can be considered; nor for alleged mistakes or misapprehensions as to the degree of service; nor for bridges destroyed, or other obstructions increasing distance, occurring during the contract time. Offices established after this advertisement is issued, and also during the contract time, are to be visited without extra pay, if the distance be not increased.

6. The route, the service, the yearly pay, the name and residence of the bidder, (that is, his usual post office address) and those of each member of a firm where a company offers, should be distinctly stated, also the mode of conveyance, if a higher mode than horse back be intended. The words "with due celerity, certainty, and security," inserted to indicate the mode of conveyance, will constitute a "star bid." When a "star bid" is intended no specific conveyance must be named.

7. The bidder should be sealed, subscribed "Mail Proposals, Territory of —," addressed "Second Assistant Postmaster General," Contract Office, and sent by mail, not by or to an agent, and postmasters will not enclose proposals (or letters of any kind) in their quarterly returns.

8. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

9. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

10. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

11. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

12. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

13. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

14. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

15. The contracts are to be executed and returned to the Department by or before the 1st of February, 1859, but the service must be commenced on that date, whether the contracts be accepted or not.

Gold at Pike's Peak.

The more recent stories about the gold discoveries at Pike's Peak are somewhat contradictory. The Kansas City Journal publishes some highly encouraging accounts from there. But other accounts, from the Leavenworth Times, are of a different complexion. The Kansas City Journal has from the first been, or professed to be, sanguine in its belief that these mines are productive. If the stories to that effect should turn out to be false, the Journal will have much to answer for. That paper has originated two-thirds of the publications about these diggings. And if they turn out a humbug or delusion, the Journal will be set down at least as careless of what it publishes, if it does not have to struggle against the charge of having wilfully exaggerated or invented tales, to draw emigrants to Kansas and Western Missouri, by acting in the belief of which, hundreds may incur great loss, suffering and disappointment, in a bootless hunt for gold in the American Desert.

We have strong hopes, however, that the stories are in the main true, and not greatly exaggerated. The Kansas City Journal gives the following account of the origin of the discoveries, and other particulars of interest to inquirers. What it says about the best road to the mines, we ourselves endorse from personal knowledge of a portion of the route:

FIRST DISCOVERIES.

As long ago as 1835, Eustache Carriere, a French trapper now living, superannuated, with the Chouteau family in this city, was lost from his party in that region, and wandered for several weeks through the country, during which time he collected in his shot-pouch numerous specimens, which he carried with him to New Mexico. They proved to be gold, and a party was there formed and returned with Mr. Carriere to search for the locality. He was unable to find the streams where he had collected his specimens, and was tied up and severely whipped by the Mexicans, under the supposition that he did not wish to disclose their location.

COL. BENT'S KNOWLEDGE.

Col. Wm. Bent, or as he is more familiarly known, 'Bill Bent,' has been trading in the vicinity of the country for many years. He says that the existence of gold has been known to the Indians ever since his residence among them. The Indians, however have always remonstrated against the knowledge being made known to the whites.

THE SECOND DISCOVERY.

The second discovery was made by a party of emigrants to California, in 1851, from Missouri, Arkansas and the Cherokee Nation. Gold was found by them while passing through the country, and a proposal made at that time to stop; but having families with them, and no means of affording them shelter or protection, they finally proceeded on to California. The development of the gold deposits of that State prevented their return. But their reports further stimulated public feeling, and nothing was accomplished or attempted until last season, when

THE PRESENT DISCOVERY.

Was made. A party from the Cherokee country and Arkansas, incited by the accounts which the Cherokees gave of the Pike's Peak region, fitted out for that point. News of the expedition being brought to Lawrence, K. T., a party fitted out at that place late in May last; and a company from Missouri, under the direction of a member of the California party of 1851, left the central part of the State last spring, for the same destination.

These parties have been prospecting the country during the summer, and their being in the country, and being discovered by some of the trappers and traders, led Bordeaux, Richard, Cantrell, and others to the waters of Cherry and Long's Creek. The results of their discoveries we have already given.

THE COUNTRY AND ITS LOCALITY.

From those already returned from the mines, we have a generally correct idea of the region in which the gold is known to exist. Pike's Peak, which may be taken as the geographical point, is about 25 miles south of the 39th parallel of latitude, and on a direct line about 570 miles south-west of Kansas City. It is about 50 miles east of Cochetopa Pass, and about 24 miles south. The Arkansas takes its rise on the south side of the range in which the Peak is situated, and the South Platte on the north side. Mr. John Cantrell, the Lawrence, Georgia and Missouri companies have prospected the South Platte streams, principally Cherry and Long's Creek, which are from 40 to 50 miles from the Peak, almost in a direct westerly course. Mr. King and the Cherokee company have in addition pretty thoroughly explored the Arkansas branches, with, in many instances, better success than on the Platte; but sufficient has been demonstrated to prove that both are gold producing. The two rivers head together, but the Arkansas penetrates the mountain range to a much greater distance than the other. The country prospected embraces about 70 miles north and south, and following the streams greater or less distance. From the South Platte we have as yet seen only the 'float gold,' but from the Arkansas we have both the scales and the nuggets, as well as the gold in the quartz.

THE COUNTRY AND CLIMATE.

Trappers and traders, however, who have long been familiar with the country, speak of it as much more mild than the country at the South Pass. Immediately west and south are the Parks of the Rocky Mountains, which are represented to be exceedingly mild in winter affording abundance of food for stock during the entire winter season, and are the favorite winter haunts of the Indians.

GAME, TIMBER, ETC.

The country abounds in timber, the prevailing variety being pine, immense forests of both the yellow and white being common. On the streams the wild cherry, and timber common to this latitude are found. Game is exceedingly abundant, the black tailed deer, elk, antelope, mountain sheep, black bear, etc., being found in all portions of the country. It is a favorite resort for the Indians, as it affords them plenty of game when off their buffalo hunts, and is where they get their lodge poles and equipments for their excursions for buffalo on the plains.

THE ROUTE TO THE MINES.

To the country bordering the Missouri river in Iowa and Nebraska as far as Council Bluffs and above, probably the best route would be by Fort Laramie, although the route up the South Fork of the Platte is very sandy and covered for long distances with a dense growth of the prickly pear, which is very severe upon stock, as well as upon men. The sand hills greatly retard the progress of trains, and the prickly pear furnishes no sustenance whatever. The streams are numerous, and when full very difficult to cross.

To all East of the Mississippi, and for a hundred miles West of it, the best route by far is by the great Santa Fe Road to Pawnee Fork, and thence following the Arkansas to Bent's Fort and the mines. This is the route traveled by the mountain traders for half a century, and is a well beaten, plain wagon road, the entire distance. There have passed over it the present season over ten thousand wagons, as far as crossing of the Arkansas, and over five hundred have left this city the present season for Bent's Fort and the different trading posts in that region of country.

The trip is usually made by Kansas City traders, with their heavily laden wagons, in 25 to 30 days, and starting any time from the middle of April to the first of October, plenty of grass is to be found throughout the extent of the route. Sheridan went to a hair-dresser's to order a wig. On being measured, the barber, who was a liberal soul, invited the orator to take some refreshments in an inner room. Here he showed him so much genuine hospitality that Sheridan's heart was touched. When they rose from the table, and were separating, the latter, looking the barber full in the face, said:

"On reflection, I don't intend that you shall make my wig."

Astonished, and with a blank visage, the other exclaimed:

"Good Heavens! Mr. Sheridan, how can I have displeased you?"

"Why, look you," said Sheridan, "you are an honest fellow; I repeat it, you shan't make the wig, for I never intended to pay for it. I'll go to another less worthy son of the craft."

OUR SYRIAN MISSION.—Mr. Williams, one of the editors of the Utica Herald, writing from Smyrna, Asia Minor, says of the Syrian Mission and Mohammedanism:

The public morals are being elevated.—The public understanding is being enlightened.—Discussions are being provoked. The Bible, translated into the Arabic, is being placed in the hand of the people. Even Mohammedans are beginning to fumble over the leaves of the Sacred Book. Men are no longer afraid to look the truth in the face.—Myriads of children are being educated.—This must work out good in the end. Once the light begins to find its way in great results must follow. If we have any faith in the progressive developments of the race, we must look confidently to the time when the degraded millions of the Orient will be not only enlightened, but evangelized.

Mohammedanism is a decaying system.—Begotten in error, it must sooner or later fall. But it dies hard. It clings to its old traditions with the tenacity of despair. It disputes every inch of ground though tottering and ready to fall. Its chief great prop is the Ottoman Empire—and that all the world knows is in the last stage of decay. A few years, at the latest, and it will be riddled of its Asiatic possessions. Some new and more vigorous power will assume the rule. When this takes place—when Mohammedanism is no longer sustained by the arm of the State—when every creed stands on equal footing—when apostasy from the Religion of the Prophet is no longer esteemed a crime—what great results may we not expect for Christianity! It is then the seed sown on the rocky soil of the East will take root and bring forth abundantly.

AN EDITOR TIGHT.—We believe it rare that editors indulge in a drop, but when they do, their readers are sure to find them out.—A Syracuse cotemporary was called upon to record a 'melancholy event,' at a time when his head was rather heavy, and did it up after the following manner:

'Yesterday morning, at 4 o'clock p. m., a man with a heel in the hole of his stocking, committed arsenic by swallowing a dose of suicide. The inquest of the verdict returned a jury that the deceased came to the fact in accordance with his death. He leaves a child and six small wives to lament the end of his untimely loss. In death we are in the midst of life.'

ATLANTIC CABLE.—Electricians have instruments which enable them to tell what part of a wire is damaged (when a break occurs) for some two or three hundred miles. It is believed, or supposed to be certain, that the Atlantic wire has suffered an injury somewhere. But exactly where, cannot be told, as we understand it. All the electricians can say about it is, that the injury is not within two hundred miles of the Irish coast. But if it is at a point much beyond that point, it is irreparable. The London Observer says:

Should the defect be found to exist in the deep parts of the sea, the public must be content to hear that for the present the Atlantic Telegraph is a failure. It will not be possible to raise the sunken portion of the wire or repair it, when laid in great depths.—Within a few miles of the shore the wire may be under-run; but when it has been sunk at the depth of two or three miles below the surface, the great length of cable which would be suspended, and the resistance which the water would give to its rising, would produce a strain upon the wire much greater than its strength would bear. A cable which would be strong enough to sustain its own weight while sinking might not possess the requisite strength to admit of its being hauled up through the water.

STRANGE AND FEARFUL INCIDENT.—Two children in a balloon.—On Friday last, a named Wilson made an ascension from the Fair Grounds at Centralia, Illinois, in a balloon belonging to Brooks the aeronaut. He descended at the farm of Mr. Harvey. After the grappling iron had been made fast, Harvey, to amuse his children, one a boy aged about four years, the other a girl of eight years, placed them in the basket car and permitted them to ascend several times as high as the rope would allow. Unexpectedly the grappling iron slipped from the father's hand, and the balloon, with its precious freight, was wafted out of sight. The distress of the parent knew no bounds. The peril of his children he considered imminent, for what assurance had he that they would not be borne into some dense forest, where they could be overtaken with hunger before they could be found, or perhaps descend into some lake or stream and be drowned? As soon as it was possible, and extra was hired at Centralia, and the whole neighboring country placed on the alert to watch for the balloon and children.

Saturday morning, at day break, a farmer near New Carthage, forty-three miles distant from Mr. Harvey's place, discovered the balloon suspended in the air, attached by the grappling rope to a tree in his yard. He immediately hauled the balloon down, and found the youngest child asleep in the bottom of the basket, and the eldest carefully watching over her little brother. They had been wafted about by different currents of air through the night, and had come to a halt but a little while before they were relieved.

The story the girl told was, that as the balloon ascended she cried piteously to her father to pull it down. She said she passed over a town where she saw a great many people, to whom she likewise appealed at the top of her voice. The place was Centralia. The balloon was seen to pass over there, but the people little imagined that it carried two persons in such danger. Her little brother cried with cold, and the heroic girl took off her apron, covered him and got him to sleep. In handling the ropes she happened to pull one which had the effect of bringing the balloon down, and although not understanding the philosophy of the movement, she was quite content to keep the valve open, so long as by so doing she found she was approaching the earth.

The youthful aerial voyagers were in the balloon about thirteen hours and a quarter. It may easily be imagined that among the neighbors where they landed they were the objects of much curiosity and interest. The girl's presence of mind and loving consideration for her brother may well entitle her to remembrance.—Missouri Rep.

IN TROUBLE AGAIN.—Capt. RIVIERE, the gallant Zouave, is in trouble again. How was to have delivered a lecture on "Love," at the Mozart Hall, New York, last month, but before the hour arrived, he was arrested on a charge of sending a challenge to Capt. GRANT, of the Nicaragua army—the lecture had to be postponed.

Another Pair of Elopers at the Spencer House—Union of an Unsophisticated Pair.

Yesterday a pair of ingenious and ardent lovers arrived at the Spencer House from one of the towns on the line of the Kentucky Central Railway, and after registering their names as M. F. and Salie B., stated they wanted to be married at once. The masculine portion of the matrimonial covenant said he had run away with the fair Salie, who, under pretense of visiting a neighbor and spend the day there, had placed herself under his protection and come hither, seeking matrimony. The anxious candidate for husbandship stated, moreover, that he was in a great hurry, because he wanted to get back home before the "old folks missed the gal."

Some considerable delay occurred in securing the services of a regular minister whom the pair preferred, and in that time "Fishy," as his lady-love termed him, became very nervous, and paced up and down the halls and chewed tobacco at a great rate. As the third hour passed "Fishy," from being merely excited, became profane, and swore all manner of oaths. He consigned the city to a mythical region of the highest temperature, and declared that any place that couldn't raise a parson had, to employ his eloquent phraseology, "better dry up d—n soon."

Finally they concluded to send for a Magistrate, and Justice Marchant was brought to the Hotel. Sallie was not quite ready then and took a comb out of her pocket, and put back her hair, and retied her shoes and more firmly secured her garters, utterly regardless of the presence of others, as if she were about to enter for a race. This appeared to vex "Fishy," not on account of its entire originality, but because of the delay occasioned, and he cried out, "Look here, Sal, confound you, what are you doin' all that ere fixin' for gist at this time, when we'd ought to be in such a hurry! Your clothes is all right—let 'em alone and come and get married. If you don't, I'll go home agin without a wife."

This threat aroused Sallie, and believing in the elegant language of "Fishy" she was "all right," she came up with an unblushing face and a sturdy stride, and said: "Well, here I am now, come on, old chap. Who's afraid of bears?"

The "old chap" eliminated a large piece thoroughly masticated tobacco, walked down to the bar and took an extra drink, by way of strengthening his resolution; re-ascended to the apartments, and in a few minutes, assisted by the law, made Sallie all his own.

As soon as they were pronounced man and wife, Fishy ordered the spouse to put on her "dry goods," and having done so, they paid the bill, ordered a carriage, and were off to the other side of the river in time for the next train that left the Covington depot.

And so this "last" elopement ended, in which every syllable was ringing with the delicious poetry that ever gushes from the Eolian chords of the heart, full-swept by the breeze of love.—Cinn. Enquirer.

DEATH OF AN ARMY OFFICER.—An exchange paper thus notes the death of a well-known officer of the army:

Captain Matthew S. Pitcher, of the U. S. mounted rifles, died at Fort Edward, N. Y. on the 17th September. Captain P. was the son of the late Nathaniel Pitcher, of Washington County, N. Y. In early life he served several years in the United States navy; during the war with Mexico, as a Captain in General Pierce's brigade, by whom he was appointed to the position he occupied at the time of his decease. His nature was eminently kind and social.

HUMOROUS.

"Do you go in for the Pennsylvania Liquor Law?" "Why, partly yes and partly no—I goes in for the liquor, but not for the law."

"Cuff, why didn't you kick that dog?" "What am de use of kickin' every cur that snarls at you? Don't you know dat am de way, dat he wants you to bring him into notice."

A FRENCHMAN'S MISTAKE.—A Frenchman repeatedly hearing the word press used to imply persuasion, one evening when in company exclaimed: "I say squeeze that lady to sing."

Pale ale and ale pale is all the same. But there is a distinction with a difference between a rump steak and a stump rake, as well as between boiled onions and oiled bunions.

The following is one of the best epigrammatic retorts on record:

"You men are angels when you woo the maid, But devils when the marriage-vow is said."

The lover, not to be out-done, replied as follows:

"The change, dear girl, is easily forgiven,—We find ourselves in hell instead of heaven."

THE CABLE.—Old Grubbs grow "ratty" at the fuss they are making about the cable, and thinks the mermaids might find a use for it:

I'm tired of the fetched thing,
And hope old Neptune's "daughters"
Will take it for a causet-string,
Or use it up for garters.

The Salem Register, Black Republican, says: "A Waltham machinist sits in the gubernatorial chair, and a Natick shoemaker holds the honorable office of United States Senator, while the trained Statesman and scholar brood over their disappointments, and the places that once knew them know them no more."

A bride of some months, finding herself one evening, alone with her spouse, was attacked with a severe fit of yawning. "You are tired of being with me I presume," he said, somewhat offended. "Not at all, my dear love," she replied; "but you and I are not but one; and, to say the truth, I always get stupefied when I am alone."

A Hibernian had come far to see Niagara, and while gazed upon it, a friend asked him if it was not the most wonderful thing he ever seen. To which he replied, "Never a bit, man; never a bit! Sure, it no wonder at all that the water should fall down there, for I'd like to know what could hinder it."

"You have lost your baby, I hear," said one gentleman to another. "Yes, poor little thing! It was only five months old. We did all we could for it. We had four doctors, blistered its head and feet, put mustard poultice all over it, gave it nine calomel powders, leached its temples, and had it bled, and gave it all kinds of medicines; and yet, after a week's illness, it died."

The following are two coroners' jury verdicts lately rendered in two county towns of Georgia:

"We are of A Pinion that the Deceat met with her death from Violent Infrimacy in the Arm, produced from Un-can Cauz."

"We are of opinion that the deceased came to his death causally by an accidental stroke of thunder."

There was much more fact than fancy in the cross reply of an unfortunate female culprit, when under cross-examination in a petty court, by a brow-beating limb of the law. "Madam," he demanded, "what sort of conduct have you pursued through life, that should subject you to the suspicion of this outrage upon the plaintiff?" She answered, "Impudence, which has been the making of you, has caused my ruin."

PROGRESS.—"You see, grandmama, we perforate an aperture in the apex of a corresponding aperture in the base; and by applying the egg to the lips and forcibly inhaling the breath, the shell is entirely discharged of its contents."

"Bless my soul," cried the old lady, "what wonderful improvement they do make. Now, in my young days we just made a hole in each end and sucked."

THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1858.

NUMBER 2.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS.

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Little Fools and Great Ones.

CHARLES MACKAY, writes bits of most polished wisdom, now and then. The following, (says the Home Journal), should be put into School books:

When at the Social board you sit,
And pass around the wine,
Remember though abuse is vile,
That use may be divine;
That heaven in kindness gave the grape,
To cheer both great and small—
That little fools will drink too much,
But great ones none at all.

And when in youth's too fleeting hours,
You roam in lone alone,
And have not sought some loving heart,
That you may make your own;
Remember woman's priceless worth,
And think when pleasures fall—
That little fools will love too much,
But great ones none at all.

And if a friend deceive you once,
Absolve poor human kind,
Nor rail against your fellow man,
With malice in your mind;
But in your daily intercourse,
Remember, less you fall—
That little fools confide too much,
But great ones none at all.

In work of pleasure, love or drink,
Your rule be still the same—
Your work not toll, your pleasure pure,
Your love a steady flame,
Your drink not maddening, but to cheer;
So shall your bliss not fall—
For little fools enjoy too much,
But great ones none at all.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE.

New York, October 11.
The steamship Indian Empire, from Galway the 28th, arrived at Halifax yesterday. By this arrival we have Liverpool advices of the 27th ult., two days later than previous dates.

Cotton—Sales for two days 14,000 bales, of which speculators and exporters each took 1200 bales. Market closed quiet but steady.

Breadstuffs were very dull, and the market nominally unchanged. Provisions were quiet but steady. Consols closed at 97½@97¾. There was some expectations of the Bank rates being reduced.

SECOND DISPATCH.

HALIFAX, October 11.

The steamship Indian Empire, from Galway, arrived here yesterday. She left Galway, Ireland, on Wednesday, the 28th ult., and brings Liverpool and London dates of the previous day.

Liverpool, September 27—Cotton to-day closed steady. Flour dull. Provisions quiet.

LONDON, September 27—Consols have advanced, closing at 97½@97¾.

The Indian Empire passed Cape Race at 7 o'clock on the morning of the 7th; arrived off Halifax at 9 on Saturday, and entered the harbor at 10 o'clock yesterday (Sunday) morning. She encountered strong westerly gales during the passage. She has on board 250 passengers.

The steamer Africa arrived at Liverpool on the 26th.

The official synopsis of the English treaty with China has been published. The main features are all ready known. Separate articles provide for an indemnity of 2,000,000 of taels for the expenses of the war. The British forces will remain in China until paid in full.

The political news is not of much importance.

It was rumored that Prince Napoleon would marry the eldest daughter of the King of Sardinia. The Prince was to visit Turin in October.

It was stated that the Russian Navigation Company will be authorized to establish a station in Algeria and to have a depot of coal there.

The Spanish expedition to Cochinchina will not be expected to commence operations before November.

The Spanish preparations against Mexico continue. The Minister of Marine has been to Cadiz to inspect them.

The Bank of Frankfurt has raised its rate of discount to four per cent.

Arrangements for the transfer of the Austrian lines to Rothschild and other French and English capitalists had been completed.

The late conspiracy at Naples was a formidable one. It included many persons, and had extensive foreign ramifications.

A conspiracy has been discovered to exist in Persia against the Prime Minister. It failed, and the leaders were beheaded.

TWO DAYS LATER.

New York, October 11.

The steamer City of Baltimore passed Cape Race on Friday last, bringing Liverpool dates to Wednesday, the 29th ult., two days later than those received by the Indian Empire.

The estimated sales of cotton on Tuesday were 4,000 bales, of which speculators and exporters each took 1,000 bales. The market closed quiet and unchanged.

Flour was dull and unchanged. Wheat declined 1s; corn dull and declined 1s; provisions dull.

Consols on Tuesday closed at 98½. The Gwalior rebels were defeated August 17th, and 700 of their number slain. The British loss was trifling.

The Fort of Procure, after thirty hours shelling, surrendered to Gen. Napier. Five hundred police defeated 4,000 of the rebels.

Three of the Bengal regiments have been rearmored.

The controversy between Prof. Whitehouse and the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company continues in the newspapers.

St. Johns, N. F., October 11.

The steamer City of Baltimore, with dates to the 29th, passed off Cape Race on Friday, and her news bag was obtained by the yacht of the Associated Press. She has a large cargo, and one hundred passengers.

The ports of Havre, Dunkirk, Dieppe, Calais and Bologne, in France, are to be put in a state of defence.

The Prince of Prussia is to be Regent until the physical and mental health of the King is restored.

The Invalides Russe says it is in contemplation to unite with America by telegraph, via the Russian Possessions.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1st.

A rumor prevails that the troops are to be removed from Fort McHenry, in consequence of the alleged infectious diseases in that neighborhood. There is reason to believe that the report is premature. The regulations of the Army authorize the removal of the troops from sickly to healthy locations, and this would doubtless be done by the commanding officer of the Post, were there sufficient grounds for the exercise of this discretionary power.

INDEPENDENCE, Oct. 10th.

Per U. S. Express Company to Boonville, Oct. 12.

The Santa Fe Mail, with dates to the 20th ult., arrived last night.

The accounts of a battle between three hundred Navajo Indians, and twelve United States troops, under Captain McLean, assisted by fifty Mexicans under Blas Lucero, on August 29th, are confirmed. Ten Indians were killed and four wounded. The wound of Capt. McLean is severe, but is not considered of a dangerous character.

The National Democrats have achieved a signal victory over the opposition, electing every member of the Legislature as far as heard from.

Lieut. Ray, U. S. A., arrived with the mail.

From Utah.

LEAVENWORTH, Oct. 9th.
Per U. S. Express Company to Boonville, Oct. 11.

Colonel Chapman, and Lieut. Buras, of the Fifth Infantry; Captain Newton, and Lieutenant Bryan, of the Engineer Corps, and Lieutenant Villaspina, of the Dragoons, have arrived here from Utah. The weather on the plains was very pleasant, and the contractors' trains were getting along well.

The Pike's Peak gold excitement is abating, although numbers of emigrants continue to arrive at this point, and Kansas city.

EDITOR OF THE VALLEY TAN.

DEAR SIR:—In the New York Tribune, of October 9th, I notice the following:

Indians selling Squaws to the Whites.

Correspondence of The Wisconsin.

CEDER CITY, 20 miles south of Parowan.

UTAH TERRITORY, Aug. 19, 1858.

"A new trade is springing up between the Utes and Piedes Indians—that of selling and buying squaws. At Harmony, some forty miles from Washington, the Piede Abram, having a Squaw who signified her wish to have a younger husband, marched her before the muzzle of his rifle to Cedar, where Utes were quartered, having come here for the purpose of buying squaws for the United States troops, and sold her to them; so she had a fair prospect of having her desires more than gratified. It is understood that agent G. Hurt is encouraging the trade.

A few days since a noise of crying was heard in the streets; I went out and saw an Indian dragging along his squaw, while she was howling bitterly. Upon asking what was the cause, he replied, "Kots ashindi mi" she don't want me; having also conceived a desire for another husband, and probably she may be likewise accommodated. There are soldiers enough here, who have nothing to do or think of, but to furnish all the disaffected squaws in the Territory with temporary husbands."

The correspondent of the Wisconsin, has the audacity to call this traffic between the Utahs and Piedes, a new trade, but he obviously utters a willful falsehood, that trade having existed at the time of our first acquaintance with the two tribes, and practiced ever since.

I do not believe that there is at this time a Piede Squaw to be found in Camp Floyd, nor has there been since the troops first occupied it; and the charge that there is a market opened at that place for such a trade, is false and unfounded, and carries with it an imputation that I feel it my duty to repel.

So far as this Correspondent attempts to implicate myself as giving encouragement to such a traffic, I pronounce him a liar and a scoundrel.

Again, a Correspondent of the Alta California, of Oct. 23rd, treats the public with the following very interesting paragraph:

"TROUBLE EXPECTED."

Tintic, the chief of the Utahs at Spanish Canyon, fifty miles below this city, threatens war upon the whites. He is a bad Indian, and has been at the head of the troubles between the races in this country. Some time since the Indians of Tintic's band committed rape upon a Danish girl and her mother. The criminals were demanded by the Governor, to be punished by law. The chief refused to deliver them up, but offered to shoot them himself. The Indians have a perfect horror of hanging, and especially by white men. In consequence of this demand not being complied with, an order was issued to arrest the chiefs, Tintic and Bastiste, and hold them responsible. This so offended the chiefs, that they burnt their lodges and went into the mountains about the 25th inst., threatening war upon Mormons and whites.

These Indians are capable of annoying the thin settlements very much, and fears are expressed on account of their attitude. These are the Indians over whom Dr. Hurt, the Agent in that region, claims to have under perfect control.

"I think the correspondent gives himself credit for more sagacity and foresight than he is entitled to; for he comes up here a perfect stranger, peeps into one of the business streets of Salt Lake City, has a glimpse of a few hand-cart women selling fruit, and imagines the whole Utah difficulty spread out before him perfectly comprehensible. But to show how perfectly treckless, and unreliable the "ALTA's" Correspondent has rendered himself, it is only necessary for those who are acquainted with the facts alluded to, to read the above paragraph, almost every line of which contains a misrepresentation.

The Correspondents' statements in reference to myself are false, for I never have claimed to exercise such a control.

It is to be regretted, that the literary journals of the country should open their columns to correspondents so reckless of what they say, and so regardless of consequences.

G. HURT.

Charles Loring, living seven miles from River Falls, Wisconsin, was bitten by a rattlesnake on the 7th. The bite was inflicted on the fleshy part of the leg a short distance above the ankle, and so deeply and firmly were the fangs inserted, that it was with some difficulty the snake could be shaken from his hold. After dispatching the reptile, he succeeded in reaching the house, which was near by. The wounded limb soon became enormously swollen and extremely painful. No relief was obtained until some whisky was procured and administered in large quantities, which afforded immediate relief. He was kept constantly under the influence of this remedy, and, we understand, is now recovering rapidly.—Green Lake (Wis.) Democrat.

The Southern Overland Mail arrived in this city on the 10th inst., at 7 o'clock, in 24 days from St. Louis, by way of El Paso, Tucson, Los Angeles and San Jose. The times of leaving the different points were as follows:—

St. Louis, Sept. 16th, 8:30 A.M.;
Fort Smith, Sept. 19th, 3:30 A.M.; Colbert's Ferry, Sept. 20th, 3 P.M.; Fort Belknap, Sept. 22d, 1 A.M.; El Paso, Sept. 30th, 5:50 P.M.; Tucson, Oct. 2d, 10 A.M.;
Fort Yuma, Oct. 5th, 6:15 A.M.;
Los Angeles, Oct. 7th, 2:20 P.M.;
San Jose, Oct. 10th, 1 A.M.

From this it will be seen that the time to this city, from San Jose, was six hours, from Los Angeles, 66 hours, and from El Paso, 9 days and 15 hours. El Paso is about half-way between St. Louis and San Francisco, so that it took 15 days on the Eastern half and 9½ days on the Western half of the road. The Eastern half should be crossed at least as rapidly as the Western half, and at that rate the time would be but 19 days.

The men at the different stations did not know when the mail would come, and were not prepared for it; so that considerable delay was caused in getting ready at most of the stations.—Alta California.

DUELING.—The New York Commercial thus alludes to the Wise and Clements duel:

"Any one who had time to spare would do a good service to the cause of true honor, and of public decency, if he would compile a list of all the challenges to the duel in the United States during the last ten or fifteen years, giving the provocation, the number (when any) of shots fired, the results and terms of the reconciliation or compromises.

It would be the richest farce ever published, and would more than justify the suggestion of the Tribune that the large majority of duels are ventured simply because it is presupposed they will be fought only in a pickwickian sense. The time was when a man's family and friends gave way to grief inexpressible if it was known that he had given or accepted a challenge. The duel then meant vengeance—an earnest and deliberate intent to take life or sacrifice it. Brutal and criminal as was the practice, it had a tragic reality about it that made men look grave when they spoke of it.

The reverse is the case now. It is but the resort of, and cloak for, bullying and coxcombry, and the man who, like Mr. Wise, shows that he retains the old fashioned idea of dueling and when he accepts a challenge he accepts it in earnest, and not merely for the sham of 'exchanging shots' and then 'appealing to the public,' will be likely to be let alone thereafter. The whole thing has become a great sham and only exposes those who engage in it to the unmitigated contempt of every one whose respect is worth possessing.

QUARRELS.—Two things, well considered, would prevent many quarrels: First, to have it well ascertained whether we are not disputing about terms rather than things; and, secondly, to examine whether that on which we differ is worth contending about.

A fellow who got drunk on election day said it was owing to his efforts to put down party spirit.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, NOVEMBER 12, 1858.

An Indian Tradition--A Prophet.

The peculiarities of this latitude and locality are really astonishing--we have not only the "Salt Lake," one of the wonders of the world, the Cotton Wood Lake, upon the summit of the highest Mountains, abounding with electric eels, the hot springs, hissing from the mountains, whose tops are covered with snow and its base with internal fires forming a strange antithesis, but the air and soil with a divination that borders on the miraculous spontaneously produces Prophets, indigenous as quakensapen wood, wild flax or sage. That mysterious power which penetrates the future, heals diseases without the diagnosis of modern Pharmacy is not confined alone to the white race, but even the mountain savage boasts the Divine inspiration.

We have a case in point, and one which is well known to many of the oldest citizens and traders in this region, a live prophet some of whose wonderful powers as related to us are certainly very extraordinary, but not more so than is claimed by many who profess to claim the Divine afflatus, and act as the Oracles of Heaven.

The report is among the Indian tribes, west of the Rocky Mountains, that a miraculous and mysterious being has been developed among the tribe known as the Bannacks, and a confident belief in his existence in tangible human form has gained possession of the minds of nearly all the surrounding tribes. The name of this copper colored or red skinned prophet, as given to us by an old mountaineer and interpreter is Waragikah and he is regarded with great awe by those who believe in his wonderful powers.

The story runs, that immediately after birth he overstepped the tedious period of childhood and youth, with their long train of feebleness and dependence, and like Minerva, who sprang from the brain of Jove, he stepped at once into perfect manhood. It is related that his mother had scarcely time to encase him upon the board upon her back, ere his limbs had grown so large that they snapped the buck skin thongs with which they were fettered, and he stood before his astounded maternal ancestor full grown. He is represented as being very large and perfectly developed, but has not a full resemblance to the people of his tribe, and is said to be a California Indian. His proselytes claim for him the power to heal the sick, by blowing his breath upon him, while every variety of wild animals, are perfectly under his control as well as the elements of fire and water; he rebukes the winds and they obey him, and at his command the Mountains sink to a perfect level with the plain.

It is also related of him that he never deviates from a straight line and has been seen ascending perpendicular cliffs, hundreds of feet high, which his horse ascends with perfect ease. He makes powder and bullets out of dirt, and is impervious to the arrows of his enemies; and that upon one occasion when in battle he fell, and after it was over his comrades sought for his supposed dead body, but in vain, and after repairing to the village they found him in his wigwam quietly smoking his pipe. Waragikah, with a sagacity that surround modern prophets, keeps himself perfectly secluded, thus adding an additional prestige and a more mysterious curiosity to his supposed miraculous powers. Who will dare say after this that the region on the sun set side of the Pacific slope of the Rocky Mountains is not a "ger-reat and gel-lorious kedentry?"

Indian Intelligence.

We understand that information has been received at the camp, that the Indians in the neighborhood of Malad Valley, under the leadership of Tintie, are assembling in considerable numbers, and threaten mischief. There is no doubt of the fact, that a delegation has visited the Navajos as mentioned in our last issue, for the purpose of securing their co-operation--but with what success has not as yet transpired. Arapine one of the principle Chiefs of one of the bands of "Utes," has lately returned from that country, and while crossing Green River, his wife was drowned. The women and children have been removed to Green River, and the men are co-gregating in the southern portion of the Territory, doubtless with the intention of stealing Government cattle and other stock belonging to the people in that vicinity. Gen. Johnson, in view of the threatened danger has sent out several military squads to protect the Valleys, where the Government stock is herded, as well as the people in these vicinities generally. There is doubtless a hostile feeling existing upon the part of the Indians which may be manifested in the destruction of public and private property, but prompt measures have been taken for security.

The American Flag.

This is no longer considered a dirty rag in this region; on the contrary, we are treated to high-flown effusions upon its colors and its gallant fluttering, and it is no longer regarded as a bob-tailed bantling without meaning, and worthy, as heretofore, of resistance. We admire patriotism, but we do not like to see it forced upon the world by a mere display of words when there is no real honesty in the heart; these sudden conversions have a motive far out of the reach of true patriotism, and are engendered either by necessity or fear, or a spirit of avarice, and self-interest; and there are those in the world, and particularly in this region, who feel the force of it, and like the dusky Sambo's and Caesar's, with their flails and buckets are now administering a whitewashing process to the colors they once defied. Repentance is a quality we would not gainsay, but since the days of Saul, whose conversion was worked by a special interposition, the antithesis of the term is too apt to run wild in an excessive admiration and zeal. Hence the overwrought patriotism of those who at one time bartered its progress might be the subject of some doubt. This thing of soaping the flag and army and swallowing them at one gulp, seems however, not to be too large for the thorax of some of our Latter Day Saints brethren. "Consistency" certainly "is a jewel."

Indignation.

We noticed yesterday on the street, a man whose manner seemed to be very indignant and as we passed by we observed that he was tearing up our paper, but he said nothing, his "offence had this extent, no more." We thought as we pursued our way along and fell into an abstract fit of musing upon the circumstance, that he might as well not make a rent in that interior article of a man's personal habiliments, made of linen or cotton--in other words, not "tear his shirt." Philosophy teaches us that there is no such thing as annihilation in the material world, and the destruction even of a single sheet like the laws which govern some of the most interesting specimens in the vegetable kingdom, might be formed into atoms which in its turn would re-produce itself. Indignation is sometimes a very virtuous quality, and probably in this instance as is common, was attended by some expletives or adjectives of a not very delicate nature; but then we would recommend, to all such the proverb that the Arabs have, that "curses like chickens come home again to roost."

United States District Court.

The United States District Court, for the third Judicial District, Judge Sinclair, presiding; will meet in this City, on Monday next.

The officers of the Court, are, Peter K. Dotson, Marshall; Frank D. Gilbert, Deputy; Isaac Henry, Bailiff, and David A. Burr, Clerk. The Docket, we understand is not large, although much interest and importance attaches to the proceedings of this Court.

The following list comprises the names respectively, of the Grand and Petit juries.

GRAND JURY.	PETIT JURY.
A. B. Miller,	Benj. D. Spencer,
Eleazer Miller,	H. S. Battle,
Charles A. Perry,	Charles Woodward,
Stephen Rose,	C. Clayton,
Ormus E. Bates,	John V. Green,
John B. Kimball,	Ute Perkins,
B. F. Pendleton,	C. V. Spencer,
William Bell,	William Sloan,
George Stringham,	John Nobeker,
Abel Gilbert,	Ira Miles,
Ezkiel Lee,	Benjamin Hampton,
Stephen Luce,	Samuel Bringham,
	B. F. Ficklin,
	John D. Lapsley,
	Lyman Leonard,
	Benjamin Covey,
	J. S. Higby,
	Hiram Kimball,
	William Price,
	N. H. Felt,
	Enoch Reese,
	Heman Hyde,
	Jack Mendenhall,
	Calvin I. Foss,

Brown City.—We understand that several contracts for the building of stores and other improvements in this new city, have been entered into within the past week, and the works will progress as fast as the weather will permit.

Several articles prepared for this issue, are for want of space necessarily left out.

Overland Mail.

We observe in the Missouri Republican, of October 11th, a notice of the arrival of the Southern Overland Mail from San Francisco, to St. Louis, in twenty-four days, and that it was the occasion of some rejoicing upon the part of our St. Louis friends. Mr. Butterfield, made a Triumphant entry into the City, and was received by a Speech, from Hon. John F. Darby, to which he responded:

This is all very well, and the enterprise and expenditure is doubtless commendable, but we will show them, and that very soon, on this end of the American Continent, that that time can, and will be beaten.

The enterprise of our contractors on the Eastern and Western divisions, and the improvements already going on, and those contemplated for shortening the distance between this City and California, will, when completed, make it the most desirable and the speediest route to the Pacific.

California Mail.

The Overland Mail from California, arrived in this City last Saturday, as usual "true to time," and from Mr. Thomas D. Pitt, who came with it, we learn that they crossed the Sierra Nevada mountains, on the 23rd and 24th ult., without any difficulty.

The Sixth regiment under Col. Andrews, were encamped at the mouth of old Carson Canyon. Mr. Pitt says the trip was a very pleasant one, and that there was but little disturbance upon the part of the Indians, only at one Station, where some Mules were Stampeded.

The Eastern division, under the control of Hockaday & Co., has been equally as prompt, and we think that we can authoritatively announce that we can furnish, as pleasant and as speedy a route to the Pacific, through this Valley, as any others contemplated.

Larceny.

On Tuesday afternoon a man was detected Snatching a small package of domestics, from the counter of the Store of Messrs. Gilbert and Gerrish. His movements were however watched by a negro man, who is employed in the Store, and who followed him to the door, and very emphatically told him, "to put dem goods back dar, where he got um;" the man was at first indignant, but upon being arrested by one of the Police, he owned up, and was kept in custody.

Fast Riding.

Riding at a rapid rate in the streets of the City, seems to be peculiar to this country. Every Equestrian appears to think that the highway was made for racing, and for horses, and that the pedestrian had no rights at all.

A few days since we saw a man dash suddenly around a corner, and come very near killing a little child, in fact the horse leaped clean over it, and it was almost a miracle that the little creature was not killed. There is an Ordinance of the City, against this furious riding, and it should be enforced.

A Muss.

Day before yesterday, (Wednesday,) afternoon, a regular free fight occurred in the vicinity of the Salt Lake House, among a crowd as we understand of teamsters. Rocks and dornicks, were freely distributed, and several heads were hit. Some of the parties struck in the melee were mere lookers on, whose Caputs were touched, and which might be said to make a Scratch in street stone billiards. Three of the players in this interesting game were holed, and their persons pocketed.

Our Post List.

There have been several trains arrived since our last issue, principally consigned to Miller Russell, & Co. Captain G. Miles, has arrived here with his trains--Captain Miles is from Carroll County, Missouri, and although he had an unusual hard trip, like a true Missourian he came to time. We gleaned from him some interesting Memoranda of his trip, which we would like to publish, but we have not the space. He informs us that he has disposed of his stock, and will shortly start back again for the States.

There are a great number of specimens of the genus bore in this latitude, men who seem to have nothing else to do but loaf around and inflict themselves at times, when they are not wanted. They are regular artisans, and run with a big augur.

Should one or two, who read this paragraph, make a not "on it," they would confer a favor by regulating themselves accordingly.

Theatre.

The theatre at Camp Floyd, opened on Tuesday night, and the performances we understand were highly creditable. We regret that we were not able to be present on the occasion, but we can now safely announce that the winter dramatic season has regularly set in. The principle credit of this enterprise--if we have not been misinformed is due to the 5th regiment.

Our friends in "America," may smile at our mountain efforts, but we can assure them that our tragedies are not to be laughed at, and that our comedies are seriously placed upon the boards and "bring down the house."--Genius like "blood will tell," and without the means and appliances of our neighbors in the "States," we have grasped the proper materials in our midst and dedicated the Historic Temple. Some idea may be formed of the difficulties labored under, when we state that in the absence of yellow ochre or chrome a portion of the scenery was actually painted from a solution in mustard, and does not present a very jaundiced aspect at that. Much credit is due to the gentlemen of the Army, engaged in getting up the enterprise, and if they do not split their seasons, and give us one in this City, we shall most assuredly drop down on the "other side of Jordan," frequently and see some "enacting" at the camp, even though the Legislature may be in session at Fillmore City.

We invite attention to the advertisement of the "Globe Restaurant." Mr. Candland keeps a house that would do credit to any establishment of a similar kind in the States. His table abounds with all the delicacies and substantials the market affords, and is served up nice, clean and in the best style.

We commend his establishment particularly to the attention of strangers.

DEATH OF A MISSOURIAN.—On Monday afternoon, Nov. 8th, at four o'clock, Mr. Samuel L. McKinney, of Westport, Missouri, died in this city of typhoid fever. Mr. McKinney was a freighter and two of his trains have arrived within the last week. He came in advance of them and was taken sick shortly after his arrival. Mr. McKinney was well known in Jackson county, Missouri, as an exemplary man, and it will be gratifying to his friends to learn that in his illness every attention that was possible was bestowed upon him. His funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, and his remains were deposited in the Great Salt Lake Cemetery. The deceased leaves, we understand, a family in Missouri.

Discovery of a Silver Mine.

While other localities are exciting considerable attention and exciting a fever in the States, from the discoveries of rich mineral treasures, we are glad at being able to record that a silver mine has been discovered in this valley. We were yesterday shown a specimen of pure silver ore which had been brought into Camp Floyd and sent to this city for testing. It is a very pure specimen, and the discoverer of this new Silver Eldorado asserts that the precious metal can be obtained in large quantities. The locality is at present, a secret; but we are informed that it is within two or three hours' ride of Camp Floyd. This certainly is not very definite, but that silver ore in large quantities exist we are assured upon unquestionable authority. We may yet--(and it will be no difficult job) throw Pike's Peak entirely in the shade. These Wahatch range of mountains may yet develop resources that will create a revolution in this valley; we believe that they were made for some other purpose than mere snow holders.

For the States.

On yesterday (Thursday) afternoon, the following persons took their departure for the States: Messrs. Samuel A. Gilbert, Frank B. Gilbert and John McConnell. They intend packing through, and expect to make the trip in 25 or 30 days.

On to-morrow, (Saturday) the following gentlemen take their departure: Lieut. S. W. Ferguson, 1st dragoons, who, upon his arrival will shortly afterwards proceed to Oregon; Chas. A. Perry, merchant of this city; James N. York, of Atchison, Kansas; Curtis Clayton, Philadelphia; Col. Alexander, Weston, Mo.; Mr. Peters, do; James Collins, Platte Co. Mo.; Anthony Grable, do; John S. Woods, Weston, Mo., and Mr. Hutchinson. These parties will go in wagons and take along with them animals for riding and packing.

We invite attention to the advertisement of Mr. Wallace in another part of the paper. His Saloon, the Empire, is choicely stocked with refreshments for the "inner man," while his Billiard tables up stairs, in the same establishment, afford a pleasant place of resort for those who take an interest in this truly interesting game.

CIRCULAR:

HEAD QUARTERS,
CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Nov. 8th, 1858.

Tuesday, 9th Nov. 1858, having been designated as the day on which the National Flag be hoisted for the first time in this valley, the following is the order for the ceremony, viz:

The troops of this command will be formed under arms at 11½ o'clock A. M., and the columns formed on the ground as hereinafter indicated at ¼ before 12 o'clock A. M.

A National Salute will be fired by Light Company B 4th Artillery at 12 o'clock M., precisely. At the first gun the flag will be run up to the mast-head.

The three Regiments of Infantry formed in columns closed in mass--4th on the front--7th and 10th on the North side of the Staff facing South; 5th on the West side facing East; Light company B 5th Artillery and 2nd Dragoons on the East side facing west; (Artillery on the right)--Light company B 4th Artillery to be posted in the S. W. angle, between the 5th infantry and the Depot Guard House. As soon as the Flag is saluted the Regiments and Corps will be marched to their respective parades and then dismissed.

By order of Lieutenant Col. Monahan,

EDW. J. BROOKS,
2nd Lieut. 7th Infantry, Adjutant.

THE CEREMONIES AT CAMP FLOYD.—A press of engagements prevented us from being present on Tuesday, upon the occasion of hoisting with all proper ceremonies the National Ensign. It is represented to us as being a most brilliant and imposing ceremony; a military pageant that is rarely witnessed. A correspondent kindly furnishes us with the following notice of the event:

CAMP FLOYD, Nov. 9, 1858.

I propose to give you a few items in regard to the interesting ceremonies of this day at Camp Floyd, the day having been set apart, as you are aware, for the raising of our National Banner at the Garrison.

Twelve o'clock was the time fixed for the exercises, and about half past eleven the different regiments were on the ground in the following order--the 10th regiment, commanded by Col. C. F. Smith, and the 7th by Maj. Lynde on one side; the 5th commanded by Maj. S. Eastman on their right, and the 2nd dragoons commanded by Col. Howe, with Maj. Reynold's Battery opposite to the 5th. Thus forming three sides of a square, a few minutes before twelve, Gen. Johnston rode up to the scene of action accompanied by his Staff, and took a position near Capt. Phelps' battery. At precisely twelve, Col. P. Morrison, in command of the Camp, waved his sword, the signal for the salute to commence, simultaneously with the report of the first piece the Band struck up Hail Columbia and the Flag was raised by Lieuts. Dudley and Murray of the 10th Infantry, which ceremony was performed by these gentlemen in an exceedingly creditable manner. The Star Spangled Banner was then given by the different Bands and after the firing of the last gun, Col. Morrison gave the request for three cheers for our Flag which were given by all present with a will which showed with what interest the troops took part in this interesting performance. After which they marched to their respective quarters to the tune of Yankee Doodle.

In the evening, the Theatre was opened for the first time, and considering the difficulties they have had to encounter in the lack of Materials, presented a very creditable appearance--in regard to the performances, they were rendered in a very handsome manner, and I have been present at Theatres in America of considerable pretensions which did not come up to it. I am sorry I could not procure you a copy of the opening address, which was very happily conceived and well delivered. The house was crowded, not even a standing seat being vacant.

The quarters for the troops are now nearly all finished, and the camp presents the appearance of a city.

Elections.

By the last Mail from telegraphic despatches to the St. Louis papers, we infer that Pennsylvania has gone for the opposition; another name under the circumstances, for Black Republicanism. The returns from Ohio and Indiana, indicate a similar result. We give the following telegraphic summary, taken from the Missouri Republican, of the 13th October:

Indiana Election.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 12th. Returns as far as heard from in this county, indicate a majority for Porter, (Rep.), of 400 to 500, which is a Republican gain of nearly 500. The whole Republican county ticket is elected by a large majority. Hancock county gives a large Republican gain. In the Third District the vote is very close. Three townships in Shelby county, show a small Republican gain.

Pennsylvania Election.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12th. The Election passed off quietly. The general impression is that the People's ticket has been elected.

Montour County.

The North and South wards of Danville, and Mahoning township give Scranton, (Opp.), for Congress a majority of 404 over McKenney, (Dem.). An opposition gain over the vote for Governor in 1857, of 449.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12th.

Returns come in slowly; only three wards of Pittsburgh, three of Allegheny City, and five of the county districts heard from, give heavy Republican majorities. McKnight, in three wards of Allegheny leads Williams, 408. The whole Republican ticket is undoubtedly elected by a large majority.

Mauch Chunk, Pa., Oct. 12th.

This borough gives John M. Read, the Opposition candidate for Supreme Judge, a majority of 60.

Wilkesbarre, Oct. 12th.

The following majorities are given for George W. Scranton, opposition: Wilkesbarre Burrough 126; West Pittston 82; Plymouth 120; Providence Burrough 91; Hyde Park Burrough 174; Hollidaysburg, East Ward, gives 87 majority for S. S. Blair, opposition, which is a gain of 100 on the People's ticket.

Milton, Oct. 12th.

This town gives J. C. Campbell, opposition, 187; W. S. Dewart, Lecompton Democrat 189; Jos. W. Cake, anti-Lecompton Dem., 38.

Erte, Pa., Oct. 12th.

The Democratic candidates for Congress, State Senate and Sheriff, are elected by small majorities. The balance of the Republican ticket, is probably elected. In the county the Republican ticket is probably elected by a large majority.

Meadville, Pa., Oct. 12th.

CRAWFORD COUNTY. Meadville gives 104 Republican majority; Conneautville, 82 Republican majority; Pine township, 62 Republican majority; Girard Burrough, 3 Democratic majority; Girard township, 98 Republican majority.

Van Wert County.

Five townships heard from, give a Democratic gain of 1; Bucyrus township gives Carey for Congress, 92 majority against 65 Republican majority last year. Catasappa Burrough, Pa., gives John M. Read, Opposition, for Supreme Judge, 101 majority.

New Hope, Bucks Co.

The majority for the Democratic candidate, William A. Porter, for Supreme Judge, in this Borough is 19. The majority for the Democrat candidate for Congress is only 4. The usual Democratic majority is from 60 to 70. Phoenixville Borough returns the following vote: John Hickman, anti-Lecompton 336; John M. Bromall, Opposition, 10; Charles D. Manly, Democratic, 196. The majority for Hickman, at the last Congressional election was only 47. Schuylkill township, in Chester county, gives Hickman 141, Manly 33, Bromall 36.

Wilkesbarre, Oct. 12th.

Scrantonborough gives Scranton, for Congress, 790 majority—a total gain of at least 600. Kingston township gives Scranton 140 majority. Nazareth Borough gives the Opposition, 47 majority. Upper Nazareth township gives 6 Democratic majority. Bethlehem Borough gives D. K. Shoemaker, Anti-Lecompton Democrat for Congress, 119 majority. Northumberland, Tarbot township gives Campbell, Opposition, 89; Dewart, Lecompton Democrat, 82; Cake, Anti-Lecompton Democrat 9. Northumberland gives Campbell 45; Dewart 41; Cake 4. Westchester Borough gives Hickman 418, Bramall 229, Manly 206. In 1856, Hickman's vote was 382, Bowen, Opposition, 542.

Twelve districts have been heard from, which give Hickman 1,585; Brownell 844; Manly 555. In the same places the vote in 1856 was Hickman 1,205, Bowen 1,672.

Sunbury.—The vote in this town for Congress is, Dewart 197; Campbell 102; Cake 33.

Doylestown township gives Roberts, (Dem.) for Congress, 23 majority.

Tamaqua Township—Campbell 420; Dewart 130; Cake 236.

Pottstown Borough—John Wood's (Opp.) for Congress gain over the vote of 1856 is 250.

Bloomsburg Borough gives Scranton 200 majority.

Scott Township gives Scranton 193 majority.

Mauch Chunk borough, gives Shoemaker, opposition, for Congress 146, majority.

Nicholson township gives John McKenney, (Dem.) for Congress, 18 majority. Centre township—Scranton, 151 majority. It has heretofore gone Democratic.

Carbonate city and township gives 3 majority for Scranton. Briar creek, Scranton 11 majority formerly (Dem.). Catawissa gives 63 majority for Scranton. Dunmore—McKenney, (Dem.) receives 1 majority in this town.

Morristown—Coschocton borough gives Wood for Congress, 108 majority.

Columbia county, as far as heard from, shows in Berwick a majority for Scranton of 112; Timbridge township, 172; Scott township, 490. In Nescopeck there is a tie vote.

The town of Bloom, in Timbridge, gives McKenney, (Dem.) only 11 votes.

Tenth District.

Snyder county, Salinas Grove.—The vote in this town for Congress, is John W. Killinger 109; Jacob Weidel 91.

Philadelphia, October 12.

The People's party claim the election of the whole city ticket. Large crowds of people are marching the streets with music and banners.

Harrisburg, October 12.

The Borough gives for Supreme Judge, Jno. M. Read, Opposition, 672; Wm. A. Porter, Democrat, 580. Read's majority 92. Packer's majority last year was 417. Harrisburg District and Borough, and Susquehanna and Swatara township give Read 985; Porter 703; Read's majority 282. Packer's majority last year was 528; Democratic loss in this district 810. Lawrence, Opposition candidate for the Legislature gains over 400 in the district. The whole People's ticket is elected by a large majority.

Iowa.

Des Moines, October 12.

In this city Leffingwell, (Anti-Lecompton Dem.) for Congress, has 600 majority.

Cincinnati, October 12.

SECOND DISTRICT. Gurley (Opp.) is elected, probably, by 1,500 maj.

In the First District the vote is close.—The whole Opposition county ticket is elected.

HAMILTON, Ohio, October 12.

The gain on the vote of 1856, for Vallandigham, as far as heard from is 185.

CLEVELAND, October 12.

The Republican gain in this city is 400.—The whole ticket is elected by 200 to 300 majority.

ZANESVILLE, O., October 12.

The city gives the Republican state ticket 90 majority—a Republican gain. Townships, Republican, for Congress, has 100 majority over Manly, Democratic. Swann, the Administration candidate for Congress, received 75 votes.

Huron, O., October 12.

Sherman (Rep.) has 101 majority in this township. In 1856 the Republican majority is 83, being a gain of 9. In Vermilion the Republican majority is 9.

Hudson, O., October 12.

Edgerton (Rep.) 184; Manly (Dem.) 84.

WELLSVILLE, O., October 12.

Bingham (Rep.) for Congress, 228; Meurs (Dem.) 124.

CUYAHOGA FALLS, O., October 12.

Edgerton's (Rep.) majority is 61.

MANSFIELD, O., October 12.

This township gives Sherman (Opp.) 150 majority, and the Republican State ticket 75 majority.

CINCINNATI, October 12.

Prendleton, (Dem.) is elected in the First District by about 300 majority.

SANDUSKY, October 12.

Six townships give Hall (Dem.) 237 majority.

WASHINGTON, O., October 12.

As far as heard from Corwin, (Rep.) has 272; Blair, (Dem.) 177.

Circleville—Cox's majority in six townships is 188.

Lancaster—City and township, 310 Democratic majority, 102 Democratic gain.

Circleville—Seven townships give Case, opposition, 110; gain on the vote of 1856.

Richland county gives about 300 Democratic majority. Ashtand county, as far as heard from 27 Republican gain.

Akron gives 30 Republican majority for the State ticket. Edgerton's majority is 141, and the rest of the county ticket 141.

SANDUSKY.

The average Democratic majority on the State ticket 98; Patrick, Democratic for Congress 69. Perkins township 36 for Sherman, Republican.

COLUMBUS, October 12.

Cox's majority in this county is about 150; in Licking county 200 majority. He is no doubt elected by 300 majority.

Steubenville—This city gives 5 majority against means—a Democratic gain of 72 on Chase's vote last year.

DAYTON, O., October 12.

All in but three townships. Vallandigham has a small gain of not over 30.

ALLEN COUNTY.

All heard from but three townships, show a Republican gain of 113.

WYANDOTTE COUNTY.

Three townships give a republican gain of about 200.

CINCINNATI, October 12.

Further returns from the First District indicate that Pendleton's election is doubtful.

ZANESVILLE, October 12.

Muskingum county, as far as heard from, gives a Republican gain of 280.

Filibustering to Sonora.

The Sacramento Mercury publishes the following communication:

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 8th, 1858.

I respectfully submit the following to the Sacramento filibusters: Having learned from good authority that an expedition is forming in this City, for the purpose of occupying the State of Sonora, and avenging the massacre, by the Mexicans, of Henry A. Crabb, and his party, I would take this occasion to give the adventurous young men of Sacramento some advice in regard to this matter. Sonora is a large State, and has an effective standing Army capable of resisting a large force. The inhabitants, generally, are unfavorable to these frequent incursions of filibustering parties, and will throw every obstacle in their way. It is supposed that Captain Wm. B. Newby, late aid-de-camp in Walker's army, will command this expedition. He is a daring filibuster, but unacquainted with Sonora, or any of the localities he proposes to take, and will, in all probability, meet the same fate as the unfortunate Colonel Crabb. Young men will do well to take the above facts into consideration before committing themselves in this expedition, and may thereby save themselves a miserable death, or what is worse, a long confinement in a Mexican prison.

A RESIDENT OF SONORA.

An Indian War in California. The "Shasta Courier," contains the following advertisement:

To the citizens of Shasta, Trinity, and Humboldt counties.

In obedience to the requirements of Special order No. 1, of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, requiring me to call out, organize and muster into the service of the State a full company of eighty men, for the purpose of giving "protection to the people, and rendering travelers on the road between Weaver-ville and Union secure from the depredations of Indians," I hereby call upon such of the citizens of Shasta, Trinity and Humboldt counties as desire to join the expedition among the Indians, to rendezvous at Big Bar, Trinity River, on or about Thursday, the 14th inst., when the company will be organized.

S. H. DOSH.

Brig. Gen. commanding 2nd Brigade, 6th Division.

Shasta, Oct. 6th 1858.

A ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.—Quite a romantic wedding took place at Mazomaria, in this county, last evening. The groom was a returned Californian, who left his wife for the auriferous land about seven years ago, the bride the wife that was left. Some time after he had reached California—a year or more—his wife received intelligence of his death. Two or three years later she heard that the story of his death was untrue, but that he never intended to return. Upon this with the advice of friends, she obtained a divorce.

Two or three days since the wanderer returned and called upon his former wife. Old affections revived, faith was plighted anew, and last evening he led her, a blushing bride, to the altar a second time. The happy pair, thus repaired, proceeded forthwith to the depot, and took the evening train east on their bridal tour.—Madison (Wisconsin), Journal.

LIST OF LETTERS REMAINING in Salt Lake City Post Office Nov. 11, 1858.

Adams Charles	Altred William
Adams Thomas	Ahrens John
Albough Jacob	Ames Edward
Alger Samuel	Andrus George
Allen John E	Anderson Wm H
Allen J E	Anderson Rezin
Allen D	Anderson H J
Alley George	Ashcraft James
Bagott Robert	Bowring H C
Baker Henry Walter	Box Thos
Barnes C R	Brackenburg John W
Barnes John	Brady William H
Batemann Joseph	Bradshaw Thos
Baum John	Brown E L
Baxter Jno	Browne John M
Beck Robert Wash	Brown John
Beeman S A	Brown William H
Bennion John	Brown Mr
Berkebile Chauncy	Bryant John B
Bettelyoun Amos	Bryan Jas M
Bind Samuel	Bryson James
Blain John H	Burke Patrick
Blair Thomas	Burgess Mark
Blair C J	Bushnell Purse
Broggett Andrew J	Booth Charles
Calkins Phillemon	Cleary Francis D
Campbell Jas C	Clinton J
Canright Francis A	Close Miron C
Capener William	Coburn Thomas
Capssan Carl	Cochrane John
Cartwright J L	Colling Robert
Carlile Alex M	Collins L L
Carpenter C C	Collins John F
Carpenter Alexander	Collins Alfred
Caswell Henry	Cornstock Grover
Cates Wm	Conlon Farri
Chilbery James P	Coombs Jasiah or Hy-
Clark Albert O	rum
Clark Ezra T	Coombs Jasiah M
Clark Charles H	Cooper William
Clark Horace	Copland David C
Claton Thomas	Cory Joseph
Claton John F	Coverdale Thoma
Croston Charles	Curry H V
Curry Pete	Cushman William H
Dato Isaac	Dougherty Sive
Demasters Augustan	Dove Thomas A
Deming Charles R	Dowling John
Dennis Isaac	Dunn William
DeSanlas Monstier	Dunham Edward
Dewey Henry G	FDunlap Wm H
Dietrich Daniel	Dye William
Dillard John J

Earl Wm	Elliott John
Edgar Allen	Ellis Jameson E
Edwards Alex	Erskine Green
Ehney Robert	Estes Jesse
Elliott Peter	Estes H W
Elliott A G	Evans W Douglass
Elliott William W	Everista E J
Elliott Thomas D	Ewing Robert C
Farnham Cullen	Foster William B
Ferguson James	Fletcher Mark
Fewins Esau	Flyer Char
Fisher Edward	Fryer Richard
Fones Henry Jacob	Fuller Robert N
Foster J N	Fulton F E
Galloway A	Glodding J F
Gardner George	Goddard Henry
Geary Charles	Gadrey Richard
Greenhalgh Abraham	Goodrich Joseph
Gessie Gus	Gordon C E
Gibbs Joseph	Grady Leonard
Gibbons Thomas E	Graham James
Gibson Jacob	Graham Thomas B
Gilbert William	Gregory John
Gill A N	Green Benjamin
Gillies John D	Greene John
Gilletie J W	Guilham Henry B
Haley Wm S	Hickey P J
Hardman L H	Higgs Thomas
Harrill Henry L	Heister James
Harrocks Peter	Hill Wm
Harvey S G	Hilliard J M
Hatch Thomas J	Hobgood Wm
Haskell H N	Hodgetta William B
Haskell Thurbow H	Hoier Christian
Haslam William	Hollister P S
Hawley A	Holmes A M
Hayden William C	Howard James J
Hedgepath Jno C	Hudson Owen
Henriod Eugene	Hulis George W
Hensley Richard M	Hurd William R
James Jason W 2	Johnston Robt J
James W C	Jones William
Jensen Karen	Jones Jno J
Jenkins Charles S	Jordan Moses
Jeffcoat John	Joyce M E
Kelly R D	Kemp Henry
Kelly John	Kerby John
Kelly William	Kilgour John M
Kelsey Samuel P	Kury Christian
Lane R W	Letton Reuben P
Landran Chas L	Lewis John
Lanzac Constanta	Lines James
Lawrence	Litchfield A T
Leary William	Little Francis W
Leavitt Nathaniel	Lish Harmon
Lecky Joseph	Low Silvester
Lent William H	Lowe B F
Lemon Alexander A
Mackie James	McRay Joseph
Markes Alexander	Meike Robert
Marrion George	Merrill Samuel B
Marshall W Thomp-	Merrill Albert
son	Michie A N
Marshall Josph	Midgley Joshua
Marshall Marion M	Melt Eli
Mason Thomas	Miller Solomon
Masson Victor	Miller Jno A
Maw Robert	Miller Isaac
May George	Miles James
McBean Frank W	Miser William
McCable Michael	Matchusson George E
McCandless S E	Montgomery Wash'n
McCrea Arthur	More T C
McDonald John	Morley Rich
McErven Warren L	Moses Thomas
McFarland William	Moses Julian
McIntire Robert K	Mulford I Burnett
McNeff Michl	Murphy J E
McQuarrie Hector	Myers John
Nader Henry	Norris James W
Nathan Louis 2	Noyes Friend 3
Nash Isaac Bartlett	Nixon F B
Neeson Thomas	Nixon James W
Noland A H
OConnell Timothy	Oren David 2
Olsen Daniel	Owings Thomas 3
Oneill Hugh
Pack Ward E	Pierce Joseph W
Page Milo F	Pimm John
Pare John	Phelps Thomas T
Parkinson Jonathan	2Pond Stillman
Payne Thomas L 2	Pope Robert
Payne James H 2	Pore Edward
Peake William F	Potter Joseph L
Pershall L S	Pryner Leslie R
Perkins Daniel	Pugh Henry
Pepper John W	Pulsipher Charles
Petty Francis K
Race Joseph	Roberts Wm G
Ranshoff N	2Roberson Lewis
Reader Francis	Rohr John C
Reeves Wm	Rolen William
Reed Calvin	Rollins Henry
Rian William	Romney Miles
Richards Franklin D	Rossamaler R
Riley Harvey	Royer Rees B
Rhoads Thomas	2Russell John Chas
Saxey Mr	S
Salmon George Henry	Sparks Alfred
Saunders Charles M	Stallings Joseph
Saurer Daniel	Stead Augustus
Schnall James E	Steckel Samuel
Schell A I	Stevens H H
Sedure Henry	Stevens Edward
Simple W C	Stillman Charles
Siler A L	Stilson Wm Lacey
Sherman Mortimer O	2Stone Jesse F
Shellenbarger Wm H	Strong Levi
Slade J A	2Stewart Charles A
Slade Mr	Stewart D M
Smith Charles	Summers Cloye
Smith John B	Sutton Robert
Snow Erastus	Sweeney Henry
Terry Wm R	Thornton William
Titus Samuel	Thorp Theadore
Thomas Daniel D	Thorp William H
Thompson B W	Tuttle Newton
Van Valkenburg P	Van Deren James D
Valleau George	Vanderolt James
Vincent George	W
Wade James A	Wightman Wm C
Wainwright John	Willins David 2

Walker Wm
Wallace John F
Walton Thomas Ward John
Watts John
Webb Nathan L
Weir William F
Weit John M
Wheeling William Whitaker John
White Cornelius

Young D C

LADIES LIST.

Austin Sarah Mrs
Barker Mrs Polly E
Beats Mrs Mary A Bent Mrs Louis

Carter Mrs Mary
Crook Mrs Elizabeth

Doremas Mrs Harriet

Ensign Mrs Prissilla

THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1858.

NUMBER 3.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY

KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

LET ME IN.

BY FLORENCE PERCY.

When the summer evening's shadows
Veiled the earth's calm bosom o'er,
Came a young child, faint and weary,
Tapping at the cottage door:
"Wander through the winding wood-paths,
My worn feet too long have been;
Let me in, Oh, gentle mother,
Let me in!"

Years passed on—his eager spirit Gladly watched the dying hours;
"I will be a child no longer,
Finding bliss in birds and flowers;
I will seek the bands of pleasure,
I will join the merry din;
Let me in to joy and gladness,
Let me in!"

Years sped on—yet vainly yearning,
Murmured still the restless heart—
"I am tired of heartless folly,
Let the glittering cheat depart;
I have found in worldly pleasure Naught to happiness akin,
Let me in to love's warm presence,
Let me in!"

Years flew on; a youth no longer,
Still he owned the restless heart;
"I am tired of love's soft durance,
Sweet-voiced Syren we must part;
I will gain a laurel chaplet,
And a world's applause will win;
Let me in to fame and glory,
Let me in!"

Years fled on; the restless spirit
Never found the bliss it sought;
Answered hopes and granted blessings
Only new aspiring brought;
"I am tired of earth's vain glory,
I am tired of grief and sin,
Let me in to rest eternal,
Let me in!"

Thus the unquiet, yearning spirit,
Taunted by a vague unrest,
Knocks and calls at every gateway,
In a vain and fruitless quest;
"Ever striking some new blessing,
Some new happiness to win—
At some portal ever saying,
Let me in!"

Squatter Sovereignty, vs. The Constitution.

Editor of the Valley Tan.

Sir:—I have carefully perused an article over the signature of Tecumseh, titled, Polygamy in Utah, or Squatter Sovereignty vs. the common law of the States, published in a late number of the National Intelligencer, and copied into your paper. The author merits much credit for having presented in so clear and lucid a manner, those fundamental principles upon which rest the great fabric of the American government, with all its intricate working machinery; infusing the elements of prosperity and happiness into every department of society; but the Constitutionality of the measures proposed by him for the removal of this growing evil, does not appear to be pointed out with sufficient clearness to dispel those doubts which stand in the way of prompt action upon the subject.

As those who support polygamy, claim to have intrenched themselves behind constitutional authority, it devolves upon those who oppose the institution, to refute it upon the same high authority, and on failing to do so, let the victory be awarded to the polygamist, and cease to molest him in the enjoyment of his constitutional privileges.

The discussion of this question necessarily involves the claims of squatter sovereignty, which, from the peculiar circumstances attending the settlement of a vastly extended public domain, has acquired a degree of popular favor, and an apparent sanction of law, altogether superficial.

The Constitutionality of a measure, or the soundness of a new principle, if popular, is not likely to be critically scanned, until the exercise thereof is discovered to conflict with others more sacred or important to the interests of society; and hence the opinion of some that Congress hath not power to legislate for the Territories. Prior to the adoption of the Federal Constitution in 1789, all the lands under the control of the General Government, had been ceded to it by the sovereign States, with the express understanding that it was to be disposed of for the support of a common cause; and on the 10th October, 1789, the Congress of the Confederation enacted that those lands should be disposed of for the common benefit of the United States.

"and be granted and settled at such times, and under such regulations as shall hereafter be agreed on by the United States in Congress assembled."

And again, in an ordinance of the 13th July 1787, we derive further information in regard to the extent to which the General Government felt authorized at that time, to legislate for the Territories, and the objects for which that legislation was had viz:

"For extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, which form the basis whereon these republics, their laws and Constitutions are erected; to fix and establish those principles as the basis of all laws, constitutions, and governments, which forever hereafter shall be formed in the said Territory."

Thus recognising in most impressive language that embodiment of innate principles which constitutes the basis of American jurisprudence, and styled by Tecumseh the common law of the States.

It is from the social habits, manners, customs and religious sentiments of a people, that their laws emanate, and for the preservation and perpetuation of the same, that legislation is had; and if we will examine step by step the archives of our National and State Legislatures, from their first organization to the present, we will find that these social and religious sentiments have beautifully entwined themselves into every principle of law, and stamped their impress upon all the institutions of the country, and formed for the American people a distinct national character.

And whether that national character has been left to the mercy of ever-shifting opinion, or fostered by the strong influences of the Constitution—whether the history of our laws and institutions is to be ever shifting like the changing colors of the chameleon; or like unto that immutable code which changes not with the lapse of time, is a part of the subject of our present enquiries. When a portion of their public domain was ceded by the Sovereign States, they yielded their rights, for the attainment of a paramount object; they sacrificed pecuniary interest for the establishment of those intrinsic principles of our nationality; giving to the Federal Congress the right to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the same; not such a disposition as would ultimately subvert those institutions for which they were ceded to support; or such rules and regulations as would conflict with the laws of society in the several States; but only such as were necessary to secure the extension and observance of those laws in the Territories. What are we to understand by this "power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the Territories?"

Squatter sovereignty, alias polygamy, would define it as having exclusive reference to the disposition of the soil; but if so, the organic law of every Territory, in the Government is null and void, as also the statutes of their Legislatures. But the Constitution provides, that all crimes except impeachment shall be tried by jury, and when not committed within any State, the trial shall be held at such place, or places, as the Congress may by law have directed. Thus clearly defining the power to legislate for the punishment of crimes in the Territories. Again, the Constitution expressly enjoins upon every State in the Union, that persons charged with crime in one State, and fleeing into another, shall be delivered up on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled. And if the Constitution enjoins it on the General Government to enforce regulations for the punishment of crimes in a sovereign State, is it not reasonable to suppose that she can exert a similar authority over the Territories?

The Constitution again provides that, Congress may admit new States, and we recognize in our Territorial governments, those new states in embryo, ultimately to attain their majority, and be inducted into full membership upon an equality with their elder sisters, on presenting full and satisfactory tokens of fidelity to those inherent virtues which form the basis of our national character; so intimately linked with the destinies of our institutions, and so endeared to the heart of every true American citizen, that to violate them, is to rebel.

And with the same guardian vigilance the Constitution binds the national Congress in a solemn guarantee to every State in the Union, to preserve inviolate the chastity of these institutions. That no spurious and adulterous offspring may poison the sources of virtue, and light the fires of discord upon the hearthstone of the patriot.

Again—the Constitution provides that, the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of the citizens of the several States; and to carry out in good faith this provision of the Constitution, it would be a safe rule to prohibit the adoption of any institution or practice in the Territories that is inimical to the laws of all the States; for what is, and ever has been eschewed as evil, and promptly punished as a crime by the laws of every State in the Union, should not be indulged with impunity in the public domain which is the common property of all the States, and ultimately destined to become members of the common sisterhood.

The power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the Territories, has been ceded to Congress, and in lieu thereof the Constitution guarantees the form of the institutions to be erected thereon. Not such institutions as we see resting like a mammoth incubus upon the degenerate tribes of Asia and Africa, to inflict the curses of effeminacy and imbecility upon the vigorous offspring of a young and enlightened nation; but such only as may have received the sanction of that code of morality that has been adopted in every State in the Union.

The Constitution again provides, that Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; but it is evident from other clauses of that same instrument that we cannot sanctify and legalize the whole catalogue of crimes and practices them with impunity under the sacred garb of religion; and if polygamy can be thus sanctified, I see no reason why other crimes may not be allowed the same sanction.

This same toleration of religion is a prominent feature in the Constitution of every State in the Union; yet, who would attempt to practice polygamy and justify it as a religious institution under the Constitution of one of the States? Yet, if it can be tolerated under the Constitution of the General Government, it can be tolerated under them all.

If it be tolerated as a local institution, it must be tolerated also as a national institution, and stamp its impress forever upon the national character. If it is to be tolerated as a religious institution, and if we indulge it to those who deem it necessary and essential to their salvation, it cannot be denied to those who care nothing about salvation; and it now devolves upon the people of this great and enlightened nation to determine whether they will engraft this institution of polygamy upon their social system, and entail its long train of attendant evils upon the character of the nation; to defile the sacred purity, and break up the harmony of the marriage relation—to inflict the pangs of remorse upon the heart of the mother, and blunt and destroy those refined sentiments of virtue, which shed a halo of purer joy upon the declining years of the American matron.

Nov. 14, 1858.

UTANUS.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

St. Johns, Oct. 18.

Advices per the Ariel, from Liverpool the 6th, were received here last evening.

Liverpool, Oct. 5.—Cotton—Sales for three days 21,000 bales, including 1,400 bales each to speculators and exporters. The market closed quiet but steady.

Manchester advices were unfavorable. Richardson, Spence & Co. quote flour dull and prices easier, but quotations unchanged. Corn dull and quotations nominal.

Provisions quiet. Beef heavy. Pork quiet. Bacon dull with little inquiry, and prices dull. Lard dull at 60¢/61¢.

Sugar quiet. Coffee quiet. Rice quiet. Spirits turpentine 38¢/39¢.

Consols quote at 98½.

Later dates from China had been received. The American Minister had gone to Shanghai.

The cholera had broken out among the Chinese troops, causing great mortality.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.

It is said that Gen. Jarez will immediately communicate with the Government of Nicaragua, relative to the non-success of his mission, and ask for further instructions. He was emphatically informed by Gen. Cass that, whatever may be done by France or any other foreign power, our Government will protect the Transit route to the fullest extent and at all hazards.

Some friends of the Administration, occupying high political positions, express themselves favorable to a direct application to Congress for an appropriation to conduct the negotiation for the purchase of Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.

The correspondent of the New York Herald, says Gen. Jarez has been informed by the Secretary of State, that, not having power, as it was understood he had, to settle the Nicaraguan difficulty by accepting the Cass-Yrisarri Treaty, it would be useless to hold further communication with him, and that this Government, in the meantime, would not wait further useless negotiations, which only served to embarrass a plain question; but would pursue the decisive policy already explained to him.

The Balloon Race.

CLEVELAND, October 19.

Godard came down about half-past ten, near Monroeville, and Steiner about one mile from Sandusky at eleven o'clock. The latter says that he intended crossing the Lake, but got drowsy and lost some of his ballast, and changed his mind.

Fishing Schooner Wrecked.

Boston, October 19.

The fishing schooner E. Atwood, of Westport, Me., has been wrecked on Prince Edward's Island, and all on board (ten in number) perished.

Postoffice Receipts.

WASHINGTON, October 19.

The receipts of the Postoffice Department for the quarter ending the 30th June, were $1,800,000.

Heenan and Morrissey.

Buffalo, October 19.

The coming fight between Heenan and Morrissey causes the greatest excitement among the fans. The city is fuller than ever before of "bruisers," and delegations continue to arrive by every train. Notorious sporting characters are here from Havana, New Orleans, California, and all the large Northern cities. Both Morrissey and Heenan are reported to be in excellent condition and eager for the fray. The fight takes place near Long Point Canada. Heenan's seconds are Aaron Jones and Johnny Mackay; Morrissey's seconds are Dublin Tricks and Australian Kelley. The betting is now even.

A fight came off to-day, at Point Abino, between Scotty and Barney Aaron, resulting in a victory for Barney, giving him a foul blow. They fought ten rounds in fifteen minutes.

Opposition Editors and Mules.

Some of the opposition papers are exercising their inventive faculties on the subject of mules. They are disanting at great length on the prices of this valuable animal, and exhibiting a degree of knowledge in the matter of mule-flesh which would have put Sancho Panza to the blush. Many of their editors seem to be clever "experts" in the mule-trade, and the world is induced to think by their profound dissertations on the subject that a good many excellent mule-jockies have been spoilt in making as many indifferent black-republican editors.

Of all the kinds of romance in the world we cannot conceive any that would be more interesting and recherche than mule-romances, especially as associated with the march over the plains of the Utah expedition, with the miraculous growth of Leavenworth, and with the hoarse political shriekings in Kansas. Cervantes founded his great romance in considerable part on Dapple; and if the editor of the St. Louis Democrat and his copyists had been cotemporaries of the ancient sire rather than of his numerous progeny of Dapples in Kansas, with which they are now associating their names so intimately, they would have been rendered immortal in a romance drawn by the pen of his genius, rather than made ridiculous in prosy roboracks drawn by the clownish hands of modern writers of mule-romances for the newspapers.

To watch the growth of this new species of romance will be interesting, and we propose to do so for a little while, until the species of fictitious literature shall become unduly purulent and extravagant; when, like Croker, of the Quarterly Review, we shall have to apply the critical knife, properly sharpened, to the preposterous fabrications; or, dropping the metaphor, to apply a little fact and reason to the cunningly-devised fables, and show what Shakespeare meant by "putting down" ingeniously-wrought falsehood with "a plain tale."

—Wash. Union.

A JUVENILE PRODIGY.

A late letter from New York contains the following:

A juvenile prodigy has just been discovered among us in the person of a girl named Ella Virginia Burns, whose remarkable powers of reading and repeating from memory passages of poetry and prose astonish all who have heard her. The Tribune, which has been favored with a private interview with the wonderful girl, says: "The child is not quite four years old, exceedingly pretty, playful and childish; in short, in all things a child except in her remarkable development of talent. Few persons of any age; and probably not another one in the world of her own, could read with the clearness of enunciation, and correctness of understanding and perfect apprehension of what she read, a piece of poetry which we opened upon accidentally in a scrap-book and handed to her, and which there is not one chance in a thousand of her ever having seen before. The only drawback to the satisfaction in listening to her is, the regret that one cannot help feeling that there should be any necessity of stimulating or even permitting the exercise of such rare faculties."

TWO PACIFIC ISLANDS OFFERED TO THE UNITED STATES.

Two of the Society Islands, Tahaa and Raiatea, have offered themselves to the United States. They are said to be two of the finest Islands in the groupe, and have a harbor protected by a coral reef, which is large enough to float all the vessels in the world. The location is very desirable for a station for our whaling vessels. It appears that on the 25th day of May, the United States Consul at Tahiti visited Tahaa, and during his visit, the natives, without his knowledge, drew up a paper, which was signed by all the Governors and principle officers on the Island, presenting the Island to the United States. Mr. Owen was naturally very much surprised when the nature of the document was explained to him. He promised to send it to the President of the United States. This at first did not satisfy the people, as they wanted the "stars and stripes" hoisted immediately. Soon after Raiatea, followed in the wake of Tahaa, and all of the Governors, with the exception of one, (and he was not present) signed a similar paper. So all that remains for the United States to do, is to accept or reject the gift.

THE CAMELS.

Forty-nine of the camels belonging to the United States are now at Campe Verde, sixty miles from Antonio. Only one of those imported has died, while ten have been added by birth. These young American-born camels thrive well, and promise to grow up equal in all respects to those imported. Notwithstanding the successful trial lately made by Captain Beale, in his explorations across the continent, there are some officers of the army who doubt whether anything is to be gained by the use of camels. This, however, might be expected. There are always persons opposed to all sorts of changes and innovations.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. & L. CITY, NOVEMBER 19, 1858.

General Johnston, and Roads in Utah.

The General commanding the Department, has not been unmindful of the wants of the Army, and the country generally, in respect to the facilities of commerce, and the rapid concentration of troops, within this Territory. It was by his advice that the road from Fort Riley, to Bridger's Pass, explored by Lieut. Bryant, of the Topographical Engineers in 1848, was opened all the way through to Fort Bridger, during the past summer, and we have now to announce that under his enlightened instructions, Capt. Simpson, of the Topographical Engineers, has during the past two months explored and opened a new wagon route, from Fort Bridger to Camp Floyd, which is destined to be of incalculable benefit to the Army, and the people of the Territory generally. It was believed until the General came into the Territory, that the Echo Canyon route, terribly rough and mountainous as it is, was the only practicable wagon road from the States, into Great Salt Lake Valley, except that by Bear Springs, which makes a detour, a full degree and a half of latitude, too far to the North. This Echo Canyon route was the only one, which, the traders, Mormons and California emigrants had from the time of the first settlement of the country taken; and it was believed that none other could be found. The General, however, conjectured differently and in August last directed Capt. Simpson to make the necessary examinations by way of the Timpanogos river and White Clay Creek or Kames Prairie as might be found most advisable. The exploration and report were made by the Captain in nineteen days and in twenty-five days from that date, the road was graded and made practicable by the soldiery, for heavy trains all the way through, and the trains have been traveling it ever since. In distance it is a trifle shorter than by the old route; but its great superiority consists in the low grades of the divide and the abundance of wood, water and grass, which is found all along it. Its course is quite direct from Fort Bridger, south-westerly to the most eastern source of White Clay Creek, (Mawrin's Fork of Weber river) thence down the river to the Weber; thence up the Weber twelve miles and across the divide to Silver Creek; thence up Silver Creek and across the divide to the Timpanogos river, and thence down this river to Utah Valley, and by the way of Battle Creek and American Fork settlements, and Lehi city, to Camp Floyd. The road is also represented as being most charming on account of the splendid mountain and pastoral scenery, combined, which it furnishes. That in Timpanogos Valley, cannot be surpassed by any in the Territory. There is a fall of water from a height in the lower Canyon of the river, of from 800 to 1,000 feet, and nothing can exceed the beauty of the stream in its leap to the vale below. There are also some very superior springs about twenty miles up the Valley of the river, that are destined to attract a great deal of attention. They seem to be of a calcareous character and for miles around and to as great a depth as can be discovered, the formation of the plain is entirely due to deposits from these springs. The water swells over and in doing so is constantly adding by its precipitous to the cumulus about their mouths, and the result is, that tumuli or mounds, in one instance to the height of about 60 feet, and some 200 feet base have been formed. These tumuli are in some instances conical; in others, hemispherical, and when the water ceases to flow, disintegrate and gradually gravitate to the general level of the country. The number of rattlesnakes is said to be incredible and you can scarcely ever in favorable seasons get nearer their hiding places, without hearing their sharp rattle.

The streams along the route, particularly the Timpanogos, Weber and Bear river, abound in trout of a large size. The country is also represented as being quite good for game, particularly the sage hen and pheasant.

Since the opening of this Road, General Johnston has had Capt. Simpson engaged in pushing his explorations West, for the purpose of continuing the routes already referred to, direct to Carson Valley, and thus avoid the great labor which is made by going by the Goose Creek mountains and Humboldt route. One of the great obstacles to a route direct to California, has been the Great Salt Lake Desert, which extends for at least one hundred miles north and south, west of the Lake, and nearly as many east and west, and it was with a view to avoid, or obviate the great Sahara, that the examination was made preparatory to more extensive ones next spring and summer. The reconnaissance has been made so far as the lateness of the season justified; and although it has not ended in the perfect realization of the hopes of the Explorer, yet he was so fortunate as to add one new Spring to those which are already known to exist in that region, and the track he has made with his wagons, is about to be adopted by the California Mail Contractor, Mr. Chorpeneing, as affording the best route to avoid the Goose Creek mountains, and strike the Humboldt, whence the route will be feasible in winter the rest of the way to California. Next spring it is expected that further discoveries and improvements will be made on this route.

We noticed by the late papers, that an ovation has been given in St. Louis, to Mr. Butterfield, for his very quick trip of between 24 and 25 days with the Mail from San Francisco to that City, by the Fort Umo, Tucson and Fort Smith routes; and that the length of the route was 2765 miles. The people of St. Louis must not be surprised to see the Mail yet carried by our northern route on equally as short, if not shorter time; for the distance by this route cannot be as long; thus:—From St. Louis to Fort Leavenworth, 500 miles; Fort Leavenworth, to Camp Floyd, by Bridger's Pass and Timpanogos route, 1120 miles; and thence to San Francisco, say 800 miles; in all 2420 or, shorter than the Southern route by 345 miles.

PERSONAL.

Yesterday, Captain John Radford, and Richard R. Hopkins, two old St. Louisans, and Mr. Sloan, took their departure for California, the two first named gentlemen intending proceeding from thence to the States.

It was rumored shortly after they left, that Captain Jack Radford was going on a "Mission," his destination being the "Tongo Islands," but we are assured he has not been "Called" into any such service, but instead of "Preaching" he is going to buy goods in California, and send them through to this City, "a Kiting." If he does not have as bad luck as Mr. Micawber, he will "turn up" in St. Louis during the Christmas holidays.

Accepted.

In another column appears a communication over the signature of "VERITAS." The Pomona, Orange being, has invited investigation and thrown down the glove. The challenge is accepted and all we ask is that the crowd stand back, give fair play, and the hardest fend off.

Knocked Down.

On Tuesday night a darkey became obstreperous, on Main street—(we know no other name for it,) and knocked down a white man, no color was assigned for the act, except, the fact that the white man called him a "nigger." The dusky shoulder-bitter was taken in charge by the Police and locked up.

BROWN CITY.

In another column will be found the proceedings of the two last meetings of this Company.

Brown City, is a fixed fact in this Territory, and no expense will be spared to make it worthy of its future greatness.

The following named gentlemen constitute the membership and stock holders of the Company at present:

Captain P. T. Turnly, A. B. Miller, William P. Martin, Daniel M. Taft, J. H. Johnson, C. A. and E. H. Perry, William Gerish, Frank D. Gilbert, George Chorpeneing, John Harnett, John D. Radford, Captain Simpson, John M. Wallace, C. R. Morehead, and Abel Gilbert.

Cool—Decidedly.

A few days since one of the deputies of the U. S. Marshall, served a summons upon a certain man, to attend the U. S. District Court, which meets next Monday. The summons was read to him—when after hesitating a little while, he remarked: "well, I will think of it"—We hope he will find it convenient to attend.

The Government it is true is considered of not much importance by a great many in this community, and its Judiciary has been in the habit of being treated with contempt heretofore, but we apprehend that a different state of affairs exist now, and that the processes of the Courts will be respected, if not, we feel certain it will be enforced.

Theatre—Camp Floyd.

We made a hasty visit to Camp Floyd a few days since, and while there took a daylight peep into the Theatre. Although not yet completed and the workmen still busily engaged, yet we could not but admire the taste displayed in the whole arrangements, especially when we took into consideration the difficulties they have had to encounter. The stage scenery and "properties" generally, exhibit a degree of skill and energy that is certainly commendable. We saw with our own eyes, and what may appear a little astonishing to our friends, in the "United States of America," scenery and fresco work painted from the most ordinary materials. Mustard, common chalk, and blacking used for boots, were the elements from which palaces, cottages, gardens, and landscapes generally, were brought out upon the canvass, while Shakspeare himself, the patron saint of the Dramatic Temple the world over, loomed out above the curtain drop done up in common chalk. The scenic effect is certainly very creditable and exhibits a degree of artistic skill which is most praiseworthy, and the Bard of Avon, could he see his face sketched between the proscenium, even though in chalk, would not redder or blush at his likeness. We shall take the earliest opportunity we can spare to make another visit to the Camp and see the performance.

HORSE THIEVES.—This City and vicinity have suffered to a considerable extent within the last two weeks, from the depredations of those who deal in stock without paying for them. Several persons have had their horses taken in broad daylight, from the racks in front of the stores. On Wednesday, three of these fancy dealers who had stolen two or three horses, were brought into this City under guard, having been captured near Spanish Fork, with the stolen property.

Pistol Shooting.

One evening last week a Pistol was fired on the street in the front of the residence of Peter K. Dotson, Esq. It turned out to be that the Pistol was fired by a Policeman, at a man who was in custody, and who broke loose from the officer, but the shot did not take effect. It is proper however, to remark, that the bullet passed within a few feet of a couple of gentlemen, who were passing along at the time, and we suggest to the armed guardians of the City, that they should be a little particular how they point their weapons.

Some fellow has been loafing around our office at a late hour of the night, peering most impudently into the windows; and as we are informed by our watchman, sometimes trying the door. Should this paragraph meet his eye, we would remind him that his appearance will not be very safe for his health at such suspicious hours hereafter.

We understand that a train of Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish, will arrive in this city, sometime next week, freighted with staple articles expressly adapted to this market.

PERSONAL.—C. R. Morehead, one of the firm of Miller, Russell & Co., arrived in this city, day before yesterday. He comes from Millersville near Fort Bridger, and named in honor of Capt. A. B. Miller. Millersville is in embryo and one of the buttes that characterize this Territory, not a very big mountain but at all events a point.

We received the prologia or opening address delivered at the opening of the "Military Dramatic Association, but we are unable to publish it this week.

Several communications have been received, but too late for this weeks issue.

United States District Court.

This Court, the Hon. Chas. E. Sinclair presiding, met last Monday. But little business was transacted as there were several vacancies in the panel for Grand and Petit Jurors, which were ordered to be filled, and the Court adjourned over until next Monday when Judge Sinclair's charge will be delivered to the Grand Jury.

Gen'l David H. Burr was admitted to the bar, a position he once occupied in this city, but from the privileges and immunities of which he was lawlessly deprived. Without going into the history of the slander perpetrated against his fair fame, the infamous shafts of malice that were hurled at him, when he was powerless, we can only add that, his traducers missed the mark, and he stands unscathed, while his enemies are abashed. As a part of the proceedings of the Court the following forms an interesting item, charges preferred against the members of the bar named, and which will be passed upon when the Court meets:—

I beg leave to submit to the Court the following motion: That James Ferguson, Hosea Stout, and J. C. Little, be summoned to show cause why their names should not be stricken from the roll of Attorneys of this Court, for the following reasons, to wit:

Firstly—For preferring false, slanderous, and infamous charges, against a member of the Bar in this Court, when they knew them to be false; thus imposing upon the Court, and showing that their assertions as members of the Bar, cannot be relied upon.

Secondly—For threatening and intimidating a Judge of this Court—interrupting him in the discharge of his official duties, and coercing him to adjourn the Court, to the great detriment of the public business, and hindrance of justice.

Signed, DAVID H. BURR.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.
November 17th, 1858.

KIRK ANDERSON—
Editor of the "Valley Tan."

We had Conference in Zion on last Sabbath, I want to know if you were there. If so, I did not see you, as I could not get in myself. I should like to know, what there is about your Phiz, that you should be treated with such "distinguished consideration," while I, like many other poor miserable worms of the dust were not permitted to enter the "Holy Sanctuary." If you have anything to offer in explanation, it will be listened to cheerfully. If you were there, and do not explain upon what grounds you were admitted; the thing will look a little "auspicious," when it is known that others quite as acceptable to the "moral eye" of this community as yourself, were excluded.

"AN INQUIRY AFTER THE TRUTH."
In answer to the above communication we will merely state, that understanding a Conference was to be held, and feeling a desire to hear a sermon we walked around to Temple Block, but was told that these were no admittance, and saw that the door was guarded by Star Police.

This hint was sufficiently significant—we felt even if "not good looking" we couldn't "go in" and consequently retired. It was one of these mysterious assemblages for which the Church is so distinguished. We understand however, that the Guillotine was busily at work and many heads went off—that the act of decapitation was very brisk for a while, and that two hundred and fifty spiritual heads were knifed, and fell into the basket of the vulgar world. The instrument of spiritual decapitation was only stopped, as we farther learn, by the brakes being put "hard down" by the Prophet himself, who with the eyes of a Practical Seer, saw that his work was demolition—although intended for an example—would it persisted in, and for the reasons urged for the execution, almost leave him without a "people."

Brown City Company.

At a meeting of the Brown City Co., held at Great Salt Lake City, Nov. 16, 1858, it was

Resolved, That the Company proceed to elect officers (to act for the period of six months) consisting of President, Secretary, Treasurer, and a Board of Directors, to consist of three.

Wm. P. Martin was elected President; Frank D. Gilbert, Secretary; Elias H. Perry, Treasurer.

Capt. P. T. Turnly, Daniel M. Taft, and J. H. Johnson were elected to constitute a board of directors.

It was moved and adopted, that the President be empowered to call a meeting of the company at any time he may deem it expedient.

It was also resolved and carried, that the company be increased to fifteen members instead of nine.

The following gentlemen were proposed and unanimously elected, as members of the company:

Captain Simpson, Captain John R. Radford, Abel Gilbert, C. R. Morehead, John Harnett and John M. Wallace.

It was moved and seconded, that certificates be issued entitling the holder of each, to eight lots and transferable on the books of the Company. Carried.

It was further resolved, that a committee of three be appointed consisting of, Captain P. T. Turnly, Wm. P. Martin and A. B. Miller, to await upon the six new members, (elected at this meeting,) at an early day and inform them of the action of this meeting.

It was moved and seconded, that the proceedings of the meetings from time to time of the Brown City Co., be published in Kirk Anderson's Valley Tan. Carried.

It was moved and seconded, that eight store houses and one hotel, (in addition to those already in course of erection,) be contracted for immediately. Carried.

It was moved and seconded, that the plan of Wm. P. Martin Esq., for the building of the hotel be adopted, which motion was adopted.

On motion the meeting adjourned to meet on Wednesday evening, November 17th, at 7 P. M.

WM. P. MARTIN, Pres.
FRANK D. GILBERT, Sec'y.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
November 17th, 1858.

At a meeting of the Brown City Co., held at the above time, the following proceedings were had:

It was moved and carried; that the President be instructed to contract for the Survey of the Town site, and report to the Company as soon as the Survey is completed.

The following resolutions were then introduced and adopted; that in the absence of the President, the meetings have power to appoint a President "Pro tem."

That the Secretary be empowered to draw up a form of Certificate of stock, and submit to the Company at the first meeting.

That, any absentees at meetings, a fine of one dollar be imposed upon them, and any member leaving the meeting during the session thereof, a fine be imposed of two dollars and fifty cents upon them.

On motion the meeting adjourned. WILLIAM P. MARTIN, Pres., FRANK D. GILBERT, Sec'y.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 13, 1858.

HON. CHARLES E. SINCLAIR.

Sir: I have noticed several newspaper publications in regard to the public books belonging to the Third Judicial District Court of the United States, late in the possession of Hon. G. P. Stiles. My object of making this enquiry of you, is this, that has Honor Judge Stiles occupied my office during his administration, and as I have noticed some publications denying the destruction of said books I would be pleased to learn whether you have been able to find said books; and if so, in whose hands you found them, as I lost some four hundred and eighty volumes at the time the public books took their exit from said office.

I have the honor to remain
Your most ob't. serv't.
T. S. WILLIAMS.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY U. T.,
Nov. 17th, 1858.

T. S. WILLIAMS, Esq.—
Sir:—In reply to yours of the 18th inst., I have to say that I have received no books as of right I should have done, being the successor of Judge Stiles.

Of course I have no books of yours in my possession.

I have reason to believe that the library of Judge Stiles; the public property of the United States, was destroyed in this city; and I suppose your books along with it.

Respectfully yours,
C. E. SINCLAIR.

To the Editor of the Valley Tan.

The Editor of the Deseret News in his paper of the 10th instant, has a long article in regard to certain charges made against the people of Utah, it says:

"It has been iterated and reiterated that Utah sets at naught the action of the U. S. Courts, destroys or suppresses their records, drives Judges from the Territory, subverts the laws of the land or turns them into engines of oppression to its citizens and denies the authority of the U. S. Government." He adds that "one can but be astonished at the wonderful audacity or gross ignorance of certain writers and publishers" who insist in repeating these charges.

The writers and publishers of those charges on their part are astonished at the audacity and impudence of the Editor of the News and other Mormon leaders, in denying charges which, almost every person in Utah was cognizant of. The Editor exclaims "when has Utah set at naught the action of the U. S. Courts?" I answer, in the winter of 1857, Judge Stiles issued certain writs to the U. S. Marshal, which he found it impossible to serve. The people backed by the Mormon leaders refused to obey the precepts of the Court; and set at naught its authority, proclaiming that the time had come when their laws and none others should be enforced in Utah. When a Mormon lawyer, Jas. Fergus-

Id
gB:

10. k.
t.

1

12-15-

10.
103
104.

1

ed
ks his

ed of 199 nd on of er er ist

50 its l it

-la bag and ah.

SONGS, GLEES, BURLESQUES, AND USE, &c., &c.
ADMISSION
RESERVED SEATS

choose to please, to prefer much to h—ll."

Paris.

In September, 1851, M. Merle and a companion were carried off by a balloon which broke from its moorings. They ascended to such a high altitude that Merle was frozen to death, and that and for produce of all kinds, delivered at the MAGO & RUI

Hot Springs, Point of Moon sin, South of the Department by or before the 1st of February, but the service must be commenced on that day, whether the contracts be executed or not.

AARON V. BROWNS, SOLICITOR

The
 The say an took p ninety rules fons h 500 a some were la B were and c to w ent, t stren out i M twen princ train
 H ty-si old.
 fight train by A priz were sey
 T Buff
 inte

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TANNER.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1858.

NUMBER 4.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Contentment.

SELECTED.

Cease railing at fortune;
Meet life with a kiss,
Nor needlessly wish it
One cycle of bliss:
For cares but embellish
Our seasons of joy
Like feathery cloudlets
That sprinkle the sky.

Cease railing at fortune;
Take life as it comes;
If wanting its dainties,
Make glad o'er the crumbs.
Each little is sweet, if
A smile the lip wears,
But bitter the morsel,
When moistened with tears.

THE BRUTAL ART OF BRUISING.

The Great Battle between Morrissey and Heenan.

FULL PARTICULARS.

The telegraph has already furnished us with the result of the famous fight at Long Point, Canada, between John Morrissey and John Heenan, in which the former, though much more injured than his younger and less brutal adversary, was declared victorious; but those present, of whom we have seen a number who returned to the city yesterday morning, agree that the Benicia Boy, in addition to being, by comparison, a decent fellow, is much the better man of the two, and can, under favorable circumstances, or whenever there is a strict equality between him and his late opponent, conquer Morrissey with ease.

The Buffalo papers of the morning of the 21st contain full particulars, from which we make copious extracts.

The fight is a continuation of the old Tom Hyer and Yankee Sullivan quarrel, out of which has grown a deal of ill-blood. The Benicia Boy is the representative of America, and Morrissey of the foreign-fancy.

THE PRELUDE TO THE FIGHT—THE APPEARANCE OF THE MEN.

Thursday's Courier has the following: The great fight between John Morrissey and the Benicia Boy, John Heenan, took place yesterday at Long Point, some ninety miles from here, agreeably to the rules of the Prize Ring, and for the championship of America and a wager of $2,500 a side. The match was made up some three months since, and so far as we were able to learn, forced upon the Benicia Boy by the friends of Morrissey, who were on the ground in large numbers and confident of the ability of their man to whip his young and splendid opponent, this confidence being increased and strengthened from facts which leaked out in relation to Heenan's condition.

Morrissey weighs 180 pounds, and is twenty-eight years old. He was trained principally by Shepard, an English trainer.

Heenan weighs one hundred and eighty-six pounds, and is twenty-three years old. He has nothing of the look of a fighter in his countenance. He was first trained by Jo Coburn, and subsequently by Aaron Jones, the celebrated English prize-ring fighter. Heenan's colors were red, white and blue, while Morrissey's were blue, with a white polka dot. The boats, four in number, which left Buffalo on Tuesday night with a most interesting looking crowd, reached the point soon after daylight on Wednesday morning, and anchored off from shore about half a mile. The scenes on the boats, crowded to repletion during the night, were highly amusing. There was negro minstrelsy, cards and sweat-cloths in abundance. After breakfast the work of landing from the steamers commenced, and it was over five hours before all were on shore, and then after wading in water knee-deep for several rods. At last, however, all reached terra firma, several receiving a rather unpleasant wetting from the swamping of the small boats.

For several hours the question as to the location of the ring was discussed by those whose business it was, at last a spot on the sand near the Light-house, was chosen, and the work of setting the ring commenced, and was completed by about one o'clock. The selection of the ground belonged to Morrissey, and although the spot selected was not in accordance with the articles of agreement, was very handsomely acquiesced in by Francis McCabe, on the part of the Benicia Boy, who was anxious that those who had come so far to see the fight should be gratified.

SELECTION OF THE GROUND—THE CHAMPIONS ENTER THE RING.

At nineteen minutes past one, Heenan made his appearance in the ring with much cheering, and in a few minutes after Morrissey also appeared, and went to his corner. On his appearance he was vociferously cheered by his friends, who, by the way, were very largely in the ascendancy. Heenan himself at once observed this, but looking very quiet and composed, while the bearing of Morrissey was considerably different.

With the appearance of the men in the ring the betting set in, and large odds were offered by the friends of Morrissey, and Morrissey himself, on his not only drawing the first blood, but giving the first knock-down and the first throw. When the odds were large, they were taken. The betting, however, was not large.

After the men had taken their corners in the ring with their seconds, over two hours were spent in settling the question as to who should be the referee. Various propositions were made by Billy Mulligan on the part of Morrissey, and Francis McCabe on the part of Heenan; but not agreeing it appeared at last as if there was to be no fight after all, and loud were the complaints from the outsiders, but at last, however, it was settled through the intervention of Morrissey and Heenan themselves; Heenan agreeing in a few remarks which were much cheered, to accept anything so that the fight should take place. On this McCabe, on the part of Heenan, proposed that two referees should be chosen, which proposition was accepted. It then being 23 minutes to 4 o'clock the stripping for the fight commenced, and in a few moments after, principals and seconds walked to the center of the ring and shaking hands walked back to their corners. And in a moment or two thereafter each walked up to the scratch, looking like Roman gladiators, and squared off for

THE ROUNDS—TERRIBLE FIGHTING.

First round—Considerable and very handsome sparring took place on the commencement of this round. Morrissey rushing at him and endeavoring to get in a sounder on his mug, which was at every pass beautifully stopped by Heenan, and last followed up by him with such terrific hitting as to astonish the friends and seconds of Morrissey, putting his left hand on Morrissey's shoulder, and bringing the claret in a stream, Morrissey retreating and Heenan following him to the rope, and here Heenan let fly his left, which had it hit Morrissey on the mug, the fight would have most probably been ended. But Morrissey dodged the blow, and, passing by his head, it struck the corner post and smashed his hand very badly, breaking it in one or two places. Here they clinched and Morrissey was thrown, Heenan falling heavily upon him. The round throughout was terrific, and admitted by all fighters present to be unequalled in the annals of the ring. The round lasted seven minutes.

Second round—Thirty seconds having expired, time was called, and both appeared at the scratch, Morrissey looking somewhat wildly, and both showing some fatigue from the effects of the first round. After little sparring, both went again to work, Heenan making the fighting, stopping Morrissey's blows capitally, and counter-hitting with his right and left on Morrissey's face, and Morrissey getting one or two hard ones on Heenan's ribs. They clinched, and Morrissey thrown. This round was also a very hard one.

Third round—Both men came up, looking much fatigued from the heavy fighting of the two previous rounds. After a few passes they came to close quarters, and Heenan got some hard ones on Morrissey's face, while Morrissey returns them on Heenan's ribs. Heenan down.

Fourth round—Morrissey's advantage in the last round was received with much cheering, and his friends began to think that his star was again in the ascendancy. At odds, as before, the fight commenced, and this was strengthened by the appearance of Morrissey, who did not seem as much fatigued as at the second round. Soon after coming to the scratch, both set to work, struggling like giants for the supremacy, yet both appearing weak, Heenan the most so, and limping slightly, as if somewhat lame. Both, however, soon got at it, and fighting terribly, each giving and receiving some tremendous blows on the body and face. They clinch, and after much struggling, Heenan was thrown—Morrissey falling very heavily upon him.

Fifth round—Morrissey came to the scratch, looking better from the nursing of his seconds in the last round. Heenan, however, made play at once, and after considerable sparring, driving Morrissey near the ropes, got a tremendous blow with his left on Morrissey's cheek, cutting it badly, and bringing Morrissey to the ground as if he had been kicked by a horse. This was the first knock-down, and was loudly cheered by Heenan's friends.

Sixth round—On their being called, both came to the scratch, with a weak and tottering step, Heenan the most so. Morrissey let fly with his right, but was cleverly stopped by Heenan, who followed up, and got in three successive blows with his right and left on Morrissey's shoulder, making the claret flow in a stream. Morrissey, though driven to the ropes, rallies and clinches, throwing Heenan, and falling upon him heavily.

The remaining five rounds were all in favor of Morrissey, Heenan, in each round, getting in some splendid blows, but unable to withstand Morrissey's rushes and blows on his ribs. In four of the following rounds Heenan was thrown, and in the last or eleventh round, fell from the force of his own blow, and when the time was called for the twelfth round, Heenan failed to come to time, and the referees decided the fight in favor of Morrissey. Morrissey, was seconded, and very ably too, by Jim Kelley and Dublin Tricks, and by Jim Kelley and Aaron Jones and John Mackey. There were eleven rounds fought, and in twenty-seven minutes.

THE DISADVANTAGES UNDER WHICH HEENAN LABORED.

So far as the condition of the men were concerned, Morrissey was infinitely superior, as Heenan has been confined to the house of a friend on Carlton street, in this city, since Saturday last to Tuesday evening, and under the care of Dr. Geo. Burwell. To this, and the breaking of Heenan's left hand in the first round, Morrissey owes his success. The fight is admitted to be the most terrific of any which has taken place in this country. Morrissey was in fact whipped in the first round, but did not seem conscious of it. He is a tremendous fighter, and has experience in the ring, having fought with Yankee Sullivan, while the Benicia Boy, on the contrary, has no acquaintance or experience of this kind, having not only never fought in the ring, but never even seen a prize fight. The ability and game which he showed in this fight, under very unfavorable circumstances, has convinced his friends of great power, and they are now willing to back him against Morrissey, or any other man in the world, for any sum from $5,000 to $20,000.

THE EXTENT OF THE BRUISERS' INJURIES.

The Courier observes: Both the fighters returned by the boats on which they came, the Benicia Boy being slightly bruised; and that about the body, while Morrissey's face is badly hurt, his nose being broken and his left eye and cheek terribly cut.

The Commercial Advertiser remarks: Morrissey is badly punished; while Heenan is little injured beyond the temporary exhaustion caused by Morrissey's method of fighting—falling upon his antagonist very heavily when he has thrown him. Immense amounts of money have changed hands on this fight. All the notorious sportsmen in the country were present, and the assemblage generally was not one from which to choose eligible candidates for a lady's tea party.

We learn this morning that both parties are in town. Heenan none the worse for his contest, while Morrissey is badly damaged. It is conceded that had Heenan been well, Morrissey would have stood no sort of chance.

The Express also furnishes the corroboratory information:

Morrissey is the worse punished man of the two, and bears numerous evidences on his face of the weight of his adversary's blows. His nose is badly caved in, and his whole countenance, in sporting parlance, wears a "mourning aspect." Heenan has a cut in his upper lip, and his lips are swollen somewhat; otherwise he is uninjured. On his arrival he conversed cheerfully with his friends; and walked off the boat. It is said that he has been under the doctor's care for nearly a week, and that he was in no condition whatever for the fight. An effort was made to induce him to give up the stakes before the fight, but he firmly declined, and said he would go to the field if he had to go on one leg.

It is said, with how much truth we know not, that he has a fever sore on one of his legs. His friends profess to be willing to back him for $10,000 against Morrissey, and find much fault with his trainers for allowing him to appear at all in such a condition, and for not letting the actual facts in regard to him be known.

THE CROWD AND ITS BETTING.

The number of persons present was about a very large number, mostly of the "Fancy," and from all parts of the country. Among them was the notorious Bill Mulligan, who was driven from San Francisco by the Vigilance Committee. Dad Cunningham, who shot Pauldeen some months since in a saloon in New York, and Lewis Baker, who was engaged in the fray in which Bill Poole was shot.

Reporters were present from Boston, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, and from all the leading dailies in New York.

Large amounts of money have been staked on the fight. In New York State alone over $200,000 have been bet, and it is estimated that over $500,000 will change hands in consequence of the fight. Bets have also been made in New Orleans, this city, and even in Havana.

REMARKS.

In the first round Heenan struck a blow which would have finished the fight, had Morrissey not dodged, so that Heenan struck a stake, breaking his hand badly. A clinch then took place, and Morrissey was thrown, Heenan falling heavily on him. Heenan's blows and sparring were decidedly superior, but upon calling time for the twelfth round, he did not come up, and Morrissey was declared victor. The friends of Heenan are confident that he is a "better man" than his antagonist, excusing his defeat on the grounds we heretofore mentioned. They offer heavy stakes for a future fight, which it is said will come off in about three months from the present time, when no doubt Heenan will win back the laurels he has lost by circumstances over which he had no control.

Porter's Spirit of the Times gives the annexed example of the persevering effort made by Morrissey's friends to bully and badger Heenan into the fight:

Heenan avoided any direct committal of himself in the matter so long as he possibly could. He had been appointed to a good berth in the Custom-house, and was naturally loth to throw away assured emoluments and easy labor for the alternative of hard work and possible loss and discomfiture in the end. But even his friends at length began to call his prudence cowardice, and Morrissey's partisans openly sneered at and flouted him, till irritated beyond all bearing, he threw up his situation, and boldly entered the lists to contend for the supremacy in American fist-cuffs. After a great deal of haggling and negotiation the match was finally made up on Monday, the 19th of July, now last past, the conditions being a stake of $2,500 a side, the fight to come off on the 20th of October.

LEAVENWORTH, Oct. 20, Per U. S. Express Company to BOONVILLE, Oct. 22.

A portion of the Lawrence company just returned from the South Platte gold mines, bring news to September 20th. Their accounts fully authenticate the existence of gold all along the South Platte, they having prospected everywhere with fair success. Most of the miners were seeking winter quarters at Bent's and St. Vrain Forts. The returned party design wintering in Lawrence, where they were tendered a public reception, and return to the mines in the Spring with a large outfit. Numbers continue to leave here, with the intention of wintering along the road.

Major Sibley arrived here yesterday from Utah, accompanied by Lieut. Bell, who was lost from this detachment in the Cheyenne country.

Lieut. Cunningham and a detachment of Infantry, left yesterday, for the Pawnee nation to superintend the payment of the annuities to that tribe.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, NOVEMBER 26, 1888.

The Police of Great Salt Lake City.

The responsibilities that attach to a legally appointed Police are of a serious and important character. Conservators of the peace, and fortified as it is presumed by the authority of law, they should be men who appreciate their responsibilities, and know how to conduct themselves properly. In most cities in the Union, the rights of citizens and strangers are guarded against unwarrantable usurpations of power, by requiring bonds in heavy sums for any abuses that may occur. This is founded in reason, and for protection of those who have not the free swing of the baton, or skull splitter. Policemen, no matter in what part of the globe they are called upon to exercise their functions, are not exempt from the ordinary frailties of human nature, and the Police of this City are not exceptions to the rule by reason of living in "Zion."

It has been a subject of general remark here for weeks that the extraordinary number of armed men, with clubs and pistols, bearing the insignia of Stars, was totally uncalled for, by any condition of affairs that has happened in this City. It is contrary to the spirit of the institutions of this Republic, and revolting to the common sentiment of American Citizens, to be placed under undue surveillance, and that too in such numbers as to make them feel that they are constantly suspected. The spirit of American Citizenship while it respects law will not tolerate insult and contumely. No one respects more than we do, those Guards which municipal regulations have established for the protection of life and property, but an unnecessary zeal, and large unauthorized bodies of men assuming to be the guardians of the people's interest, are calculated to bring about those very results which their presence and appointment was intended to avoid.

An ordinance passed March 10th, 1881, "authorizing a city police," contains in the first section, this language:

"Be it ordained by the City Council, of G. S. L. City, that the Mayor of said City, is hereby authorized to raise a City Watch, to act as policemen, not exceeding forty in number, and to assign them their duties, and distribution of services in their respective wards."

The second section of the same ordinance says:

"The policemen shall be entitled to receive the sum of twenty-five cents per hour, for faithful services rendered, upon the certificate of the Captain of the Police."

The same ordinance confers the power upon the Mayor to call a stronger police, "when in his judgement the exigencies of the times shall require it."

We utterly deny that any exigency has occurred that would warrant the throng of policemen that crowded the streets of this city for weeks. It is true that drunkenness and rowdism, to some extent has prevailed, but it has not exhibited itself in such a form, but that forty men armed by authority of law, could easily suppress it. It is a principle of law and liberty, that the "people are jealous of their rights." We do not particularly desire to get up an issue with the Mayor, or the police, their authority is a public matter in which all feel an interest; and therefore, the legitimate subject of discussion; but we are not disposed to submit to grievances, and if "we know ourselves intimately" we will not.

This thing of claiming all the purity, plety and loyalty, as has been indicated in publications, and various insinuations in this Territory, is an assumption we do not recognize upon the part of any people, or sect, no matter where located, whether in the "States," or in the Wasatch mountains, and Police regulations predicated upon this idea, is not only uncharitable, but political and religious bigotry of the most offensive kind. Its practice will superinduce an idea that will lessen that respect the Police should command, and in its turn create an impression that we are not protected by a properly constituted municipal police, but surrounded by an ecclesiastical patrol. Double barreled shot guns, and carbines, cocked and ready to be presented to the breasts of quiet and law abiding citizens, who have committed no greater offence, than the privilege of passing along the streets of this City, is a matter of the most serious import. We are not aware yet that martial law prevails in this City, by any public proclamation of the fact, either from the Governor, from the Camp, the Mayor, or the Prophet, although the right of personal liberty has been violated, and that too in an outrageous manner by some of the Police. The last number of the Authoritative Organ volunteers the following advice—gratis:

"But to preserve the peace and quiet of our city we recommend that ladies remain at home and gentlemen limit themselves to reasonable hours or at least to their legitimate walks and line of business."

"Gentlemen," we presume, are not compelled to "remain at home"—that the right of social intercourse and visiting each other and returning home even after 9 o'clock is no crime. "Gentlemen" are neither free niggers or slaves, that they should get a "pass" to walk out on the street after night without being molested and challenged by armed bodies of men; and the sooner the police of this city learn this, the better it will be for them.

In this connection we submit the following statement, which has been brought to the official consideration of the authorities of this city.

To His Honor THE MAYOR OF G. S. L. CITY:

Sir—We desire to enter complaint against certain policemen of this city, viz: Wm. Thorn, Wm. Theobald, E. Eldredge, Wm. P. McIntire, J. F. Snedeker, J. G. Willey, Geo. Nebeker, and W. Lund, who, on the night of the 22nd inst., acted as we think, in a manner against law and right, and contrary to our rights and privileges as citizens.

On the night alluded to, we were walking along peacefully towards our place of abode, and on arriving at or near the corner of East Temple, and 1st South Temple streets we discovered a body of men, at least eight in number, armed with guns; and who, as we approached within a few feet of them, cocked their guns and placed themselves directly in front of us in a hostile manner, that simultaneously with our approach, one of the number, viz: William Thorn, fired a pistol; we demanded of the above party to know the cause of this action, to know the name of the party firing, to have him taken before the Mayor of the city or the Marshal, to none of which demands did we receive a satisfactory answer. The only excuse given was that the discharge of the pistol was accidental.

Now, we solemnly protest against such-like interference by any body of policemen, no matter by whom appointed or regulated, with guns and other weapons, planting themselves in our front on a public highway, when no occasion or offence had been given, and in so doing not only offered a flagrant insult to our rights as citizens, but hazarding our lives.

We charge that this was committed by the parties above mentioned, and we demand an investigation in the matter.

JOHN HARTNETT, KIRK ANDERSON, Great Salt Lake City, Nov. 24, 1888.

This matter was presented under oath by the parties whose names are subscribed to it, and testimony introduced to substantiate it in every particular, on a trial held before the Mayor, Wednesday afternoon. There was no defence, save "Confession and Avoidance." In other words the plea put in was that the parties committing this outrage, from previous circumstances were very much excited, expected an attack and were badly scared, and that too from two men who were walking quietly along, and who marched right up to their guns without any halt or hesitation.

The matter is under the consideration of the Mayor of this City, and all we have to say is that if men armed with guns, who are supposed to protect the lives and property of citizens, become so excited that they do not know what they are doing, they have no use to handle such weapons and should give place to men of more nerve.

The New Road from Ft. Bridger to Camp Floyd.

In your last number, we paid a just tribute of praise to Gen. Johnston, for his enterprise in causing this new route to be explored and opened. We should have stated in that article that a prime difficulty in the opening of this route, had been the Timpanogos River Canyon, which up to the end of last winter, was utterly impassable on account of narrow defiles, and projecting rocks. The citizens of the Territory, however, went to work last spring, and for a distance of twelve miles up the Canyon, made deep excavations through solid rock, and built up embankments without which the route referred to, could hardly have been made, except with the greatest difficulty. It is true that their work extended no further than twelve miles up the Timpanogos, and therefore the country had to be explored and opened for the balance of the way to Fort Bridger; but still as stated, without the prime difficulty having been removed, the work of opening the road would have been much more serious than it was.

While on this subject we would suggest that the width of the road through Timpanogos Canyon, is entirely too narrow; so narrow that teams cannot pass each other, at a number of points and for long distances, and the turns are so short that it is only with the greatest care the trains can get along, without capsizing over into the stream. We would submit, that as this is a very serious drawback to the road, causing great delay to the trains, and the Provo wood wagons, and the road is a turnpike one, upon which very heavy tolls are levied; whether the company ought not to rectify the evils referred to at as early a day as practicable.

United States District Court. The U. S. District Court, met on Monday, the 22nd inst., pursuant to adjournment from the 15th inst.

The panel for the Grand Jury having been completed by the Marshal, Eleazer Miller, was appointed Foreman, and the Grand Jurors were duly sworn by the Clerk.

Judge Sinclair then delivered his charge to the Grand Jury, after which the Court adjourned.

TUESDAY.

The Court having met pursuant to adjournment and the journal being read,

Mr. A. V. Brookie was sworn in, as U. S. Deputy Marshal.

Upon motion of the U. S. Prosecuting Attorney, the Grand Jury were adjourned until the ensuing morning.

Arguments was heard, upon a motion by the U. S. Prosecuting Attorney, to have the Indian prisoners, Mose and Looking-glass, now confined by this Court to await their trial on charge of rape, removed for trial to the 2nd Judicial District, in which the alleged offence was committed. Where upon the Judge directed that the prisoners should be removed to the 2nd District for trial.

Ch. M. Smith and Garland Hurt, appeared for the defendants.

An applicant for naturalization, was sworn in as a citizen of the United States, and the Court then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.

The Grand Jury retired to their room in charge of the U. S. Marshal.

The Judge repeated the following remarks which were addressed by him, to the members of the bar, at the first meeting of the Court on the 1st Monday of October last.

Gentlemen of the Bar:—In opening a session of the United States court, for this, the Third Judicial District, being comparatively a stranger to all of you, I have thought it a proper occasion to tender to you my respectful salutations, and to express the earnest hope that nothing may occur here to introduce distraction into the public mind, or to endanger in any way the public peace.

You are officers of this court, subject to its rules and amenable to its authority. Do not understand me as employing the language of unnecessary menace, when I say to you that this authority will be firmly exercised and the dignity of the Government maintained in the supremacy of its laws, at all hazards. The rules of this court and its judgments, until reversed by competent authority, constitute the law here, and every good citizen will assist me in executing them. No one knows better than yourselves, gentlemen, the lines of separation between the different departments of governments—legislative, executive and judicial. In its character, the judiciary is, or ought to be, independent. It is its grave and solemn responsibility to enforce, by its decrees and judgments, the constitution and law of the United States, as also the laws of this Territory, when these are in harmony with the constitution and law of the Federal Government. From judgments here pronounced you have the right of appeal, under the law, to the highest tribunal in our land.

All remedies for the errors of this court must be pursued according to the forms of the law. Human judgment, when assisted even by the profoundest learning, is ever fallible, either in framing or expounding the law. The door of appeal has been wisely thrown open from these subordinate jurisdictions to the august forum of the Supreme Court, adorned as it is by the most exalted dignity and purity of character, and the most mature legal wisdom of the nation.

It will be my cordial pleasure, gentlemen, to co-operate with you in maintaining proper order and decorum during the sittings of this court. Remember, however, that I am powerless to do this peacefully without your co-operation. May I not urge upon you the observance of those courtesies of language and demeanor towards each other and to the court, which so often the frequent asperities of professional conflict? Prejudice cannot enter into this presence. Duplicitly and dissimulation have no place here. Passion and violence must be subdued by the simple, silent operation of the law, or crushed out by the strong arm of power.

I sincerely trust, gentlemen, that our intercourse may be pleasant and agreeable, and that our labors may result in benefit to this people, and to the honor of the United States. Upon the day following, the court adjourned until the first Monday in November, without having transacted any business.

Garland Hart having made a motion to have clothing &c., provided for the Indian prisoners by an order of the court, it was agreed by counsel on both sides, but held under advisement by the court.

The petit jury was adjourned until Friday morning, and the court then adjourned until to-morrow morning, to await the action of the grand jury.

Judge Sinclair's Charge.

We present in this issue a correct copy of Judge Sinclair's charge to the Grand Jury delivered on last Monday. We say correct, because a garbled extract appeared in the church Organ this morning, and Judge Sinclair so announced it from the bench at the meeting of the Court, and told the Grand Jury that it was incomplete and incorrect, and not to be governed by it. How this charge was obtained is one of those mysteries that has yet to be unravelled. We have, however, our suspicions, and if the truth is accessible in this Territory, and the obligations of an oath binding upon the consciences of men, we will know the facts.

Highway Robbery.

Last night, (Wednesday) a soldier was knocked down on one of the back streets and some thirty or forty dollars taken from him. He had been detailed by Sergeant Bending, of the 10th Infantry, and both arrived here in the evening for the purpose of securing the person of a deserter, who was supposed to be in this city. On their arrival they discovered that the deserter was lying in jail under a charge of theft.

The soldier was decoyed out into some by-street when he was knocked down and pistols were drawn upon him and his pockets rifled. The perpetrators of the deed were two in number, and one of them at least it is thought can be identified.

To Correspondents.

We received last week, a communication from A. B. C., in answer to an article which appeared in the Organ, but this as well as several others, will have to lay over. Our paper is small but we intend to make it loud, and its voice shall be heard.

We chronicled in our last issue the departure of Capt. Jack Radford, W. Sloan and Dick Hopkins, for California. Capt. Radford "turned up Jack" in our Sanctum last evening, having been "corralled" by the snow in the Goose Creek Mountains. He informs us that he and his party will try it again, and take the Southern chute in a "few days."

Independent Order Sons of Malta.

We are requested to state that the AA's of this ancient brotherhood, now in this Territory, will confer a favor by leaving their names at our office, with a view of organizing a lodge under a dispensation from either the Grand Lodge of the States of Louisiana or Missouri, which is shortly expected.

We understand from a party of gentlemen who have recently arrived, that a train of merchandise belonging to Mr. Hosmer was at Chicken Creek, and will be here in a few days.

We have received a communication in reference to the affair which occurred on Tuesday night, near the store of Livingston Kincaid & Co., from persons who were cognizant of the whole affair. The communication was received too late for this issue, but will be published in our next.

Magnolia Minstrels.

This popular troupe have within the last week been giving a series of musical entertainments in this city, which have been liberally patronized; they perform every night during the week and the programme this (Friday) evening is varied and presents several new and novel features.

We would suggest that, as the Benefit of Charlie Crocker, (one of the principle features of this troupe,) has his first benefit upon to-morrow (Saturday) evening, a large number be on hand for we are promised a rich treat. Among the burlesques will be found the "Rabble Family."

[For the Valley Tan.] CAMP FLOYD, U. T.

KIRK ANDERSON Esq.—Dear Sir—I notice in the last number of your "Valley Tan," that some friends of mine, without any consultation with me, have paid me the compliment to include me among the stockholders and members of the Brown City Company. I have already made it a rule as long as I have belonged to the Army, never to be interested by purchase or otherwise, in any town site, which might be benefited in any way by any road of which I had charge, or might be connected with. The company referred to will therefore please drop my name from its books, and oblige, Very respectfully your obt. servt., J. H. SIMPSON, Capt. Corps Top'l Engrs.

Charge of Hon. Chas. E. Sinclair, JUDGE OF THE THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT COURT FOR THE TERRITORY OF UTAH—DELIVERED, NOV. 22ND 1888.

GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY.

You have been empanelled and sworn as Grand Jurors, for the third Judicial District of this Territory, which comprises the counties of Great Salt Lake, Shambip, Tooele, Saint Mary, Humboldt, and Carson. Your inquiries will be circumscribed within these designated limits.

The functions you are called upon to exercise, Gentlemen, are, of the most serious and important nature, at once to the Government of the United States, and the "People of the United States in the Territory of Utah."

Your inquiries will be first directed to offences against the United States. The highest crime known to the laws of the United States is that of Treason. The Constitution of the United States thus defines it:

"Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." And further declares, "No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open Court." Congress has declared death to be the punishment for treason.

The facts connected with the recent difficulties between this Territory and the Government of the United States, this Court cannot know, until they are brought under investigation before it.

It is, however, my duty to call your attention to the circumstances, which for some time past have surrounded the people of this Territory,—to the relations which they, and the Government of the United States have respectively sustained towards each other; and to the condition of affairs now existing, legally considered.

In a Proclamation of the President of the United States, dated April 6, 1888, under a solemn sense of responsibility for the truth of his declarations, the President has said to the people of this Territory:

"Whereas the Territory of Utah was settled by certain emigrants from the States and from foreign countries, who have for several years past, manifested a spirit of insubordination to the Constitution and laws of the United States. The great mass of those settlers, acting under the influence of leaders to whom they seem to have surrendered their judgment, refused to be controlled by any other authority. They have been often advised to obedience, and these friendly counsels have been answered with defiance. Officers of the federal government have been driven from the Territory for no offence but an effort to do their sworn duty. Others have been prevented from going there by threats of assassination. Judges have been violently interrupted in the performance of their functions, and the records of the courts have been seized and either destroyed or concealed. Many other acts of unlawful violence have been perpetrated, and the right to repeat them has been openly claimed by the leading inhabitants, with at least the silent acquiescence of nearly all the others. Their hostility to the lawful government of the country has at length become so violent that no officer bearing a commission from the Chief Magistrate of the Union can enter the Territory or remain there with safety; and all the officers recently appointed have been unable to go to Salt Lake or anywhere else in Utah beyond the immediate power of the Army. Indeed, such is believed to be the condition to which a strange system of terrorism has brought the inhabitants of that region, that no one among them could express an opinion favorable to this government, or even propose to obey its laws, without exposing his life and property to peril.

After carefully considering this state of affairs, and maturely weighing the obligation I was under to see the laws faithfully executed, it seemed to me right and proper that I should make such use of the military force at my disposal as might be necessary to protect the federal officers in going into the Territory of Utah, and in performing their duties after arriving there. I accordingly ordered a detachment of the army to march for the City of Salt Lake, or within reach of that place, and to act, in case of need, as a posse for the enforcement of the laws. But, in the meantime, the hatred of that misguided people for the just and legal authority of the government had become so intense that they resolved to measure their military strength with that of the Union. They have organized an armed force far from contemptible in point of numbers, and trained it, if not with skill, at least with great assiduity and perseverance. While the troops of the United States were on their march, a train of baggage wagons, which happened to be unprotected, was attacked and destroyed by a portion of the Mormon forces, and the provisions and stores with which the train was laden were wantonly burnt. In short, their present attitude is one of decided and unreserved enmity to the United States and to all their loyal citizens. Their determination to oppose the authority of the Government by military force has not only been expressed in words, but manifested in overt acts of the most unequivocal character."

The Constitution of the United States has ordained and established a separation between the different departments of Government; the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial. Each operates in its respective sphere.

Invested with the Judicial authority of this District, it becomes my grave and solemn duty to recall your attention to the facts upon which this proclamation is founded, and to say to you, that these are fit subjects for your investigation. It is further proper for me to say that if treason has been committed in this Territory, the President of the United States has pardoned the offence upon a certain precedent condition indicated in this language of his proclamation.

"But being anxious to save the effusion of blood, and to avoid the indiscriminate punishment of a whole people, for crimes of which it is not probable that all are equally guilty—I offer now a free and full pardon to all who will submit themselves to the authority of the Federal Government."

Of this pardon, gentlemen, although a public fact in the history of the Country, this Court cannot take Judicial cognizance. The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of the United States vs. Wilson, (see 7th Peters, R. p. 150) holds this language. "The Constitution gives to the President, in general terms, 'the power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States.'"

"As this power has been exercised from time immemorial by the executive of that nation, whose language is our language, and to whose judicial institutions, ours bear a close resemblance; we adopt their principles respecting the operation and effect of a pardon, and look into their books for the rules prescribing the manner in which it is to be used by the person who would avail himself of it."

A pardon is an act of grace, proceeding from the power intrusted with the execution of the laws, which exempts the individual on whom it is bestowed from the punishment the law inflicts for a crime he has committed. It is the private, though official act of the executive Magistrate, delivered to the individual for whose benefit it is intended, and not communicated officially to the Court. It is a Constituent part of the Judicial system that the Judge sees only with judicial eyes, and knows nothing respecting any particular case of which he is not informed judicially. A private deed, not communicated to him, whatever may be its character, whether a pardon or release, is totally unknown and cannot be acted on. The looseness which would be introduced into judicial proceedings, would prove fatal to the great principles of justice, if the judge might notice and act upon facts not brought regularly into the cause. Such a proceeding, in ordinary cases, would subvert the best established principles, and overturn those rules which have been settled by the wisdom of ages.

Is there any thing peculiar in a pardon which ought to distinguish it in this respect from other facts?

We know of no legal principle which will sustain such a distinction.

A pardon is a deed, to the validity of which delivery is essential, and delivery is not complete without acceptance. It may then be rejected by the person to whom it is tendered; and if it be rejected, we have discovered no power in a Court to force it on him.

It may be supposed that no being condemned to death, would reject a pardon; but the rule must be the same in capital cases and in misdemeanors. A pardon may be conditional; and the condition may be more objectionable than the punishment inflicted by the judgement.

The pardon may possibly apply to a different person, or a different crime. It may be absolute or conditional. It may be controverted by the prosecutor, and must be expounded by the Court. These circumstances combine to show that this, like any other deed, ought to be brought "judicially before the Court by plea, motion, or otherwise."

Blackstone, in his Commentaries, 4th vol. p. 337, says, "a pardon may be pleaded in bar." In p. 376, he says, "it may also be pleaded in arrest of judgement." In p. 401, he says, "a pardon by act of Parliament is more beneficial than by the King's charter; for a man is not bound to plead it; but the Court must ex-officio, take notice of it; neither can he lose the benefit of it by his own laches or negligence, as he may of the King's charter of pardon. The King's charter of pardon must be specially pleaded; and that at a proper time; for if a man is indicted and has a pardon in his pocket, and afterward puts himself upon his trial by pleading the general issue, he has waived the benefit of such pardon. But if a man avails himself thereof; as by course of law he may, a pardon may either be pleaded on arraignment, or in arrest of judgement, or in the present stage of proceedings in bar of execution."

The reason why a Court must ex-officio take notice of a pardon by act of parliament, is, that it is considered as a public law, having the same effect on the case as if the general law punishing the offence had been repealed or annulled.

I therefore give you in charge this subject and commit it to your serious deliberations. Judicially the Court knows nothing. It is for you as the Grand Inquest to find facts.

With the criminal code of the United States, in its general provisions, as good citizens, I presume you to be acquainted. There are, however, several statutes of the United States to which I desire specially to call your attention. In a leading article in the columns of the "Deseret News" of the 15th of September, at that time the only newspaper published in this Territory and supposed to embody to a certain degree, public sentiment, we find the following paragraph:

"We can let the mails alone and avail ourselves of other channels of communication which will not be TREASONABLE."

I deem it my duty in this connection to call your attention to the following statute of the United States: (See Statutes at Large, vol. 5, page 735, sect. 9.)

"It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to establish any private express or expresses for the conveyance, nor in any manner to cause to be conveyed, or provide for the conveyance or transportation by regular trips, or at stated periods or intervals, from one city, town or other place to any other city, town or place in the United States, between and from and to which cities, towns or other places the United States mail is regularly transported, under the authority of the post office department, or any letters, packets or packages of letters, or other matter properly transmitted in the United States mail, except newspapers, pamphlets, magazines and periodicals. And each and every person offending against this provision, or aiding or assisting therein, or acting as such private express, shall, for each time any letter or letters, packet or packages, or other matter properly transmittable by mail except newspapers, pamphlets, magazines, periodicals, shall or may be by him, her, them, or his, her or their means or instrumentality, in whole or in part, conveyed or transported, contrary to the true intent, spirit and meaning of this section, forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars."

The violation of the postal laws of the United States is not treason, but it is a violation of law exhibiting the animus.

A portion of the military force of the United States is stationed in this Territory. It is the duty of all good citizens to assist, as far as it lies within their power, in supporting the laws of the United States applicable to the regulation and control of its army: it becomes you therefore, to consider the following statute of the United States. (Statutes at Large, vol. 2, p. 673, sec. 17.)

"Every person not subject to the rules and articles of war, who shall procure or entice a soldier in the service of the United States, to desert; or who shall purchase from any soldier, his arms, uniform clothing, or any part thereof; and every captain or commanding officer of any ship or vessel who shall enter on board such ship or vessel as one of his crew, knowing him to have deserted, or otherwise carry away, any such soldier, or shall refuse to deliver him up to the orders of his commanding officer, shall, upon legal conviction, be fined at the discretion of any court having cognizance of the same, in any sum not exceeding three hundred dollars, and be imprisoned any term not exceeding one year."

For the protection of the records of the United States in any of its departments, and the protection of such of its officers, who may be engaged in properly preserving these records, and also to give force and effect to the proceedings of the courts of the United States in the discharge of their legitimate functions, the following statutes have been provided. (Statutes at Large, vol. 1, page 105, sec. 15.)

"If any person shall feloniously, steal, take away, alter, falsify or otherwise avoid any record, writ, process or other proceedings in any of the courts of the United States, by means whereof any judgment shall be reversed, made void or not take effect, or if any person shall acknowledge or procure to be acknowledged in any of the courts aforesaid, any recognizance, bail or judgment, in the name or names of any other person or persons not privy or consenting to the same, every such person or persons, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not exceeding five thousand dollars, or be imprisoned not exceeding seven years, Provided nevertheless: That this act shall not extend to the acknowledgment of any judgment or judgments by any attorney or attorneys, duly admitted for any person or persons against whom any such judgment or judgments shall be had or given."

(Stat. at Large Vol. 1, page 117, Sec. 22.) "If any person or persons shall knowingly and wilfully obstruct, resist or oppose any officer of the United States, in serving or attempting to serve or execute any mesne process or warrant, or any rule or order of any of the courts of the United States, or any other legal or judicial writ or process whatsoever or shall assault, beat or wound any officer, or other person duly authorized, in serving or executing any writ, rule, order, process or warrant aforesaid, every person so knowingly and wilfully offending in the premises, shall, on conviction thereof, be imprisoned not exceeding twelve months, and fined not exceeding three hundred dollars."

(Stat. at Large vol. X, page 170, sec. 4.)

"Any person who shall wilfully and knowingly destroy, or attempt to destroy or with intent to steal or destroy, shall take and carry away any record, paper or proceeding of a court of justice, filed or deposited with any clerk or officer of such court, or any paper or document, or record, filed or deposited in any public office, or with any judicial or public officer, shall, without reference to the value of the record, paper, document or proceeding so taken, be deemed guilty of felony, and on conviction in any Court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof, shall pay a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or suffer imprisonment in a penitentiary, not exceeding three years, or both, as the Court in its discretion shall adjudge."

We are surrounded here by various Indian tribes and it is important that the laws of the United States in regard to them should be enforced. Your attention is particularly directed to this provision of the "Intercourse Act."

(Statutes at Large, vol. 4, page 731; sec. 13.) "If any citizen or other person residing within the United States or the territory thereof, shall send any talk, speech, message or letter to any Indian nation, tribe, chief or individual, with an intent to produce a contravention or infraction of any treaty or other law of the United States, or to disturb the peace and tranquility of the United States, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of two thousand dollars."

You will next inquire, gentlemen, into offences against the criminal code of this Territory. In its general provisions, enumerating crimes and offences, that code is similar to the code of every other State and Territory in the Union. In the present condition of things here, occasional acts of violence do not come upon us unexpectedly. You, as the Grand Jurors for this district, are charged with the responsible office of inquiring into disturbances of the public peace, and the violations of the penal code. You will meet these, gentlemen, I feel assured, with the promptness and address which the exigency requires.

Your attention is specially directed to the statute provided in regard to gaming, which you will find in these words:

"If any person keep a house, shop, or place resorted to for the purpose of gambling, or permit or suffer any person in any house, shop, or other place, under his control, or care, to play at cards, dice, faro, roulette, or other game for money, or other things, such offender shall be fined not more than eight hundred dollars, or imprisoned, not exceeding one year, or both at the discretion of the Court. In a prosecution under this section, any person who has the charge of, or attends to any such house, shop, or place, may be deemed the keeper thereof."

"If any person play at any game, for any sum of money, or other property of any value, or make any bet a wager, for money, or other property of value; he shall be punished by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding six months."

(Revised statutes, p. 188, sec. 39, 40)

There is one subject of general importance to which I desire to call your attention, and from an examination into which we cannot well escape. Polygamy it is charged, prevails to a considerable extent in Utah. This is an offence against the laws of every State and Territory in the Union, Utah-only excepted.

The Statute book here is a blank upon that subject. There is nothing in the acts of Congress that touches the question.

Whether the civil or the common law furnishes the basis upon which the statutes of this Territory have been erected, does not concern the inquiry. Each jurisprudence condemns polygamy and stamps it as a crime. Judge Kent in his commentaries; (vol. 2, page 81) thus speaks of this offence:

"The direct and serious prohibition of polygamy contained in our law, is founded on the precepts of christianity and the laws of our social nature, and it is supported by the sense and practice of the civilized nations of Europe. The Athenians at one time permitted polygamy, yet generally, it was not tolerated in ancient Greece, but was regarded as the practice of barbarians. It was also forbidden by the Romans throughout the whole period of their history, and the prohibition is inserted in the Institutes of Justinian. Polygamy may be regarded as exclusively the feature of Asiatic manners, and of half civilized life, and to be incompatible with civilization, refinement and domestic felicity."

Blackstone in respect to it, employs this language: [Vol. 4, page 163.]

"Polygamy can never be endured under any rational civil establishment, whether specious reasons may be urged for it by the eastern nations, the fallaciousness of which has been fully proved by many sensible writers. But in northern countries, the very nature of the climate seems to reclaim against it; it never having obtained in this part of the world, even from the time of our German ancestors who, as Tacitus informs us, 'prope soli barbarorum singulis uxores contenti sunt.'"

Criminal Courts are authorized of their own motion, as a learned judge thus states, "to call the attention of grand juries to, and direct the investigation of matters of general public import which, from their nature and operation in the entire community, justify such intervention. The action of the Courts on such occasions, rather bears on things than persons, the object being the suppression of general and public evils, affecting in their influence and operation, communities rather than individuals, and therefore, more properly the subject of general than special complaint."

In a condition of things so anomalous, and so utterly at war, with the generally received opinions, upon which the fabric of our Government rests; free enquiry must be unchecked, and a field opened where the maxim may be verified, that "error ceases to be dangerous when reason is left free to combat it."

You should enquire fully into this matter and if it be true that Polygamy does prevail in this Territory, and is sought to be incorporated as one of our social institutions, into the social and political body of the country; it is proper that so extraordinary a pretension should be presented to this Court, under the solemn sanction of your finding. Enquire into the extent to which this practice prevails, and report to the Court your conclusion upon the subject. If the Legislature of this Territory then desires to conform to the code of each and every State and Territory in the Union, upon your presentment they will know the fact that polygamy does prevail here and they can act accordingly. If Congress can stretch out its arm to enforce the principles that underlie the American social fabric, upon your presentment, Congress then can act.

Truth can harm nobody. Find that truth, gentlemen, in respect to this question; and according to my reading of the law, your responsibilities and those of this court will be at an end respecting Polygamy.

In regard to your general duties permit me to warn you against passion prompted, accusations; Let coolness and deliberation guide your every act; for the responsibility upon you is not the responsibility of a day.

You cannot enter into considerations of public policy; if the law denounces a crime and affixes a punishment, and you have the power to enquire into that crime, you can not look aside from the operation of the law, to avoid inflicting the punishment.

You have been selected for your intelligence, and honorable character to discharge the solemn duties of this Inquest.

It is probable that no Grand Jury in the United States, ever held in its grasp, questions more grave or comprehensive than those which ought to occupy your minds.

Further instructions from the Court will be afforded you, if in the course of your enquiries it shall be necessary.

The Attorney for the Territory, appointed under the authority of the United States, is at hand to assist you.

You can retire.

[From the Missouri Republican Oct. 23.]

The election in Indiana proves not to have been so great a defeat of the Democratic party after all. The State still remains under the direction of that party for two years, by a majority of some three thousand—the Legislature is just about a tie, and there are four Democrats to seven Black Republicans elected to the next Congress.

In Ohio, members of the present Congress representing several districts were returned in consequence of there being three tickets in the field—Black Republican, American and Democratic. At the late election, there was a complete fusion of all the elements of opposition, and still the Democrats did well. On the State ticket, with a thorough fusion and the greatest possible exertion, the majority against the Democrats was only about 20,000; whereas, in the Presidential election, Fremont led Buchanan forty-five thousand votes.

A CARE.
G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1856.
The undersigned would most respectfully inform citizens of Utah that they are still doing business their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods be kept; here may be had at the same uniform rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKADE, & CO.
In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends, with certainty concerning our train so long expected.
L. K. & CO.

LIST OF LETTERS
REMAINING in Salt Lake City Post Office Nov. 25, 1856.

Almond Jas	Scott Wm
Cradlebaugh Mr.	Seelye Isaac
Dye J R	Shurtliff W
Ide James M	Spangle P A
Kageroy Nelson	Summers Claib
Kenney J W	Thorp D G
Langton Seth	Taft Seth
Layton W	Thompson Wm
Mark Joseph	Turnbough S
Mathews Allen	Walker Wm
Myrick G S	Williams M S
Palmer L M	Wilson E A
Robbins Chas B	Wilson J J
Rollins E F	Wolf R J

LADIES LIST.
Bird Anne
Bull Mrs C J
Barns Huldah
Ferguson Sarah
Lincoln Mrs J M
Lindsey Miss J
Price Elizabeth M
Smith Mrs G B
Warner Mrs P
Wooda Mrs Susan

DIED.
In this city on Nov. 25th inst., of typhoid fever, JOSEPH, son of Alexander and Isabella Williams, aged 6 years and 4 months.

FOR SALE.
ONE Light Two Horse iron axle-tree Spoked Wagon and Harness—can be seen at a short of Redford, Cabot & Co.

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1858.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 5.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Central Overland Mail.

Our Placerville correspondent sends us a copy of the subjoined petition to Congress, and informs us that it is now being generally circulated through El Dorado county, and will probably receive the signature of everybody who sees it.

We commend the petition to the attention of the citizens of the State, especially those of the central portion of it, who are more particularly interested in the central road across the continent.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

The undersigned, citizens of the State of California, deeply impressed with the imperative necessity of an intimate and speedy mail connection with our friends in the Atlantic States, and believing, as we do, that if your honorable bodies will increase the mail service between St. Joseph, in the State Missouri, and the City of Placerville, in this State, so as to give a tri-weekly mail each way between those places, this laudable end can be accomplished, therefore respectfully and earnestly petition your honorable bodies to take such action in the matter as the exigencies of the case may demand.

It is a well known fact that, for the last nine years, the Central Route to the Pacific, via Salt Lake City, has been, and still is, the great thoroughfare of immigration to California. That, in addition to being the best natural road for the same distance on the globe, it is also supplied with a continuous meadow of nutritious grasses, upon which countless thousands of animals subsist during the annual hiberna.

Moreover, the counties of El Dorado and Sacramento have appropriated and expended $50,000 in the construction of a good wagon road over the Sierra Nevada, from Placerville, to Carson Valley. That work is now completed, and is probably one of the best mountain roads on the continent. Already a magnetic Telegraph Line is being rapidly constructed along the route to Salt Lake City; comfortable stations and resting places are being established at proper intervals on the road, and although the present mail contractors have had an extremely limited period in which to prepare for the service, the weekly mails now reach California with surprising regularity.

For the above reasons, and from a knowledge of what has already been accomplished, we are convinced that in less than two years from the present date, the mails can be carried over this route in fifteen days traveling time. We, therefore, earnestly solicit that you may increase the speed so as to run through in twenty-five days, and thereby assist in preparing the way for a more expeditious transit at an early day.

Believing that your honorable bodies will perceive and appreciate the great national importance of a more speedy and frequent communication between our widely separated possessions, we respectfully urge the foregoing upon your early and favorable consideration, and your petitioners will ever pray, &c.—[Alto California.]

FROM MEXICO.

From the New Orleans Picayune.

VIDAURI'S DEFEAT.—The Gen. Rusk brings $466,110 in specie.

The Brownsville Flag of the 13th inst., has dates from Victoria to the 30th ult., from Tampico to the 2d inst., and from Monterey to the 10th inst.

The news confirms the accounts of a battle between the Conservatives under Miramon, and the Liberals, under Vidaurri, in which the latter were partially defeated. Vidaurri himself was not on the field when the engagement commenced, and his army appears to have been attacked when least apprehensive of and least prepared for an attack. The rumors at Brownsville were that the defeated army lost 500 men killed, 2,000 prisoners, and their artillery and provisions taken.

Vidaurri himself in a dispatch of the 29th ult., dated Hacienda des Espiritu Santo, and addressed to the Governor of Nuevo Leon and Coahuila, acknowledges his defeat. The conflict took place in the vicinity of the town of Ahualulco, and lasted from the 25th to the 29th ult.

Vidaurri's dispatch was written under the impression that the defeat was a total one; but an express from Monterey, with dates to the 10th inst., arrived Matamoros on the 13th, and reported that Vidaurri had arrived at Monterey on the 8th inst., and that the loss sustained by his troops was not so great as was reported at first, as only a portion of the artillery and munitions had been captured by Miramon's forces, and the Liberal army had made their retreat from the field of battle in good order.

The official paper of Monterey states that Gen. Vidaurri has already sent orders to the commander at Tampico for another park of artillery, where there is a plenty to be had, which will soon be on the field, together with many forces that are concentrating about Vidaurri to renew the attack.

El Prisma, published in Tampico, with date of the 2d inst., says that Col. Guadalupe Garcia, who had recovered his health, would leave on that day for the interior with 300 men of Infantry and three pieces of artillery.

Sea-Going Steamers Lost.

The New York Journal of Commerce gives the following list of ocean steamers which have been lost since the commencement of ocean steam navigation:

	Lives lost	Value of Vessel and cargo.
President, British, 130	$1,200,000
Arctic, American, 300	1,800,000
Pacific, " 240	2,000,000
San Francisco, " 160	400,000
Cent'l America, " 387	2,500,000
Independence, " 140	100,000
Yankee Blade, " 75	280,000
City of Glasgow, British, 420	850,000
Tempest, " 150	300,000
Lyonsais, French, 190	280,000
Austria, German, 153	850,000
	2,695	$10,560,000

The President, Pacific, City of Glasgow, and Tempest, were never heard from; the Arctic, San Francisco, and Central America foundered; the Independence and Yankee Blade, were wrecked; the Lyonsais, was sunk by a collision, and the Austria was burnt.

The first steamer that crossed the Atlantic was the Sirius, in 1838. The regular line of European steamships was started by Mr. Cunard in 1840, and since that time there have been lost on the stormy Atlantic eleven vessels, making an average in eighteen years of one in eighteen months.

FROM THE GOLD HUNTERS.

Mr. W. G. FAIRLEIGH, of this City, received on Saturday a letter dated at Fort Kearney, from his brother TALBOT FAIRLEIGH, who is on his way to the Cherry Creek Gold Regions. The letter states that the Company had met parties from the Gold Regions, giving favorable news. They were proceeding without any difficulties, and were in hopes of a golden reward. If such men as TALBOT FAIRLEIGH, after reaching the mines—which they will do right soon—send back favorable reports a throng of emigration will respond to the news. The matter is certainly nearing a solution.—St. Joseph Gazette.

Major General McCordle, of the Vicksburg True Southron, isn't proud. He graciously allows himself, as appears from the under paragraph, to be congratulated on his recent military elevation. We are glad to hear it. We avail ourselves of the privilege. Consider your Eminence congratulated Major.

"We Allow it."—The Sun, of yesterday, in noticing our election to the high and mighty office of Major General, Second Division, Mississippi Militia, says: "Allow us to congratulate you, Major!" Certainly we will. We have already announced that we are not proud, and any respectable newspaper editor will be graciously allowed to congratulate us. But no familiarity Mac; mark you that. Our humility is great, but military discipline must be enforced, and the articles of war preserved intact.—N. O. Delta.

The Devil's Tea-Kettle.

There is, probably, no portion of the Continent which affords a wider field for geological research, than the Great Basin of Deseret, or Utah. In that solitary unexplained region are many curious salt lakes; the vestiges of a lost ocean, the waters of which are so strongly impregnated with saline matter that they are little less than immense reservoirs of salt in solution. Vast rivers meander for hundreds of leagues through sterile solitudes, and at length mysteriously disappear in the thirsty deserts. Immense deposits of soda cause the water in certain localities, to seethe and effervesce like boiling cauldrons. Springs of sulphur, and springs of boiling hot water, mountains of snow and burning plains, smiling valleys and vast deposits of subterranean ice, these, and a thousand other wonders are to be seen in the Great American basin. Lieut. Sawtelle, of the 6th Infantry, while on the recent march across the continent, at a point about forty miles from where the overland route first strikes the Humboldt, saw a very singular natural curiosity, which, per compliment, we will name the 'devil's tea-kettle.' On the very apex of a conical shaped mound, about eighty feet in height, was an unfathomable miniature lake of warm water which had no apparent outlet, or inlet. The water was quite tepid and perfectly translucent, and its surface was nearly on a level with the top of the cone which contained it. Various attempts were made to fathom this curious basin, but no bottom could be found. At the distance of forty feet from the basin of the mound, were a number of gushing fountains, the water of which was intensely hot. Can any one explain the mystery of the 'devil's tea-kettle?'—Placerville Democrat.

It requires an early start now-a-days for a man to get around his wife.

HEAD QUARTERS, EXPEDITION Against Northern Indians, Camp
at the Four Lakes, W. T.
September, 1858.

ORDERS NO. 8.

1. The Colonel commanding expresses his thanks to the officers and soldiers of this command for their gallantry and good conduct on the battle field this day.

We have met the hostile Indians in equal numbers, in a pitched battle, on ground of their own selection; and we have signally defeated them, with a loss of seventeen-killed and a large number wounded, accomplished without the loss of a man on our side.

2. Commanders of corps will make to these Head Quarters special reports, each in what concerns his own command, and naming such officers or soldiers as may deserve special mention for conduct in this action. By order of (Signed) COL. WRIGHT.
P. A. OWENS, 1st Lieut. 9th Infantry,
A. A. A. General.

WHEAT CROPS IN OREGON.—A gentleman who has been traveling in the interior of Oregon, and who is well posted, states that the wheat crop is one-third larger than that of last year. This, taken in connection with the fact that the wheat crop in this State has been materially increased over that of the previous year, renders it pretty evident that there will be no lack of bread-stuff.

INSECTS AT MONO LAKE.—The Miriposa Gazette, in giving an account of Mono Lake, says:

Around its whole circumference is found an insect not quite as large as the common house fly, which lays its eggs in the sand near the water, or in it, which in due course of time, produces a small chrysalis of brackish appearance, half an inch in length, and about the size of a common broom straw. These are produced by the million, and the wave motion of the water cast them on the shore in rolls from one to five inches in diameter. In this State the Indian squaws scrape them into baskets and sift out the sands; they are then spread on the beach and allowed to dry. Every section of country had their chrysalis grounds distinctly marked, so that there could be no intrusion, and so far as I could ascertain, the lines were sacredly observed. These insects constitute a large majority of what the Indians eat; and I do not think it an over-estimate to assert that they had gathered no less than 10,000 bushels, which lay in heaps around the lake. Just think of it—60 miles covered with insects, and you at once see that the production is prodigious.

Major Dodge, Indian Agent for Carson Valley, has been in our city for the last few days, making arrangements for his mission. He has a large extent of country and numerous tribes of Indians to attend to, but as he has been accustomed to frontier life and is familiar with the Indian habits and character, he may not meet with much difficulty from them. He intends, at the earliest moment, to select and establish suitable reservations, and by judicious management keep the Indians in subjection. They need protection, are nearly destitute, are submissive and disposed to be friendly. Major D. has visited some of them and informed them of his intentions, which greatly delighted them. He has promised to keep us informed of his success among them. He has not had time to estimate their numbers or have much communication with them. He anticipates no trouble with any but the Shoshones, who have an inclination to take things "lying around loose."—Mountain Democrat, Placerville, (Cal.)

MORMON LOVE SONG.

Say, Susan, wilt thou come with me, in sweet community to live? Of heart and hand, and home to thee, a sixteenth part I'll freely give.

Of all the love that swells my breast, of all the honor of my name; of worldly wealth by me possessed, a sixteenth portion thou shalt claim.

Nay, tell me not too many share the blessings that I offer thee. Thou'lt find but fifteen others there—a household happy, gay and free.

A moderate household, I may say; my neighbor has as many more, and Brother Brigham, o'er the way, luxuriates in forty-four.

I promise thee a life of ease, and for thyself I let thee choose such duties as thy fancy pleases; say, Susan, canst thou still refuse?

Sophronia cooks and sweeps the floors, and Hepzibath makes up the beds, Jennima answers all the doors, and Prudence combs the children's heads.

The household duties all devolve on each according to her lot; but from such labors I'll absolve my Susan, if she likes them not.

Into thy hands such tasks as take a dignity, will I consign; I'll let thee black my boots, or make the sock and shirt department thine.

I'll give the whatso'er thou wilt—so it be but a sixteenth part; 'twould be the deepest depth of guilt to slight the rest who share my heart.

Then wilt thou not thy fraction yield to make my domestic bliss? Say yes—and let our joy be sealed with just the sixteenth of a kiss.—Exchange.

ANOTHER OVERLAND TELEGRAPH.—A Cleveland paper informs us that there is being built in that city, a steam plow intended to be used in laying a telegraph wire between the Missouri frontier and California. The machine will be able to travel fifteen miles a day, and will be so arranged as to cut the trench, put the wire in it, and bury it as it goes. It does not state at what point on the Missouri frontier it is to start from, or where it is to terminate. It is probable, however, it will connect with Salt Lake and meet the Placerville company.

Additional From Oregon.—The following intelligence from the seat of the Indian war, we find in the Portland Standard of the 13th inst.:

The troops of Col. Wright's column have returned to Fort Walla Walla, and the Artillery Battalion under command of Captain Keyes, is already in march on this post, en route for Fort Vancouver, where three companies will remain for the present; the other three companies will, possibly, be sent to California—that is, orders are issued directing such a movement.

After the troops had passed to this side of Snake river, on the morning of the 2d inst., the Yakima chief, Ouhli, father of Quachien, having attempted to escape, was mortally wounded. Up to this time of his futile attempt he had appeared contented with his dress, he seized the occasion when momentarily separated from the command, and in charge alone of Lieut. Morgan, Third Artillery, to make a dash through the bushes. Lieut. Morgan, however, following him promptly, and with three shots severely wounded him and his horse. At the same time private Behn, of "E" troop, First Dragoons, came up and gave Ouhli coup de grace in the way of a shot through the head, from which he died in two hours.

Thus has perished another of the chief malcontents—and another summary, intelligible lesson has been taught to the Indian mind in relation to the consequences of resistance to our authority.

The remains of Capt. Taylor and Lieut. Gaston have been buried at Walla Walla with military honors.

The expedition has thus returned after so signally brilliant a campaign, with the loss of but two men—accidentally poisoned—and a dragoon horse and about thirty-five mules.

From the quarter of Fort Simcoe we learn with pleasure of an occurrence of moment—another link in the chain of success.—Michel, the nephew of Kamalkin, and leading murderer of Bolon, the Indian Agent in 1855, has been captured by Major Garnett, and is now in the guard house at Fort Simcoe, soon, we trust, to expiate by the cord the atrocious and eventful murder.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. & L. CITY, DECEMBER 3, 1858.

The City subscribers will please call at our office and get their papers for the present. The location is convenient and until we can make other arrangements, we would request this of them.

TREASON.

This is a subject of grave consideration and involves the integrity of this people and their loyalty to our institutions. They have professed publicly and challenged investigation of their loyalty to our Government, denying that they have ever acted the part of traitors and calling for the proof. This we propose to furnish; and if we do not prove them guilty of having committed treason in its constitutional interpretation, then we will abandon the field. We lay down the fact in the broadest form, that from the records of men holding high positions in the church that they are enemies to the Government of the United States and hold it in sovereign contempt, "out of their own mouths will we condemn them." It may be possible that the masses are not to blame, but that leaders in the church have been guilty of outrages both in word and deed, outraging the sovereignty of the Government of the United States, we not only charge but make it in answer to the interrogations propounded by the Church Organ in a late issue.

A communication in the third number of our paper specifically pointed out where the overt act of treason had been committed, and it went farther and charged murder and felony. To this there has been no response even after a challenge was publicly thrown down and accepted; with a trickery that is eminently characteristic of the ecclesiastical hierarchy that seems to control the people of this Territory, not one thing can be elicited, and yet they have the audacity to prate about patriotism and love for a flag which they have insulted and loyalty to a government which in their hearts they despise.

The fact that the President of the United States has graciously pardoned crimes which bring men to the gallows does not militate against the fact that it once existed, and especially so when under the very cover of that act of grace the organ defiantly challenges an investigation. As we before stated, the question was taken up in our third number and we intend to pursue it.

To show the love that is felt for the American Republic, we subjoin the following extract, taken from the Evening Bulletin, (Cal.) embodied in a communication recently published in that paper:

Mormon Love for American Laws and the Constitution! --Old Approaches to England!

At this time, when it is believed by many that the Mormons intend to move from this Territory, if any action is taken by Congress in regard to Polygamy, or if they refuse to admit Utah as a State, I deem it not uninteresting to quote the following passage from a memorial presented to Queen Victoria, in 1847, by the Mormons in England. Copy from a Mormon book, published in Liverpool, by Franklin D. Richards, (one of the Twelve Apostles,) and edited by James Linforth, entitled, Route from Liverpool to Great Salt Lake Valley, Illustrated, Chapter 2nd.

"Your memorialists believe that your Majesty cherishes the wish, and they pray your Majesty, to exert all that constitutional influence and power which will effectually accomplish their removal from the distant shores of a country, the natural resources of which are waiting to be developed, to reward the hand of industry, and to fill with plenty thousands that wander here, at present, without employment, and consequently without bread."

Your memorialists are not least aware than your Majesty that the Government of the United States is doing much to favor the settlement of its territories on the western coast, and even to settle territory now in dispute between it and the Republic of Mexico. While, therefore, the United States do manifest such a strong inclination not only to extend and enlarge their possessions in the West, but also to people them, will not your Majesty look well to British interests in those regions, and adopt timely and precautionary measures to maintain a balance of power in that quarter—which, in the opinion of your memorialists, is destined, at no very distant period, to participate largely in the China trade?

Your memorialists, therefore, humbly but earnestly supplicate your Majesty to take the present alluring condition of your subjects into your prompt and gracious consideration, and to interpose your royal aid, as far as it may be constitutionally rendered, to provide means for the emigration of your memorialists who are not able to provide for themselves—to give them employment in improving the harbors of those countries or in erecting posts of defence; or, if this be inexpedient, to furnish them provisions and means of subsistence until they can produce them for the soil."

As a preface to this memorial, I find the following at the beginning of the chapter: "Owing to the suspension of emigration to the head quarters of the Church, [they had just been expelled from Nauvoo] and the great amount of distress prevailing, at that time, in the British Islands, the Latter-day Saints here, under the advice of Elders Hyde, Pratt and Taylor, presented in February, 1847, a memorial to the Queen, setting forth the distress existing among a large portion of her Majesty's subjects, and proposing a plan for emigration to Oregon or Vancouver Island."

Such is the spirit of loyalty and love for the Constitution and laws of their country manifested by Orson Hyde and John Taylor both Apostles in the Church, and the latter late editor of the Mormon, published in New York City! They write: "Will not your Majesty look well to British interest in those regions, and adopt timely and precautionary measures to maintain a balance of power in that quarter?" Not only do we find these patriots ready to assist England in an attempt to check, if possible, the extension of our Constitution and laws, and to weaken our national strength and power, but they go so far as to beg to be allowed the privilege of using all their might and influence in accomplishing this end.

These same men are still leaders in the Mormon Church, and are as anxious as ever to bring about injury to the National Government, if not in one way, yet in another. They are ever ready to league with the enemies of the Republic.

This in itself is not treason, but it clearly exhibits the animus of "this people." This anxiety for "British interests" certainly manifests no great love for the U. S. Government, on the contrary the whole tenor and tone of the memorial is based upon the idea of protection for "British Subjects," and is anti-American in every particular, and yet both from their press and their pulpit they have the assurance to challenge their loyalty. Exclusiveness is a part of their system, and that they acknowledge no allegiance to any Government, except for temporal purposes, is a fact that cannot be questioned, upon a strict interpretation of this memorial.

In regard to treason, the Constitution of the United States says—"Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open Court."

We reproduce the question as published in the Church Organ, on the 10th of November, and the answer made to it as published in our paper Nov. 19th, in which the "overt act" and "levying war" is explicitly set forth:

"When has Utah defied the authority of the U. S. Government?" If the smouldering ruins of the provision train of the Army, is not a sufficient answer I would call to mind the Proclamation of Brigham Young, to the Mormon troops sent to oppose the advance of the U. S. troops and point to the fortification in Echo Canyon, which still remain a monument of Mormon treason and an exemplification of the superior skill of Mormon Engineers."

But it may be answered, the President's Proclamation covers this whole question. The question then recurs has it been accepted, not pro forma but in good faith? If it has been accepted, then this very admission is in itself a confession of the fact, and the legal question then arises, whether this Proclamation is one of those "public acts" which a Judge of the U. S. District Court is bound to take judicial notice of. Our own opinion is that this Proclamation must be specially pleaded and in this view of the matter we entirely coincide with Judge Sinclair, who in his charge says:

"Of this pardon, gentlemen, although a public fact in the history of the country, this Court cannot take judicial cognizance. The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of the United States vs. Wilson (see 7th Peters R. p. 150) holds this language: 'The Constitution gives to the President, in general terms, the power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States.'"

"A pardon is a deed, to the validity of which delivery is essential, and delivery is not complete without acceptance. It may then be rejected by the person to whom it is tendered; and if it be rejected, we have discovered no power in a Court to force it on him."

Judge Sinclair has done his duty in the premise, but the action of Mr. Wilson, the U. S. District Attorney, whose argument we present, is another part of our paper, utterly precludes any investigation upon this subject by the present grand jury. No indictment will be found, because the Prosecuting Attorney for the United States will not assist in it, and while therefore the proclamation of the President is used as a shield and like the veil of charity, "cover a multitude of sins," we know from the most reliable authority, that it was spit upon and treated in the most ignominious manner by some of the members of that very convention who professed to accept it. It answers their purpose just now, and while they despise it, we certainly do not blame them for availing themselves of its gracious provisions. To our mind, however, it looks very much like there was "injuns on the lower road" and that "through the woods" was the safest passage.

The Mayor's Court.

On last Friday and Saturday proceedings were instituted before this tribunal against Messrs. Charles A. Kinkead, W. H. H. Fall, Dr. Covey, John Mendenhall and Lieut. Sanders, for an alleged disturbance of the peace, &c. A fine was imposed upon Mr. Kinkead and Mr. Fall, and a vol. pros. entered in the case of Mr. Mendenhall.

As we were present and heard all the testimony, we take it upon ourselves to say that no proof whatever was elicited to justify the imposition of any penalty, however small; and that although it was acquiesced in, it does not therefore follow it was just.

John Mendenhall, one of the defendants, was graciously allowed to go free, as according to admissions made, he done nothing; yet Mendenhall was knocked down and hospitably taken to the calaboose. If Mendenhall was thus brutally treated without any cause or provocation, the presumption will naturally arise and suggest itself that Lieut. Sanders, who was felled to the earth by the blow of a club, and Dr. Covey, who was shot, were more "slained against than slain." Is it an offence in this city for a party of gentlemen to meet together in a house in a social reunion, and must they submit to being "corralled" by the police who patrol around it and "spot" it as if it was a rendezvous for counterfeiters? Every good citizen should do all in his power to maintain the dignity and peace of the community, but in this instance, although the judgment of the court would by implication throw the wrong in one direction, yet the facts show that two of the defendants were knocked down, and another shot, while not one of the police was hurt.

We like consistency, and especially in courts; and by this rule we arraign the Municipal tribunal that sets in judgment upon the errors and frailties, real or supposed, of the inhabitants of this corporation.

On the very night this difficulty occurred, in company with Secretary Hartnett, we were walking quietly down the street when we were interrupted by a body of armed policemen, some seven or eight in number, with double barrelled shot guns, and who cocked them when within a few feet of them, and one of the number discharged a pistol, as he alleges, accidentally; and we are willing to do him the justice to acknowledge that we believe it was, for he swore he was badly scared. They stationed themselves upon the foot path and Mr. Hartnett and myself walked up to their guns and demanded not only the cause of the outrage, but the name of the man who had fired, and they stood sullen and mute. Capt. Sharp, who by the bye we believe to be a good officer and an honest man, was promptly on the ground and took the man who shot into custody.

This was a menace, an assault of the most offensive character, and we laid the matter before the Mayor under oath. We are informed that he reprimanded the parties, and that is all the penalty imposed. We submit the two cases in contrast and submit them as a sample of justice.

Motion of Expulsion.

On last Tuesday in the United States District Court, the motion made by General Burr, to expel James Ferguson, Hosea Stolt, and J. C. Little, from the Bar, was taken up and that part of the motion relating to the two latter was withdrawn, and the proceedings held against James Ferguson. General Burr filed an affidavit that the testimony of Brigham Young, Sen'r was material and an alias Subpoena was ordered for his attendance.

On Wednesday, the case was again taken up when Mr. Ferguson offered his resignation which the Court declined to receive. He then offered to plead guilty, with a modification, and take a judgment pro confesso, which the Court declined to recognise, and an examination and investigation was ordered. As the motion had been amended in open Court, at the suggestion of the Court and at the request of Mr. Ferguson, a continuance was had until (Friday Dec. 3rd.)

The proceedings very plainly indicated a desire to avoid an investigation. The declaration of the court therefore, that an examination should take place is due to all parties and especially to Gen. Burr, whose fair fame has been stigmatised and who was deprived of his rights as a member of the bar, in 1857, by, and upon the motion of, Mr. Ferguson. But more important than this, it is alleged that a Judge of the United States Court was insulted and intimidated when in the discharge of his official duty; this is a grave offence and the country should be put in possession of the facts and no plea of criminality or stultification should prevent an exposure. Bullying a United States Court in violating its integrity, and through it the Government is a matter that demands an investigation, and we are glad that Judge Sinclair has determined upon the course he has

The United States District Court will meet to day (Friday) and take up the question of the expulsion of James Ferguson, as a member of the bar.

The Grand and Petit Juries have been adjourned until next Monday week.

The question, or conflict of Jurisdiction which has been elaborately argued within the last week, relating to certain Territorial and United States officers will be passed upon by the Court we presume at this time.

Not Left.

We notice in some of the Eastern papers a statement that Col. G. H. Crossman had left for the States, and that he had actually been met on the road. This is about as reliable as a great many other reports that leak out of this Territory. Col. Crossman is in Camp Floyd, and will be there as long as duty requires him, and we will add, he is as busy as a bee, and it is not likely he will return for some time to come.

Sold.

We were somewhat startled yesterday by a friend, who dropped in and with a most malicious manner propounded to us the following interrogatory:

"If a man stands upon the Jordan bridge, and cast a stone in the river Jordan what would it become?"

Not recognizing any particular virtue in the waters of the Jordan, that would change the character of either a stone or a man, we "caved," and in our simplicity, acknowledged the corn and sought for information, when quietly turning upon his heel with a deep sepulchral voice, he enlightened our understanding by informing us that "it would become wet." The gentleman who perpetrated this, enjoys tolerably good health and is not in the least ashamed to speak to his acquaintances as usual.

Sold Out.

A late number of the San Francisco Evening Bulletin, charges in plain and distinct terms that the "Alta California," has been purchased by the Mormons. We have had our suspicions of the "Alta" for sometime past. Their correspondents from this city, with one exception only were mere spies sent here expressly to "bow the cringing hinges of the knee," and they certainly accomplished their purpose and fulfilled their mission. The exception we allude to among this alta gang is Mr. Frank D. Gilbert, who is now deputy Marshal.

In this connection we will state that one of these same correspondents recently reported to the St. Joseph Journal in reference to the U. S. District Court now in session, that the panel of the Grand Jury was composed of wagon-masters and teamsters. Where he got his information we do not know, but we presumed that he manufactured it. The name of this correspondent of the Alta is Wainace, and the allegation is simply a lie.

U. S. District Attorney's Address to the Grand Jury in relation to Treason.

May it please your honor, gentlemen of the Grand Jury, by permission of his honor, Judge Sinclair, I am permitted here, publicly to give you the reasons why, as Prosecuting Attorney of the United States for this Territory, I have presented before you no bills of indictments for treason at this Court.

Gentlemen of the grand jury, in regard to the subject of treason, as the same has been here given you in charge by the Court, there are certain facts and circumstances of a public character which must necessarily come to your knowledge, and govern your action in the premises, as a grand inquest, and which must govern my actions, and circumscribe my duties, as the Prosecuting Attorney of the United States for this Territory.

I refer to the proclamation of the President of the United States to the people of Utah, on the subject of treason, dated at the city of Washington, April 6th, 1858, and which I have here in Court, as evidence before you. It is here a witness; and that it is such a paper as proves itself, I will refer the Court to 2 Bacon's Ab. 609, where, inter alia, it is said the Gazette is evidence of all acts of state. Also to 12 Woolf, 216; 8 State trials 212, 2 Camp Rep. 44.

This proclamation, gentlemen of the grand jury, is a state paper, emanating from the high Executive of the nation, which, in his wisdom, he has seen proper to publish to the nation, and to the inhabitants of Utah, whom it especially concerned, and of which the Attorney of the United States, in his official capacity in the Territory of Utah, must take notice, and by which he must be governed.

This Territory belongs to the United States and is subject to the control of the National Legislature, and the President of the United States, a co-ordinate functionary of the National Legislature, by the powers vested in him by the Constitution and laws, has issued this proclamation.

The proclamation was brought to this Territory by commissioners appointed by the same high power, and these commissioners, in a public conference with the people of Utah, convened here, in Great Salt Lake City, in the month of June last, for that special purpose, then and there made its contents known and published them to the inhabitants of Utah.

These commissioners were invested with authority to carry into effect the provisions of the Proclamation—they did it and returned to their homes.

The conditions, especially set forth in the Proclamation, were accepted and acquiesced in by the people of Utah, whom they concerned, at that conference, and at subsequent conferences, at Provo, and elsewhere in the Territory. And this acceptance and acquiescence has been further, and fully evidenced by the conduct and acts of the people since that time.

The conditions, as expressed in the Proclamation, are clear and distinct, and can admit of no misunderstanding—the language is as follows:

"Now, therefore, I, James Buchanan, President of the United States, have thought proper to issue this my Proclamation, enjoining upon all public officers in the Territory of Utah, to be diligent and faithful, to the full extent of their power, in the execution of the laws; commanding all citizens of the United States in said Territory, to aid and assist the officers in the performance of their duties; offering to the inhabitants of Utah who shall submit to the laws, a free pardon for the seditions and treasons heretofore by the committed; warning those who shall persist, after notice of this Proclamation in the present rebellion against the United States, that they must expect no farther lenity, but look to be rigorously dealt with according to their deserts."

These conditions, since that time, have been faithfully adhered to and carried out in the conduct and acts of the people of Utah, I have no evidence to the contrary. What ever may have been the stall of public affairs in this Territory before, at that time seditions, treasons and rebellion against the United States, ceased after notice of this proclamation had been given to, and received and acquiesced in by the people of the Territory of Utah.

Governor Cumming, in his Proclamation, bearing date the 11 day of June, 1858, at Great Salt Lake city, with the seal of the Territory, and which is now here in Court, and which proclamation is provided on that of the President, and its acceptance and acquiescence in by the inhabitants of Utah, in speaking of the President's proclamation, the Governor uses the following language:

"The proffered pardon was accepted, with the prescribed terms of the proclamation, by the citizens of Utah."

"Peace is restored to our Territory." These, gentlemen of the Grand Jury, are facts announced by the high Executive officer of the Territory, in a solemn proclamation to the people, and they are to be received as evidence of the public condition of the country over which he so ably and vigilantly presides. And that they are as true now, and since that time, as then, no man has denied.

Therefore, gentlemen of the Grand Jury, it only remains for me to say, for the reasons given that there are now, no acts of sedition, treason or rebellion against the Government of the United States, in this Territory, which the Prosecuting Attorney of the United States for the Territory of Utah, with the President's proclamation and pardon before being, and the Governor's solemn announcement of its acceptance, can charge before you, against any of the inhabitants of this Judicial District, or of the Territory of Utah.

For the Valley Tan. A Picture.

Ma. Editor.—The other day, in reading the New Testament of Jesus Christ, (sometimes read the New as well as Old) I was struck with the following passage in the General Epistle of St. Jude, the Apostle:

1 "Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called."

2 Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied."

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

4 For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ."

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not."

6 And the angels, which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day."

7 Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire."

8 Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, (witness the fortification in Echo Canyon) and speak evil of dignities."

Call to mind the filthy, dirty language of that Prophet of God and Seer, (H) Brigham Young, and the application of his hand to certain parts of his body in the presence of the Peace Commissioners, thus testifying his contempt for the President of the United States. Also the statement of that pure Apostle, Lorenzo Snow, that the "proclamation of the President of the United States was not fit to—." I cannot write the words without a loathing of myself and therefore will not."

But these speak evil of those things which they know not, (how little is known in this Territory of the Bible, or of our Constitution, laws, and the respect which is due to legitimate, not usurped authority,) but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves."

For instance, the beastly imprecations of Heber Kimball from the pulpit, and the doctrines which the bishops in their visits from house to house, teach to the mothers of children, to that they must instruct their daughters, as to their offices in bearing offspring. "We unto them for they have gone in the way of Cain, (how many murders, secret and open, have been committed in this Territory,) and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, (Balaam was slain because he counseled the children of Israel to shed blood, Numbers, Chap. xxv & 31.) and perished in the gainsaying of Core, (Core or Korah, Dathan and Abiram, Numbers chap. xvi, gainsayed the true Prophets of God, Moses and Aaron, and the consequence was that they and all their adherents were swallowed up of the earth. Brigham Young and his Apostles say, as Korah said to Moses and Aaron, that good christian ministers throughout the earth "take too much upon themselves" to preach the Gospel; that they alone are of the Melchizedek and Aaronic Priesthoods; and yet they have made it patent as the noon day sun in the heavens, that they are the most corrupt, impure pretenders to christianity in the world.

With Moses, we would say to all the honest minded sons of the Mormons: "Depart I pray you from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins." These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear, (Oh how confident they are; clouds they are without water, carried about of winds, when an evidence of their fertilizing spiritual influences) trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, except the fruit of Sodom, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; for instance, Brigham's and Apostle Snow's filthy language in regard to the President of the United States; Heber Kimball's sermons, and the Bishops' instructions of whoredom, &c., &c.; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

"These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts" (oh, how doleful have been their complaints against the Government of the United States, which has treated them just as it has every other Territory from the foundation of the State, and yet no complaint was ever before made;) and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, (Brigham's letter for instance last fall to Col. Alexander, in which he was pleased to say he would be merciful to the army for a certain period, provided they gave up their arms—but if by spring they were not gone he would surely annihilate them! What a true prophet and seer he is! Surely he is to be believed in: Who could not be a prophet?) having men's persons in admiration, because of advantage. (Brigham holds the key of Heaven, as well as of the Territory. He is "prophet, Seer, Revelator, Trustee in Trust and President of the Church throughout the world." How modest his pretensions! There is a set that admire him in his assumptions, because thereby they gain in their estimation great privileges in reference to their lawless lusts; and besides they come in occasionally for a share of the sports.) "But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ: How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. These are they who separate themselves sensual, having not the spirit." (The Mormons call every body gentiles, except themselves. That is, they are separatists in the completest sense.) "But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith praying in the Holy Ghost, keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. And of some have compassion, making a difference; and others save with fear pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh."

Let us hope that there are many upon whom this compassion can be shown, and let all right minded, true hearted, philanthropists and christians, try to save such whilst hating the garments spotted with the corruption.

A BELIEVER IN THE NEW TESTAMENT, AS WELL AS THE OLD.

A Letter from Brigham Young.

A citizen of Canandaigua has received an autograph letter from Brigham Young, which we find published in the Ontario Republican Times. This letter was written in reply to one addressed to the "Prophet," by the gentleman spoken of. Brigham was requested by his correspondent to settle a controversy relating to his own antecedents, which had sprung up between the latter and Alonzo Beebe, of Canandaigua. Brigham gives the following leaf from personal history:

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, July 23, '55.

To—

I received your letter dated Canandaigua, May 5th, 1855.

I will give you a short sketch of my history. I was born in Whitingham, Windham county, Vermont, June 1st, 1801. My father and family removed to Smyrna, Chenango county, N. Y., when I was about eighteen months old. We lived in that place until 1813. Shortly after the commencement of the late war with Great Britain, my father and his family removed to the town of Genoa, Cayuga county, N. Y., in which county I lived until 1829. I then moved to Mendon, Monroe county, and in 1830 removed from thence to No. 9 Canandaigua, into a small house owned by Jonathan Mack, situated on the west side of the road, opposite to where Mr. Mack then lived. I helped to finish his new house, so that he moved into it before I left the place.

I left Canandaigua in the first part of 1832, and returned to Mendon, April 14, same year. I was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

I have thus far marked out my path with some particularity. Since then the events of my life are before the world. I will, however, state, that after my return to Mendon, I removed to Kirtland, Ohio, from thence to Far-west, Mo., from thence to Nauvoo, Ill., and from thence to the mountains.

There are five brothers of us, in the following order: John, Joseph, Phineas H., myself and Lorenzo D. The two former never lived in No. 9. Phineas H. and Lorenzo D. did live there, but removed long before I came. The five of us, with my two living sisters (I have three dead) are here, and although some of them are past threescore and ten years of age, yet by living in a judicious manner, and through the blessing of the Lord, we have good health, and are surrounded by an abundance of the comforts of life.

The war is ended, the troops are partly withdrawn, and we have returned to our comfortable home; our trees are loaded with fruit; we have the best country in the world for vegetables; our crops are most abundant. Wheat is our staple grain. At many times we have harvested three crops from one sowing by what we call voluntary wheat springing up the second and third season.

Although I've been in this valley only eleven years, I have had peaches for seven years, and this year will have an abundance of apples for family use, we've apricots, almond trees, plums, cherries, and the finest grapes I have ever seen; they grow in bunches weighing from eight oz. to two pounds.

I have a fine family of boys and girls, a part of whom are married. I have fifteen living and two dead grand-children.

Present my warmest regards to your father and his family. I really desire you to let me know where they are living, and how they are situated.

Respectfully, your friend and well wisher,

BRIGHAM YOUNG.

MILITARY NEWS ITEMS.

Our Portland dates are to the 30th ult.

CONCENTRATION OF THE TROOPS.—Col. Wright and all his troops had arrived at the Dalles, on their return from the war. The troops are to be concentrated at Vancouver, to be there on the arrival of Gen. Harney, who would make a new distribution of them.

LIEUT. MULLAN.—Lieut. Mullan will go to Washington this winter, where he will make out his report of the Indian campaign, and where he goes also for further orders relative to the construction of a wagon road from Fort Walla Walla to Fort Benton. He leaves his other assistant, Louis Mullan, here in charge of his expedition property and the transaction of business relative to the survey. In all probability he will resume operations in early spring.—Oregonian.

MILITARY INSPECTION.—Col. Mansfield, Inspector General of U. S. Army, arrived at the Dalles from Fort Simcoe last week, having finished a tour of inspection to Forts Walla Walla and Simcoe, and finally Fort Dalles. The Col. will now proceed to Vancouver, via the Cascades, where he will inspect the forces under Gen. Harney. Col. Mansfield's visit through this country will no doubt benefit Oregon and Washington territories materially, as he intends to make many suggestions to the Department in reference to matters of the territories, and more especially the advantages the upper country has, as regards railroad practicability.—Oregonian 30th ult.

GEN. HARNEY.—Gen. Harney had arrived at Vancouver. The Oregonian says:

We have not yet been able to learn whether Gen. Harney will make a winter campaign or not. Col. Wright, Col. Mansfield, and other officers of the U. S. Army have been ordered to report to Gen. Harney, at Vancouver, where a council of war will be held.

INDIANS EXECUTED.—A Dalles correspondent of the Portland Standard, writing under date of the 24th ult., says:

Subsequent to the killing of Michel, of which you were advised, two of his associates in crime were apprehended by some friendly Indians and delivered up to the commanding officer at Fort Simcoe, Capt. Archer, 9th Infantry, by whose order they were promptly executed. To-day, the fourth one of these murderers was brought in to this place, dead, by the chief, Mah-nighnak, who had undertaken to apprehend and deliver him up to the commanding officer here, but which the culprit avoided by the act of suicide, on finding his apprehension otherwise inevitable. From all accounts, four Indians were concerned directly with Michel in the Murder of Bolon. They as well as Michel, have all perished.

AMERICAN PASSPORT DISREGARDED BY AN EUROPEAN GOVERNMENT.—An American Citizen Impressed into the Prussian Service.—We learn from our correspondent at Berlin, says the Norfolk Argus, that Ex-Governor Joseph A. Wright, United States Minister to Prussia, is now corresponding with the Administration upon a highly important subject—nothing less than the violation of our passports by the government to which he is accredited.

It seems an American citizen has been seized by the Prussian Government and made to serve in the army. This man is a native of Prussia, but migrated to the United States some years ago; was naturalized; served in the Mexican War with honor and distinction, and was wounded in several battles. A few years ago he returned to Prussia, for the purpose of visiting his relations, when he was seized as a Prussian subject, and made to serve in the Prussian army, cut off from his wife, children and property in his adopted country. Another case: An old man, ninety years of age, who emigrated to the United States when he was ten years of age, married an American lady, and is the father of seven children, thus spending eighty years of his life in America, the husband of an American lady, and the father of seven American citizens, returned two or three months since to Prussia on a visit to his relations, and by the merest accident escaped the seizure of the Prussian Government (for impressment into its army) with the aid of friends and excellent good luck.

INTERESTING FROM ARIZONA.—J. F. Eddy, Esq., of Arizona Territory, arrived at Los Angeles, August 30, says the Star, by whom it learns the following interesting particulars, respecting the present condition and prospects of the above country:

Arizona Territory is rapidly settling up, but the people complain for the want of adequate protection; although the Indians are not very bad, they have lately ran off some stock.

The Sierra Colorado, or Boston Company, is located ten miles from the Sopra mine, and twenty miles from Tubac. It is also a silver mine, and the ore is very rich. But they have not been successful in their operations. The great difficulty is to construct furnaces to smelt the ore. In this particular they have not been successful. Experiments, involving a very large amount of money, have been made, without obtaining a satisfactory result. The Company have now resolved to adopt crushing and amalgamating; and for that purpose they have procured the machinery in San Francisco. Major Heintzelman is the President of the Company, and Mr. Lathrop, Treasurer, and these gentlemen have lately gone down to the mine for the purpose of having the machinery erected, which it is expected will realize the expectations of the proprietors. The Company have made great improvements in the vicinity of their mine. A village has sprung into existence, occupied by the workmen of the company. The Company's offices and establishment are at Tubac, which is being rapidly improved in consequence of the operations of the Company. Their mine is rich and very extensive, and it is to be worked in the very best manner. They have two furnaces in operation, which are not sufficient for their wants.

Messrs. Thompson and Findley have a silver mine eighty miles from Tucson, in the Santa Cruz Valley. In fact, the whole country abounds with mines of silver, copper and other valuable ores.

Spanish Beauty.

The Spanish women are very interesting. What we associate with the idea of female beauty is not, perhaps, very common in this country. There are seldom those seraphic countenances which strike you dumb, or blind, but faces, in abundance which will never pass without commanding admiration. Their charms consist in their sensibility. Each incident, every person, every word, touches the fancy of a Spanish lady, and her expressive features are, constantly confuting the creed of the Moslem. But there is nothing quick, harsh, or forced about her. She is extremely unaffected, and not at all French. Her eyes gleam rather than sparkle; she speaks with vivacity, but in sweet tones, and there is in all her carriage, particularly when she walks, a certain dignified grace which never deserts her, and which is very remarkable.

The general female dress in Spain is of black silk, a basquina, and a black silk shawl, a mantilla with which they usually envelope their heads. As they walk along with this costume in the evening, with their soft dark eyes dangerously conspicuous, you willingly believe in their universal charms. They are remarkable for the beauty of their hair. Of this they are very proud, and indeed its luxuriance is equalled only by the attention which they lavish on its culture. I have seen a young girl of fourteen, whose hair reached her feet, and was as glossy as the curl of a Contessa. All day long, even the lowest order are brushing, curling and arranging it. A fruit woman has her hair dressed with as much care as the Duchess of Ossuna. In the summer, they do not wear their mantilla over their heads, but show their combs, which are of a very great size. The fashion of these combs varies constantly. Every two or three months you may observe a new form. It is the part of the costume of which a Spanish woman is most proud. The moment that a new comb appears, even a servant wench will run to the melters with her old one, and thus at the cost of a dollar or two, appear the next holiday in the newest style. These combs are worn at the back of the head. They are of tortoise shell, and with the very fashionable, they are white. I sat next to a lady of high distinction at a bull-fight at Seville. She was the daughter-in-law of the Captain General of the province, and the most beautiful Spaniard I ever met with. Her comb was white, and she wore a mantilla of blonde, without doubt extremely valuable, for it was very dirty. The effect, however, was charming. Her hair was glossy black, her eyes like an antelope's and all her other features deliciously soft. She was further adorned, which is rare in Spain, with a rosy cheek, for in Spain our heroines are rather sallow. But they counteract this slight defect by never appearing until twilight, which call them from their bowers, fresh, though languid, from the late siesta.

The only fault of the Spanish beauty is, that she too soon indulges in the magnificence of emboupoint. There are, however, many exceptions. At seventeen, a Spanish beauty is poetical. Tall, lithe, and clear, and graceful as a jennet, who can withstand the summer lightning of her soft and languid glances. As she advances, if she do not lose her shape, she resembles Juno rather than Venus. Majestic she ever is, and if her feet be less twinkling than in her first belero, look on her hand and you'll forgive them all.—B. Disraeli, in Contarino Fleming.

A LINGUIST WHO COULDN'T BE "BLUFFED."—"I spakes ter Ainglishe so vule as youse," said Wiggles' guide round Antwerp, and to prove which assertion, he at once commenced an elaborate, gilt-gingerbread description of some grand ecclesiastical procession which takes place annually through the streets of that most pious city. Having heard him carefully through, Wiggles, of Skeneapolis, who that morning was substituting segars, at twenty-five cents (Belgium currency) each for Cavendish, said to him:—"You are a good Catholic?" "I hobes so," responded the guide, alias commissaire, alias laquais de place. "Then," spoke out Wiggles, of Skeneapolis, "I am to understand that this procession is nothing more than a regular forty deck bender, with saw bucks for antes?" The guide was not crushed! He hung out to speak English, and rather than acknowledge that Wiggles was too much for him, he instantly said:—"Zat ees eat! Now ve must hurry to ze Mooseoom!"

SINGULAR ATTACHMENT OF ONE BIRD FOR ANOTHER.—A Crow Starving Himself for Grief.—Some weeks since Mr. Pratt, the senior proprietor of the Spencer House, owned an owl

and a crow that had apparently formed a deep attachment for each other. They were always together, and seemed to hold a kind of mutual conversation, which, however unintelligible to others, must have given them great satisfaction. The crow would often bring food to the owl, and was always anxious to do some act that would prove acceptable. The firm friendship existing between the two birds was the subject of general remark by the guests and waiters of the hotel, who frequently watched them by the hour. Their intimate association and kindness were really curious to witness, and elicited many speculations upon the nature of birds and their capability of affection.

One day the owl fell ill, and the crow, ever at his side, expressed as much sorrow and sympathy as a human creature could; appealing ever and anon by looks to passers-by, as if inviting aid and comfort for his sick friend. The owl was dangerously indisposed for nearly a week, and at the termination of that period died in spite of every effort of the crow to prolong his existence.

The crow was inconsolable. Nothing could banish the memory of his feathery friend, and little doubt existed in our mind that had he been a poet he would have written another "Adonais," or "In Memoriam," upon his mournful bereavement. He would eat nothing—no savory morsel could tempt him, and the choicest bits of his favorite food lay near him, day and night, untouched. The dark luster of the eyes of the lamenting fowl grew dimmer and dimmer; his diminutive legs weaker and weaker; famine was in his every aspect; but still he would not eat. In the flippant language of the day, he would "die first"—and he did.

One morning early, the senior proprietor, who was much attached to both the owl and the crow, found the latter lying lifeless in the court-yard. The poor bird was nothing but bones, not a particle of flesh remaining beneath his ebony plumage. The crow had been true to his friendship as an ornithological Orestes, and had resolutely conquered, with heroic self-denial, a life not worth preserving after the loss of his "other soul"—the owl.

LIST OF LETTERS

REMAINING in Salt Lake City Post Office since December 2.

Amer Richard	A	Anderson R R
Bailey Jackson L	B	Bell Eli
Bates Jos of Jno Welch	B	Belliston James
Baxter Robert	B	Bond William
Berdslap Cto A	B	Brinker John D
Beecher Rahsom A	B	Burgess Thomas
Call Hanson	C	Connelly Wm H
Carlson W H	C	Crag James
Childs A N	C	Crawford Samuel
Clapp Joseph	C	Dustin Lundus or Seth
Day Henry C	D	Estes Thomas L
Doty Isaac H	D	Foots Warren
Estes Thomas L	E	Foreman James
Foots Warren	E	Forste McCaulin
Ford F P	F	Griffin Thomas
Grag John	G	Hunter S A
Hardy A E	H	Hutchings William L
Hartman C L	H	Jenkins Ezekiel
Hodgetts T M	H	Kellington I A
Hollands Alfred	H	Kenderline Shoddius S
Jenkins Ezekiel	J	Laney Isaac
Kellington I A	K	Lechler George H
Kenderline Shoddius S	K	Lewis David
Laney Isaac	L	Majors Alex
Lechler George H	L	McCahon Alex
Lewis David	L	Neill Lee
Majors Alex	M	Olpin Joseph
McCahon Alex	M	Peck Ward
Neill Lee	N	Packard James S
Olpin Joseph	O	Parks R C
Peck Ward	P	Porriah Samuel
Packard James S	P	Perkins S Jeff
Parks R C	P	Reese Ench
Porriah Samuel	P	Reenbeaux Charles
Perkins S Jeff	P	Roberts John W
Reese Ench	R	Sherman W H
Reenbeaux Charles	R	Skellton Robert
Roberts John W	R	Smith Reese T
Sherman W H	S	Squires Thomas
Skellton Robert	S	Stapp Howard
Smith Reese T	S	Walters George
Squires Thomas	S	Wessels Wm M
Stapp Howard	T
Walters George	T
Wessels Wm M	W

LADIES LIST.

Balt Mrs Mary	Bryan Julia
Bayles Miss Carrie
Evans Mrs Ann
Halloway Harriet
Rory Miss Z N
Sargeant Mrs Priscilla
Stewart Mrs Agnes Shoemaker Mrs Margaret
Thomas Mrs Mary M

THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1858.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

NUMBER 3.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Darling Nellie Gray.

AS SUNG BY CHARLIE CROCKER.

There's a low green valley on the old Kentucky shore,
Where I've whiled many happy days away
A sitting and a singing by the little cabin door,
Where lived my Darling Nellie Gray.

CHORUS—
Oh, my poor Nellie Gray they have taken you away,
I shall never see my darling any more,
I'm sitting by the river, and I'm weeping all the day,
Farewell to the Old Kentucky shore.

The moon had climbed the mountain, and the stars were shining too,
When I take my Darling Nellie Gray,
And I paddle down the river, in my little red canoe,
And the banjo sweetly I did play.

CHORUS—Oh, my poor Nellie Gray, etc.
One night I went to see her but she's gone,
The white man had bound her with his life away,
They had taken her to Georgia to wear her life away,
As she toils in the cotton and the cane.

CHORUS—Oh, my poor Nellie Gray, etc.
My canoe is under water, and my banjo is unstrung,
I am tired of living any more,
My eyes shall look downward, and my song shall be unsung,
As I go from the Old Kentucky shore.

CHORUS—Oh, my poor Nellie Gray, etc.
My eyes are getting blinded, I cannot see my way,
Hark, somebody's knocking at the door,
I hear the angels calling and I see my Nellie Gray,
Farewell to the Old Kentucky shore.

CHORUS TO THE LAST VERSE.
Oh, my poor Nellie Gray, up in heaven they do say,
They will never take you from me any more,
I am coming—coming—coming, as the angels clear the way,
Farewell to the Old Kentucky shore.

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.,
December, 7th, 1858.

Kirk Anderson, Esq.,
Editor "Valley Tan."

On the 13th of November, I left this City in company with Dr. Forney, Indian Superintendent, on a visit to the Indian tribes of the "Utes" and "Pah-vants." Some time previous to our leaving, rumors were rife that these tribes in connection with others, had assembled in large numbers near the Sevier Lake, for the purpose of attacking the whites, and to commit other degradations as might best suit their savage propensities. After passing the settlements north of Spanish Fork, we arrived at the Indian Farm on the 16th. At this place formerly resided "Peteet-neet," "Tintic," and other prominent chiefs of the "Utah" tribe with their bands; but not a solitary Indian was to be found, and all signs of their former habitations had disappeared. All the information to be gained was, that they had gone to join other bands to the Southward, leaving this place. We next directed our journey to Mantu, situated in the Valley of San Pete, and near the residence of the somewhat famous Chief-tain "Arapeen," a connexion of the noted war Chief "Walker." This Chief has caused the small settlements around, for many miles, much annoyance and trouble, but he is much respected, as well as much feared by the citizens. On our arrival at this place, "Arapeen" was found absent with his band likewise to the Southward; during his absence a band of warriors had plundered his house and that of others of his tribe drove the Government Cattle from the Indian farm, and carried away large quantities of wheat, and by threats had intimidated the people. On the day after our arrival a warrior arrived informing us that "Arapeen" was encamped in the vicinity. Dr. Forney on the following day went to the Indian encampment and held an interview with him and his warriors. He informed us that he had been on his annual trading expedition to a distant tribe, that on his return he had met a band of "Utes" with "Peteet-neet," "Tintic" and others, and from them learned the particulars of the Spanish Fork difficulty. He spoke of the death of Pin Tuts as a warrior much respected and beloved, he represented him as the fast friend and protector of the white man, and called for his crime, that death had been awarded him—he pointed to the direction of the Military squads encamped near his hunting grounds, and to the picket guards upon the surrounding mountains, and asked for what was this? Doctor Forney represented to him the late Indian outrages, of women outraged in the open day, and in sight of their own dwellings; unoffending and honest citizens journeying to their homes, attacked and brutally murdered—the property of citizens indiscriminately stolen and slaughtered, and demanded from him immediate restitution of such effects as he might then have in his possession and to forthwith return to their former homes, he pictured to him the penalty of disobedience, and extracted from this War-like Chieftain implicit compliance and obedience. "Arapeen" most solemnly promised future peace for himself and for his tribe, and that his influence should be exerted to promote the same end with other chiefs of his nation. He requested the criminals now in custody awaiting trial, might be hanged as an example in future to other Indians.

Leaving for a season this Chief, we pursued our way towards the Corn Creek farm some 15 miles below Fillmore, at which point we arrived on the 21st, here we meet with "Kanosh," chief of the "Pah-vants"—him, we found with his band industriously at work improving his farm and making arrangement for his winter work. He had heard of the movements of other tribes, but had not as yet acquiesced in their intentions. After holding council with him and his warriors, in which they all promised continued peace, we left for our return to meet other tribes still unseen, which had been sent for. On our return to Mantu Farm, "Arapeen" informed us that he had sent to the Brava Mountains for the band in that vicinity, and the messengers informed us that the extreme inclemency of the weather, and hunger had caused much sickness among the Indians, that two of their principal chiefs were sick, but that in 15 days time they would be in, they were all for peace now, and wished to see the Superintendent, and hold a council. Everything now being in a fair way of establishing a permanent peace, we left for home and thus by the timely interference and decided manner in which the Superintendent interposed his authority, an Indian War was stopped in the bud. The Indians in their wanderings have suffered much; "Peteet-neet" and "Tintic," lay in the mountains sick, and most of their family. "Arapeen" lost his finest horse, and favorite wife together with a large quantity of blankets—and the tribe mourn the loss of a celebrated warrior. These may seem to the white man but trifles, but to an Indian they are irreparable. It is confidently expected that at the expected council by the middle of this month, all the vexed Indian questions will be permanently settled and adjusted, and a prolonged peace ensue.

On our journey I observed through all the towns we passed newly plowed lands, and in many instances the seed in and the broad fields harrowed, new houses in course of erection, and building materials on the spot ready for immediate use. The grain crop in this section of the territory has been very abundant. In the two towns of Fort Ephraim and Mantu, containing a population of only twelve hundred souls, 140,000 bushels of wheat were harvested, besides a corresponding crop of vegetables and grain. At the town of Nephi one farmer raised from twenty-two acres 819 bushels of grain, which facts alone show the fertility of the soil.

We passed through the beautiful valley of San Pete, abounding in rich farming lands and lumber of the largest growth is convenient to the mountain streams. Coal of the finest quality, Cannel and West Hartly, lie unquarried in the neighboring hills. Mountains of iron ore lay waiting for future use. Salt mines and alum beds show themselves to the passer by and the swelling valley of lovely San Pete for 60 miles lies ready for the enterprise of man.

The roads from this city to Fillmore in many places are almost impassable, and it is to be hoped that the Legislature now about to convene, will take some steps to remedy the defects. Good stone can be found very convenient to the road side, and the benefits resulting to a good thoroughfare must be evident to all.

At some other time I will again revert to this tour, and endeavor to demonstrate the practicability of a good road direct from this city to the coal mines, by the introduction of which to this place the severities of winter are much lightened, and much hard labor and exposure saved.

INDEX.

REMEMBER THE LITTLE ONES.—
"Mother, I wish Mr. C— would preach here all the time. I don't like to have Mr. P— come."

"Not like Mr. P—, my son? I thought everybody liked him; he is an excellent man. Why do you dislike him?"

"Why, mother, when he preached here last, he stayed here all the time from Sunday to Monday, and I was just as still as I could be, and he did not speak to me or look at me once, and Mr. C— always puts his hand on my head when he comes; and he says: 'How does Charley do to-day?' just as though he loves me."

I have a choice rose bush in my garden, presented by a dear friend. This year it had but few buds, and my little ones could only have one rose each. "I will save mine," said little Carrie, "and carry it to my teacher. Do you think she ever saw such a beautiful tea-rose?" Day after day she watched her little bud, till it was half opened, and then it was plucked in the morning early, and fresh and dewy, and placed in water ready for school time.

When she returned from school a cloud rested upon her usually sunny face; and upon inquiring its cause, she cried as though her little heart would break. "You know my beautiful rose. Well, I suppose the teacher didn't want it. She had a whole vase full of flowers, but none of them half so sweet as that; and when I carried it to her, she just laid it upon her desk, and didn't look at it once, and said: 'Take your seat Carrie.'" How easy to have said, "Thank you Carrie," and smiled upon the child, and filled her little heart with grateful love instead of grief.

The following beautiful extract is from the speech of Hon. Edward Everett, at the National Horse Exhibition at Springfield, Mass:

However this may be, sir, if there is any one who doubts that the horse—the animal that most concerns us on this occasion—is susceptible of the kindest feelings of our nature, I think he would be convinced of his error by a most interesting anecdote of Edmund Burke. In the decline of Mr. Burke's life, when he was living in retirement on his farm at Beaconfield, the rumor went up to London that he had gone mad; and the fact that was stated in support of the rumor was that he went round his park kissing his cows and horses. A friend, a man of rank and influence, hearing this story, and deeming it of too much importance to be left uncorrected, hastened down to Beaconfield and sought an interview, with the view of ascertaining the truth of the rumor. He entered into conversation with him. Mr. Burke read to him some chapters from his Letter on a Regicide Peace. His friend immediately saw that, though the earthly tenement was verging back to its native dust, the lamp of reason and genius shown with undiminished lustre within. He was accordingly more than satisfied as to the object of his coming down, and in private interview with Mrs. Burke, told her what he had come for, and received from her this pathetic explanation:

Mr. Burke's only child, a beloved son, had not long before died, leaving behind him a favorite old horse, the companion of his excursions of business and pleasure, when both were young and vigorous. This favorite animal was turned out by Mr. Burke, the father, into the park with directions to all his servants that he should in every respect be treated as a privileged favorite. Mr. Burke, himself, of course, in his morning walks, would often stop to caress the favorite animal. On one occasion, as he was taking his morning walk through the park, he perceived the poor old animal at a distance, and noticed in turn that he was recognized by him. The horse drew nearer and nearer to Mr. Burke, stopped, eyed him with a most pleading look of recognition, which said, as plainly as words could have said: "I have lost him too," and then the poor dumb beast deliberately laid his head upon Mr. Burke's bosom. Struck by the singularity of the occurrence, moved by the recollection of his son, whom he had never ceased to mourn with a grief that would not be comforted, overwhelmed by the tenderness of the animal, expressed in the mute eloquence of holy nature's universal language, the illustrious statesman for a moment lost his self-possession, and, clasping his arms around the neck of his son's favorite animal, lifted up that voice which had filled the arches of Westminster Hall with the noblest strains that ever echoed within them and wept aloud!

This was seen and heard by the passers-by, and the enemies of Burke, unappeased by his advancing years, by his failing health, by his domestic sorrows, made it the ground of a charge of insanity. "Burke had gone mad," but, sir, so help me Heaven, if I were called upon to designate the event or the period in Burke's life that would best sustain a charge of insanity, it would not be when in a gush of the holiest and purest feeling that ever stirred the human heart, he wept aloud on the neck of his dead son's favorite horse; but it would rather be when, at the meridian of his fame, when the orb of his imperial genius rode highest in the heavens, amid the scoffs of cringing courtiers, and the sneers of trading patriots, he abased his glorious powers to the scramblings and squabbles of the day, and—

"Born for the universe, narrowed his mind And to party gave up what was meant for mankind."

The Orphan Emigrant.

While passing recently by steamer to Owen Sound, in Canada, I noticed a little boy standing alone. I knew he was English by his fustian clothes and little blue cap, and going to him, asked where he was going. "Don't know sir," he replied. "Why," I said, "don't you know where you are going?" "I am going to Owen Sound, but I don't know where that is." "And where are you from?" "Wandsworth in Surrey, Sir," he answered. "Are you alone?" "Yes, sir; another boy and I were sent out by the Emigrant Aid Society to get a place in Canada. He left me a week ago, and I have got a place to learn printing. 'Have you no mother, no home?' I asked, touched to see so young a child in a strange land alone. 'My father's dead, sir,' he answered, 'and my mother's married again.' 'Were you ever at school?' I asked, for he was so polite I knew he had not been brought up on the street with bad boys. 'Yes, sir; I was five years in the orphan asylum, and went to school there.'

I cheered up the little fellow, for I really pitied his friendlessness and wanted to comfort him if I could. 'Have you a bible?' I asked at last. 'Oh yes, sir,' he said; 'a kind lady gave me one, and I have it now.' I spoke to him about reading it, and advised him to make it his daily companion, and never to do what it forbade. He seemed to feel this was needful, and said he would. 'You must write to your mother,' I at last said; 'she must be anxious to hear from you.' 'Yes, sir; I've a letter in my trunk waiting till I get on shore,' he said; and then he showed me a letter to the printer to whom he was going, which he had kept in the folds of his cap lining.

My friend and I, struck by the boy's loneliness and destitution, and admiring his honest independence, which preferred laboring alone in a foreign land, even in his childhood, than to be a burden to his mother, gave him a small sun each and a hearty blessing. Just then the boat stopped, and I left him guarding his box and looking for his employer, who was to meet him. Next morning I inquired for him, and found Mr. D— had come for him and taken him home, where I trust he will be well treated, and grow up to be useful in the service of the orphan's heavenly Protector and friend.

A man in Charleston lashed a woman of ill-fame against her own will, and she punched out his eye with a fork. He squeezed a woman and got a punch.—Louisville Journal.

A Yankee has invented a plague which kills off all who do not pay the printer. It has played sad havoc in New England, and is extending rapidly west of the mountains. Some in Ohio and Illinois already begin to 'smell a mice.' Indiana is in danger.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, DECEMBER 10, 1858.

Mormonism Revived--A New Edition.

We present in this issue a lot of choice extracts, taken from the Standard works of the Latter-day Saints. As they have been published heretofore, we violate no legal privileges of "Copyright," and promise to take no steps to secure it for ourselves.

Our design is to reflect back the peculiarities of Mormonism, as taught from its recognized Patriarchs, Prophets and Counselors. In the language of the immortal Yellowplush, let it "circulate"—and we will add, there are a few more left.

"The doctrine he teaches is all I know about the matter, bring anything against that if you can, as to anything else, I do not care if he acts like a devil, he has brought forth a doctrine that will save us, if we will abide by it. He may get drunk every day of his life, sleep with his neighbors wife every night, run horses and gamble, I do not care anything about that, for I never embrace any man in my faith. But the doctrine he has produced will save you and me, and the whole world, and if you can find fault with that, find it."—Deseret News, Dec. 1856.

"There are sins that men commit for which they cannot receive forgiveness in this world, or in that which is to come, and if they had their eyes open to see their condition, they would be perfectly willing to have their blood spilt upon the ground, that the smoke thereof might ascend to heaven as an offering for their sins; whereas, if such is not the case, they will stick to them and remain upon them in the spirit world. I know when you hear my brethren telling about cutting people off from the earth, that you consider it is strong doctrine, it is to save them, not to destroy them. I will say further, I have had men to come to me and offer their lives to atone for their sins. It is true that the blood of the Son of God was shed for sinners through the fall and those committed by man, yet men can commit sins, which it can never remit, as it was in ancient days, so it is in our day; and though the principles are taught publicly from this stand, still the people do not understand them, yet the Law is precisely the same. There are sins that can be atoned for by an offering upon the altar as in ancient days, and there are sins that the blood of a lamb, of a calf, or of turtle doves cannot remit, but they must be atoned for by the blood of the man. That is the reason why men talk to you as they do from this stand, they understand the doctrine, and throw out a few words about it."—Deseret News, Oct. 1st, 1856.

Spoken by Brigham Young.

"I say as the Lord lives, we are bound to become a Sovereign State in the Union, or Independent Nation by ourselves. I am still, and still will be Governor of this Territory, to the constant chagrin of my enemies, and twenty-six years shall not pass away before the Elders of this Church will be as much thought of as Kings on their thrones."—Deseret News, Sept. 1st, 1856.

B. Young's remarks.

"I have often said that the word of our leader and Prophet is the word of God to this people, we cannot see God, we cannot hold converse with him, but he has given us a man that we can talk to, and thereby know his will, just as well as if God himself were present with us. I am no more afraid to risk my salvation in the hands of this man, than I am to trust myself in the hands of the Almighty, he will lead me right if I do as he says in every particular and circumstance."—Deseret News, Oct. 1st, 1856.

H. C. Kimball.

"We have been trying long enough with this people, and I go in for letting the sword of the Almighty to be unsheathed, not only in word but in deed."—Deseret News, Oct. 1st, 1856.

J. M. Grant.

"I never feel as though I wanted to wear my hat where Brigham is present, I consider that the Master should wear his hat, or hang it on the peg that God made for it, which is his head of course."—Deseret News, Oct. 1st, 1856.

H. C. Kimball, June 20th, 1856.

"There is not a country in the world where there is more religious intolerance than in this boasted Republic."—Deseret News, Jan. 10th, 1858.

John Taylor.

Speaking of the Army—
"If our enemies, I do not mean those few out yonder—a swarm of long-billed musquitos could eat them up at a supper spell—I mean the whole United States and the whole world, if they should come upon us they cannot prevail."—Deseret News, Dec. 13th, 1857.

"Nor shall any person appointed to office for Utah by the present administration either qualify for, or assume, and discharge, within the limits of this Territory, the functions of the offices to which they have been appointed, so long as our Territory is menaced by an invading army, &c."—Resolutions of the Legislative Utah Assembly adopted and signed, Dec. 21st, 1857.

"MEMORIAL AND RESOLUTIONS TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Resolved, that we will maintain the Constitution and Laws of the United States, so far as they are applicable to our Territory."

"It is self-evident that by fitting out such an expedition against Utah, the Government had pre-determined to sweep the Mormons, and Mormonism out of existence by holding them still while mobocrats, black-legs, thieves, liars, demagogues, whose masters, and all hell worked their loved and characteristic destruction of the virtuous and innocent. It is folly and wickedness to allege that such a body of troops has been ordered here for peaceful purposes, for such a course is in open defiance of all law, and trampling under foot every just principle."

From the same.

"And since President Buchanan with all those and far more facts plainly before him, has seen fit to order troops to a Territory where all is peace, it is fairly presumable that he has determined to send us officers the meanest curses that he could find, for he was most plainly informed that truly honorable men as officers would be respected and treated with courtesy as they ever have been, and as Governor Young has always been widely known to be the unanimous choice of Utah for the position he occupies, and an officer against whose wise administration of affairs not the first objection can be substantiated."

Upon what principle of Constitutional equity did President Buchanan appoint a stranger in his stead?"

From the same.

EXTRACTS

From a Discourse by H. C. Kimball, Sept. 20th, 1857.—Published in the Deseret News.

"Once I was inspired by the Almighty with that spirit, and that was in Nauvoo, and so was Brother Brigham, and I felt to say that I was sorry that peace was declared, we had just got ready when the gap was shut up."

"Do I want to shed the blood of my brethren and sisters, or to see it shed; no, and neither do you, unless the Holy Ghost dictates for us to shed the blood of our enemies, then it is just as right as it is for us to partake of the Sacrament; but I wish they would take the hint and go the other way and not attempt to come here, we do not want to hurt them; but if they come upon us, and we have to repel them by the force of arms, God Almighty will give us the power to do it, now mark it."

"You know I said that I had wives enough to whip the United States, and why? Because they will whip themselves, and my wives would not have to resist them."

"Is there a collision between us and the United States? No, we have not collided, that is the word that sounds nearest to what I mean; but now the thread is cut between them and us, and we will never gybe again; no never, worlds without end."

I have said for years that never, no, never again will I be subject to such cursed scoundrels the United States Government has sent her as officers. I say in the name of Israel's God, I will not."

Let me tell you that ten years will not pass away before God will play with this nation as he did with Pharaoh, only worse.

September 20th, 1857. Remarks of John Taylor.—The Presbyterians used to say that people ought to thank God for the privilege of being damned, but I would not thank anybody for being damned. But I think, however, that such men as would not submit to his authority and rule, ought to be damned, whether they like it or not. Nothing but obedience to his law, obedience in families, obedience to Bishops and the Priesthood, in all of its ramifications, and especially to President Brigham Young as the head, to carry out his law to the whole people, can accomplish the purposes of God or our salvation as a people.

September 6th, 1857. By H. C. Kimball. The church and Kingdom to which we belong will become the Kingdom of our God and His Christ and Brigham Young will become president of the United States. (Voices responded amen.)

And I tell you he will be something more, but we do not want to give him the name, but he is called and ordained to a far greater station than that, and he is fore-ordained to take that station and he has got it. And I am Vice President, and Brother Wells is the Secretary of the Interior. Yes and all the armies in the flesh.

The Weather.

The Arctic regions, so travelers tell us, are very cold, but with all due respect for the North Pole, and that undiscovered sea which is supposed to "lie around loose" at that end of the earthen egg, we can safely say we have had some specimens of cold snaps that would compare favorably even with the weather that our Esquimaux brethren indulge in. If it is indeed true, that in the polar regions brandy is congealed and chopped up into pound plugs and served out by the pound as rations to the ships crews, then we assert that Great Salt Lake is frozen solid, but predicated entirely upon the Polar theory.

The weather certainly has been very cold, and if the "notes" of that peripatetic individual a "policeman" who spies around town, are to be believed, the merchants had better commence rigging their stoves in the cellars to keep certain spiritual influences from freezing.

A "Policeman" however, is not altogether insensible to those comforts, which by common consent is termed creature, and we apprehend that if it could not be found in the liquid state, he would not hesitate to chew ice, and with as much greediness as a man with a fever.

While Temperance is a Cardinal virtue, and should be respected, it does not by any means follow that Zion's guardians possess it in an eminent degree.—U. del.

Frozen.

Within the past week several persons have been frozen to death in this valley and in the canyons adjacent. Mr. Lever, while coming from Camp Floyd in the stage, and when within a short distance of the city got out to walk and perished on the road. Two men, whose names we did not learn, were frozen to death in Cottonwood; another was found dead in Emigration canyon; and we learn that the mail carrier, north, between this and Box Elder, was also frozen. Every person that arrives, no matter from what direction, has suffered severely from the cold and frost bitten feet, hands and ears are the prevailing marks for the last few days.

A Bitter Frost.

A friend of ours, who was reared beneath the azure skies of the "sunny south," and never, until the present winter, had experienced colder weather than is felt at St. Louis, tells the following story, (we do not vouch for it,) which "lays over" the story told by Kendall, of the New Orleans Picayune, of a "cold snap" in New York, when it was so cold that upon attempting to enjoy a shower bath, he found the water froze into small globules, similar to shot, as they fell upon him. But to our story:

An ambulance, containing three passengers, was found, one day last week, upon the road between this point and Fort Bridger, frozen stiff. It appears that the fore feet of the lead mules were frozen while in the act of stepping forward, and the entire team stood in studied attitude, resembling highly finished bronze statues. One of the passengers, was in the act of pouring some cognac from a flask into a cup, when the piercing blast came upon him, freezing him and the liquor, the latter presenting the appearance of an icicle, from the mouth of the bottle to the cup. A second passenger, who had been enjoying a smoke, was observed with a wreath of smoke frozen as it ascended upward. The third had been attempting to light his pipe, he had lit a match which had blazed up only to be frozen. Only think of weather cold enough to freeze fire!

Assembly Room Soirees.

The first of this Soirees was inaugurated last evening, (Thursday) in the commodious building just finished as a store for John M. Hockaday & Co. If we were to indulge in the extravagant language of some of our eastern critics or panegyrics we would call it "brilliant," we choose however, to use a more honest expression, and every gentleman and lady who was present can testify to the fact that it was one of the most pleasant re-unions that ever came off in this city.—The Hall was full, and every one seemed to enter into the spirit of the occasion. Among those present was Governor Cumming and lady, Mr. Wilson, U. S. District Attorney and lady, Judges Sinclair and Cradlebaugh of the U. S. District Courts, Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian affairs and many others too tedious to mention.

The supper was prepared by Mr. Rogers, and was most acceptable and convincing to the appetite. There was nothing to disturb the harmony of the occasion, all was joy and the ball "only broke" when day did and when we left "Music soft and sweet" floated in the air and the "Glance of many twinkling feet" testified their appreciation of the occasion. Let the States boast of their Rocky Saloons and boudoirs, we in the Rocky Mountains "Corralled" by the Wasatch ranges, white with snow and forming an almost impassable barrier between us and many a loved one away, meet together and in that social converse and re-union that makes life all that is worth living for, while a few pleasant hours.

This series of balls will be kept up during the winter, and the next one will come off at the same place next Thursday evening.

Personal.

John Hartnett, Esq., Secretary of State, left this city on last Thursday week for Fillmore city to attend to his duties upon the Legislature, who are to convene there on Monday. In the meantime, we understand that it is contemplated to meet here on Monday and adjourn over to Fillmore and from thence to this city again.

What this roundabout mode of legislation is intended for has not yet transpired, but it is eminently Mormon and with all the cunning that seems to attach to "this people" it is shrewdly guessed at.

Hard Up.

The editor has gone skating, and, (an unusual thing for him,) left us short of copy. He has left no sub, consequently, we, the writer of this article, upon learning the state of utter destitution in which the printers are placed have determined to furnish the readers of the "Tan" a chapter of the editor's life, although he gets tanned for his services.

The editor was born in Old Kaintuck and his maternal relative took good care that he should not go near the water until he had learned to swim, or upon the ice until he became a proficient in the beautiful exercise of skating. Thus he grew to manhood, when he tore himself from the scenes of his boyhood and "struck out" for the west, and arrived in St. Louis. Here he attracted the attention of a host of fast young men, who sympathizing with him in his ignorance of so many branches of the fine arts, determined to undertake his education. Accordingly one of the number gave him lessons in "striking out from the shoulder," and came very near "spilling" his beauty. In learning him to swim they narrowly missed drowning him, but consoled him with promises of lessons in dancing. This they commenced and continued until the instructor gave it as his candid opinion that he could "dance most so well as a hoss." He received but one lesson in skating, and notwithstanding the rough treatment he received upon that occasion, he has boldly and fearlessly gone forth to-day to receive his second. We have secured the services of a surgeon, and anxiously await his return.

QUIET RULES IN WARSAW.—The recent "cold term" has had one good effect, that of diminishing the number of rows upon our streets. The police have been busily engaged in keeping themselves warm, and have had no leisure time to spend in arresting persons engaged in following the bent of their inclination in pursuit of pleasure.

This state of affairs we had predicted just as soon as the large force of policemen were withdrawn from the streets.

Charlie Crocker.

We understand that this gentleman has received numerous flattering proposals to pay a professional visit to the Camp. We can assure our friends in that vicinity that if he does "go among them" they will have a rich repast. There are few better representatives of plantation life or dandy negroes. His vocal efforts are decidedly good, while his reputation as a wit and punster is enviable. Combined with his talent as a performer he possesses in an eminent degree the qualities of good fellowship.

Great Rocky Mountain Circus.

On Thursday evening Messrs. Williams & Co's., amphitheatre opened with a good performance and what was, perhaps, more gratifying to the management, a full house. The performers were all good, but Messrs. Quigley and Bartholemew with their trained pony, Young America, were the principal features. These gentlemen are hard to beat, and would be stars in any ring. Vive la saw dust.

ESCAPED.—Three men charged with various felonies, a few evenings since, escaped from the Lock-up in this city.

There was a suspicion that they did not owe their liberty to their own ingenuity, but their egress was winked at.

We have since learned however, that they have been captured.

California House.

Col. William Rogers, an old Californian, who has been among us sufficiently long to gain a legion of friends by his courteous and gentlemanly conduct, has recently fitted up in superior style the large building opposite Messrs. Miller, Russell & Co's store, for the purpose of a hotel. The Colonel's table will contain all the market affords. Persons arriving from the camp would do well to try "Uncle Billy" one whirl, if they wish to obtain the comforts of a home.

El Dorado House.

This house has lately changed hands, and is now managed by Messrs. Jester and Botsford, late of Ohio. These gentlemen have re-fitted the house, and now are prepared to accommodate all who may favor them with their patronage. The table d'hôte is furnished with the pride of the market.

We invite attention to the advertisement of the Deputy Quartermaster General Col. G. H. Crosmen, who advertises for a large amount of grain to be delivered on August, September and October next.

What has become of that deaf and dumb boy that used to be around the streets. He has been missing now for two or three weeks. We have heard it rumored that he had "gone under." Do any of the police know anything about him? We ask for information.

Nauvoo Legion.

We have heard from various sources that orders have been issued to various members of this Legion to arm and equip themselves. It is not the season for buffalo or antelope, and the canyons are full of snow and too cold to pursue grizzlies, while the hot spring lake, with its ducks and geese, is not worth such powder—what's the matter.

We hope Gen. Johnston and the camp will not be frightened—we are not the least sketched here.

Messrs. Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball and Gen. Wells were in Court last Tuesday. We mention the fact because they are notables. The last number of the church organ contains the following paragraph taken from an exchange:

BEHAVED RESPECTABLY.—The Hinesdale County (Miss.) Gazette is responsible for this: "Gov. A. G. Brown and Gov. John J. McRae were in attendance at church, at Spring Ridge, in this county, a Sabbath or two ago. Although politicians by profession and office holders by trade—and hence been subjected to all the vices, corruptions and degradations of that mode of living—we are gratified to state that they took seats with the congregation, and conducted themselves like respectable people!"

Now for the benefit of our friends in the "United States" we will state that President Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball were both in the U. S. District Court this week, the former having been summoned as a witness, and they conducted themselves with the utmost propriety. We did not see either of them snicker or laugh out, or do anything else unbecoming. We trust that the friends of Gov. Brown and Gov. McRae will not attempt to claim all the decency.

A question of importance is now before the Court, involving not only the integrity of some individual members of the bar, but the sovereignty and respect due to the United States is insulted through its judiciary. We have before stated that this "was a matter of no small moment, and we are glad to see that Judge Sinclair is determined to sift the matter to the bottom.

The investigation may bring out some facts however unpalatable to certain persons, that the country have a right to know, and we can tell all such now that it will come sooner or later. The futile and frenzied efforts of Lady Macbeth in her guilt to wash, and rub out the "damned spot" of blood from her hands will be about as successful as any efforts that may be made to conceal outrages, not only upon individuals, but the representatives of the Government in this Territory. The following is a copy of the specifications alleged against Mr. Ferguson:

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, 3rd Judicial District, U. T. Ter.

The undersigned, David H. Burr, one of the Attorneys of said Court comes and moves the Court that James Ferguson, one of the Attorneys of this Court be disbarred and his name be stricken from the roll of Attorneys of the Court, and for cause, says:

FIRST.—That the said James Ferguson at the February Term of said Court, 1857, with the intention and for the purpose of injuring the said David H. Burr, who was then one of the Attorneys of said Court, filed in said Court a motion to disbar the said David H. Burr and for cause therefor alleged the following false and slanderous reasons:

1st. For repeated unwarrantable attempts of Court during the present session; 2nd. That he is an avowed enemy to the people of the Territory of Utah and their best interests, and consequently is not safe counsel with whom to entrust the interests of any party having a case to be tried in any of the Courts of the Territory.

3rd. That he is a dishonorable creature and has falsely represented the situation of the people of the Territory for the purpose of causing vexatious differences between the Parent and Territorial Government."

SECOND.—That the said James Ferguson for the purpose of sustaining said motion in open Court, made the following false, slanderous and defamatory representations of and concerning David H. Burr, and his family, to wit:

"That David H. Burr was a man of bad character, unfit to associate with gentlemen, and further charged that said Burr's family were engaged in keeping a disreputable house in the City of Washington, which slanderous matter, he, the said Ferguson averred to the Court he was ready to prove."

THIRD.—That said James Ferguson at said Term of said Court did by threats, endeavor to influence and intimidate George P. Stiles, then presiding as Judge of said Court in the discharge of his duty, and by threats of personal violence upon said Judge did endeavor to impede and obstruct the due administration of justice in said Court.

The undersigned avers in support of the charge last aforesaid that said James Ferguson in open Court and in the presence and hearing of said Judge said that "If said Judge would not decide a question in regard to the jurisdiction of said Court then pending before the Court a particular way he would take him out of his seat 'damned quick' and that he had the boys there to do it."

For which several matters the undersigned asks the granting of this his motion.

(Signed) DAVID H. BURR.

A true copy from the original amended motion on file in my office.

DAVID A. BURR,

Clerk U. S. Dist. Court 3d Jud. Dist.

Mr. Ferguson asked for a postponement on account of the absence of material witnesses, and the case was adjourned over until Monday. Among the witnesses enumerated was Judge G. P. Stiles, who is now in Washington City, or somewhere else in the "States," and who of course could not be brought here, or his deposition taken for several months.

While we would not intentionally do any one an injury, we can only say that "Procrastination" is not only "the thief of time," but covers more rascalities than ever the garment of charity covered.

That much abused and useful institution of society a Schoolmaster, might find a "fine opening" this side of the Wasatch range, if he would only put on his kit and tramp towards this region.

We have received a legal document of which the following is a copy:

Territory of Utah
County Camp Floyd Dec the 4th 1858.

Personally appeared before Mr. _____
Stating under oath that some unknown person took without his knowledge the following articles 1 pair of red macanaw blanks new 3 points also 1 pair of white do, 1 pair of blue 1 very large macanaw white moth eaten in several places to which the said Mr. _____ Swears out a Serch warrant for this purpos

Justis Pears

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.
December, 10th, 1858.

Kirk Anderson, Esq.,
Editor "Valley Tan."

In the Deseret News of December 5th, I notice the following paragraph:

"We find in the Reporter's Court Minutes that a subpoena served upon Gov. Young by Marshal Dotson, is termed an 'alias' subpoena, but to what official document it was 'second' appears to be very uncertain for so far as we can learn neither Gov. Young nor any person about his office or premises is cognizant of either the service or attempted service of any subpoena to which the one served could properly be termed alias or second."

In reply to this, I will merely state I called at His Excellency's house at 4 o'clock, p. m., and was requested to send my name to the Governor, before I could be admitted; I done so, the servant at the gate (as that was as far as I could get) returned and informed me that his Excellency would grant me an audience in one hour. I returned agreeable to appointment and was met by eight or ten individuals.

My first question was, "Can I see Brigham Young, Sr.?" My answer was "what is the nature of your business?" I replied, "I am not disposed to communicate that to you." I then asked the individual if his Excellency was in? He told me he was. I then inquired for Mr. Ferguson, who was immediately sent for and made his appearance at the gate. I served a summons on him and politely inquired of him if I could see Brigham Young, Sr.; my answer was as before, what is the nature of your business. I replied, I am U. S. Deputy Marshal and have papers to serve on Brigham Young, Sr., and demand admittance.

Mr. Ferguson politely told me I could not see His Excellency, at the same time proffered to serve my papers on him himself. I declined at the same time stating to him that I would consult the proper authorities about the legality of such a transaction and return immediately. I done so and left my papers with something that represented Brigham Young at the gate.

I am not desirous of entering into any newspaper controversy with the miserable apology of an editor that controls the Deseret News, I therefore submit a statement of facts in justice to myself and friends.

Yours respectfully,
FRANK D. GILBERT,
Dep. U. S. Marshal of U. T.

United States Court.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT,
Monday, December 6th.

Court met pursuant to adjournment, Clerk read the records of the proceedings of Friday.

The complaint against James Ferguson, on a motion to disbar, was also read as amended.

Mr. Ferguson asked the specifications to be sworn to.

Gen. Burr, then came forward and made oath that the specifications were true to the best of his knowledge, and belief.

Mr. Ferguson, offered a motion to demur, which was over-ruled by the Court.

Mr. Ferguson, addressed the Court briefly denying the charges in reference to Gen. Burr's family.

Gen. Burr, stated that he did not hear the charges himself, but persisted in being able to prove that they had been made by the Attorney.

Mr. Ferguson, then stated that he could not safely proceed with the examination in the absence of certain witnesses; to which statement he was required to make oath.

Court then adjourned to meet again on Monday next.

[For the Valley Tan.]

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T., Dec. 2, 1858.

"Hold the mirror up to nature,
And show ugliness her own deformity."

We attended the theatre last evening, (Wednesday,) and were agreeably surprised at the great improvement in the drop scene, which, we have no doubt, when finished, will present a highly creditable appearance; also, in the course of the evening we noticed several new scenes; this shows that the management are anxious to deserve the patronage which has hitherto been so liberally bestowed. May we be allowed to suggest that the representation of the tragic muse (who appears to have a most abominable squint,) might be touched up a little by the scenic artist with advantage to the general effect. However, Rome was not built in a day.

Previous to the rising of the curtain the band played a selection of music in very good style, after which we were presented with the comedy of the Serious Family, with the following cast, for the principal characters:

Aminadab Sleek, Mr. Baldwin, 7th infantry, who performed his part respectably.— Charles Torrens, Mr. Thatcher, 10th infantry; this character was very well sustained, occasionally his utterance was rather too quick, which made it difficult to catch some of his sentences, but on the whole he is the best light comedian we have seen on these boards, and with careful study he will prove a great acquisition to the theatre. Capt. Murphy Maguire, Mr. Willis, 5th infantry, this gentleman whose forte is evidently low comedy, has an entire misconception of the character he attempted to portray. Capt. Murphy Maguire is supposed from his collegiate education, and rank as an officer, to be a gentleman, who generally are neither in the habit of using slang phrases, such as "coon" and "blay-guard," nor attempting to speak the brogue and practising buffoonry in the presence of the fair sex—which to use the mildest term is in bad taste. An educated Irishman is universally allowed to speak the English language in the most correct manner—and an Irish friend of ours is at a loss to know the meaning of the word "Gar-deen," which we have been unable to find in any dictionary to which we have access. Again the transposition of words which entirely alters the meaning of the text, and makes it sound ridiculous ought not to occur with a gentleman who attempts the highest order of comedy.

Frank Vincent, Mr. Lee, the little he had to do was good. Mrs. Delmaine, Mrs. Tuckett, this lady as the charming widow seemed a personification of the character, her musical voice and piquant style was the life of the piece. Lady Sowerby (Creamily, Mrs. Longee, in spite of her petit figure, sustained her part better than any other in which we have yet seen her. Mrs. Torrens, Miss Whitlock was very indifferently performed, she does not modulate her voice, and seems at a loss what to do with her arms. Emma, Mrs. Whitlock, was sprightly and acted her part to perfection.

The ball room scene, one of the best in the play, was spoiled by the introduction of the footman to dance, (which is not usual on those occasions,) with an unmistakable pair of calves. Mr. Doyle, although dressed for the dance refused, at the last moment, to appear, which rendered the substitution of the footman with the high bows and white stockings unavoidable. These mishaps ought not to occur.

The performance concluded with the farce of "Raising the Wind." Plainway, Mr. Rutledge, 5th infantry, as usual was well up in his part and acted admirably.

Jeremy Diddler, Mr. Northrop, who generally performs anything allotted to him well, did not seem quite at home in his character. In consequence of his indisposition Mr. Westwood was obliged to finish the part. We should like to see Mr. Thatcher as Jeremy Diddler.

Fainwood, Mr. Warren, if this gentleman will take the trouble to read the letter of introduction given to him by his worthy old father, he will find himself described as a modest, unassuming young man. He was too boisterous.

Sam, Mr. Crawford, Lt. Battalion, whose acting was excellent, the dialect, a cross between a negro minstrel and Somersetshire—"York, you're wanted."

Peggy, Mrs. Whitlock, played her part well, and looked pretty enough to have fascinated a less fastidious person than Jeremy Diddler.

Miss Durable, Mrs. Westwood, was not quite to our taste.

Some of the performers are well up in their parts, but cannot make effective points and by-play, in consequence of the others not being able to give them the right cue.

This might be overlooked at the commencement of the theatricals, but now the case is different; the pieces should be properly rehearsed before they are brought before the public. The prompter is continually heard, which reminds us of an anecdote of the celebrated Curran, who, after attending the theatre, was asked how he liked the performers. He replied he liked the prompter best for he heard him the most and saw him the least.

Let those wear it whom the cap fits.
At the conclusion of the performance Mrs. Tuckett was loudly called for, and was led before the curtain by Mr. Willis. The house was crowded.

DRAMA.

America in Hysterics.

Punch, at the request of numerous American friends, devotes a portion of his space to the immortalizing of a few of the addresses transmitted from the various States to New York in honor of the Atlantic Cable:

From the Governor of Massachusetts.
I salute ye. The deed is done. A new heart string, forgotten at creation, has been inserted into the world, and henceforth its pulses will keep time to the flapping of the wings of our almighty and inextinguishable eagle. May the blood of freedom course along that giant vein with the rush of Niagara, and sweep away before its mightiness the moulding cements of antiquated hallucination.

From the Governor of Connecticut.
The golden harp of civilization and progress needed one chord of iron to sustain her sterner harmonies, and it has been added by Cyrus W. Field. May it sound in glory and vigor until the end of time and five-and-twenty minutes later.

From the Governor of Missouri.
When the heart would speak in presence of a miracle, the words are feeble; but our souls rush out in song: and we sing to you, mothers, in the strain of our native and inimitable land:

London it is very big,
America is bigger;
Do not let us care a fig
Which cuts the better figure;
Send the current to and fro,
The bottle round the table,
Nothing in creation, no,
Lick the Atlantic Cable.

From the Governor of Alabama.
Hail Columbia happy land, Now fast linked to England's sand, Let us jine with heart and hand. Ocean is repealed, To her coral rocks and shelves, Lo the cable dives and delves, Let us drink our noble selves. Likewise Cyrus Field.

From the Governor of Ohio.
If England has given us no more toward our great American sea triumph, she has given us a thought in the name of her little vessel which waited upon our giant fleet. The Agamemnon's name is a corruption of Memnon, the ancient Hebrew warrior, whose statue, on the plains of Thessaly, sounded out one note when the morning sun shone upon it. So now when the sun of enlightenment dawns from America upon occidental darkness, the electric ray flashes from us to the Hibernian shore, may the inexpressive slaves of feudalism for the first time raise the music note of liberty.

From the Governor of Nebraska.
We salute you. Give old England rope enough and she will hang herself, but not in despair. No, the aged and effete island ties herself to the apron strings of vigorous Young America, and looks to her for support and succor. Shall England look in vain, my brothers?

From the Governor of New Hampshire.
Yankee Doodle used to ride
On a little pony,
Now he talks to 'other side
In twenty minutes on'y.

From the Governor of Delaware.
The b'hoys must have their amusements, and so we've tied England to a long string, and we'll fly her like an almighty great kite. When we're tired of the sport, and want to quirk it, we calculate we'll just wind her in, and hang her up on one of the monster trees of our unfathomable forests.— Guess we've utilized thearnation old caution at last, yes sir-ee.

From the Governor of Pennsylvania.
Friend Field, thee have, according to worthy evidence, done a part of thy task and it is well. When thee hast fastened both ends of thy string, and the fixings, and hast greatly and finally reduced the price of the messages, we may see cause for further communication with thee. Meantime, friend, we wish thee success, but decline to burn money in fireworks, melt it in strong liquors, or waste it in wasting time upon idle demonstrations.— A-men!

This is all the room Mr. Punch can this week spare to these remarkable productions and he will only add, that it does not appear to him, wonderful, that under such terrific pressure, and strain of compliment, the unfortunate cable, being of English make and unused to hyperbole, gave way and sent down shares from £915 to £250.

The Americans of Victoria asked permission to rear a pole, to which they would put the Star Spangled Banner. The request was instantly denied. "Well," said the crowd, "let's raise a pole and stick the flag of all nations to it." And so they did what they said they would do, and a "petticoat waved from the liberty pole."

BEAUTIFUL.—That is a beautiful superstition which prevails among the Seneca tribe of Indians. When an Indian maiden dies, they imprison a young bird until it first begins to try its power of song, and then, loading it with kisses and caresses, loose its bonds over her grave, in the belief that it will not fold its wings nor close its eyes until it has flown to the spirit land, and delivered its precious burden of affection to the loved and lost. It is not unfrequent to see twenty or thirty birds let loose over a single grave.

M Von Humboldt has celebrated his ninetyeth birthday. An English correspondent, writing from Berlin, says that "never did a conqueror receive congratulations from so many persons and such great distances as the post-boy had to carry on Tuesday morning to the well known house in the Oranienburgerstrasse. Those who had been fortunate enough to enjoy a peep at the fifth volume of Kosmos, which is still under his hands, assert that neither in style nor contents does it in the least yield to the four volumes which preceded it. Humboldt is himself said to be of opinion that he will die next spring, just after having completed the last of the tasks he has undertaken; but his friends who observe him speak differently, and are bold enough to predict that this time he will prove to be altogether in error, and that a very different celebration from that which he anticipates will next year take place in his house."

I'LL VOTE FOR THE OTHER MAN.
—The following story is told of a revolutionary soldier who was running for Congress: It appears he was opposed by a much younger man, who had never "been to the wars," and it was the wont of "Revolutionary" to tell the people of the hardships he endured. Says he: "Fellow-citizens, I have fought and bled for my country—I helped to whip the British and Indians. I have slept upon the field of battle with no other covering but the canopy of heaven. I have walked over frozen ground till every footstep was marked with blood."

Just about this time, one of the "sovereigns" who had become very much affected by this tale of woe, walks up in front of the speaker, wiping the tears from his eyes with the extremity of his coat tail, and interrupting him, says: "Did you say that you had fought the British and the Injines?"

"Yes," responded Revolutionary.
"Did you say that you had slept on the ground while serving your country, without any kiver?"

"Yes, sir, I did."
"Did you say you had followed the enemy of your country over frozen ground, till every footstep was marked with blood?"

"Yes," exultingly replied the speaker.
"Well, then," says the tearful "sovereign," as he gave a sigh of painful emotion, "I'll be d—d if I don't think you've done enough for your country, and I'll vote for the other man!"

A New Zealand chief maintained that he had a good title to his land, because he had eaten the former owner.

LOOKAL.—A writer in the Westminster Review once took the position that alcohol is food, and offered the following logic in proof of it:

"Food is force,
Alcohol is force,
Therefore, alcohol is food."

Dr. Mussey gives a formula equally legitimate and exclusive, namely:

"Horse-feed is force,
Whipping a horse is force.
Therefore, whipping a horse is horse-feed."

To which capital logic our John adds his:

"My ma is a woman,
Queen Victoria is a woman,
Therefore, Queen Victoria is my ma."

Our Jeems thus expresses his sentiments:

"The fools are not all dead,
The writer of the above is not dead,
Therefore, said writer is a fool."

A good deacon making an official visit to a dying neighbor, who was a very churlish, and universally unpopular man, put the usual question:

"Are you willing to go my friend?"
"Oh, yes," said the dying man, "I am."
"Well," said the simple minded deacon, "I am glad you are; for all the neighbors are willing!"

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS,

WINE, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea,	Coffee,	Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar,	Spice,	Smoking Tobacco,
Powder,	Shot,	Playing Cards,
Pepper,	Mace,	Cinnamon,
Nutmegs,	Capp,	&c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy,	Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do	Bourbon do
New York do	Rectified do
Gin;	Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard,	Mixed Pickles,
Durham do	Assorted do
Assorted Jams,	do Cherkins,
do Jellies,	Piccolilli,
do Syrups,	Pickled Onions,
do Cordials,	Tomato Catsup,
Brandy Peaches,	Walnut Catsup,
do Cherries,	Mushroom Catsup,
do Pears,	Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India Cellery Seed,
Preserves,	Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit,	Pepper Sauce,
Peach do	Assorted Sauce,
Apple do	do Nat. Preserves,
Plum do	Capers Capotties,
Raspberry do	Natural Pres'd Pines,
Gooseberry do	Roast Turkey,
Blackberry Brandy,	Roast Chicken,
Raspberry Brandy,	String Beans,
Fresh Lobster,	Green Peas,
Pickled do	do Corn,
Fresh Clams,	Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat,	do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat,	Natural Preserved
Fresh Cauliflower,	Peaches,
Pickled do	Nat'l Preserved Straw-
Worcestershire Sauce,	berries,
Stoughton Bitters,	Natural Preserved
Fresh Salmon,	Damsons,
Fresh Tomatoes,	Mushrooms,
French Pickles,	Asparagus,
Hostetter Bitters,	Tarragon Vinegar,
Boker's do	Fields' Oysters,
Le Drard's do	Cove do
Royal Windsor do	Pine Apple Cheese,
Maraschino,	Olive Oil,
Curacao,	Assorted Candies,
Abaynth,	Raisins,
Scotch Ale,	Almonds,
London Porter,	English Walnuts,
Scheidam Schnapps,	Brazil Nuts,
Golden Grape Cognac,	Figs,
Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy,	Prunes,
Mountain Dew Whis-Pecans,
ky,	Crackers,
Family Supplies,	Cracknells,
Morning Call,	E. D. Cheese,
Indian Queen Maderia,

also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps,
Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware,
Ladies Shoes, Notions,
Woolen Gloves, Hosiery,
do Mitts, Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs, do Mitts,
Stationery, &c., do Gauntlets,
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.
G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858. 61f

DEPUTY QUARTERMASTER

GENERAL'S OFFICE,

CAMP FLOYD, U. T., Dec. 8th, 1858.

SEALED PROPOSALS are invited

at this office until the 2nd day of January, 1859, for supplying the United States, at this place, and at Fort Bridger, with One Hundred and Fifty Thousand bushels of good wheat, barley or oats; in part, or the whole of either; to weigh 60, 35 and 48 pounds per bushel each, respectively; and to be delivered in August, September, and October next, in such quantities, in these months, as may be designated by the Deputy Quartermaster.

Payments will be made on completion of contracts, for which bonds and security will be required. Bidders will please state the price, per bushel, and endorse their bids "Proposals for Forage," and direct them to the undersigned at this place.
G. H. CROSMAN,
Deputy Quartermaster General.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD.

A Sorrel Horse, sixteen and a half hands high—Star in the forehead, n.p. on the nose, and H. on the left shoulder.
The above reward will be paid if returned to
G. H. CROSMAN,
DEPUTY QUARTERMASTER GENERAL.

HUMOROUS.

"Some people," said a red-nosed individual, haranguing three or four bystanders, "waste their money in chairity, others squander theirs in supporting wives and families—but, as for me, I save mine to buy spirits."

"Johnny," said a mother to a son, nine years of age, "go and wash your face; I am ashamed to see you come to dinner with so dirty a mouth." "I did wash it, mamma," and feeling his upper lip, he added, gravely, "I think it must be a mustache coming!"

"COULDN'T PRONOUNCE THE R."—Says a student to his chum: "There is a d— of a wit in Custom Hall." "A what?" asked his chum. "A whumpus." "What's a whumpus?" "Why, a wangle, to be sure." "What's a wangle?" "Why, a wow, to be sure, among the students."

"Sir," said a little blustering man to a religious opponent, "to what sect do you suppose I belong?" "Well, I don't exactly know," replied the other, "but to judge by your size and appearance, I should think you belonged to the class generally called the inn-sects."

They tell a story about a man, but West, who had a hair-lip, upon which he performed an operation himself, by inserting into the opening a piece of chicken flesh—it adhered, and filled up the space admirably. This was well enough, until in compliance with the prevailing fashion, he attempted to raise a mustache, when one side grew hair, and the other feathers.

It is objected that the possessive 'her's' is an error in the formation of the English language. Why not form the objective masculine in the same way, and call it 'him's'? Samuel's hymn book is certainly a book of Sam's.

MARRIED.—Mr. John Cake to Miss Martha Head:

Of marriage it is truly said,
It doth strange changes make;
For lo! what was a Matty Head,
Is now a Patty Cake!

A friend just from the famous Arostook Valley, in Northern Maine, tells that as a man was walking along in a thoughtful mood, a cucumber-vine gave chase to him; ran up his leg and into his pocket. The man in great terror, thrusting his hand into his pocket to eject the impudent intruder, drew forth a ripe cucumber.

What is the difference between a ship and a hen? The hen lays one egg and the ship lays to.

There is a man in this city whose memory is so short that it only reaches to his knees. Per consequence, he has not paid for the last pair of boots.

Bachelors are not entirely lost to the refinement of sentiment, for the following toast was given by one of them at a celebration:
"The Ladies—sweet briars in the garden of life."

An acquaintance of ours says that since he dismissed his handsome doctor and employed a plain one, his wife and daughters haven't got sick half so often as they did before.

A Noble Wife.—Mr. Walsh, in his Paris letter of August 23, to the New York Journal of Commerce, writes as follows:

In 1819, a benevolent gentleman, M. de Montyon, bequeathed an annual sum of ten thousand francs, as a premium at the disposal of the Academy, for the poor French individual who had in the year performed the act most virtuous or morally creditable. It was adjudged last week to a peasant, M. Durand, of the Department of Vaucluse, for the exemplary conduct. Her husband was accused of capital crime, and arraigned at the Assizes; he was acquitted with difficulty, and by a small majority of the jury. The wife sustained him devotedly throughout the trial, and insisted on his innocence; she resolved to find the real culprit or culprits; she persevered in the search for seven years; she discovered them and had them brought to justice. Their conviction fulfilled her purpose, which was to re-establish the character of her husband—the true amendment of an honest man. The good woman will be passing rich with ten thousand francs.

Mail failures are now in vogue.

A Female Foot-race in Iowa.

An Iowa City correspondent of the New York Evening Post, writing from that point during the State Fair, gives the following account of a female foot-race:

Among the local items, it is proper to include mention of a novel phase of woman's rights, which so far as I know, is an original feature of the platform. I refer to a female foot-race, which took place a week or two since upon the horse track of the new fair grounds. The attendant circumstances are these: A medical peripatetic, of the large poster and small handbill stripe, has given lectures here on popular physiology, &c., with great acceptance to both ladies and gentlemen—sometimes to both sexes, and anon to each separately (on the Dr. Wieting principle.) Among other themes introduced occurred that of Calisthenics—the discussion of which resulted in the formation of a class for the practical development of that science or art, whichever it may be. Gentlemen and boys forsook their counters and desks for the lecture-room and the "ring." Ladies, strongly hooped but loosely clad, swarmed to the Athenaeum to practice the "manly art" of shoulder-hitting chest-expanding. By degrees the plot thickened, until a foot-race was proposed, "for gentlemen only." The ladies liberally provided a silver cup as a prize to the "fastest young man," and the race duly came off to general satisfaction.

The following week a foot-race for ladies was announced, the other sex furnished the cake-basket which was to stimulate the females to proceed to extremities. The list of "ambling nymphs," who took part in this lady-like performance, was quite respectable in number and position; and bloomers, stocking-feet, and, shall I say it, snow-white under-garments were in full supply enough to meet the demands of the most exacting spectator. Ladies, hitherto most noted for modesty and delicacy, made assurance doubly sure as they trotted themselves out for the inspection of a crowd of men and boys, eager for "something to turn up." Bets were freely offered on the various favorites, and no horse-trot was ever more regularly ordered than the hen-trot to which I refer. The result, however, was unsatisfactory, for the best runner—as proved by frequent success and "timings"—unfortunately fell down, sprawling, in the last decisive contest, and her rival, a pretty as well as fast young lady, bore away the prize which had already seemed the property of another. Matters were compromised by making up a purse of twenty dollars or thereabouts, for the race whose good points an accident had prevented her from displaying to her own advantage, and a duplicate prize is to be given her by an appreciating crowd of spectators. I may add that the whole thing is embraced under the advertised appellation of "gymnastics," which, if I remember my "little Greek" aright, means exercise taken naked. As this is not quite true of the style of dress adopted by the class, it would seem to be a misnomer.

A CONSCIENTIOUS HORSE THIEF.—Sut Lovengood, the witty Tennessee writer, is responsible for the following good one:

Jim H— tells a good yarn about one of our "shell bark lawyers." His client was up on two small charges, frivolous charges, as shell-bark designated them, (forging a note of hand and stealing a horse.) On running his eye over the jury he didn't like their looks, so he prepared an affidavit for continuance, setting forth the absence of the principal witness, in Alabama. He read it in a whisper to the prisoner, who shaking his head said:

"Squire, I can't swar to that ar dock-yment."

"Why," asked old shell bark.

"Kase it haint true!" answered the prisoner.

Old Shell inflated and exploded loud enough to be heard throughout the entire room.

"What forge a note and steal a hoss and can't swar to a lie! D—n such a squermish stumpnick es that! I'm done with all such infernal fools."

And he left the conscientious one to his fate.

Drink deep or touch not the bottle for a little liquor is apt to throttle.

Grains of Gold.

SIMPLICITY IN WOMAN.—It is with books as with woman, where a certain plainness of manner and dress is more engaging than that glare of paint and airs and apparel which may dazzle the eye, but reaches not the affections.

THE TRUE GENTLEMAN.—He is courteous and affable to his neighbors. As the sword of the best tempered metal is most flexible, so the truly generous are most pliant and courteous in their behavior to their inferiors.

A FINE IMAGE OF VIRTUE.—Certainly virtue is like precious odors, most fragrant where they are incensed or crushed; for prosperity doth best discover vice, but adversity doth best discover virtue.

THE REPENTANCE OF ILL NATURE.—There is one moment in which all nature sincerely repents—the moment when it sees pity for its victim.

—So much of our time is preparation, so much is routine, and so much retrospect, that the pith of each man's genius contracts itself to a very few hours.

A man cannot possess anything that is better than a good woman, nor anything that is worse than a bad one.

—Usually speaking, the worst bred person in company is a young traveler just returned from abroad.

Old friends are the best. King James used to call for his old shoes—they were easiest to his feet.

The chameleon, who is said to feed upon nothing but air, has of all animals the nimblest tongue.

He submits himself to be seen through a microscope, who suffers himself to be caught in a fit of passion.

If some men died, and others did not, death would indeed be a mortifying evil.

If a man makes me keep my distance, the comfort is, he keeps his at the same time.

People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to copy after.

The more any one speaks of himself, the less he likes to hear another talk of.

An excuse is worse and more terrible than a lie; for an excuse is a lie guarded.

No man is so insignificant as to be sure his example can do no hurt.

Affection is a greater enemy to the face than the small pox.

Every good poet includes a critic; the reverse will not hold.

Curses like chickens come home to roost.

All is not gold that glitters, as the snow upon the mountain tops glitters as much as diamonds.

Thrilling Instance of Faith.

A clergyman in this city read a letter at one of the Samson-street noonday prayer-meetings this week from a young man of his acquaintance who was on board the ill-fated Austria, in which he detailed the last interview between himself and five Christian comrades, who perished beneath the waves. As soon as the destruction of the vessel was found inevitable, these six young men took a position between the flames and the water, with the understanding that at the last moment they would unitedly consign themselves to the latter: In the rare moment thus allowed to contemplate their fate, their hope in Christ was confidently expressed, and when to escape the spreading fire, their leap became necessary, they fondly grasped each other's hand, and with a parting "farewell," and an expressed confidence that in a few moments they would meet in Heaven," they sprang into the sea. The writer of the letter states that, after sustaining himself in the water by means of a life preserver for four hours, (during which time his contemplations of a future state ripened into a joy in believing in his Savior such as he had never before experienced,) a vessel hove in sight for his release, so that just at the moment when his exhausted energies brought the open door of Heaven more temptingly to view, he was made the subject of an earthly rescue. The reading of the letter referred to elicited an outburst of feeling all over the room.

Philadelphia Press.

SAD PICTURE OF THE CONDITION OF THE INDIANS IN AMADOR COUNTY.

A correspondent of the Jackson Sentinel draws the following sad picture of the condition of the Indians in Amador county:

It ruins, and through my window I look upon the squallid wretchedness and almost perfect destitution of the "Poor Indian." I know not what, if any provision has been made to render tolerable his present state. He lingers about the graves of his ancestors, but the game is gone from his hunting ground, and no helping hand seems to be extended for his relief. The steady tread of the white man is upon him, the trees from which he once gathered acorns for food have fallen, and the green pastures once spotted with game are not his now. Driven by destitution he seeks refuge in crime, and in sullen silence stands to witness the strange formality by which he is doomed to death. Necessity makes him barter the virtue of his companion as a commodity in the market, and the bitter contemplation burns in his bosom the stern reality of his fate.—He shows himself unsparing because he has been unspared. Indian Agents and Reservations are to him matters of in-lancholy interest; the rays of hope that once started at the mention of these terms, and enlivened his benighted soul with genial warmth, start no more. Is there not some asylum for the degraded and degrading Digger; some secure retreat; some isolated home, where he can be free from the blighting and withering curse upon him in Amador? The mortal atmosphere about him is deadlier than death, and still no interest is felt to put away the pest. Missionaries go abroad, while at home no effort is made to dispel the dark mental gloom of the red man in our midst, the Indian Agents scarcely notice the objects of their care.

EDMUND BURKE'S IDEA OF A PERFECT WIFE.—She is handsome, but it is not a beauty arising from the features, from complexion, or shape. She has all three in a high degree, but it is not by these that she touches the heart—it is all that sweetness of temper, benevolence, innocence, and sensibility which a face can express, that forms her beauty. She has a face that just arouses your attention at first sight; it grows upon you every moment, and you wonder it did not more than raise attention at first.—Her eyes have a mild light, but they awe when she pleases, they command, like a good man out of office, not by authority, but by virtue. Her stature is not tall, she is not made to be the admiration of every one, but the happiness of one. She has the firmness that does not exclude delicacy—all of the softness that does not imply weakness. Her voice is soft, low music, nor formed to rule in public assemblies, but to charm those who can distinguish a company from a crowd; it has its advantage you must come close to hear it. To describe her body, describe her mind—one is the transcript of the other. Her understanding is not shown in the variety of matter it exerts upon, but the goodness of the choice she makes. Her politeness flows rather from a natural disposition to oblige, than any rules on that subject, and therefore never fails to strike those who understand good breeding and those who do not.

All the Difference.

The late Bates Turner, of Vermont, was a witty man as he was a learned jurist. On one occasion a young and zealous lawyer, not over punctilious in his allusions to the Court, nor very formal in his manner, was arguing a question before the Judge, and, in the course of his argument, by way of illustration, wishing to "suppose a case." "We will suppose, your Honor," said he, "that your Honor was to steal a horse." "No, no, no," interrupted the Judge, "not at all; not at all; taint of supposable case." "Very well begging your Honor's pardon," proceeded the eager lawyer, with more zeal than prudence, "very well, then supposing that I should steal a horse." "Ah, yes, yes, yes," said the Judge, "that is a different thing; very likely Mr. S., very likely. Proceed Mr. S., Mr. S., proceeded to take a seat, amid the shouts of his brethren, and had the good sense to take the joke in good part, and repeat it often to his friends.

"I can't see how you can sit and eat while your wife is so sick." "Why, my dear fellow, it is not that I love my wife less, but that I love pancakes more."

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1859.

The undersigned would most respectfully inform citizens of Utah that they are still doing business their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same uniform rates. It may be an object for those families by-living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KIRKHEAD, & CO.

In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends, without delay, concerning our train so long expected.

L. K. & CO.

FOR SALE.

ONE Light Two Horse iron axle tree Reap-harrow Wagon and Harness—also to be seen at the store of Radford, Cabot & Co. 4-11

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

Office—Cannell House st., opposite Miller & Russell's store. 2-11

BILLIARDS.

THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon, J. M. WALLACE, (up stairs) between the Post Office, and Gillett and Gerrish's Store, is now open for visitors.

The tables are new and perfect, and no pains will be spared to make it an agreeable resort for gentlemen, in the exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation. 2-11

EMPIRE SALOON.

THE BAR is now furnished with a large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., purchased with great care, and to which the attention of the discerning WHOLESALE and RETAILERS is respectfully called. 9-11 JOHN M. WALLACE.

DESERT READING ROOMS, EAST TEMPLE STREET, REESE'S BUILDING, IS NOW OPEN.

WE solicit NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES, and other PERIODICALS, from all parts of the United States, on receipt of which subscription will be returned. Books for reference, &c., as donations, will be thankfully received. From those in this vicinity, who receive foreign papers, we shall be glad to obtain them on loan or otherwise. WILLIAM EDINGTON, H. W. SAUBERT, 2-11 Eastern, European and California papers please call.

WANTED:

A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH.

LOOK HERE.

A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI WOMAN" has been borrowed from the office of J. H. Barnett, Secretary of State. It is respectfully requested a person having it to return it without delay.

LAW OFFICE.

W. J. MCCORMICK, T. B. WILLIAMS, MCCORMICK & WILLIAMS, ATTORNEYS AT LAW.

Practise in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Court, and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.

OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store. G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1859.

MISSOURI Republican and N. Y. Herald will please publish 3 months the daily, and send bill to this office.

RADFORD, CABOT & CO., WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC., &c.

At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake, U. T. 1-16m

NEW GOODS. JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market. GILBERT & GERRISH.

WAGONS. A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH.

YOKE OF Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH.

100 Yoke of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH.

RELLER, RUSSELL & CO., Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, HARDWARE, WINE, LIQUORS AND CIGARS, and outlying goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figures, for Cash or Country Produce. 1-11

HOT SPRING BREWERY. WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Salt Liquors of the above establishment to quantities in full pursuance of S. X. X. ALLE, PORTER, and our bottled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd, or at our BEER FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS. We have opened a Beer Saloon at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive staff is ready to take care of animals. OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single male, 91 00
Superior breakfast and lodging, 2 00
For animals, for a single feed of hay, or bread, 1 00
Hay and grain, 1 00
And double those prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for HAY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery. MCGO, HERR & CO.

Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

COW STRAYED. ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and thick rope-like tail, was strayed. Atwood on the horns, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis B. Bolton, 121st ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded. 1-11

THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1858.

NUMBER 7.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:
Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Ellen Bayne.

Soft be thy slumbers!
Rude cares, depart!
Visions, in numbers,
Cheer thy young heart!
Dream on, while bright hours
And fond hopes remain;
Blooming, like smiling bowers,
For thee, Ellen Bayne!

Chorus—Gentle slumbers o'er the gliding Dreams of beauty round thee bide,
While I linger by thy side,
Sweet Ellen Bayne!

Dream not in anguish,
Dream not in fear,
Love shall not languish, Fond ones are near.
Sleeping or waking,
In pleasure or pain,
Warm hearts will beat for thee,
Sweet Ellen Bayne!

Scenes that have vanished,
Smile on thee now—
Pleasures, once banished, Play round thy brow—
Forms long departed,
Greet thee again,
Soothing thy dreaming heart,
Sweet Ellen Bayne!

The Last Victim of the Gauntlet.

An imperial rescript, bearing the date of the 20th of August, 1854, and the signature of the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, has abolished for evermore within the realms of the whole Austrian empire that terrible chastisement—running the gauntlet. Terrible it was, indeed—a cruel and barbarous remnant of those dark and dismal times called the middle ages. I witnessed the last execution of this kind, and record it for the benefit of those who still cling to a strange fondness even to the worst legacies of by-gone centuries.

On an autumn morning, in the year 1851, the garrison of the fortress of Theresienstadt, on the Eger river, in Bohemia, was formed in a large square on the spacious place before the residence of the commandant. In the middle of the square, drawn up in file, stood a company of a rifle battalion, to which the delinquent belonged. It was unarmed, each private (there were three hundred) being provided with a switch, and placed at a small distance from his next man. At the 10th stroke of the clock the drums were beaten, and amid a silence deep and oppressive the prisoner was marched into the square.

He was as fine-looking a man as ever I have set eyes upon—tall, powerful, and well formed. His handsome features, to which a black moustache gave a bold and martial expression, shone forth in the full glow and vigor of manhood, only they were of a deadly paleness.

He was a non-commissioned officer, and during the last campaign in Italy, in 1849, he had distinguished himself in such a manner that his superior officers had recommended him for promotion. Austria is more generous than England towards those that shed their blood in her service, and he would have been made a commissioned officer long since—in spite of his humble origin and his poverty—if it had not been for a fatal impediment. This impediment was his own passionate temper; he was a choleric man; harsh and brutal towards his inferiors, morose and stubborn towards his superiors whenever they deemed it necessary to check or rebuke him. He was hated by the men to the utmost. There was not a private in the whole battalion that had not vowed him revenge. He had never made one friend, nor did he care to have one. Strict in the performance of his military service—the most minor duties of which he discharged with the utmost exactness—he went his own way, proud, reserved, solitary. Innumerable were the punishments which he had brought upon the men; for, however slight the offence might be, he was sure not to pass it over in silence.

His superior officers respected him for his usefulness, his ability, and his exactitude, but they did not like him. The evident lack of humanity in the man made him an object of doubt rather than of love. Moreover, there was a vague rumor about his having struck once at his own officer in the midst of a pell-mell caused by a hand-to-hand encounter with the enemy. The report never took a clear shape, the officer having been killed in the engagement, and the gossipings of a few wounded soldiers having been much too incoherent and contradictory to lead to a formal investigation of the matter; besides, it was at the victory of Novarra. He had greatly distinguished himself, and old Field Marshal Radezky had, with his own hands, affixed the golden medal on his breast. The rumor, however, together with the knowledge of his harsh and violent temper, caused his name to be erased from the list of those that were recommended for higher promotion.

When this incident was made known to him, he became even more sullen, more rigid, more cruel than ever; but always, as it was well understood, for the benefit of the service, the slightest demands of which he performed with the same immutable strictness as he enforced them to be done by others.

A few weeks previous to the dreadful punishment which he had now to undergo he was mounting guard in the outworks with some twenty or twenty-five men of his own company. It was a chilly, rainy night, and when the sentries were relieved they were glad to stretch themselves—wet as they were—upon the floor near the large stove in the middle of the guard-room. The floor not being very clean, (floors seldom are in these localities,) and the white uniforms of the men being wet, it was no wonder that the dirt adhered to them with a tenacity that defied all exertions to get it off; when the wearers were roused by this sergeant to prepare for standing guard once more. The more they tried to rub their clothes clean the more sturdily he lent a helping hand to their endeavors by an application of the sad equipment of every Austrian non-commissioned officer—the stick. Whilst he was fully at work, cutting away at the men with a powerful arm, the door opened, and the officer on duty entered the guard-room.

"Attention!" commanded the sergeant, and saluting his superior, made the usual report that nothing worth remarking had happened. The officer, a young ensign, fresh from the military school, and almost a boy, took no notice whatever of this important news, but asked the sergeant in a brisk and somewhat impetuous manner, "What he was again striking the men for?" The sergeant, already much annoyed at this interference, gave a surly and unwilling answer, and when the young officer rebuked him, in a severe and perhaps somewhat haughty manner, the violent and passionate man, losing all self-control, lifted up his hand against his officer.

It was but one fatal moment, quick as lightning. The uplifted hand never descended; it was caught by a dozen powerful arms. He was felled to the ground and disarmed. Half an hour afterwards he found himself in irons in the casemates.

Lifting the arm against a superior is considered a capital crime. In this case it had been committed whilst both parties were on duty, and the Austrian military laws are the very last in the world to be trifled with. The following day he was tried by court-martial, and sentenced to be shot. When the sentence was forwarded to the competent authority for ratification, it happened to be the superior's anniversary day; capital punishment was commuted, the criminal had to run the gauntlet.

A cruel act of grace was this commutation! When the first sentence had been read over to him, he had remained cold and impassible; not a muscle of his proud face stirred. He did not fear death; he had looked it in the face many a time without flinching, and to die in the open air, pierced by a dozen balls—a soldier's death—what should he care much for that? But when he was informed that he had to run the gauntlet twice through his company, after having been previously degraded, he trembled for the first time in his life. He knew of many a soldier who had run the gauntlet through a whole battalion, and not been the worse for it after all; he knew of some that had even married afterwards, and had brought up families of children; he was fully aware that the issue of this terrible torture depended entirely upon the dispositions of the men. Dreadful reflection! Above all he thought of the shame, the dishonor—and his proud heart was well nigh giving way.

On the evening previous to the punishment, the second rifle battalion of Khernhuller infantry would have been unfit for service; the men were drunk. They had got up a carousal in joy and honor of the coming day. But in the morning they were sober enough. The drums ceased to beat as soon as the prisoner had arrived in the middle of the square; his escort fell back. He stood alone near the right wing of the company. There was a dead silence; not a respiration was to be heard from all the thousands gathered on the spot. The commanding officer, read the sentence over to him for the second time. This done, he exhorted the men, according to custom, to dispense with all feelings of compassion, and to do their duty conformably to the law. The Colonel went through this part of the formality in a quick and hurried manner, as if he were unwilling to perform it. So he was; he knew but too well that, in this instance, there was no need whatever for exhortation. These preliminaries being over, the prisoner was delivered into the hands of the provost.

When the latter tore off from his uniform the golden lace and galloons—the marks of military rank—throwing them together with the golden medal, at his feet, the face of the unfortunate man became purple, and his dark eyes flashed fire. When he was stripped of his coat and shirt, and placed at the entry of the terrible street through which he had to pass, he became pale again. Two soldiers went ahead of him; they marched backward, with their bayonets presented to his breast, so as to force him to keep measure to a drum which brought up the rear. The drum was muffled; its slow and dismal beats sounded like the music of a funeral procession.

When he received the first stroke his features assumed an expression of pain, and his firm-set lips quivered slightly.

This was, however, the only sign of sensation. Crossing his arms over his breast and pressing his teeth close together, his proud face remained henceforth immovable. His merciless enemies enjoyed but an incomplete triumph after all; they might slash his body in pieces, but his proud and indomitable spirit they could not break. The blows descended with a fearful violence upon him. After the first dozen blood came; but never did he utter one single exclamation of pain; never—not even with a look—did he implore for mercy. An expression of scorn and disdain was deeply set on his face, as pale as death. When he had reached at last the left wing of the company, his lacerated back presented a frightful appearance. Even his most exasperated enemies might well have been satisfied now; if it had but been possible, the commanding officer himself would have interfered in his behalf; but this was not even to be thought of; the law must have its course. They faced him right about; he had to make the same way back again. There was one formality connected with his punishment which was a cruel, barbarous and shameful mockery; the delinquent had to thank his executioners for his tortures.

When the victim had arrived at the file leader of the right wing of his company, and the dread execution was over at last, he threw one last, long look, full of contempt, at his tormentors. Then he was seen staggering like a drunken man towards the commanding officer. His eyes, swollen with blood, beamed with an unnatural brightness, his respiration was short and painful; touching his head with his right hand, in token of the military salute, he said in a voice that came out of his throat with a rattling sound, but that was nevertheless distinctly audible all over the place: "I have to thank your honor for this exquisite punishment," and fell down dead.

CANNON NOT DISABLED BY SPIKING.
The silencing of a battery by spiking the guns is a stroke of daring frequently performed in military operations. The operation is performed by driving a rat-tail file into the touch-hole and then breaking it short off. In some instances a common nail is used. In either case the gun is disabled for the time, as the touch-hole can only be cleaned by drilling out the spike, and this, when it consists of a file, is generally a very difficult matter. But an invention has recently been produced which promises to render a cannon as useful without a touch-hole, as with it. The inventors are Messrs. Gomez & Mills, by whom it was tried at the New York Arsenal, some weeks ago. It is in reality a safety fuse, one end of which penetrates the cartridge and extends through the entire chamber of the cannon to the muzzle, where the gunner can discharge the cannon as readily as at the touch-hole. The fuse is a chemical compound, enveloped in a flat paper case, which is wrapped with cotton, and afterward dipped in resin to prevent its becoming damp. When used for submarine purposes, it is protected by a jacket of gutta percha. The fire passes through it at the rate of a mile in four seconds, thus enabling one man to discharge a broadside of any number of guns at the same moment. For ordinary mining purposes, it is equally useful, and from its composition will be less likely to flash without explosion, as is very often the case with ordinary gunpowder blasting. It has also been tried at Washington, in the presence of the Secretary of War and various officers of the army and navy, where its success is said to have been very decided.

A Cat an Heiress.

One of the most exquisite of musicians, in her time, was Mlle Dupuy, of the French opera. Her playing upon the harp was the wonder and astonishment of Paris. She was convinced, however, that she owed her artistic excellence to her favorite cat. And of this strange intimacy between a charming woman and her quadruped favorite, Moncrif, her biographer, gives the following interesting particulars:

Of course the lovely musician's practising at home were assiduous and constant. But as soon as she sat down and began to prelude upon the instrument, she noticed that her cat assumed an attitude of intense attention. At the point of the instrument's arriving at any passage of peculiar beauty, the excited grimalkin went into a feline ecstasy; and so well measured was this sensibility, according to the excellence of the playing and the pathos of the composition, that Mlle Dupuy was able to judge of the quality of the music by the manifest emotions of her cat! She became a devout Pusseyite, in fact, believing that the nervous creature was an exact prophet, foretelling precisely how music would affect an audience. And she was grateful accordingly to the friend to whom she thought she owed mainly her artistic success.

In her last illness, at the approach of death, Mlle Dupuy sent for the notary to make her will. She had accumulated a fortune by her profession, and the first clause of her testament was the giving of her town house and her country house to her cat! She added to this annuity sufficient for the comfortable support of the four-legged musician during its natural life; and to make sure of this, her last will and testament, should be respected, she gave several legacies to friends, on the express condition that they should see to the fulfillment of her wishes. It was also a condition that they should severally take turns during the week in going to see and keep company with the orphan puss.

Moncrif adds that the relatives of Mlle Dupuy disputed the validity of the will, and a lawsuit was the consequence—Grimalkin vs. Dupuy. But the cat gained the cause, and lived out her days with genteel alternation between her elegant town house and her charming country house. The particulars of the final cat-astrophe are not given.

NEWSPAPERS.—A man says Doctor Franklin, eats up a pound of sugar, and the pleasure he has enjoyed is ended, but the information he gets from the newspaper is treasured up in the mind to be used whenever occasion or inclination calls for it. A newspaper is not wisdom of a man or two men; it is the wisdom of the age—of past ages, too. A family without a newspaper is always half an age behind the times in general information, besides, they never think much, nor find much to think about. And there are the little ones growing up in ignorance without a taste for reading. Besides all these evils, there's the wife, who when her work is done, has to sit down with her hands in her lap, and nothing to amuse her mind from the toils and cares of the domestic circle. Who would be without a newspaper?

How little is known of what is in the bosom of those around us! We might explain many a coldness and reserve could we look into the heart concealed from us; we should often pity where we hate, love when we curl the lip with scorn and indignation. To judge without reserve of any human action is a culpable temerity, of all our sins the most unfeeling and frequent.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, DECEMBER 17, 1858.

Our subscribers will please call at the publication office for their papers. The location is convenient and a list prepared there.

Mormonism Revived--A New Edition.

We present in this issue a lot of choice extracts, taken from the Standard works of the Latter-day Saints. As they have been published heretofore, we violate no legal privileges of "Copyright," and promise to take no steps to secure it for ourselves.

Our design is to reflect back the peculiarities of Mormonism, as taught from its recognized Patriarchs, Prophets and Counselors. In the language of the immortal Yellowplush, let it "circulate" and we will add, there are a few more left.

[Deseret News Aug. 30, 1857.]

Heber C. Kimball, in his remarks said: "If this people should consent to dispose of Brother Brigham Young as our Governor, they are just as sure to go to Hell as they live, and I know it; for God would forsake them and leave them to themselves, and they would be in worse bondage than the children of Israel ever were."

"Supposing this thing all blows over, and they don't come up here; but they begin to flatter us and be friendly, what will be the result? They may flatter as long as the earth stands, but I never will be subject to one of their damned pusillanimous curses; they may court and flatter us as much as they please, but I never will be subject to them again, no never, do you hear it, (voices yes) do you think we will submit to them, no never, they have cut the thread themselves."

"You are the people who have the privilege to acknowledge Brother Brigham as our Governor, and continue him in office; and you also have the privilege, through your agency, to reject him, if you please, but it will be to your condemnation if you do, because he has got the Keys of the Kingdom, and the very moment you object to him, you cut yourselves off from the right of the Priesthood."

The reason that I talk as I do is because I don't hold any office in the United States, but this people, sometime ago, appointed me Chief Justice of the State of Deseret, and Brother John Taylor and Bishop N. K. Whitney as my associates; you also appointed me Lieutenant Governor, I always told you I was going to be Lieutenant Governor. This is a stump speech.

"You may take this as some of Heber's wild visions, if you please, I have acknowledged myself as one of the people, and now I say we will take our own name, and we will not be false-named any more. We are the Kingdom of God, we are the State of Deseret, and we will have you Brother Brigham as our Governor just as long as you live, we will not have any other Governor."

"We are the people of Deseret, and it is for us to say whether we will have Brother Brigham for our Governor, or those poor miserable devils they are reported to be trying to bring here, you must know they are miserable devils to have to come here under arms, but they shall not rule over us nor come into this Territory. What do you say about it; are you willing as a people, that they should come in here; you that say they shall not, raise your right hands (all hands raised.) Mr. Gentiles, won't you tell of this to your co-workers for the devils kingdom."

Mails.

The Eastern mails due here last Sunday week, arrived on Tuesday, having encountered terrific snow storms. The California mail is also behind time, the last one having got "switched off" the right track, and the men taking the old road from which the stock had been withdrawn and placed on the new route. The consequence was they were left without animals in the Goose Creek range, and without food. Several mules were frozen to death, and all the men badly frost-bitten. They were compelled to kill a mule upon which they subsisted for several days.

Neither the Eastern or Western mails due here on last Sunday and Monday have arrived, and there is no telling when they will be in. We live in hopes, however, that, like a "thief in the night," they will come on us unawares.

CALIFORNIA MAIL.—Just as we are going to press the California Mail due Monday arrived. We understand that they encountered very severe weather.

Major Chorporing was about 300 miles from this city and his provender is reported to consist of the hind leg of a dog and a few biscuits.

Mr. Osborn, member of the Legislature from Green river county, came in with the mail.

The U. S. District Court meets again to-day. A petition has been presented to Judge Sinclair, signed by members of the bar, and others for the Court to adjourn over and take a recess during the session of the Legislature.

Sunlight.

We have very little honest day light in this Valley, the sun don't peep over the Eastern range of hills in the morning, until our more distant neighbors have enjoyed his benign influence several hours, and then when he does come, he merely shines as if to show us that he was really the "centre of the solar system," and early in the afternoon goes down behind the western mountains.

Considering the absence of gas and the high price of candles, this is a serious drawback. If some modern Joshua could only interfere, and arrest his progress for a few hours, when he was beaming flat down in the Jordan, he would confer a favor upon those who would like to have a little more daylight, and save an expense to house keepers. Could not the Prophet, Br. Brigham, try his hand? The sun, however, has not always been so obedient as Ovid has illustrated, in the case of Young Phaeton who on a memorable occasion borrowed the solar coursers, and the steeds ran off with him. We do not know whether to attribute it to this adventure of the wild Jahu or not; but Philosophers now tell us that, that old "Sol," is permanently pinned in the firmament, or as we would say out here Cached. But as this appears to be an age of wonders, and this Territory, the peculiar land of inspiration, we should like to see the Prophet, as an experiment, put down the brakes on the earth's axis—if creation did not stop we would at all events be no worse off.

Sleigh Riding.

The past week has been one of unusual festivity in addition to the assembly soirees, the merry jingle of sleigh bells tinkled cheerily in the frosty air, reviving many recollections of home and loved ones far away. We availed ourselves of the opportunity of the season to construct a Rocky Mountain Cutter, which we accomplished by the aid of four ox yokes and an old crate, the whole turn out being completed and ready for action in just two hours, twenty-three minutes and ten seconds.

As the boys about the stores had monopolized all the fancy bells we were compelled to fall back upon the old fashioned cow-tin-gler, whose deep, melodious notes, if not indicative of sleigh riding was at least suggestive that a herd was either moving through town or going out to pasture.

Fancy cutters, with a large profusion of vermilion, indigo blue and other colors may do for the gay, but for good honest service, through deep ditches, commend us to ox yokes—it's not stylish but eminently practicable.

We have always pitied that "powder horn" institution, the ox, whose destination seems to have been to wear the yoke as a badge of his servitude, and bear his nostrils to the ground, and it affords a fine opportunity for some philanthropic Howard to assume the merciful care of the bulls and suggest something to ameliorate their condition. We have made one break towards it by taking the yoke from the neck of the ox, putting it upon the ground and making mules (we hate mules) pull it—let others follow our example and the time may not be far distant when this Valley, so rich in the blessings of heaven and the comforts of "civilization" (in a horn) will set an example that will make the blush of shame mantle upon the cheek of the bull-whacker—when the ox yokes shall be turned into sleds—and then and not till then will the ox be vindicated: "He's old, he is cold, he's lazy, dull and slow, He eats all my hay and he breaks all my straw, But now he's not fit in my cart for to draw So hang him up, and skin him, to the dogs let him go, Poor old ox let him die."—[Old Song.]

Thus ends our peroration, and our sleigh ride ended by upsetting in front of Brigham Young's residence, where we were graciously deposited in a hospitable gully and from which we were generously rescued by Gen. James Ferguson, who came to our relief and who has our thanks.

The Amphitheatre.

During the week we have visited this institution several times and have been highly pleased with the performances. We have not space to notice the various performers as they deserve, but we cannot pass in silence the efforts of Messrs. Bartholomew & Quigley. The double trapez act as performed by these gentlemen, we have never seen surpassed. The rope ascension by Mr. Quigley and pupil is a feat that astonishes and pleases every auditor. The hurdle race as rode by George Bartholomew stands upon a parallel with that of any other performer; while his wanderings among the Indians of the Wasatch range has given him a great advantage in the representing of the "wild man of the prairie." The performances of Young America is so diversified and astonishing that we have determined to "let him slide" until next week. We are glad to see that this "institution" is well patronized.

We publish in another column two communications in relation to the sudden and mysterious disappearance of a deaf and dumb boy, and which has been kept so quiet. Yesterday (Wednesday) Messrs. Brookie and Gilbert, U. S. Deputy Marshals arrested a man by the name of N. L. Christianson, who is, or has been a policeman, and who is charged with the crime. The party charged was brought before Judge Sinclair who officiated as a committing Magistrate and several witnesses were examined when the case was adjourned over.

The fact of the boy's having been killed was clearly proven and we believe is not now denied, and it was intimated that it was done in self defence. This however remains to be proven, especially when we take into consideration the very secret and mysterious silence that prevailed in the Councils of this city and which was absolutely forced out by Judge Cradlebaugh who made the affidavit and started the proceedings in connection with an editorial enquiring in the last number of the Valley Tan. Why did not the Church Organ say something about it? Was it not an item worth publishing? Is not the life of a boy even though he be poor and deaf and dumb worth anything? The testimony discloses the fact that he was not only shot but his throat cut. How was it done? and for what cause? Is certainly a proper subject of judicial investigation in a country where the laws and Constitution of the United States are supposed at all events to be recognized and respected even though a Danite Code or "higher law" may be practised.

FROZEN.—On the night of the 2d December, William Redman, on his way from the West Mountains in this Valley to W. A. Hickman's, was frozen to death. He was a resident of Platte county Mo., and a brother of Professor Redman of Weston Mo., and cousin of Hickman's wife. Two others in company received serious injury.

The Grand Jury has adjourned until Monday next.

The Teuantepec route has put passengers through from New Orleans to San Francisco in fourteen days—tolerable fast-ger-long.

Political.

Our dates from St. Louis are up to the 9th of November, and from them we learn there can be no doubt but that Judge Douglas has triumphed in Illinois. It is estimated that he will have a majority of nine in joint ballot and will consequently be returned to the United States Senate by the legislature which meets this winter.

Morgan, Black Republican, has been elected Governor of New York. The indications are very favorable for the Democrats to have a small majority in the next Congress.

NEW YORK.—The returns from 25 counties in this State show a Republican gain of 25,000 over the vote of 1856. The Albany Journal estimates Morgan's (Rep.) majority over Paker (Dem.) at 20,000. The Atlas and Argus (Democratic paper) concedes the same. Williamson, the Opposition candidate for Congress in the Third District, claims his election over Sickles by 23 majority, though another despatch informs us that Sickles is elected by 136 majority. In the Buffalo District, Spaulding (American) is elected over Hatch, and the entire Union ticket is elected also. There is reason to believe that 29 out of the 33 members of Congress chosen are Opposition, leaving only the beggarly number of 4 to the Democrats.

MASSACHUSETTS.—The Republicans have carried this State, though, it would appear, by a reduced majority. The returns from 110 towns show a plurality of 14,000 for Banks (Rep.) for Governor. The entire Republican Congressional Delegation is elected, though the majorities of some of the candidates are dangerously small. The legislature is largely Republican, of course.

NEW JERSEY.—In this State, Pennyton, (Opp.) is elected to Congress in the Fifth District. In the Second District, Stratton, (Opp.) is thought to be elected.

The returns are scant, but are favorable to the Opposition tickets.

WISCONSIN.—In the Milwaukee District, Brown, (Dem.) is elected to Congress by 3,000 majority. Returns from the remainder of the State favor the election of Washburne, (Rep.) in the Second, and Billingshurst, (Dem.) in the Third District.

MICHIGAN.—Fifteen counties heard from give a majority of 6,300 for the Republican State ticket. The returns show considerable Democratic gain.

DELAWARE.—The Democrats have elected their State ticket, and have a majority in the Legislature.

Cold Weather and the Mails.

We present below some letters which we have received from the road and from the last mail party that went out. It will be seen that their sufferings have been very severe and the storms in the neighborhood of the South Pass and the Sweetwater are pronounced by old mountaineers the most terrible ever experienced in that vicinity. Should this continue we must make up our minds that we are cut off from the United States and the "balance of mankind" and with true facial philosophy "grin and bear it" although there are many who will grit their teeth.

SOUTH PASS CITY, N. T. Dec. 5, '58.

ED. VALLEY TAN: I send you a few freezing items from this place, thinking they might be of interest to some of your housed up readers. This place is considered by all travelers to be the coldest place on the road from the "States" to G. S. L. City, and if the last ten days can be taken as proof I am of the same opinion.

It has been storming almost incessantly since the 20th of November, but the storms of December 1st, 2d and 3d are said, by old mountaineers to be the severest known in these parts for the last ten years. On the 2d the thermometer stood at sunrise 16 degs. below zero; at 2 o'clock p. m. 12 degs. below; 9 p. m. 16 below. A violent wind and storm coming from the north-east. On the 3d at 8 a. m. 18 degs. below zero; 9 p. m. 16 below; storm coming from the west; drifting snow filling the air so completely that a person could hardly go twenty yards from the house without getting lost.

Both the up and down mails due here on the 1st came in on the 4th, and are still here unable to proceed. The down mail left Sandy Station on the 1st, in charge of Mr. Routh and Alex. Montrey and Mr. G. and Mr. B. passengers; came as far as Pacific Creek and were obliged to turn back, to save themselves from certain death. Both the mail boys froze very badly; Mr. Routh, both hands and feet, will probably lose one hand. Little Alex. Montrey, the general favorite with every one on this end of the route, is dreadfully frozen; his whole face, which is quite fleshy, is frozen to the bone; his hands and feet slightly. The passengers say he will not get over it.

The mail left on the 3d for a second trial, in charge of Mr. Wm. Ashton, the agent, and the passengers, and got lost about 7 p. m., in the storm, about five miles from this place; they accidentally came to Sweetwater and camped, not knowing where they were, and Mr. Ashton freezing. Lived through the night, and came into our camp about 8 o'clock, a. m., on foot, having left the mail and their mules at their camping ground. Mr. Ashton was almost helpless, having frozen one hand and foot badly, the others slightly. He was in the greatest agony all day and night of the 4th. To-day he is easier. We are doing everything to save his fingers, but with little hope. The passengers not frozen, except Mr. B., whose face is slightly frozen.

About 2 o'clock, p. m., Messrs. Brooks and Bevins, conductors of the up mail, and Mr. Jarvis, Indian Agent, and one mule, the last of ten they started with from the "Devil's Gate," all the rest having died or been lost in the storm on "Rocky Ridge." They had camped for four days in a little bunch of willows, with nothing to eat, except two rabbits; it being impossible to travel either way till Saturday morning. When the storm subsided a little, they started with the last live mule for this station; leaving the mail and baggage in camp. As soon as this fact became known, Sol. Gee, Mr. Gilbert, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Hurd took a wagon and went for it; they returned this morning, having been out all night. Mr. Jarvis not frozen, but badly chilled. Mr. Brooks froze feet, fingers, face and ears. Mr. Bevins both feet, one badly.

Every attention possible is being paid to the sufferers at this place. Mr. Guthrie and Mr. Jarvis sat up with Mr. Ashton last night, refusing to lie down. Mr. Gilbert, trader at this place has opened his house freely to the unfortunate, and is rendering all the assistance possible. Mr. Ayers, Dr. Shaw and Dan Hardin: all more or less frozen, with the mail above Green River. Mr. Meade, Government Agent, is here with feet, hands, face and ears slightly frozen, in coming from Green River.

One of Russell, Majors & Waddell's outfits to the States was caught in the storm on Rocky Ridge, a short distance from the mail boy's camp, but neither party knew they were so near together. The outfit was in charge of Mr. Rennick and Capt. Foster. They have lost eight or ten men in the storm probably frozen and buried in the snow. The remainder of the party were hunting for them yesterday; I have not since heard from them.

Both mails will leave as soon as the storm is over. The down mail in charge of Sol. Gee; the up mail in charge of Charlie Miller and Wm. Clark. Mr. Guthrie will return to the city unless the weather changes. Mr. Jarvis will lay over here with Mr. Ashton till next week.

HAM'S FORK, Dec. 8.

We arrived here at 2 o'clock, p. m., Mr. Clark having frozen all his fingers slightly. The frozen at Sandy all doing well. We met Mr. Major's outfit at Sandy Station, moving along slowly. At Green River some of Mr. Haskell's, frozen pretty badly, on their way to the States. Met down mail his side of Green River, this morning. Snow very deep all the way to Laramie. From Deer Creek to Little Sandy, the snow is drifted badly, from one to twenty feet.

A scoundrel by the name of Jones, alias "Scoty," the same that killed the man that shot the policeman, in G. S. L. City, has been doing a few tricks here lately, and as no one here has spunk enough to show him up, I will take him in hand. He broke open a trunk, the property of Mr. Miller, of South Pass, that was at this place, and took from it some few miniatures and other things that could be of no use to him. He also stole a horse, saddle and bridle; also a coat containing an order on Majors, Russell & Co., for thirty-six dollars, from this station; and left for parts unknown, since which he has not been heard from. If this should meet his eye he will find the writer at South Pass City. M.

We have been permitted to peruse the following letters to Peter K. Dotson, Esq. December 5th, 1858.

DEAR SIR:—I arrived at Devil's Gate up to time. I find it impossible to put a station on the sixth crossing of Sweetwater; the snow was about three feet deep, and now there is no bottom. I left Devil's Gate on Monday morning with ten mules; I arrived at the station on Sweetwater with one mule, the balance having frozen to death. My hands, feet and ears are very badly frozen; I think I shall lose one of my ears, and the man that came with me has frozen his feet so that he will lose some of his toes. Mr. Guthrie will give you a description of the Mail down.

Your Obedient Servant.

W. J. BROOKS.

MR. DOTSON:

SIR:—We are all here at Sweetwater, waiting for the weather to moderate, so that the mail can travel. We found the snow about twenty inches deep up to Muddy Station. We made good time up to Sunday; we left there about two o'clock Wednesday; we went that night to Dry Sandy; we had a very severe storm, the worst that I ever witnessed in my life. We left next morning for the South Pass, and got to the crossing but could not stem the storm. The two Mail boys are so badly frozen that I think they will probably die; at least I think one will. We turned and went back to Sandy that night. Mr. Ashton came down with us, and he then took the Mail, and done all that a man could do to get the Mail along. We got lost every night since we left the City; we got lost on the South Pass, and found ourselves above the Station about eight miles; we laid down on the Sweet Water until morning. We got up in the morning, and left the Mail mules, blankets, and every thing we had, and made for the Station; we succeeded in getting in before we all perished. Mr. Ashton has frozen one hand, and one foot, I think he will be bound to lose his hand. We got the Mail here about ten o'clock Saturday. Mr. Ashton will be bound to buy some mules to get the Mail away. I think I will come back with the next Mail. The Mail that came up last nine mules that froze on Rocky Ridge; every man that has traveled with the Mail since we left the City, is badly frozen.

Respectfully,

J. M. GUTHRIE.

SALT LAKE CITY,

Dec. 11, 1858.

MR. KIRK ANDERSON:

You inquire in your last paper, the whereabouts about the "deaf and dumb boy." That your impertinent inquiries may be satisfied, and we hear no more about the matter; I will inform you that he has been permanently and decently planted, about one and a half miles north-east of your office, in a place called a Cemetery—where, if you desire, you can find him.

It was necessary for his salvation, that his existence on earth should be abbreviated, and consequently his sudden transition from this to a better world.

Having said this much, I would advise you, that it is not proper that you, hereafter notice such matters in your paper. It is one of the rights guaranteed to us by the Constitution of our Government; "to worship God according to the dictates of our own consciences;" with which right, it is to be hoped you will not again attempt to meddle.

I hope you will take the hint, it certainly will be to your advantage. You see our paper the "Deseret News," does not make itself objectionable by heralding such things.

KIRK ANDERSON, ESQ.:

SIR—I have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, but I am very glad to see the course pursued by you in your paper; I think it will be approved of by many of our Church members at least by all those who are opposed to many acts of violence that are done under a pretended right and color of our faith. I never did and never can believe in the doctrine that it was right to take a persons life, for the purpose of saving him; yet many of my brothers differ with me on this—they think that when there is danger of Apostatizing they should by a premature transition from this world be secured the happiness of a better one.

You inquire in your paper of last week about the deaf and dumb boy. For your information I will say that he was killed about three or four weeks ago about twelve miles east of here, in the Canyon on the road to Bridger, and near the house of Ephraim Hanks. The person who killed him, is a Policeman of this City, his name is —

The boy was shot through the arm, and also had a second shot through the breast, that not killing him his throat was cut. I am glad to see you notice these things, it may have a tendency to prevent such actions in future.

Not being much in the habit of putting my thoughts on paper, you will look over my disconnected kind of writing, and especially excuse my bad spelling. I thought it was right to let you know that some of us approved of your paper, and thought it my duty to answer your inquiry.

United States District Court.

The United States District Court met on Monday last after an adjournment of one week.

The motion to disbar James Ferguson was continued at the request of both parties; they representing that the motion, or so much of it as related to personal difficulties between the parties was in process of adjustment.

The Grand Jury were then charged by the Judge to enquire specially into the charges made in this motion, that the U. S. Courts had been broken up and the Judge compelled by intimidation and threats to adjourn—and read to them the Statute of the United States upon this subject.

TUESDAY.—The Grand Jury made the following presentment, viz:

"The Grand Jury find that James Ferguson of Great Salt Lake City, U. T., did use language and threats calculated to intimidate Judge GEORGE P. STILES, U. S. District Judge, while in the execution of his official duties and presiding as Judge of this District Court at the February term, 1857.

"Said threats and language used to GEORGE P. STILES.

ELEAZER MILLER, Foreman.

G. S. L. City, Dec. 14, 1858.

Whereupon Judge Sinclair directed that the U. S. District Attorney should prepare an indictment in accordance with the facts presented.

At Springfield, Mass., a lady sent the following volunteer toast: "Spruce old bachelors—the ever greens of Society."

Some of the farms of Vermont stand so much on their edge, that plowmen with one short leg command double wages. Citizens who "distinguished themselves in the late war with Mexico," will please take notice.

The Utah Expedition—Vindication of Gen. Johnston from the Assaults of his Enemies.

[Extract from an editorial in the St. Louis Democrat.]

The War Department at Washington has been universally censured, by all parties, for its want of energy and capacity in organizing and sending out the expedition under Col. Johnston. This censure is well deserved, but it is the least of the accusations which may be successfully urged against it in connection with the Mormon insurrection. Jobs and plunder have, we think, attained their culmination in the contracts for the Utah army, but we will not dwell on this at present, as we propose directing attention to the claims of an individual who has won rank, and, perhaps, reputation by the exhibition of unparalleled inactivity. Gen. Johnston has gained his brevet by no deed of heroism or display of Generalship, but by obstinate immobility for eight or nine months. For that length of time he remained motionless in camp, within 120 miles of Salt Lake City, and within 60 miles, or less, of the rebels, because his means of transportation were defective. During the winter, the whole country was in a state of gloomy anxiety, lest his command should starve, but the fact that his provisions lasted up to the 10th of June, and that his men had been exempt from sickness, proves how groundless were the fears entertained. It cannot be doubted for a moment that the irretrievable error in the conduct of the Mormon war was the inactivity of Col. Johnston. If he had advanced on Salt Lake City, the Mormon embargo would have been dissolved, the question solved. If the Mormons had fought, it would have but accelerated the final and conclusive settlement of the difficulty. He would have anticipated the offices of Kane and the Peace Commissioners. The salutary policy of martial law would have been disposed of by the Danites, the incendiary apostles, and all those found with arms in their hands. If the Mormon church would have been enriched with the blood of martyrs, the authority of the United States would have been established on a firm basis, and fifteen or twenty millions would have been saved to the Treasury. It cannot be gainsaid that Col. Johnston was guilty of a grave error of judgment. That he was strong enough to meet the enemy, is proved by his own subsequent conduct, for he had resolved on making his way into Salt Lake City before the arrival of the reinforcements. He was eager to anticipate the advent of Gen. Smith and Harney by striking a decisive blow, but he found an opportunity once necessary to caution them. He had substance and men but it is said he overated the difficulties of the ground and the strength of the Mormons. His means of transportation may have been limited, but with the enemy within two or three days' march, this was no insuperable obstacle. His men could have carried with them five or six days' rations and the supplies of the enemy would have fallen into their hands before they had consumed their own; for the victors get the spoils, and that the troops would have been the victors, hardly admits of doubt. Well known instances may be referred to in which the United States troops have carried ten days' provisions without the aid of pack animals, much less wagons. It was done in one of the Indian wars in Florida; and the history of all campaigns contain instances in which Generals have been surrounded by circumstances far more embarrassing than those which drew a circumvallation round the Utah army last winter. The War Department is justly condemned for delaying the troops in Kansas during the summer, but Col. Johnston has forfeited all claims to Generalship by delaying them at Fort Bridger during the winter. The Administration was only foliious to put down freedom in Kansas. Johnston was excessively prudent, and between them they have treated the nation to a faro, (with its millions of dollars).

Mr. Editor: The above article lately appeared in the Missouri Democrat, in which, it would seem, the author not only arrogates to himself a high military knowledge, but a military experience which he deems sufficient to justify him, not alone in criticising a military operation, but of casting censure upon its leader. The character of this article is too censorious to impose upon the ignorant, and to those knowing the facts and appreciating them, it is an ostentatious display of stupidity, scarce deserving consideration. This is especially so, when a review of every account of the conduct of the Utah army last winter, submitted by persons on the spot, is only a vindication of its General.

If the article in question means anything, it means to condemn General Johnston's course, sneers at his claims to be breveted, and points out by an incomplete and fictitious date, what its author, in the plenitude of his self-complacency, styles "the irretrievable error of the conduct of the Mormon war." It is not the intention to discuss the merits or demerits of any, but to prove that the author is not only ignorant of the error committed, but that which he assumes as such, was not only no error, but in every respect injured to the interest of the Government, and most justly to the reputation of General Johnston. It will be readily conceded, that General Johnston could in nowise be held responsible for the organization of an army, with whose organization he had nothing to do.

That the organization was defective, was abundantly proved by the unprotected state of the trains, from the absence of cavalry on their entrance into the enemy's country. Whether this arose from the dilly-dallying of Gen. Harney, at Fort Leavenworth—the result of his repugnance, at first, to go to Utah at all—or the little by-play originated by himself and Governor Walker, distracted his attention from the organization of an army, he never expected, or indeed, intended to command, it has not been thought proper to expose. It is certain that there was no necessity for the Utah army being crippled, as it was, by the detention of the very arm considered by his instructions most essential to its efficiency.

If there was a necessity for any large number of troops in Kansas at all, that necessity might have been met without detaching the Second Dragoons from the Utah forces. The result was, that the trains were burned, the animals starved, and the army harassed by the few mounted men the Mormons had thrown beyond the mountains. This was the condition of the army which Gen. Johnston was to command, when he left Fort Leavenworth, twelve hundred miles distant from it on the 17th September.

Ten days after this date, concentrated on Ham's Fork, agreeable to orders, there to await the arrival of its commander—whether Gen. Harney, or some one else, no one knew. The season was advancing, the weather cold, its position totally unfit for winter quarters, the forage nearly exhausted, the grass scarce, the animals distressed, and it became apparent, even at this time, the 28th of September, that delay was fatal, and that it was absolutely necessary to advance or seek winter quarters. For the first time, complaints were heard in the camp, and suspicions entertained that we had been left in the lurch. By solicitation, the senior officer assumed the command of the Army, which then consisted of two regiments of infantry, and two batteries of artillery—about 1400 men. A council of war was held, to determine its destination, and on the 10th of October the order was given to advance. The route through the canyons was impracticable. Independent of the snows, which, at that time, often occur there, it was known they were well guarded by a force equal to three times our own. If it came to fighting there was no doubt of our success in a pitched battle. But the Mormons would not hazard a pitched battle. In a military point of view, then, it would have been an absurdity. It would have placed the few trains then with the army in a position that would have ended in their abandonment or destruction; and the many trains not yet concentrated, left entirely undefended in the rear. It was consequently determined to attempt to reach Salt Lake Valley by Soda Springs, a distance of 250 miles. On the 11th of October the army commenced its march. As a harbinger of ill-success, the day was lowering, and the first snow storm of any consequence came upon us. The few trains in our immediate vicinity had been ordered to concentrate and follow in our rear. The animals of these trains were much distressed; the snow distressed them much more, and the scanty grass, which to a great distance in the direction of our march had been burned, soon terminated their powers of endurance. From ten miles a day the distance traveled diminished to three, the snow increased, the grass diminished, the road little traveled, in some cases, was undefined, and at the end of seven days the condition of the animals plainly showed that the further progress of the army was arrested. Another council of war was held. The question was now not where to go, but how to go anywhere? Various propositions were submitted and some of them spoke more for the reckless gallantry of their officers than the calm suggestions of prudence. It was only considered that to make a retreat of any kind was mortifying, although it was felt that to advance, even were it possible, could but end in suffering and the most disastrous losses. If at any time the "morale" of our little army was shaken it was now—dissatisfaction reigned—murmurs spread through the camp, and it was too truly felt, that without the greatest prudence and good judgment, backed by strong self-reliance and determination, the expedition would be brought to a most disgraceful end.

It was at this critical juncture that an express arrived, bringing information of Gen. Johnston's having reached the South Pass, a distance of one hundred and sixty miles from the army. But few officers of the army knew Gen. Johnston at that time—still fewer had ever seen him; yet his arrival was heralded by them as the termination, if not of their difficulties, at least of the vacillation and indecision which had bid fair to prove destructive. The position of the army was no sooner understood by him than its return was immediately ordered, and the troops with all the supply trains concentrated, to take the road to Fort Bridger, on the 19th of October the army proceeded to retrace its steps. The snow had fallen six or eight inches, the little grass that was left covered up, the animals more weakened by cold and hunger, "dragged their weary limbs" along, till death would relieve them of their sufferings; their carcasses lined the road already traveled. Sad evidences of the ravages that had been committed. The return march was slower and more laborious than the forward one.

On the 3d the army reached the point designated by General Johnston, and was joined by him on the 4th of November. It was on this date that Gen. Johnston was first brought in contact with his army; an army never organized as an invading army, nor at the time of its organization intended as such. He was accompanied by a small reinforcement under Col. Smith, and the remainder of the supply trains. On the 6th of November the march was resumed towards Fort Bridger. If the difficulties the army had already encountered and the suffering it had endured were serious and disheartening, they were but a foretaste of what was to come. The weather suddenly became intensely cold. The trains from ten to twelve miles in length, at any moment open to attack, the animals liable during the night to be stampeded from the scarcity of the grass, required a vigilance that entailed the greatest suffering on the part of both officers and men; and to their credit be it said, their duties were performed with a manfulness, a cheerfulness and a zeal that elicited the thanks of the General and deserves the admiration of the country. All murmurs ceased—all despondency fled; a new spirit was infused, a new confidence inspired, and by an influence that imperceptibly pervaded the mass, it was felt "that though the ship was in a storm, there was a pilot who could guide her." It is useless to recount the suffering, or the loss which attended the march of the army to Fort Bridger. For years to come its line will be marked as one vast Golgotha. With a greater scarcity of grass, accumulated snows, a much more intense cold, but little wood, and an increase of trains, it must be apparent even to the obscure comprehension of our critic, that if the mobility of the army was impaired a month previous, it was now completely paralyzed.

On the 28th, the advance arrived at Bridger, having accomplished thirty-five miles in fifteen days! It is needless to refer to the suffering of the troops, for that gentleman evidently believes soldiers to be as insensible to that element of human frailty as he is incapable of appreciating it. It would be useless, in his calculations, to know that most of the army performed the most severe portion of the march with shoes and stockings worn out, and clothing insufficient to meet the severity of winter. That it was not until the 21st of November that the supply trains arrived, and not until the 30th, when they had been examined, a deficiency was discovered both in clothing and rations. Gen. Johnston was not insensible to the claims of his troops for comfort and rest—a requirement which the dictates of humanity would have rendered imperative, even in the face of orders to advance. And yet, in the opinion of this most Spartan critic, this was the golden opportunity for the General to avoid the commission of his "irretrievable error," to abandon his artillery, animals and supplies and with four or five days' rations, on the backs of 1,500 men, march 120 miles, and make his warlike descent upon 5,000 Polygamous rebels! And why? Because the army was not without subsistence on the 9th of June, and a detachment of troops had gone on an Indian scout in Florida, carrying ten days' rations. Sir, if your proposition had been submitted to the army, there would have been 5,000 sympathizers for your stupidity, and 5,000 anathemas on your impudence. Where did you learn that an army could march 120 miles, through impassable snows, carrying their provisions, in five or six days? Because a man goes naked at the equator, is it an argument against wearing a bear skin at the pole? If the army was subsisted on the 9th of June, does that prove it was not in danger of starving on the 21st of November? When did you learn that the "spoils" of Salt Lake Valley were sufficient to clothe and subsist an addition of 1,500 souls to its already half starved and impoverished population? If it was so easy a task to enter the valley, independent of an enemy, why did the deserters, who attempted to reach Salt Lake City, return and give themselves up for punishment, rather than longer face the danger and suffering they encountered? Why did the Governor remain in the camp, and state in his proclamation that the snows detained him? Why did a party of Mormons, who understood the difficulties of the route and the best method of overcoming them, and who undertook to reach our camps with a light wagon, containing provisions and salt, with a relay of animals, have to abandon everything, take to pack mules, and reach camp only with great difficulty, as early as the 26th of November?

One is forced to believe that the country of our critic's birth is as flat as himself, that his geographical knowledge is defective, and his mind decidedly biased by internal improvements. It was stated that, considering the condition of the army on its arrival at Fort Bridger, Gen. Johnston would have been justified in recruiting its strength, even in the face of orders to advance. Did he have any such orders save those that contemplated the establishment of a post in Salt Lake Valley? No; and the object of these was, in part, discretionary, and to be modified by circumstances? Did he have any authority, direct or indirect, to constitute his army an invading army, march on Salt Lake City, or attack the Mormons—save in self-defence? No. Had he done so he would have exercised an illegal and arbitrary power, that would have raised the clamors of the people, been denounced by the Government, and afforded a more worthy pretext for the expenditure of vituperation. This heroic reviewer would then have been conversant with the instructions of the Government to the General. He would readily have discovered that these instructions (as published by Congress) required the army to be a "self-sustaining machine," and to be used exclusively as a "posse-comitatus" on the requisition of the Governor, and to quote from them, "and in no case will you, your officers, or your men, attack any body of citizens whatever, except on such requisition or summons, or in sheer self-defence." In view of these and the foregoing facts, would it have been in obedience to these instructions, in the first place, or good generalship in the second, to have attempted an entrance to the Valley? Unable to be used as a "posse-comitatus," from the absence of judicial organization, the army could not have been a "self-sustaining machine." Had he left a position where his troops were comfortable, his immense number of animal secure, his supplies guarded; his communications to the rear open, for one where these troops would be again subjected to hardships more rigorous than those with which they had so manfully contended, his animals certain to be scattered, his supplies left unprotected, his communications to the rear cut off, and this too, merely to invite hostilities? Had the Territory been under martial law, would it have been good generalship to have attempted then, with every chance of defeat, what might have been attempted six months later, with an army recuperated, reinforced and perfectly organized, with every chance of success? What did it signify, whether Mormonism was put an end to in December or June? It was not a case of National peril, but of National policy. What could take place in these six months to jeopardize the Government at all? Certainly nothing equal to the annihilation of an army, in case of defeat, or the additional expense to the Government of a winter campaign, in case of success?

The Army had to be subsisted, whether it was in Salt Lake Valley or at Fort Bridger. Even supposing the resources of the Valley sufficient to meet the wants of a sudden increment of fifteen hundred men, would it have been possible for the General to have commanded them, without an expenditure far beyond what was laid out, and which would have enriched the Church! The country was not in any peril, the Army was in no peril, from attack, nor was it ever organized to proceed against a foe, but to test the question, whether the principles of Mormonism were obnoxious to our institutions, or could be tolerated!—whether their system of church government was, or was not inconsistent with our social organization, the administration of civil law, or the principles of the constitution! And this question might have been tested six months later, had the Government been deaf to the importunities of Kane, and withheld the Peace Commissioners until submission, or the ravages of war had dispersed or destroyed the "incendiary Elders," and thus crushed so damnable a heresy. It was when the Army marched in June for the Government to act. The question had assumed another phase. The Mormons were no longer a deluded and fanatical sect, they had become a rebellious people, and it was then for the Government to assert her power, and chastise them into respect. But the Government did not act. Mormonism remains still a blot upon our escutcheon, and if there was an "irretrievable error" committed, it was in the lenient, but mistaken compromise the Administration forced the President into making. There is little more to be said. Whether a military commander has fairly won his laurels or not, is too delicate a question for discussion, but there are few cases where so little doubt can arise as that under consideration. General Johnston was breveted not only for his "masterly inactivity" at Fort Bridger. It was for successfully conducting an army through difficulties that, without the highest military qualities, would have defeated the end for which it was raised, and proved a disastrous loss to the country. It was for the establishment of the highest discipline in that army, demoralized by an inadequate leader, disappointed by reverses, and rendered impatient by its sufferings, and the tedium of a 1200 miles march; it was for the undiminished fidelity with which he met the requirements of his Government, independent of personal considerations, and the dignified manner in which he discharged them. Nor is this all. His gallantry in Mexico, had won him the same distinction, for which others had been breveted; his relapse into civil life, after its termination deprived him of benefitting by it, and the Government discharged an old debt, in thus recognizing his claims for reward. Whether he deserved this reward in the estimation of every one, matters but little. The President believed he deserved it—the "first Captain of the age" believed he deserved it—the army believed he deserved it—and that an envious critic should not do so, is but an evidence that he is as ignorant of General Johnston's deserts as he is incapable of appreciating his military qualities.

If the editor of the Democrat was ignorant of the above facts, his honesty cannot be questioned, although the vituperative character of the article referred to was sufficient to condemn it. If he was cognizant of them, and still permitted a wanton stricture to be cast upon a tried and gallant soldier, who had been rewarded by his Government, eulogized by his commander, and was loved by his army, he committed a greater crime than the starvation of a dishonest penny-a-liner, and ought to be ashamed of it.

The acts of all public men are open to criticism, but it is conceived that all criticisms should be submitted to the public free from the suggestions of envy or the bias of prejudice. It is hoped that the person who published his views in relation to the Mormon war was actuated by an honest purpose, and believed he had discovered the "irretrievable error" in its conduct; though it is to be regretted that he did not make himself more acquainted with facts before expressing his opinions, as what grew out of ignorance may be attributed to malice, and what commenced as a commentary, ended as a censure.

Later From Humboldt Bay.

The brig George Emery arrived yesterday from Humboldt Bay, with copies of the Humboldt Times of the 30th ultimo. MORE OF THE INDIAN FIGHT.—The Times, referring to the fight mentioned in our evening edition of yesterday, says:

The ranch was completely routed; and one of the volunteers, whose name we have not been able to learn, was severely wounded in the shoulder. We have heard two rumors as to the number of Indians killed and taken prisoners. One says eight killed and six made prisoners; another says four killed and eight prisoners. Dr. Guild, U. S. A., went out to attend the wounded man. The Doctor informs us that his name is John Harp. He was shot by a rifle ball in the left shoulder. Four Indian warriors were killed, and two children (accidentally), two squaws and two children made prisoners.

A RESPECTABLE CLIENT.—Crusty old Judge—No-body with any regard for his character would put forward such a defence.

Good-tempered Barrister—My lord, I assure you that my client has no regard for his character, and I should be sorry to mislead the Court by affirming that he has any character worth his consideration.

Not long ago Spriggles electrified a party who were telling large stories, by stating that he had known several thousands of individuals to occupy one bed for an entire season. The mystery vanished, however, when Spriggles explained to them that the bed alluded to was an oyster-bed.

AMBROTYPES, MFLINIOTYPES AND PHOTOGRAPHS.

may be had at the old establishment a few doors North of Perry's Store, in the building occupied by A. Taylor & Son. Entrance up the stairs at the South end.

WANTED, A LARGE Sheet-iron Stove, for which a good price will be paid. RADFORD CAROT & CO.

FOR SALE.

THE undersigned offers for sale a house and lot, situated on Main street, the second door south of Gilbert & Son's. The lot is 24 feet 8 inches front, and 10 feet 8 inches depth. There is a good building upon it which rents for $500 per annum. This property is most conveniently situated, being in the very business part of the City, and will be sold low for cash. For particulars, inquire at the residence of the undersigned in the 24th Ward.

light red COW, white face, and a thick rope tied around her horns. horns small; was giving milk.
think she was branded Attwood on the horn, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis E. Bolton, 12th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and be well rewarded. 1-11

THE VALLEY TANNER

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1858.

NUMBER 8.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY

KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Tell the Bell for Lilla Dale.

My Lilla dear is sleeping
Neath the old chestnut tree
The spot where oft she wandered,
When innocent and free.
The wild rose and the myrtle Still cluster round the spot;
But my heart's filled with sorrow,
And lonely is my lot.

Chorus.—Toll, toll the bell, for gentle Lilla Dale,
And let its tones echo through the vale;
Our Lilla dear we've lost, so loving, kind and true;
Sing to-day one sad lay—lost Lilla Dale!

'Tis spring; the birds are warbling
A sad and mournful tale.
Of beauty once so blooming,
Now lying cold and pale.
The streamlet ripples onward,
So quiet through the vale;
The wild rose drops a dewy tear
For earth-lost Lilla Dale.

Chorus.—Toll, toll the bell, &c.

My Lilla dear, I'm watching;
Of wilt thou never come,
To greet me with a blessing
From thy far, angel home?
My sad heart now is heaving,
With heavy care oppressed;
Oh may I quickly greet thee,
In that pure land of rest!

Chorus.—Toll, toll the bell, &c.

The Triumphs of Peace.

The following passage will be read with interest at the present time, when the whole civilized world is exulting over the greatest scientific victory of the age. It is extracted from a speech of that eminent and far-seeing statesman, John C. Calhoun, in the Senate of the United States, March 16th, 1846, on the bill for terminating the joint occupancy of Oregon Territory. After using many weighty objections to an appeal to arms for the settlement of the question, Mr. Calhoun drew a vivid picture of the marvelous progress of the arts of peace, which would be arrested by war:

But I have still higher reasons. I am opposed to war as a friend of human improvement, to human civilization, to human progress and advancement. Never in the history of the world has there occurred a period so remarkable as the peace which followed the battle of Waterloo for the great advances made in the condition of human society. The chemical and mechanical powers have been investigated and applied to increase the comforts of human life in a degree far beyond what was ever known or hoped before. Civilization has been spreading its influence far and wide, and the general progress of human society has outstripped all that has been previously witnessed. The invention of man has seized upon and subjugated two great agencies of the natural world which were never before made the servants of man. I refer to steam and electricity, under which, of course, I include magnetism in all its phenomena.

Steam has been controlled and availed of for all the purposes of human intercourse, and by its resistless energies has brought nations together whom Nature seemed to separate by insurmountable barriers. It has shortened the passage across the Atlantic more than one half, while the rapidity of traveling on land has been three times greater than was ever known before. Within the same time man has chained the very lightning of Heaven, and brought it down and made it administer to the transmission of human thought, inasmuch that it may with truth be said that our ideas are not only transmitted with the rapidity of lightning, but by lighting itself. Magic wires are stretching themselves in all directions over the earth, and when their mystic meshes shall at length have been perfected, our globe itself will be endowed with a sensibility which will render it impossible to touch it on any one point and the touch not be felt from one end of the world to the other. And this work is as yet but commenced; it is but the breaking of the dawn of the world's jubilee. It promises a day of more refinement, more intellectual brightness, more moral elevation, and consequently of more human felicity than the world has ever seen from its creation.

The Late Flogging by an Army Officer.

A few days since we copied from a Texas paper a statement respecting a person who had been severely flogged by order of Lieut. Barton, of the U. S. Army. The Alexandria Gazette now publishes a statement, which, if true, places the transaction in a far different light. The following are the particulars:

About two months previous to the flogging, the man who was flogged, Heid by name, (not Head,) a German by birth, and a private in the band of the 1st Infantry, in which Lieut. Barton was adjutant, was tried by Court Martial for disobedience of orders, convicted, and punished. On receiving his discharge, he engaged his seat in the mail ambulance for San Antonio; but, just before starting, he armed himself with a six shooter and a bowie knife, and stole into the quarters of the band, where the Corporal who had reported him was writing.

Heid reminded the Corporal of his trial, and, without provocation, seized him by his hair of the head, pulled him back on the bed, thence to the floor, beat him with his fist, and stamped on him. The Corporal was a feeble old man, while Heid is a young, athletic fellow. For this Heid, who had fled, was captured tied and whipped, receiving thirty lashes, which did not draw one drop of blood, and instead of being confined to his bed for three weeks, he overtook the mail ambulance that same day, at a distance of eighteen miles. Lieut. Barton, was tried before a jury composed principally of Germans, Heid's countrymen, convicted and fined as before stated, which fine was remitted by the Governor, on the facts of the case being made known to him, but only to be inducted in much higher damages by a civil court, unless the verdict is set aside by a higher court.

The Gazette justifies Lieut. Barton's conduct, on the ground of the lawlessness of the population, and the notoriety of the fact that soldiers have been beaten and treated in the most shameful manner, and even killed, for which not one conviction has been had, and asks, what non-commissioned officer would perform his duty, if discharged soldiers, in this lawless frontier country, should be permitted to assault and beat them with impunity?

Patience is a tree whose roots are bitter—but the fruit is very sweet.

[Card from Postmaster Weller.] Mails to the Atlantic.

EDITORS ALTA: As a matter of public information and general interest, will you please announce in your paper that hereafter I shall dispatch from this office on the 5th and 20th of each month, a mail via Tehuantepec to New Orleans.

I am directed by the Postmaster General to request writers of letters destined to places in the Atlantic States, to endorse thereon, the route by which they wish them sent, as to-wit: "via Los Angeles, Overland;" "via Salt Lake, Overland;" "via Tehuantepec."

Letters with no such endorsements upon them, and all newspapers, will be sent "via Panama."

Three cents will pay the postage on a single letter "via Overland" as far as Chicago, Ill., and Cincinnati, Ohio. Beyond these points the postage will be ten cents.

Newspapers throughout the State will do the public a favor by inserting this in their columns.

C. L. WELLER, Postmaster.
San Francisco Post Office, Nov. 15th, 1858.

Miner's Meeting at Lower Agua Fria District, Nov. 20, 1858.

A meeting of miners in the Agua Fria District, was held at Capt. McKeown's Saloon, on Saturday evening, Nov. 20, 1858, at which Jas. McCrory was chosen chairman and Sam. W. Smith appointed Secretary.

Mr. Giltner stated the object of the meeting and offered the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted.

Believing that we, as miners, have certain rights granted us by the General Government with regard to the working of the mines in California therefore be it Resolved, That we, the miners of the Agua Fria District, will always maintain the privilege to make our own laws and regulations without consulting the miners or other districts.

Further be it Resolved, That we will enforce our laws and regulations until they are regularly instituted by a majority of the miners in the district.

Resolved, That the regulation and mining law of our district, which has been in vogue for two years and a half, prohibiting Chinamen from working within our district, and not allowing white men to work them, shall still be the law and rule in this district.

Resolved, If any Chinese stop within the district for the purpose of mining, they must leave within forty-eight hours, after being notified by at least three miners; if not, the miners in the locality or district shall compel them to leave and inflict such punishment as they may deem proper.

Resolved, That the above laws of our mining district shall hold good for one year and longer if not repealed.

Resolved, That after this the Chinese question shall be acted upon, once every fall in this district.

Resolved, That we will always abide by the decisions of a majority of the regular placer miners in the district.

It was then moved that a committee of five be appointed to warn the Chinamen, who are now on the creek, to leave—which was unanimously adopted.

The following gentlemen were appointed said committee—Messrs. Purdy, White, Paix, Alexander and Allen. On motion, the meeting adjourned.

JAS. MCCRORY, Chairman.
SAM. W. SMITH, Secretary.

MAN DROWNED.—On the afternoon of last Tuesday [26th ult.] as Lieut. Collins, who has been stationed on the Klaminath Reservation, was moving down the coast with his command, he met with an accident in crossing the mouth of the big lagoon, above Trinidad. He had twenty seven in his command, all of whom were some distance ahead of him, and crossed in safety before the tide came up. He started over, accompanied by his lady, being himself on one side of her, and having one of his men on the other. Although several seas broke over them, the animals stood firm, and Mrs. Collins holding fast to her saddle, kept her seat, and the party crossed in safety. Whitman, with the animals, twelve in number, five of which were carried into the lagoon, and two were lost. Mr. Whitman's animal was carried in among the number, and he was drowned. He was from Crescent City, and had charge of the train which was moving the command down. Lieut. Collins sent men back to search for his body, but had not learned yesterday evening whether it had been recovered or not.

AID FOR THE STOCKTON ROUTE.—We are happy to learn that the gallant Gen. Clarke, Commander in Chief of the Pacific Department, has ordered four companies of the Sixth Infantry, 240 men, to the Mojave country, where they will be of great service in protecting the mails between Stockton and Kansas City and also the emigration. The "red devils," as our Oregonian neighbors call them, will be taught a lesson that they will be likely to remember, and travelers on our route in future will be free from annoyance from them. It is rather hard upon soldiers, who after a long and severe march have arrived in comfortable quarters, to post them off 400 miles into a wilderness, but the army is small and the U. S. territory large, and there is no help for it. We are not advised who will be in command, or whether they will proceed by way of Stockton or Los Angeles to their place of destination. Two other companies are ordered to San Bernardino, one to San Diego, one to Humboldt and two will be stationed at the San Francisco Presidio.

[San Joaquin Republican.]

THE CROSSING AT TEHUANTEPEC.—A correspondent of the Union, writing from Ventosa, Nov. 3d, forwards us the following intelligence in relation to the Isthmus route:

We arrived here on the steamer Oregon yesterday, and leave this morning for Acapulco, with twelve passengers and mails from New Orleans. The passengers from New Orleans left that city Oct. 27th, at 10 a. m., and arrived at Minutilla on the 30th at 12 m. From Minutilla to Suchel is ninety-three miles by the river Coatzacoalcas, which they traveled in nine hours. From Suchel to Ventosa is 116 miles, which they made in twenty-five hours. They all speak in glowing terms of the route.

A portion of the route was made with mules, which arrangement will soon be changed.

In a short time measures will be taken to give several hundred persons convenient passage.

BORDERING ON THE PERSONAL.—The editor of the Constitutionalist, published at Doniphan, K. T., pitched into the editor of a Black Republican sheet after the following manner:

The editor of the Chief wishes us to bring him into notice, but we do not wish to pollute our columns with such trash, unless forced to do so. We would gently hint to the cross-eyed, cranked, peaked and long razor-nosed, blue-mouthed, nigger-lipped, white-eyed, soft-headed, long-eared, crane-necked, blobber-lipped, squeaky-voiced, empty-headed, snaggly-toothed, filthy-mouthed, box-anchored, pigeon-toed, reel-footed, ignoble Black Republican, abolition editor to attend to his own affairs, or we will pitch into him in earnest.

A PROFITABLE FORTY ACRE FARM.—To show what "much labor" on little land" accomplishes, we present a brief statement drawn from the Hampshire County (Mass.) Agricultural Society's Transactions, there given in the statement of Mr. Stebbins, of South Deerfield, on entering his farm for the premium of the Society.

The farm in question contains 41 acres, ten of it worn-out sandy land, when it came into his possession, over twenty years ago. But he "resolved to have a better farm." To this sandy field (three acres the first year) he applied clay at the rate of fifty loads per acre, followed by twenty-five loads of manure and 200 lbs. of plaster. This was all ploughed in together, the land planted to corn, and a fair crop was the result. After corn, oats were sown, and the ground seeded to clover. By the use of clay and manure," he says, "I have made all my land as good as the best, and increased my pasture one hundred per cent., in quantity and quality of product."

As to deep plowing, he finds the best way to be to employ the subsoil plow. He turns under his manure four or five inches deep, and then subsoils the bottom of the furrow as deeply as possible. Corn is planted two years in succession, the better to mix soil and manure and to fit the land for grass, and he now sows barley instead of oats, as a more profitable crop.

The secret of his success lies in the fact that instead of one hundred loads of manure, as formerly, he now makes three hundred and fifty loads, supplying his yards freely with absorbent earths, and using salt, lime and plaster to a considerable extent.

In 1854, the products of the forty-one acre farm, in the usual farm crops, were worth a fraction under $1,000, and the net profits $1,116 75. There were twenty-three acres in mowing; thirteen acres in corn and potatoes, three in barley and two in wheat. The reader may here see that a large farm is not essential to profitable management.—The Graph.

SERIES.—One of the young ladies of Jefferson Female College, in a composition prepared for a recent occasion of public exercise in that institution, indulged her pen and hearers in a spicy paragraph something like the following:

"Common sense!—Surely there never was a greater misnomer, since it seems to be the most uncommon kind of sense. When I graduate, and get my diploma, I intend establishing an Academy in which Common Sense shall be the only branch taught. Both ladies and gentlemen shall be eligible to participation in the benefits of this institution. Charges moderate,—as much so as the procurement of an ample store of good advice will allow; and since this commodity is so often to be had gratis, parents need have no fears of ruinous bills. Tobacco positively eschewed. Punsters shall be punished with the utmost rigor known to the tan. Young ladies who sail into this Common Sense Academy looking like a small schooner under a heavy press of canvass, may sail in at the front door and out at the back, provided the navigation is not too much obstructed. All lessons will be illustrated and enforced by brilliant lectures from the preceptress."

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. & L. CITY, DECEMBER 22, 1838.

Several editorial articles, prepared for this issue are unavoidably deferred.

We present to-day, in advance of our usual publication day, the message of Gov. Cumming to the Legislature of this Territory.—We received it last night by express and as it is a document of more than usual interest we hasten to lay it before our readers, we have neither time nor space for comment at present.

The same messenger brought us the information that the Legislature met on the 13th instant, but without a quorum and adjourned from day to day until the 18th inst., when a quorum being present they were sworn in by the Hon. John Hartnett, Secretary of State, who then delivered the message of his Excellency, Gov. Cumming. We farther learn that they then adjourned to meet in this city on Monday the 29th instant. The accommodations at Fillmore city are represented as being very bad, and we think it was a judicious resolve upon the part of the members to adjourn to this city. We also received some documents of interest, a review of which we must defer until our next issue.

Cruel Murder of the "Deaf and Dumb Boy." The Danites at Work. Complicity of Mormon Officials, &c.

We enquired a week or two ago in our paper for the deaf and dumb boy, (Andrew Bernard.) Since which time one N. L. Christianson, (a policeman of this city,) has been arrested, charged with his murder.

The facts so far as we can glean them from the preliminary examination now going on before Judge Sinclair are these: On the 22d day of October, 1838, one Henry C. Smith, (who is said to be in California at this time) made his affidavit before Peter Clinton, a Justice of the Peace, of this city, charging that said Bernard had stolen from him $55 in gold upon which said Justice issued a warrant for the arrest of said Bernard, which was placed in the hands of said Christianson to serve as policeman.

The warrant was not served until about the 9th or 10th of November following. Said Smith having in the intermediate time gone to California (as is said.) Upon being arrested Bernard was taken to the police station where Justice Clinton saw him, but he never was taken before said Justice in pursuance of the command of said warrant for trial or examination, either before or after his being at the police station. We learn from the testimony of his mother that two policemen, Mr. Christianson and Mr. Bert, brought him into her house, stating that they had arrested him for stealing $55. Andrew denied stealing the $55 but admitted that he had stolen $11 and had bought a coat, hat and pants with it. The policemen took him away and kept him until next day when he is again seen by his mother passing her house in custody of John Sharp, a policeman. She says Sharp called her to come to his house she went down when she again asked Andrew if he had taken the money; he admitted he had taken $11. He signified by signs he had $7 over the mountain, which he had got from teamsters, which he had put in a man's hands, who he described as having a mustache and whiskers. Mr. Sharp sent for a policeman to take him over the mountain to get the money, said to use the language of the witness: "He was going to send him over the mountain to find all the money he could." Sharp claimed he had $60 bid over the mountain. Witness says "they did not understand him for he was motioning he had $7 over the mountain, which he earned from teamsters. There was one large silver dollar among the $7, and they supposed he meant a large gold piece, instead of silver. The boy said he was willing to go over the mountain. This was on Wednesday; Saturday night Christianson came home. The boy's mother saw him on Sunday morning at Brother Nicholl's house. Christianson tried to get away, but the mother followed him, and asked him if he had brought Andrew home, he said he had not, said he could not, that Andrew had put off to the wagons and he couldn't catch him, but he expected him in with the wagons that day. Brother Christianson, says the mother, there is a report going that he stabbed you with a knife, Christianson said it was true, that the knife would have gone into him if it had not struck the plate of his belt, but that the knife broke and fell. The mother asked where Andrew got the knife, as he did not start with one, Christianson said he had got it from the wagons. Mr. Sharp told the mother about two weeks afterwards that Andrew was dead and buried, that he had heard a report that Christianson had killed him. The mother never saw Andrew after she left Brother Sharp's. The next we hear of the prisoner and the dumb boy is at Ephraim Hanks' cabin, between the mountains, about twelve miles east of here. Theodore J. Cawkin, a witness, says: he saw the two there together, about four or five weeks ago. They came about dark. The boy appeared to be in the man's custody.

Moroni Hutchison says he worked for Hanks, and was at his house when they came, it was about sun-down; Christianson said he had come from the city, that they were going out the next day to get the money dummy had stolen; witness asked dummy if he had stolen money, and he said he did not steal any, he said that this man had brought him there to get the money, and he said he had not stolen any money, but he said this man was going to make him get some money; Christianson and dummy left next morning, witness did not see them again.

The evening following the prisoner and dummy came to the train of Mr. Farley, corralled just beyond the big mountain. Joseph Hockensmith says the policeman and boy came to the camp just as we corralled. The man said that the boy had stolen some money and they had been hunting it. The man slept by the fire and the boy slept under a wagon in a wagon sheet. The next morning the man said if the boy did not find the money he was going to whip him.

He said to the wagonmaster and some of the boys, just as they were starting out, that he would whip the boy that day if he did not find the money. The policeman seemed to be fretted at the boy not finding the money; thought the policeman could whip the boy very easy—saw no conversation between them.

In the order of occurrence the testimony we have is that of C. Bacon, who says that about the middle of Nov. he was out in the canyon after wood passed E. Hanks' station and stopped to eat breakfast near the station. While eating heard a noise toward the cabin as of some one running, heard loud talking. Some one called saying come down here there is somebody tried to kill me up in the canyon; self and son went down, found the boy standing at the door and thumping it with a cast iron hub box weighing three or four pounds with a rope attached. Christianson called from the inside to take the boy away. Witness motioned to the boy and he laid down the iron and sat down on the ground by the house and Christianson came out of the house and said the boy had stabbed him. The boy showed his wounds and pointed to Christianson; a wound on his breast, a wound on his leg and that on his hand.

No person saw these wounds inflicted consequently there is no evidence. However to make our summary of the matter as full as possible we give the statement of Christianson, the prisoner.

"When, says Christianson, we reached Hanks' cabin, the boy said the money was up a little canyon near the shanty, in a crow's nest, near the edge of the canyon; that they went up that ravine some distance when they came to a bird's nest as the boy described, here the boy said it was further up the canyon in a larger nest. The canyon became difficult of access; he kept the boy ahead of him in this narrow, difficult place, the first he knew the boy wheeled and struck him with a knife; that the knife struck the clasp of his belt and glanced and cut his hip; in the struggle which followed Christianson dropped his pistol and succeeded in getting the knife away from the boy and threw it up on the bank, out of reach. He then let the boy up and went and got his pistol when the boy made at him with a rock, when he fired at him four shots, all he had in his pistol at the time. The boy then broke and ran down the canyon and out run him. The boy went to the shanty and he went in and ordered him out. The boy came out and picked up a wagon box, with a rope attached and made at him with it when he ran in the house and shut the door."

The boy and Christianson went with Bacon to the tops of the little mountain, the boy riding on Bacon's wagon, where the boy got off the wagon, and went and laid down behind a bush. Theodore J. Cawkin came up on to the mountain and says the boy was then lying on the sunny side of a lush, he looked to be sick. The prisoner told me all the circumstances and said the boy had three balls in him; said there was two in his legs and one in his breast. The boy appeared to be suffering, but he looked around to see what was going on.—There was three wagons on the mountain and several others coming up. The men there seemed to think the boy would not die; there was three men at least beside some boys that were standing by, we were there ten minutes. No one went and examined the boy's wounds they thought he could ride. It appears the boy was placed on one of the wagons, and started down the canyon towards the city, after passing to the mouth of the canyon, say a distance of 5 or 6 miles. Christianson and the boy are met by one Mr. Ephraim Hanks a noted Danite. Hanks is in a wagon or buggy, he testifies that it is a wagon other witnesses say it was a one horse buggy. They Christianson and Hanks, take the boy off the wagon and put him on Hanks' vehicle and start off south of the road to find the money.—Hanks says they went about 3 or 400 yards when he stopped his team and Christianson and the boy got off and went to hunt for the money, the boy leading and Christianson following up. They had been gone but a few minutes when Hanks heard a halloo, looked up and saw the boy with a rock in his hand which he let fly and knocked off the prisoner's hat. Prisoner then struck at the boy with a knife, they were about two paces apart the boy seemed to be trying to get away, the boy fell. Witness was about 100 yards away, went, immediately up, the boy was then dead. Christianson had his police club in his hand. It was a turned stick, larger at one end than the other, and fastened to his wrist by a string. Thinks when he came up, Christianson said: "He has tried to kill me again," but that he "had got the advantage of him this time."—Witness told him it looked bad. He made no reply, but looked scared and confused. The boy had no weapons.—Witness went on about his business and prisoner went to town. Witness says there was a freight train corralled on the road, and that he passed a great number of trains as he went up the canyon, but that he told none of them of what had occurred.

Hanks came home the same evening, was sent for and went to Judge Smith's office. Next morning Judge Smith, Mr. Clinton and Doct. Richards were then sworn and made a statement before them which was read over. After this witness, Doct. Richardson and Clinton started for the body. Hanks says there was a coffin in the wagon when we went out the body was put in it and we drove to the burying ground. The grave was already dug and we buried it. Don't know who made the coffin.—A man brought it to the wagon up on Council House street, thinks it was Mr. Richardson. No one at the burial but Dr. Clinton, Dr. Richardson and witness.

Upon the next day being examined, witness says, they drove the wagon up to there, Doct. Clinton got out and examined the body, and fixed it up, and did not take the body away. Doct. Clinton covered the body up with a blanket or something and left it there. The Doctor asked me if that was the body, I told him it was. We got back to town about the middle of the afternoon. The Doctor asked me to go back with the coffin. The coffin was brought to my wagon on Main Street about 9 o'clock next morning, near the Globe Restaurant. Thinks Doct. Richardson, was the man who brought the coffin, it had a flat top, thinks there was a white cloth sheeting laid over the coffin. After getting the body, Dr. Clinton got out at the edge of the city; Cunningham, Dr. Richardson, and myself then went to the burying ground, there was no one in the grave yard, we found a grave dug and had shovels in our wagon, and buried the body.

A paper being shown to the witness and the question put to him whether that was the paper got up before Judge Smith or not witness said it was the paper.

The paper here shown to the witness purports to be an inquest held by Jeter Clinton, as justice of the peace, and one Dr. D. Richardson upon the body of said Andrew Bernard (no jury is empanelled) upon the 15th day of November, 1838. Mr. Ephraim Hanks being sworn as a witness, which paper is endorsed, "Filed in the office of the Probate Clerk, Nov. 15, 1838."

John Lynch being sworn, said he is deputy clerk of the Probate Court, and the foregoing paper being shown him said it was filed in the office three or four weeks after the date of its filing.

Judge Smith being sworn, said that the paper was given him by Dr. Clinton some weeks ago; could not tell the precise time. The Doctor came into his office and said he had been directed in his duty; that he had held an inquest and had neglected to file his proceedings in the matter. I (witness) read the law to him and asked him if he had taken minutes of Mr. Hanks' testimony? Said he had, but that he had not sworn him. I told him that he could not legally file that paper as the witness had not been sworn. He sent for Mr. Hanks; on his arriving, the Dr. told him that he had neglected to swear him then, he wanted to swear him now; thinks it was three weeks ago. The Dr. told me that he had notes of the testimony, but that witness did not see them. The paper filed in my office was not the one prepared in my office, but thinks it a copy. The paper was handed to witness by Dr. Clinton, and by witness handed to Mr. Lynch with the remark that it should have been filed about the middle of November:—

Jeter Clinton, in his examination said that the evidence was not written down, nor was Mr. Hanks sworn until he returned from burying the body. The evidence was not written nor Mr. Hanks sworn until some 3 weeks after the occurrence; did not send deceased's relatives word. The spot where the body was found is broken and rough, full of hollows and ravines.

Mr. Darwin Richardson says he was called upon by Dr. Clinton; went with him out to the body. Dr. Clinton said that it was not necessary to examine the body minutely. There were two or three shots in his clothing. After seeing him we concluded to leave him, have a coffin made and inter him as soon as possible. In a day or two we obtained a coffin, put him in it, and took him to the grave yard and buried him. Mr. McAllister, Hanks, and myself went to the grave yard; thinks McAllister and others put the coffin into the wagon; drove down to Hanks' and he got in at his house.

After going out to the body, did not examine the wounds for we were satisfied how he came to his death. The wound in the neck was a considerable one. It seemed to be a gash severing the Trachea, and coming out on the other side, it was a complete throat cut; thinks the jugular was cut; saw a bullet hole on the right breast; did not examine the body, can't say whether the bullet wound or the cut in his neck caused his death, it might have been the bullet wound, thought the wound in the neck caused his death because he was told so. Placed the body in a little hollow near there, covered it with leaves, dirt and rock to keep the wolves from it. Can't say who moved the body, it was moved a few feet, rolled down into a hollow; thinks Mr. Hanks took an active part in moving it, covered him with a spade some 6 inches with dirt, gravel and rocks. Not more than two days when they went out the second time; thinks it not the next but the second day. The coffin was a square box; called for Mr. Hanks and took him in; did not go on Main street; threw a wagon sheet over the box. Dr. Clinton did not go out the second time; it was dark when we got home; when we got the body we struck across without approaching the city nearer than the grave yard, when we got there it was between twilight and dark.

This is a summary of the evidence, and to our mind, upon a careful analysis, is a budget of contradictions, and while it develops murder, it also exhibits the falsification of records and the attestation of sworn officers.

Judge Sinclair well remarked "No inquest was ever held," but the maimed, throat cut dumb boy was tossed into a box and buried after night like a dog—what required his sacrificial yet a matter of profound mystery, unless, indeed the Molech of this valley thought proper "To offer up a weak, poor innocent lamb; To appease an angry god."

The "Destroying angels" or rather the avenging devils that are peculiar to the hierarchy and theocracy that has so long prevailed in this Territory should bear in mind that Heaven is not only retributive, but that temporal laws can and will be enforced. The fair fame of this Territory and its political relations hereafter, require that no concealment should be made but that crime no matter from what source it comes should be exposed and punished, otherwise it might be truthfully said,

"O my accursed womb the bed of death,
A cockatrice hast thou hatched to the world,
Whose unavailing eye is murderous?"

Frosty—Very.

A letter by the last mail from the East, gives a deplorable account of the severity of the weather, in the vicinity of the South Pass. Some fourteen or fifteen miles at the Sweetwater Station, have perished, and seventeen men badly frozen. Mr. Ashton writes to Peter K. Dolson, Esq., the mail agent here, that his hands are badly frozen, and that he would start for Fort Bridger in a few days, to have some of his fingers amputated. The letter is dated Dec. 13th, and states, at that time, and for four consecutive days, the thermometer stood at 23 degrees below Zero. If this will not compare with Arctic weather, we should like to know what would Greenland and the country "circumadjacent" thereto be doubtless a very cool locality, but for good old fashioned storms that would stiffen an Esquimaux, or a Laplander, commend us to the region of the South Pass.

The Circus.—Owing to the snow storm on Tuesday evening, the performances were postponed, but a performance will be given on Saturday afternoon and evening. A lot of new features will be produced. All who have not seen Young America should not let this opportunity pass. His performance being alone worth the price of admission.

Personal.

Messrs. M. F. Quinn and Charles Sealy, who are connected with the Quartermaster's Department at Camp Floyd, have been in this city for several days, on furlough. To say that they had a "good time" during their stay would hardly be expressive enough. On Monday evening we were present at a pleasant re-union given to them at the California house. A fine supper, much champagne, many songs, good music, racy anecdotes, and general harmony prevailed, until the "wee small hours" when the party retired.

Mormonism Revived--A New Edition.

Brigham Young says: I have informed Col. Alexander that his command been the men who have heretofore mobbed us, and the lying scribblers and the wicked rabble who have all the day long been trying to incite mobs against us, they never would have seen the South Pass.

You will perceive from the communication which Brother John T. Caine will read, the feelings of the two parties, myself impressing the Latter Day Saints, and Col. Alexander representing the officers of what he states to be a portion of the United States Army. Whether it is or not, I have no business to know, and shall not know, until I am officially notified.

Brother Caine will now read the principal letters in the order best adapted to your comprehending their purports. (Brother Caine read an unofficial letter from President Brigham Young to Col. Alexander, dated October 14th, one from Lieutenant General Wells to President Young, dated October 15th, one from Col. Alexander to Gov. Young, dated October 12, and one from Gov. Young to Col. Alexander, dated October 16th.

[Deseret News, October 18th, 1837.]

Remarks of H. C. Kimball, October 13th, 1837:

We have made peace a great many times and the United States have taken a course to make us do as they wished us, but let me tell you that day is past and gone, and we will now proclaim the course they will have to take, and they will have to make peace with us, and we never will make peace with them again. Brother Brigham will designate the course they have got to take, and they come here they have got to give up their arms, they cannot come in here with guns or their shoulders or pistols in their belts.

[Deseret News.

Remarks of Brigham Young, October 4th, 1837:

I will say a few words before the congregation is dismissed. As but few can be in our office to learn the news that is brought in, I will say that on the second, Friday last, a messenger arrived with intelligence that the soldiers were going up Ham's Fork—previous to that I had sent by Lieutenant General Wells a copy of the proclamation proclaiming martial law and ordering the troops not to come here. They treated it as I presumed they would, they say that they are sent by the President; are subject to superior officers and intend to abide their instructions, and I expect they will kill some other power checks their progress. I do not know that anybody's heart burns, except it is to get a little nearer our enemies and for the troops to undertake to come in here.—[Deseret News.

On the 6th of September, 1837, H. C. Kimball said:

You take a man that is not very good, and that has a wife that is not very good, and they cannot produce a very good fruit, because the root is not good. Do you understand that Brother Hunter. (Yes, sir, it is as plain as cattle.—[Deseret News.

On the 13th of September, 1837, Brigham Young said:

There cannot be a more damnable, damnable order issued than was issued by the Administration to this people, while they were in an Indian country in 1816. Before we left Nauvoo, not less than two United States Senators came to receive a pledge from us that we would leave the United States, and then, while we were doing our best to leave their borders, the poor, low, degraded curd sent a requisition for five hundred of our men to go and fight their battles. That was President Polk, and he is now wailing a hell with old Zachary Taylor, where the present Administration will soon be, if they do not repent.—[Deseret News.

COLONEL HAMILTON AND GENERAL LEE.—The following scrap from Rivington's Royal Gazette, of January 2nd, 1770, is interesting as defining the position General Lee held in the estimation of the British-American Press during the Revolution. While his military titles are fully allowed him, those of General Washington are denied:

"In consequence of a difference between Colonel Hamilton, a West India gentleman, first aid-de-camp to Mr. Washington, and Major-General Charles Lee, a duel was fought by them last Saturday, which ended in a dangerous wound by a pistol ball lodged in the Major-General's breast. This affair was occasioned by bickerings upon Mr. Lee's Court-martial, and his other late publications, tending to justify his own conduct in the affair of Monmouth, and to expose that of the Commander-in-Chief of the rebel troops."

DIGBY FUZZLES.

N. Y. News, October 21, 1838.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

TO THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF THE TERRITORY OF UTAH, Dec. 13, 1858.

Gentlemen of the Council and House of Representatives:

It has become my duty to communicate to the Legislative Assembly, information on the conditions as I judge to be necessary for its welfare.

To Almighty God, we should return thanks for all the blessings he has bestowed upon this people; especially for averting from them the threatened horrors of civil war, and restoring to them the comforts of home, with health, peace and general prosperity.

The events which have transpired here within the last two years, have excited great solicitude throughout the country, and attracted public attention to this Territory.

The President of the United States in the exercise of his constitutional authority, determined in the early part of last year, to reorganize this Territory by the appointment of new civil officers, and at the same time, he ordered a detachment of the Army to this point, to perform the ordinary military duties, and to act as a military posse upon the requisition of the proper civil officers. The General in command of this detachment received written orders, designating his duties, and forbidding him, his officers or men to attack any body of citizens whatsoever except upon requisition, or in sheer self defence.

The President was induced to persevere in this course of action, in consequence of reiterated statements made by men who had lived in your midst, and the seditions language used by some of your influential writers and public speakers.

In this connection, it is proper I should announce my opinion, that a large number of the inhabitants of Utah participated, subsequently, in acts of open rebellion against the Federal Government. Under these circumstances I entered Great Salt Lake city, on the twelfth day of April 1858, and availed myself of every suitable occasion to notify the inhabitants that I required unconditional submission to the laws; that I would sustain the civil officers in the proper performance of their duties and maintain the public peace.

After a residence of some weeks among you, I announced to the Government at Washington, that the disaffected portion of the community, had returned to their duty, and would receive and obey the newly appointed civil officers. Subsequently, the President's proclamation of the 6th April last was promulgated. It offered a full and free pardon to all, who would submit to the authority of the Federal Government.

By your acquiescence in the conditions of this pardon, all political difficulties between the Federal Government, and the people of Utah are adjusted; and I trust that your future history, will attest the sincerity of your professions of devotion to the Constitution and laws.

The Government of the Territories has been characterized by certain individuals, as a relic of barbarism and a system of oppression. These cavilers should remember that the patriots and sages, whose memory they profess to revere, not only achieved our independence, and framed the Constitution, but inaugurated also the system of Territorial Government, a Government of Constitutional laws. We must rely on them for protection. All communities of freemen possess an inherent right of regulation and self government. Communities, like individuals have their periods of infancy and tutelage, preceding those of matured strength and independent action. When abuses exist in the Government of a Territory, the true remedy consists in an appeal to the parent Government for redress.

You complain that civil officers are sometimes unmindful that their offices were created for the benefit of the whole community, and not exclusively for their own; but public opinion does not justify resistance to their authority on that account.

The maintenance of the army, and the incidental expenses attending its support, requires very large disbursements in the Territory. These necessarily increase, the price of labor and its products. Hence the length of time the army will remain here, becomes a question in which your constituents are peculiarly interested.

In considering this question it is necessary to refer you to the following clause contained in the proclamation of the President: "The military force now in Utah, and hereafter to be sent there, will not be withdrawn until the inhabitants of that Territory shall manifest a proper sense of the duty which they owe to this Government." In view of this clause, every honorable citizen of this Territory must feel the presence of the army as a reproach upon his patriotism. It therefore behoves you to avoid even the semblance of disloyalty—for in your present condition, it is not sufficient that you manifest a proper sense of that duty which you owe to the Government; but public opinion must be satisfied of your loyalty. It would be unreasonable, under existing circumstances, to expect that the transient population now here will exercise any influence to hasten the removal of the army—a removal contrary to their pecuniary interest—nor can you expect that they will undertake the task of your vindication.

The public press and private correspondence will finally reveal the truth with regard to your community. This must be a work of time, and therefore, I believe that the detachment of the army, now stationed here, will enjoy your fine mountain climate, and have ample time to perfect that discipline, for which as a corps, it is even now greatly distinguished.

The Postmaster General has invited proposals for the transportation of your domestic mails and I hope that the community will soon enjoy the benefits that will result therefrom.

Government has recently established overland mail routes on a most liberal basis. This arrangement will furnish great increased facility for travel and correspondence between the Atlantic and Pacific States. The successful operation of this great enterprise will produce an almost continuous line of settlements extending across the continent—and this, now isolated Territory will be brought into more familiar contact with other portions of the country.

To enable the people to be, to some extent, independent of importations, we should encourage domestic manufactures—but an entire independence in such matters, is neither practicable nor desirable—social intercourse and commercial exchanges are indispensable to true progress—neither communities nor individuals can secure permanent prosperity or happiness in a condition of complete isolation.

Soon after my arrival in this Territory I communicated to the Secretary of War, my views in regard to the supposed practicability of navigating the water of the Yellowstone, including its tributary the Big Horn. By the adoption of this route, navigation might be established from the Missouri river, to a point not exceeding four hundred miles from Salt Lake City. I also requested him to order a detachment from Camp Scott with instructions to make a reconnaissance between Wind river and the confluence of the Yellowstone with the Missouri.

The acts of kindness extended by this people to the Indians, who inhabit these valleys, are creditable to their own generosity and forbearance; but they seem to have confirmed the Indians in slothful and vicious habits—and fostered a spirit of insubordination, which prompts them occasionally to commit acts of violence against their benefactors.

The Government has established Indian farms in this country, which, if considered as a means of inducing Indians to labor, and produce the articles necessary for their subsistence, seems to have been unsuccessful in accomplishing those objects—and unless they can be conducted differently in future, it would be well for the Indian department to purchase food for them, rather than endeavor to induce them to cultivate the soil. The Indians must be fed—the supply of grain is already insufficient, and they cannot subsist much longer on the precarious aid received from the hands of charity.

I will call your attention to certain recent occurrences. A brutal assault was committed by some Indians in the vicinity of Spanish Fork, upon the persons of a woman and her child. To enable the agent to make the arrest of the offenders it became necessary to resort to a military force, and an Indian, not one of those charged with the offence was unfortunately killed. The culprits were arrested and are now in confinement, awaiting their trial before the 2nd U. S. District Court. The dead bodies of two respectable citizens of Millard county were found recently near the road on Chicken creek supposed to have been killed by Indians. Superintendent Foreney is now in the neighborhood of Mantle to investigate the affairs, and will endeavor to secure the persons of the murderers. The verdict of the coroner's jury in the case, is now in the hands of the United States District attorney, who will prosecute the murderers when arrested.

I cannot too strongly urge upon you the necessity of extending the benefit of common schools to every child in the Territory—and would recommend the levying a general tax for the support of such schools. On the proper education of its youths, depends the prosperity of a community. The statistical reports of the prisons in this and other countries show that proportion of crime is in an inverse ratio to the amount of proper education received.

I would call your attention to providing for enforcing the laws relating to bridging the irrigating ditches across the public highways—under present circumstances they are causes of serious inconveniences to travelers.

I entertain the opinion that it has become indispensably necessary to provide for the building a secure and commodious jail at some point near the centre of population, for the confinement of prisoners charged with criminal offences and recommend a tax for defraying the expense of its construction.

As errors in the forms of legislature are liable to occur in all new Territories, I would suggest the appointment of a committee to revise the acts and resolutions of the Legislative Assembly of this Territory, with instructions to it, to report to your next annual meeting or earlier if deemed expedient.

It is necessary that you take early action in filling offices vacant in the Territory, in consequence of the parties having failed to be qualified.

There does not appear to have been any provision made hitherto for defraying the expenses of the courts, when sitting on Territorial business, nor for the payment of the charges for the maintenance and custody of prisoners. The importance of this subject, will I hope secure for it your consideration.

I herewith transmit the report of the Auditor of Public Accounts, and that of the Territorial Treasurer, which I submit for your action.

A. CUMMING.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.

SIR:—In an article entitled Squatter Sovereignty vs. the Constitution, which appeared in the third number of your paper; we endeavored to show that the power to legislate for the punishment of crimes in the Territories, is vested in Congress by the Constitution, and consequently that the people of the Territories cannot exercise legislative powers except they be delegated to them by the Congress of the United States.

And while we admit that our Constitution guarantees the freest exercise of religious conscience, consistent with the most enlightened system of moral ethics; it is our purpose to show that Mormonism inculcates doctrines that are incompatible with the provisions of the Constitution, and consequently that the one or the other must undergo some modification, or they cannot exist together. The 5th art. of amendments to the Constitution, provides that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment, or indictment of a Grand Jury,"

"nor shall he be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself;" "nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law."

Thus defining in unmistakable terms the manner in which punishment shall be inflicted upon offenders against justice and morality. These provisions of the Constitution are of the most sacred character, and designed to protect the citizen in the enjoyment of the fullest liberty of thought and action, compatible with the laws of the State; but in Utah there is an ecclesiastical code which is paramount to the civil statutes, and claims the obedience of its subjects irrespective of every other consideration. And it is an attempt on the part of the Elders of the Mormon Church, to enforce the observance of this code, and inflict its penalties upon the citizens of the Territory, in violation of their Constitutional rights that has given rise to the entire catalogue of their past and present grievances.

This code enjoins the practice of polygamy as essential to their exaltation into celestial glory, and yet they have made no provision for such an institution in the statutes of the Territory. Much of this code is confided to the subject secretly, and under an oath, or obligation which they call covenants, and make death the penalty for violating, or deviating them, which they also attempt boldly to execute in violation of the Constitutional rights of the citizen. And in their blinded zeal for the observance of this bloody ritual, they seem to hold the civil judiciary in the most perfect contempt, and contumely and obloquy are the reward of those who dare to give it their support, as will appear from remarks by Pres. J. M. Grant, March 2nd, 1856, viz:

"Last Sunday the President chastised some of the apostles and bishops who were on the Grand Jury. Did he fully succeed in cleaning away the fog, which surrounded them, and in removing the blindness from their eyes? no, for they could go to their room and again disagree, though to their credit it must be admitted that a brief explanation made them unanimous in their action."

"Not long ago I heard that in a certain case, the traverse jury were eleven against one, and what is more singular, the one alone was right in the views of the case."

Several had got into the fog to such and eat the fifth of a gentile law court, ostensibly a court of Utah, though I call it a gentile court. Why? Because it does not magnify the laws of Utah, as provided for in the organic act."

Also from remarks by Pres. B. Young, on same date:

"Can you discern between the righteous and the wicked? You know I have spoken of a certain class of men who frequent our law shops, and every other wicked hole they can get into?"

The vilest sinner on the earth who will come with a bland countenance, using the airs that belong to the etiquette of the day, you receive as a very fine man, a beautiful gentleman. Do you not know that you need the spirit of the Almighty to look through a man, and discern what is in his heart; while his face smiles upon you, and his words flow smoothly as oil?

If you had the power of God upon you, you might see the sword lurking within him, and that if he had the power he would plunge it in your heart, and destroy you from the earth.

I meet many such men in these streets, and in the houses round about."

The remarks alluded to in the above paragraphs are published in the 6th Vol. of the Deseret News, on page 412, and though purporting to be a rebuke to lawyers and petty loggers, the main object, and effect was to throw obloquy upon the character of law courts and drive the people into their ecclesiastical courts, for the adjustment of all grievances.

A few paragraphs will suffice as a sample of the tone of this entire discourse:

"Old grey-headed men who ought to be fathers in Israel, were impelled as a jury on the case I have attended to, and what were they after? The fog, the froth and spawn of Hell, and they feasted upon it."

We have been driven from the face of man into the wilderness, and now the poor devils follow us to stir up strife, and to produce the spawn of hell, in which they delight to live, and upon which they feed, and the simple ones of this community will beg of them, "cannot I be on the Grand Jury, cannot I get a little to do in the Court?"

We could multiply examples of such paragraphs, from the "Deseret News," not by the leading members of the Church only, but by their understrickers, to whom a hint on subjects of this kind is deemed a sufficient license for the indulgence of the vilest epithets, and threats of intimidation."

At length this crusade against the Judiciary, accomplished the purposes for which it was raised. The Judiciary was paralyzed, and for the last two years, scarcely so much as a Magistrate's court has been held in the Territory.

I make these assertions, not upon speculative ideas, but upon observation. But it would be unjust to charge the entire people of Utah with having acquiesced in this opposition to the Judiciary. Many desired to see the laws vindicated, and gave them their support, but in consequence thereof were made the objects of the most unrelenting persecution, which pursued them in many instances to banishment from the Territory. It is useless for them to argue the corrupt conduct and rulings of what they are pleased to call "Gentile Courts," in justification of their persecutions, for this certainly could not apply to the inferior courts of the Territory, which were of their own creation.

After suppressing the Judiciary, and depriving men of their Constitutional rights of trial, by due process of law, it is to be regretted, that crimes did not cease to be committed, although under the ecclesiastical code, the most barbarous punishment was inflicted, and that too in a most summary manner, the nature and tendency of which we shall reserve for future comments.

UTANUS.

December 21, 1858.

CARSON VALLEY, Dec. 4, 1858.

This locality is daily increasing in importance. The Humboldt Valley Telegraph is completed to this point, and we are now in constant communication with Placerville, Sacramento and San Francisco.

A press has arrived and we hope to have a newspaper in full blast next week. I was at "Rag-Town," a few days ago and while there the news came in that a "big talk" was about to take place on "Carson Lake," some twenty-five miles distant from "Rag-Town," by Major F. Dodge, the Indian Agent, to some of his Plute wards. Immediately myself and two others saddled up and rode over to the council, where we were kindly received by the Agent, who furnished me with the names of the principal chiefs, viz: O-derk-e-o, (Tall Man,) Pe-tod-se-ka, (White Spot,) and To-sar-ke, (Grey Head.) These chiefs sat in the centre of a half circle which was formed by the bucks on the right, and the squaws and children on the left, all sitting close together, side by side, facing the agent; through the courtesy of whom was permitted to count them, and found there was 1,028, three head chiefs, 848 men, 372 women, and 405 children.

Major F. Dodge addressed them through his interpreter, for two hours, in a most able manner. I find he is one of our Practical, Deuter kind of men.

He explained to the Indians the true nature of his mission; that the presents was sent to them by their Great Father at Washington, and of whom, by the bye, they had never heard of before. He told the chiefs he should hold them responsible for the good conduct of their different bands, and that if any difficulties occurred between them and the whites they must apply to him for redress, and not take the law in their own hands by killing and stealing. If they committed any of these crimes their Great Father would send out his war Captain, with a host of braves, and sweep the last one of them from the face of their hunting grounds. He also explained to them the fatal results of whisky drinking, and against bartering the virtue of their companions.

He told them there were many mean white men in their country, ready to take the last buckskin and give them poison in return, called whisky. His whole discourse was good, kind, moral advice, directed against crime and the whisky trafficker, and encouraging to the poor, down trodden, outcast red man.

I could plainly see the Major caused new rays of hope to penetrate their benighted souls, and God grant the Government may permit him to carry them into effect.

The agent then distributed the presents, to the most needy a blanket, to another a shirt, and to some a pair of pants, frying pans, butcher knives, tobacco, &c. The squaws received five yards blue drilling or calico thread, needles, &c.

The agent now dismissed this portion of his charge amidst unanimous exclamations of "Good American Cap-tan," and of whom, they may be well proud; for in Major Dodge, the Indians have a kind and devoted protector, and the Government an efficient and faithful public servant.

He informed me that he had finished his trip on the Carson river for this season, having traveled from its source to its sink, and is now preparing for a similar one to the Truckee river and Pyramid Lake.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, December 22d, 1858.

ED. VALLEY TALK:

SIR: With your permission I would call your readers' attention to a statement in the Church Organ of the 15th inst., headed "Now, dylam Agaln." The writer of the paragraph in question states that "in the house known as the Empire, East Temple street; a number of men were heard howling, and cursing, and threatening the police."

This statement is simply a lie, having no other foundation than existed in the romantic brain of "Citizen," who seems to have a peculiar aptitude for coloring falsehoods when by so doing he can cast a slur upon the Gentile portion of our community. The fact is a party of gentlemen were quietly engaged in discussing a few bottles of champagne, occasionally singing a song, by way of varying the entertainment; while thus engaged the "spy police" were frequently observed peering into the window. Notwithstanding this, no notice, whatever, was taken of them. When the party broke up and emerged into the street, several shots were fired by one of the party who was slightly intoxicated.

Again "what could be their object in thus disturbing the public peace we are unable to say, save it were to incite a row with the police, through which to frame a pretext whereby they might be justified in an endeavor to kill" them. For the information of "Citizen" we will state "what could be their object." Some of the party were intending to depart for California the next morning, and a few friends had assembled before they separated, perhaps, forever. In the "States" it is no crime for friends to meet and enjoy themselves according to the bent of their inclination; and we can see no good reason why they should be debarred from that privilege in Zion.

He also says "the following morning several of the rowdies decamped, that they might elude the grasp of the authorities." As to this statement we have only to say that two of the party departed for California, but not for the purpose of eluding "the grasp of the authorities."

THE VALLEY TANNER

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1858.

NUMBER 9.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY

KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS.

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

When we compare the condition of this country, at the present day with what it was one year ago, at the meeting of Congress, we have much reason for gratitude to that Almighty Providence, which has never failed to interpose for our relief, at the most critical periods of our history. One year ago the sectional strife between the North and South on the dangerous subject of slavery, had again become so intense as to threaten the peace and perpetuity of the confederacy. The application for the admission of Kansas, as a State into the Union, fostered this unhappy agitation, and brought the whole subject once more before Congress. It was the desire of every patriot that such measures of the Legislature might be adopted, as would remove the excitement from the States and confine it to the Territories where it legitimately belonged. Much has been done, I am happy to say, towards the accomplishment of this object during the last session of Congress.

The Supreme Court of the United States has previously decided that all American citizens have an equal right to take into the Territories whatever is held as property under the laws of any of the States, and to hold such property there under the guardianship of the Federal Constitution, so long as the territorial condition shall remain.

This is now a well established position, and the proceedings of the last session were alone waiting to give it practical effect. The principle has been recognized, in some form or other, by an almost unanimous vote of both Houses of Congress, that a Territory has a right to come into the Union either as a free or a slave State, according to the will of a majority of its people. The just equality of all the States has thus been vindicated, and a fruitful source of dangerous dissension among them has been removed.

Whilst such has been the beneficial tendency of your legislative proceedings outside of Kansas, their influence has nowhere been so happy as within that Territory itself. Left to manage and control its own affairs in its own way, without pressure of external influence, the revolutionary Topeka organization and all resistance to the Territorial Government established by Congress, have been finally abandoned. As a natural consequence, that fine Territory now appears to be tranquil and prosperous, and is attracting increasing thousands of emigrants to make it their happy home.

The past unfortunate experience of Kansas has enforced the lesson so often already taught, that resistance to lawful authority, under our form of government, cannot fail in the end to prove disastrous to its authors. Had the people of the Territory yielded obedience to the laws enacted by their Legislature, it would at the present moment have contained a larger additional population of industrious and enterprising citizens, who have been deterred from entering its borders by the existence of civil strife and organized rebellion.

It was the resistance to rightful authority, and the persevering attempts to establish a revolutionary government under the Topeka Constitution, which caused the people of Kansas to commit the grave error of refusing to vote for delegates to the Convention to frame a Constitution, under a law not deemed to be fair and just in its provisions. This refusal to vote has been the prolific source of all the evils which have followed. In their hostility to the Territorial government, they disregarded the principle, absolutely essential to the working of our form of government, that a majority of those who vote—not the majority who may remain at home, from whatever cause—must decide the result of the election. For this reason, seeking to take advantage of their own error, they denied the authority of the Convention thus elected to frame a Constitution.

The Convention, notwithstanding, proceeded to adopt a Constitution unquestionable in its general features, and providing for the submission of the slavery question to a vote of a people, which, in my opinion, they were bound to do under the Kansas and Nebraska act. This was the all important question which had alone convulsed the Territory, and yet the opponents of the lawful government, persisting in their first error, refrained from exercising their right to vote, and preferred that slavery should continue, rather than surrender their revolutionary Topeka organization.

A wiser and better spirit seemed to prevail before the first Monday of January last, when an election was held under the Constitution. A majority of the people then voted for the Governor and other State officers, for a member of Congress and members of the State Legislature. This election was warmly contested by the two political parties in Kansas, and a greater vote was polled than at any previous election. A large majority of the members of the Legislature elect belonged to that party which had previously refused to vote. The Anti-Slavery party were thus placed in the ascendant, and the political power of the State was in their own hands. Had Congress admitted Kansas into the Union under the Lecompton Constitution the Legislature might, at the very first session, have submitted the question to a vote of the people, whether they would or would not have a Convention to amend their Constitution either on the slavery or any other question, and have adopted all necessary means for giving speedy effect to the will of the majority. Thus the Kansas question would have been immediately and finally settled.

Under these circumstances I submitted to Congress the constitution thus framed, with all the officers already elected necessary to put the State government into operation, accompanied by a strong recommendation in favor of the admission of Kansas as a State. In the course of my long public life I have never performed any official act which, in the retrospect, has afforded me more heartfelt satisfaction. Its admission could have inflicted no possible injury on any human being, whilst it would, within a brief period, have restored peace to Kansas, and harmony to the Union. In that event, the slavery question would ere this have been finally settled, according to the legally expressed will of a majority of the voters, and popular sovereignty would thus have been vindicated in a constitutional manner.

With my deep convictions of duty, I could have pursued no other course. It is true, that, as an individual, I had expressed an opinion, both before and during the session of the Convention, in favor of submitting the remaining clauses of the Constitution, as well as that concerning slavery, to the people. But, acting in an official character, neither myself nor any human authority had the power to rejudge the proceeding of the Convention, and declare the Constitution which it had framed to be a nullity. To have done this would have been a violation of the Kansas and Nebraska act, which left the people of the Territory "perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." It would equally have violated the great principle of popular sovereignty, at the foundation of our institutions, to deprive the people of the power, if they thought proper to exercise it, of confiding to delegates elected by themselves the trust of framing a Constitution, without requiring them to subject their constituents to the trouble, expense, and delay of a second election. It would have been in opposition to many precedents in our history, commencing in the very best age of the republic, of the admission of Territories as States into the Union, without a previous vote of the people approving their Constitution.

It is to be lamented that a question so insignificant when viewed in its practical effects on the people of Kansas, whether decided one way or the other, should have kindled such a flame of excitement throughout the country. This reflection may prove to be a lesson of wisdom and of warning for our future guidance. Practically considered, the question is simply whether the people of that Territory should first come into the Union and then change any provision in their Constitution not agreeable to themselves, or accomplish the very same object by remaining out of the Union and framing another Constitution in accordance with their will. In either case, the result would be precisely the same. The only difference in point of fact is, that the object would have been much sooner attained, and the pacification of Kansas more speedily effected, had it been admitted as a State during the last session of Congress.

My recommendation, however, for the immediate admission of Kansas, failed to meet the approbation of Congress. They deemed it wiser to adopt a different measure for the settlement of the question. For my own part, I should have been willing to yield my assent to almost any constitutional measure to accomplish this object. I therefore cordially acquiesced in what has been called the English Compromise, and approved the "Act for the admission of the State of Kansas into the Union," upon the terms therein prescribed.

Under the ordinance which accompanied the Lecompton Constitution, the people of Kansas had claimed double the quantity of public lands for the support of common schools which had ever been previously granted to any State upon entering the Union; and also the alternate sections of land for twelve miles on each side of two railroads, proposed to be constructed from the Northern to the Southern boundary, and from the Eastern to the Western boundary of the State.

Congress, deeming these claims unreasonable, provided by the act of May 4, 1858, to which I have just referred, for the admission of the State on an equal footing with the original States, "but upon the fundamental condition precedent" that a majority of the people thereof, at an election to be held for that purpose, should, in place of the very large grants of public lands which they had demanded under the ordinance, accept such grants as had been made to Minnesota and other new States. Under this act, should a majority reject the proposition offered them, "it shall be deemed and held that the people of Kansas do not desire admission into the Union with said constitution under the conditions set forth in said propositions."

In that event, the act authorizes the people of the Territory to elect delegates to form a Constitution and State Government for themselves, "whenever, and not before, it is ascertained by a census, duly and legally taken, that the population of said Territory equals or exceeds the ratio of representation required for a member of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States." The delegates thus assembled "shall first determine by a vote whether it is the wish of the people of the proposed State to be admitted into the Union at that time; and if so, shall proceed to form a Constitution, and take all necessary steps for the establishment of a State Government in conformity with the Federal Constitution. After this Constitution shall have been formed, Congress, carrying out the principles of popular sovereignty and non-intervention, have left 'the mode and manner of its approval or ratification by the people of the proposed State' to be 'prescribed by law,' and they 'shall then be admitted into the Union as a State under such Constitution thus fairly and legally made, with or without slavery, as said Constitution may prescribe.'"

An election was held throughout Kansas, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, on the second day of August last, and it resulted in the rejection, by a large majority, of the proposition submitted to the people by Congress. This having been done, they are now authorized to form another constitution, preparatory to admission into the Union, at any time until their number, ascertained by a census, shall equal or exceed the ratio required to elect a member to the House of Representatives.

It is not probable, in the present state of the case, that a third constitution can be lawfully framed and presented to Congress by Kansas, before its population shall have reached the designated number. Nor is it to be presumed that, after their sad experience in resisting the territorial laws, they will attempt to adopt a constitution in express violation of the provisions of an act of Congress. During the session of 1856, much of the time Congress was occupied on the question of admitting Kansas under the Topeka constitution.

Again, nearly the whole of the last session was devoted to the question of its admission under the Lecompton Constitution. Surely it is not unreasonable to require the people of Kansas to wait before making the third attempt until the number of their inhabitants shall amount to ninety-three thousand four hundred and twenty. During this brief period the harmony of the States, as well as the great business interests of the country, demand that the people of the Union shall not for a third time be convulsed by another agitation on the Kansas question. By waiting for a short time, and acting in obedience to law, Kansas will glide into the Union without the slightest impediment.

This excellent provision, which Congress have applied to Kansas, ought to be extended and rendered applicable to all Territories, which may hereafter seek admission into the Union.

Whilst Congress possess the undoubted power of admitting a new State into the Union, however small may be the number of its inhabitants, yet this power ought not, in my opinion, to be exercised before the population shall amount to the ratio required by the act for admission of Kansas. Had this been previously the rule, the country would have escaped all and misfortunes to which it has been exposed by the Kansas question.

Of course, it would be unjust to give this rule a retrospective application, and exclude a State which, acting upon the past practice of the government, has already formed its constitution, elected its Legislature and other officers, and is now prepared to enter the Union.

The rule ought to be adopted, whether we consider its bearing upon the people of the Territories or upon the people of the existing States. Many of the serious dissensions which have prevailed in Congress and throughout the country, would have been avoided, had this rule been established at an earlier period of the government.

Immediately upon the formation of a new Territory, people from different States and from foreign countries rush into it, for the laudable purpose of improving their condition. Their first duty to themselves is to open and cultivate farms; to construct roads; to establish schools, to erect places of religious worship, and to devote their energies generally to reclaim the wilderness and to lay the foundations of a flourishing and prosperous commonwealth. If, in this incipient condition, with a population of a few thousand, they should prematurely enter the Union, they are oppressed by the burden of State taxation, and the means necessary for the improvement of the Territory and the advancement of their own interests, are thus diverted to very different purposes.

The federal government has ever been a liberal parent to the Territories, and a generous contributor to the useful enterprises of the early settlers. It has paid the expenses of their governments and legislative assemblies out of the common treasury, and thus relieved them from a heavy charge. Under those circumstances, nothing can be better calculated to retard their material progress, than to divert them from their useful employments, by prematurely exciting angry political contests among themselves, for the benefit of aspiring leaders. It is surely no hardship for embryo Governors, Senators and members of Congress, to wait until the number of inhabitants shall equal those of a single Congressional district.

They surely ought not to be permitted to rush into the Union, with a population less than one-half of several of the large counties in the interior of some of the States. This was the condition of Kansas when it made application to be admitted under the Topeka constitution. Besides, it requires some time to render the mass of a population collected in a new Territory, at all homogeneous, and to unite them on anything like a fixed policy. Establish the rule, and all will look forward to it and govern themselves accordingly.

But justice to the people of the several States requires that this rule should be established by Congress. Each State is entitled to two senators and at least one representative in Congress. Should the people of the States fail to elect a Vice President, the power devolves upon the Senate to elect this officer from the two highest candidates on the list. In case of the death of the President, the Vice President thus elected by the Senate, becomes President of the United States. On all questions of legislation, the senators from the smallest States of the Union have an equal vote with those from the largest.

The same may be said in regard to the ratification of treaties, and of Executive appointments. All this has worked admirably in practice, whilst it conforms in principle with the character of a government instituted by sovereign States. I presume no American citizen would desire the slightest change in the arrangement. Still, is it not unjust and unequal to the existing States to invest some forty or fifty thousand people collected in a Territory, with the attributes of sovereignty, and place them on an equal footing with Virginia and New York in the Senate of the States?

For these reasons, I earnestly recommend the passage of a general act, which shall provide that upon the application of a territorial legislature, declaring their belief that the Territory contains a number of inhabitants, which, if in a State, would entitle them to elect a member of Congress, it shall be the duty of the President to cause a census of the inhabitants to be taken, and if found sufficient, then by the terms of this act to authorize them to proceed "in their own way" to frame a State Constitution, preparatory to admission into the Union. I also recommend that an appropriation may be made, to enable the President to take a census of the people of Kansas.

The present condition of the Territory of Utah, when contrasted with what it was one year ago, is a subject for congratulation. It was then in a state of open rebellion, and cost what it might, the character of this government required that this rebellion should be suppressed, and the Mormons compelled to yield obedience to the constitution and laws. In order to accomplish this object, as I informed you in my last annual message, I appointed a new governor instead of Brigham Young, and other Federal officers to take the place of those who, consulting their personal safety, had found it necessary to withdraw from the Territory. To protect these civil officers, and to aid them, as a posse comitatus, in the execution of the laws in case of need, I ordered a detachment of the army to accompany them to Utah. The necessity for adopting these measures is now demonstrated.

On the 15th of September, 1857, Gov. Young issued his proclamation, in the style of an independent sovereign, announcing his purpose to resist, by force of arms, the entry of the United States troops into our own Territory of Utah. By this he required all the forces in the Territory, to hold themselves in readiness to march, at a moment's notice, to repel any and all such invasions, and established martial law from its date throughout the Territory. These proved to be no idle threats. Forts Bridger and Supply were vacated and burnt down by the Mormons, to deprive our troops of a shelter after a long and fatiguing march. Orders were issued by Daniel H. Wells, styling himself "Lieutenant General, Nauvoo Legion," to stampede the animals of the United States troops on their march, to set fire to their trains, to burn the grass and the whole country before them and on their flanks, to keep them from sleeping by night surprises, and to blockade the road by felling trees, and destroying the fords of rivers, &c., &c., &c.

These were promptly and effectually obeyed. On the 4th of October, 1857, the Mormons captured and burned on Green river, three of our supply trains, consisting of seventy-five wagons loaded with provisions and tents for the army, and drove away several hundred animals. This diminished the supply of ra, and our adjoining Territories. The local governments of these States are perfectly helpless, and are kept in a state of constant alarm by the Indians. They have not the power, if they possessed the will, even to restrain lawless Mexicans from passing the border and committing depredations on our remote settlers. A state of anarchy and violence prevails throughout that distant frontier. The laws are a dead letter, and life and property are wholly insecure. For this reason the settlement of Arizona is arrested, whilst it is of great importance that a chain of inhabitants should extend all along its southern border, sufficient for their own protection and that of the United States mail passing to and from California. Well-founded apprehensions are now entertained, that the Indians, and wandering Mexicans equally lawless, may break up the important stage and postal communication recently established between our Atlantic and Pacific possessions.

[Continued on 2nd page.]

[Continued from 4th page.]

This passes very near to the Mexican boundary throughout the whole length of Arizona. I can imagine no possible remedy for these evils, and no mode of restoring law and order on that remote and unsettled frontier, but for the government of the United States to assume a temporary protectorate over the northern portions of Chihuahua and Sonora, and to establish military posts within the same; and this I earnestly recommend to Congress. This protection may be withdrawn as soon as local governments shall be established in these Mexican States capable of performing their duties to the United States, restraining the lawless and preserving peace along the borders.

I do not doubt that this measure will be viewed in a friendly spirit by the Government and people of Chihuahua and Sonora, as it will prove equally effectual for the protection of their citizens on that remote and lawless frontier, as for citizens of the United States.

A TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENT FOR ARIZONA.

And in this connection, permit me to recall your attention to the condition of Arizona. The population of that Territory, numbering as is alleged, more than ten thousand souls, are practically without a government, without laws and without any regular administration of justice. Murder and other crimes are committed with impunity. This state of things calls loudly for redress; and I, therefore, repeat my recommendation for the establishment of a Territorial Government over Arizona.

THE ISTHMUS.

The political condition of the narrow isthmus of Central America through which transit routes pass between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, presents a subject of deep interest to all commercial nations. It is over these transits, that a large proportion of the trade and travel between the European and Asiatic continents, is destined to pass. To the United States these routes are of incalculable importance, as a means of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific possessions. The latter now extend throughout seventeen degrees of latitude on the Pacific coast, embracing the important State of California and the flourishing Territories of Oregon and Washington. All commercial nations, therefore, have a deep and direct interest, that these communications shall be rendered secure from interruption. If an arm of the sea connecting the two oceans, penetrated through Nicaragua and Costa Rica, it could not be pretended that these States would have the right to arrest or retard its navigation, to the injury of other nations. The transit by land over this narrow isthmus, occupies nearly the same position. It is a highway in which they themselves have little interest, when compared with the vast interests of the rest of the world. Whilst their rights of sovereignty ought to be respected, it is the duty of other nations to require, that this important passage shall not be interrupted, by the civil wars, and revolutionary outbreaks, which have so frequently occurred in this region. The stake is too important, to be left at the mercy of rival companies, claiming to hold conflicting contracts with Nicaragua.

The commerce of other nations is not to stand still and wait, the adjustment of such petty controversies. The government of the United States expects no more than this, and they will not be satisfied with less. They would not if they could, derive any advantage from the Nicaragua transit, not common to the rest of the world. Its neutrality and protection for the common use of all nations, is their only object. They have no objection that Nicaragua shall demand and receive a fair compensation from the companies and individuals who may traverse the route; but they insist that it shall never hereafter be closed by any arbitrary decree of that government. If disputes arise between it and those with whom they have entered into contracts, these must be adjusted by some fair tribunal provided for the purpose, and the route must not be closed pending the controversy. This is our whole policy and it cannot fail to be acceptable to other nations.

All these difficulties might be avoided, if consistently with the good faith of Nicaragua, the use of this transit could be thrown open to the general competition; providing at the same time for the payment of a reasonable rate to the Nicaraguan government, on passengers and freight.

In August, 1852, the Accessory Transit Company made its first interoceanic trip over the Nicaraguan route, and continued in successful operation, with great advantage to the public, until the 18th February, 1856, when it was closed and the grant to this company, as well as its charter, were summarily and arbitrarily revoked by the government of President Rivas. Previous to this date, however, in 1851, serious disputes concerning the settlement of their accounts had arisen between the company and the government, threatening the interruption of the route at any moment. These the United States in vain endeavored to compose. It would be useless to narrate the various proceedings which took place between the parties, up till the time when the transit was discontinued. Suffice it to say that since February, 1856, it has remained closed, greatly to the prejudice of citizens of the United States. Since that time the competition has ceased between the rival routes of Panama and Nicaragua, and, in consequence thereof, an unjust and unreasonable amount has been exacted from our citizens for their passage to and from California.

A treaty was signed on the 16th day of November, 1857, by the Secretary of State and Minister of Nicaragua, under the stipulations of which the use and protection of the transit route would have been secured, not only to the United States, but equally to all other nations. How and on what pretexts this treaty has failed to receive the ratification of the Nicaraguan government, will appear by the papers herewith communicated from the State Department. The principle objection seems to have been to the provision authorizing the United States to employ force to keep the route open in case Nicaragua should fail to perform her duty in this respect. From the feebleness of that republic, its frequent changes of government, and its constant internal dissensions, this had become a most important stipulation, and one essentially necessary not only for the security of the route, but for the safety of American citizens passing and repassing to and from our Pacific possessions. Were such a stipulation embraced in a treaty between the United States and Nicaragua, the knowledge of this fact would of itself, most probably, prevent hostile parties from committing aggressions on the route, and render our actual interference for its protection unnecessary.

The executive government of this country, in its intercourse with foreign nations, is limited to the employment of diplomacy alone. When this fails, it can proceed no farther. It cannot legitimately resort to force, without the direct authority of Congress, except in resisting and repelling hostile attacks. It would have no authority to enter the territory of Nicaragua, even to prevent the destruction of the transit, and protect the lives and property of our own citizens on their passage. It is true, that on a sudden emergency of this character, the President would direct any armed force in the vicinity to march to their relief; but in doing this, he would act upon his own responsibility.

Under these circumstances, I earnestly recommend to Congress, the passage of an act authorizing the President, under such restrictions as they may deem proper, to employ the land and naval forces of the United States in preventing the transit from being obstructed or closed by lawless violence, and in protecting the lives and property of American citizens, traveling thereupon, requiring at the same time that these forces shall be withdrawn the moment the danger shall have passed away. Without such a provision, our citizens will be constantly exposed to interruption in their progress, and to lawless violence.

A similar necessity exists for the passage of such an act, for the protection of Panama and Tehuantepec routes.

In reference to the Panama route, the United States by their existing treaty with New Granada, expressly guarantees the neutrality of the Isthmus, "with the view that free transit from the one to the other sea may not be interrupted or embarrassed in any future time while this treaty exists."

In regard to the Tehuantepec route, which has been recently opened under the most favorable auspices, our treaty with Mexico of 30th December, 1853, secures to the citizens of the United States, the right of transit over it for their persons and merchandise, and stipulates that neither government shall "interpose any obstacle" thereto. It also concedes to the United States the "right to transport across the Isthmus, in closed bags, the mails of the United States not intended for distribution along the line of the communication; also, the effects of the United States Government and its citizens which may be intended for transit, and not for distribution on the Isthmus, free of custom-house or other charges by the Mexican Government."

These treaty stipulations with New Granada and Mexico, in addition to the considerations applicable to the Nicaragua route, seem to require legislation for the purpose of carrying them into effect.

The injuries which have been inflicted upon our citizens in Costa Rica and Nicaragua, during the last two or three years, have received the prompt attention of this Government. Some of these injuries were of the most aggravated character. The transaction of Virgin Bay in April, 1856, when a company of unarmed Americans, who were in no way connected with any beligerent conduct or party, were fired upon by the troops of Costa Rica, and numbers of them killed and wounded, was brought to the knowledge of Congress by my predecessor soon after its occurrence, and was also presented to the Government of Costa Rica, for that immediate investigation and redress which the nature of the case demanded. A similar course was pursued with reference to other outrages in these countries, some of which were hardly less aggravated in their character than the transaction at Virgin Bay.

At the time, however, when our present minister to Nicaragua was appointed, in December, 1857, no redress had been obtained for any of these wrongs, and no reply had even been received to the demands which had been made by this Government upon that of Costa Rica, more than a year before. Our minister was instructed; therefore, to lose no time in expressing to those Governments the deep regret with which the President had witnessed this inattention to the just claims of the United States, and in demanding their prompt and satisfactory adjustment. Unless this demand shall be complied with at an early day, it will only remain for this Government to adopt such other measures as may be necessary, in order to obtain for itself that justice which it has in vain attempted to secure by peaceful means, from the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica. While it has shown and will continue to show, the most sincere regard for the rights and honor of these Republics, it cannot permit this regard to be met by and utter neglect, on their part, of what is due to the Government and citizens of the United States.

NEW GRENADA.

Against New Grenada we have long standing causes of complaint, arising out of the unsatisfied claims of our citizens upon that Republic; and to those have been more recently added the outrages committed upon our citizens at Panama, in April, 1856. A treaty for the adjustment of these difficulties was concluded by the Secretary of State and the Minister of New Grenada, in September, 1857, which contained just and acceptable provisions for that purpose. This treaty was transmitted to Bogota, and was ratified by the Government of New Grenada, but with certain amendments. It was not, however, returned to his city until after the close of the last session of the Senate. It will be immediately transmitted to that body for advice and consent, and should this be obtained, it will remove all our existing causes of complaint against New Grenada, on the subject of claims.

Questions have arisen between the two governments, as to the right of New Granada, to levy a tonnage duty upon the vessels of the United States in its ports of the Isthmus, and to levy a passenger tax upon our citizens arriving in that country, whether with a design to remain there or to pass from the ocean by the transit route; and also a tax upon the goods of the United States transported over the Panama Railroad. The Government of New Granada has been informed, that the United States would consider the collection of either of these taxes, as an act of violation of the treaty between the two countries, and as such would be resisted by the United States. At the same time, we are prepared to discuss these questions in a spirit of amity and justice, and with a sincere desire to adjust them in a satisfactory manner. A negotiation for that purpose has already been commenced. No effort has recently been made to collect these taxes, nor is any anticipated under present circumstances.

BRAZIL.

With the empire of Brazil our relations are of the most friendly character. The productions of the two countries, and especially those of an agricultural nature, are such as to invite extensive mutual exchanges. A large quantity of American flour is consumed in Brazil, whilst more than treble the amount in value of Brazilian coffee is consumed in the United States. Whilst this is the case, a heavy duty has been levied, until very recently, upon the importation of American flour into Brazil. I am gratified, however, to be able to inform you that in September last this has been reduced from $1.32 to about forty-nine cents per barrel, and the duties on other articles of our productions have been diminished in nearly the same proportion.

I regret to state that the Government of Brazil still continues to levy an export duty of about 11 per cent, on coffee, notwithstanding this article is admitted free from duty in the United States. This is a heavy charge upon the consumers of coffee in our country, as we purchase half of the entire surplus crop of that article raised in Brazil. Our Minister, under instructions will reiterate his efforts to have this export duty removed; and it is hoped that the enlightened government of the Emperor will adopt this wise, just and equal policy. In that event, there is good reason to believe that the commerce between the two countries will greatly increase, much to the advantage of both.

The claims of our citizens against the government of Brazil are not, in the aggregate, of very large amount; but some of these rest upon plain principles of justice, and their settlement ought not longer to be delayed. A renewed and earnest, and I trust successful effort, will be made by our Minister, to procure their final adjustment.

PARAGUAY.

On the 2nd of June last, Congress passed a joint resolution authorizing the President to adopt such measures and such force as, in his judgment, may be necessary and advisable, "for the purpose of adjusting the difference between the United States and the republic of Paraguay, in connection with the attack on the United States steamer Water Witch, and with other measures referred to in his annual message. And on the 12th July following, they made an appropriation to defray the expenses and compensation of a commissioner to that republic, should the President deem it proper to make such an appointment.

In compliance with these enactments, I have appointed a commissioner who has proceeded to Paraguay, with full power and instructions to settle the difficulties in an amicable and peaceful manner, if this be practicable. His experience and discretion justify the hope that he may prove successful in convincing the Paraguayan government that it is due, both to honor and justice, that they should voluntarily and promptly make atonement for the wrongs which they have committed against the United States, and indemnify our injured citizens whom they have forcibly despoiled of their property.

Should our commissioner prove unsuccessful, after a sincere and earnest effort to accomplish the object of his mission, then no alternative will remain, but the employment of force to obtain "just satisfaction" from Paraguay. In view of this contingency, the Secretary of the Navy, under my direction, has fitted out and dispatched a naval force, to rendezvous near Buenos Ayres, which, it is believed, will prove sufficient for the occasion. It is my earnest desire, however, that it may not be found necessary to resort to this last alternative.

THE CRISIS AND THE IRON INTERESTS EXPLAINED. When Congress met in December last, the business of the country had just been crushed by one of those periodical revolutions which are the inevitable consequence of our unsound and extravagant system of bank credits and inflated currency. With all the elements of national wealth in abundance, our manufactures were suspended, our useful public and private enterprises were arrested, and thousands of laborers were deprived of employment and reduced to want.

Universal distress prevailed among the commercial, manufacturing, and mechanical classes. This revolution was felt more severely in the United States, because similar causes had produced the like deplorable effects throughout the commercial nations of Europe. All were experiencing sad reverses at the same moment. Our manufacturers everywhere suffered severely, not because of the recent reduction in the tariff of duties on imports, but because there was no demand for any price for their productions. The people were obliged to restrict themselves in their purchases to articles of prime necessity. In the general prostration of business, the iron manufacturers in different States probably suffered more than any other class, and much distress was the inevitable consequence, among the great number of workmen who had been employed in this useful branch of our industry. There could be no supply where there was no demand. To present an example, there could be no demand for railroad iron after the significant system of railroads, extending its branches to every portion of the Union, had been brought to a dead pause. The same consequences have resulted from similar causes to many other branches of useful manufactures. It is self evident that where there is no ability to purchase manufactured articles, these cannot be sold, and consequently must cease to be produced.

No government, and especially a government of such limited power as that of the United States, could have prevented the late revolution. The whole commercial world seemed for years to have been rushing to this catastrophe. The same ruinous consequences would have followed in the United States, whether the duties upon foreign imports had remained as they were under the tariff of 1816, or had been raised to a much higher standard. The tariff of 1857 had no agency in the revolution. The general causes existing throughout the world could not have been controlled by the legislation of any particular country.

A BANKRUPT LAW RECOMMENDED.

The periodical revolutions which have existed in our past history, may be said to return at intervals, as long as we permit an unsound system of bank credits to prevail. They will, however, be the less severe in future, because it is not to be expected, at least for many years to come, that the commercial nations of Europe, with whose interests our own are so materially involved, will expose themselves to similar calamities. But this subject was treated so much at large in my last annual message that I shall not now pursue it further. Still I cannot fail to notice the recommendation in favor of a uniform bankrupt law, applicable to banking institutions. This is all the direct power over the subject which, I believe, the Federal Government possesses. Such a law would mitigate, though it might not prevent the evil. The instinct of self preservation might produce a wholesome restraint upon their banking business, if they knew in advance that a suspension of specie payments would inevitably produce their civil ruin.

But the effects of the revolution are now slowly but surely passing away. The energy and enterprise of our citizens, with our unbounded resources, will within the period of another year, restore a state of wholesome industry and trade. Capital has again accumulated in our large cities. The rate of interest is there very low. Confidence is gradually reviving, and so soon as it is discovered that this capital can be profitably employed in commercial and manufacturing enterprises, and in the construction of railroads and other works of public and private improvement, prosperity will again smile throughout the land. It is vain, however, to disguise the fact from ourselves, that a speculative inflation of our currency, without a corresponding inflation in other countries where manufactures come into competition with our own, must ever produce disastrous results to our domestic manufactures. No Tariff, short of absolute prohibition, can prevent these evil consequences.

In connection with this subject it is proper to refer to our financial condition. The same causes which have produced pecuniary distress throughout the country, have so reduced the amount of imports from foreign countries, that the revenue, has proved inadequate to meet the necessary expenses of the Government. To supply the deficiency, Congress, by the act of the 23d of December, 1857, authorized the issue of $20,000,000 of Treasury notes, and, this proving inadequate, they authorized, by the act of June 14th, 1858, a loan of $20,000,000, "to be applied to the payment of appropriations made by law."

A REVENUE TARIFF RECOMMENDED.

No statesman would advise, that we should go on increasing the national debt to meet the ordinary expenses of the government. This would be a most ruinous policy. In case of war, our credit must be our chief resource, at least for the first year, and this would be greatly impaired by having contracted a large debt in time of peace. It is our true policy to increase our revenue so as to equal our expenditures. It would be ruinous to continue to borrow. Besides it may be proper to observe, that the incidental protection, thus afforded by a revenue tariff, would at the present moment, to some extent, increase the confidence of the manufacturing interests, and give a fresh impulse to our reviving business. To this, surely no person will object.

In regard to the mode of assessing and collecting duties under a strictly revenue tariff, I have long entertained and often expressed the opinion, that some policy requires this should be done in specific duties, in cases to which they can be properly applied. They are well adapted to commodities which are usually sold by weight or by measure, and which, from their nature are of equal or of nearly equal value. Such, for example, are the article of iron of different classes, raw sugar, and foreign wines and spirits.

SPECIFIC DUTIES.

In my deliberate judgment, specific duties are the best, if not the only means of securing the revenue against false and fraudulent invoices, and such has been the practice adopted for this purpose by other commercial nations. Besides, specific duties would afford to the American manufacturer the incidental advantages to which he is fairly entitled under a revenue tariff. The present system is a sliding scale to his disadvantage. Under it, when prices are high and business prosperous, the duties rise in amount when he least requires their aid. On the contrary, when prices fall, and he is struggling against adversity, the duties are diminished in the same proportion, greatly to his injury.

Neither would there be danger that a higher rate of duty than that intended by Congress, could be levied in the form of specific duties. It would be easy to ascertain the average value of any imported article for a series of years; and instead of subjecting it to an ad valorem duty at a certain rate per centum, to substitute in its place an equivalent specific duty.

By such an arrangement the consumer would not be injured. It is true, he might have to pay a little more duty on a given article in one year; but if so, he would pay a little less in another; and in a series of years these would counterbalance each other, and amount to the same thing, so far as his interest is concerned. This inconvenience would be trifling, when contrasted with the additional security thus afforded against frauds upon the revenue, in which every consumer is directly interested.

I have thrown out these suggestions as the fruit of my own observations, to which Congress, in their better judgment, will give such weight as they may justly deserve.

RECEIPTS AND EXPENSES.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury will explain in detail the operations of that department of the government. The receipts into the treasury from all sources during the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1858, including the treasury notes authorized by the act of December 23, 1857, were seventy millions two hundred and seventy-three thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine dollars and fifty-nine cents, (70,273,539 59) which amount, with the balance of seventeen million seven hundred and ten thousand one hundred and fourteen dollars and twenty-seven cents ($17,710,114 27) remaining in the treasury at the commencement of the year, made an aggregate for the service of the year of eighty-seven millions nine hundred and eighty-three thousand nine hundred and eighty-three dollars and eighty-six cents, ($87,983,983 86.)

The public expenditures during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1858, amount to eighty-one millions five hundred and eighty-five thousand six hundred and sixty-seven dollars and seventy-six cents, ($81,585,667 76) of which nine millions six hundred and eighty-four thousand five hundred and thirty-seven dollars and ninety-nine cents, (9,684,537 99) were applied for the payment of the public debt, and the redemption of treasury notes, with the interest thereon, leaving in the treasury, July 1, 1858, being the commencement of the present fiscal year, six millions three hundred and ninety-eight thousand three hundred and sixteen dollars and ten cents, ($6,398,316 10.)

The receipts into the Treasury, during the first quarter of the present fiscal year, commencing the 1st July, 1858, including one-half of the loan of twenty millions of dollars, with the premium upon it, authorized by the act of 14th June, 1858, were twenty-five millions two hundred and thirty thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine dollars and forty-six cents, ($25,230,879 46) and the estimated receipt for the remaining three quarters, to the 30th June, 1859, from ordinary sources, are thirty-eight millions five hundred thousand dollars ($38,500,000) making, with the balance before stated, an aggregate of seventy millions one hundred and twenty-nine

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. E. CITY, DECEMBER 27, 1858.

THE MESSAGE.

We present to our readers this morning the President's Message, delivered to both Houses of Congress on the 6th inst., from its length it excludes every other item, but as it is a State paper of great interest, no apology we deem necessary for the tax upon our columns.

As an evidence of the rapidity with which it was "put through," we will state that it was just two weeks out from St. Louis, to this City, and eleven days from St. Joseph here.

The Expressman was 30 hours getting from the foot of the Big Mountain on the other side to this place, and had to walk 20 miles "one day," his Mule having perished. This is tall traveling, and we take occasion to return our thanks to our old friends of the Missouri Republican, for the promptness they manifested in seconding our efforts. It was the quickest time the Republican ever made across the plains.

The Message was dispatched in less than an hour after its arrival, to California, and we doubt not our San Francisco friends and neighbors, (for this makes us neighbors,) will receive it by our overland route, from the Missouri river, or St. Joseph, to the Pacific in seventeen days.

Discovery of a New Pass over the Sierra Nevada.

Peter Rice, employed to survey a new road from Downieville to the western line of Sierra county, publishes a report in the Marysville Democrat. Describing the route he went to survey, he says he commenced at Downieville, going by way of Goodyear's Bar and Camp, Nevada, to Garden Valley, with a branch from the head of Woodruff creek, about one mile above the Mountain house, to Fred's Ranch, on the main road between Forest City and Alleghany town, touching at or near Forest City. Fred's Ranch is a point between Galloway's, where Scott's survey of the emigrant road leaves that ridge to descend to Forest City. This will give Marysville a road on the nearest and best route to all those most important mining localities, and will also be that much of the great emigrant road completed on the Henness Pass route. The surveys of the different routes show the altitude at the head of Woodruff creek to be between fourteen and fifteen hundred feet lower than the summit above Galloway's, on the Downieville road.

He then adds: This is a very important item, but there is another which is vastly more important to Marysville, and that is the discovery of a new route on almost a direct line from Downieville to Sierra valley, following the South or East Branch of the North Fork of the Yuba, and passing near the foot of Downieville Buttes, and from thence over a low divide to Sierra valley, and not encountering in an ordinary winter more than three miles of snow, and being practicable for a first-rate turnpike road, or a railroad, and being 700 feet lower than any other Pass leading into California, Noble's Pass not excepted. This has been demonstrated by accurate survey. I have the authority of the best men in Downieville for this. I also conversed with a man to day, who says he has been familiar with the route this season, and has passed over it on foot in one day from Sierra valley to Downieville, between sun and sun, and can do it any day, and that quite a considerable portion of it would only require brushing out to make a good road of it, and the balance is comparatively easy, except some blasting between Downieville and the foot of the Buttes.

EXTRAORDINARY COMPROMISE.—At the last Durham assizes, a very deaf old lady, who had bought an action for damages against a neighbor, was being examined, when the Judge suggested a compromise, and instructed counsel to ask her what she would take to settle matters.

"What will you take?" the gentleman of the bottled wig asked of the old lady. The old lady merely shook her head. "His Lordship wants to know what you will take?" asked the counsel again. This time bawling as loud as ever he could in the old lady's ear. "I think his Lordship kindly," the anointed dame answered stoutly; "and if it is not inconvenient to him, I'll take a little warm ale!"—English paper.

partment, over all roads where the travel will remunerate the contractors.

These recommendations deserve the grave consideration of Congress.

A PACIFIC RAILROAD RECOMMENDED.

I would again call your attention to the construction of a Pacific railroad. Time and reflection have but served to confirm me in the truth and justice of the observations which I made on this subject, in my last annual message, to which I beg leave respectfully to refer.

It is freely admitted that it would be inexpedient for this Government to exercise the power of constructing the Pacific Railroad by its own immediate agents. Such a policy would increase the patronage of the Executive to a dangerous extent, and introduce a system of jobbing and corruption, which no vigilance on the part of federal officials, could either prevent or detect. This can only be done by the keen eye, and active and careful supervision of individual and private interests. The construction of this road ought, therefore, to be committed to companies incorporated by the States; or other agencies whose pecuniary interests would be directly involved. Congress might then assist them in the work by grants of land or of money, or both under such conditions and restrictions as would secure the transportation of troops and munitions of war free from any charge, and that of the United States mail at a fair and reasonable price.

The progress of events since the commencement of your last session, has shown how soon difficulties disappear before a firm and determined resolution. At that time, such a road was deemed, by wise and patriotic men, to be a visionary project. The great distance to be overcome, and the intervening mountains and deserts in the way were obstacles which, in the opinion of many, could not be surmounted. Now, after the lapse of but a single year, these obstacles, it has been discovered, are far less formidable than they were supposed to be; and mail stages, with passengers now pass and re-pass regularly, twice in each week, by a common wagon road between San Francisco and St. Louis, and Memphis, in less than twenty-five days. The service has been as regularly performed as it was in former years between New York and this city.

Whilst disclaiming all authority to appropriate money for the construction of this road, except that derived from the war-making power of the Constitution, there are important collateral considerations urging us to undertake the work as speedily as possible. The first and most momentous of these is, that such a road would be a powerful bond of union between the States East and West of the Rocky Mountains. This is so self-evident as to require no illustration.

But again in a commercial point of view, I consider this the great question of the day. With the Eastern front of our Republic stretching along the Atlantic, and its western front along the Pacific, if all the parts should be united by a safe, easy, and rapid intercommunication, we must necessarily command a very large proportion of the trade both of Europe and Asia. Our recent treaties with China and Japan will open those rich and populous empires to our commerce; and the history of the world proves, that the nation which has gained possession of the trade with Eastern Asia, has always become wealthy and powerful.

The peculiar geographical position of California, and our Pacific possession invites American capital and enterprise into this fruitful field. To reap the rich harvest, however, is an indispensable prerequisite; that we shall first have a railroad, to convey and circulate its products throughout the Union. Besides, such a railroad through our temperate latitude, which would not be impeded by the frosts and snows of winter, nor by the tropical heats of summer, would attract to itself much of the travel and the trade of all nations passing between Europe and Asia.

THE CAPTURED SLAVE.

On the 21st of August last, Lieut. J. N. Moffit, of the United States brig Dolphin, captured the slave "Echo," (formerly the Putnam, of New Orleans,) near Kay Verde, on the coast of Cuba, with more than three hundred African negroes on board. The prize under the command of Lieut. Bradford, of the United States Navy, arrived at Charleston on the 27th August, when the negroes, three hundred and six in number, were delivered into the custody of the U. S. Marshal for the district of South Carolina.

They were first placed in Castle Pinckney, and afterwards in Fort Sumpter, for safe keeping; and were detained there until the 10th September, when the survivors, two hundred and seventy-one in number, were delivered on board the United States steamer Niagara, to be transported to the coast of Africa, under the charge of the agent of the United States to the provision of the act of the 3d March, 1819; in addition to the act prohibiting the slave trade. Under the 2d section of this act, the president is authorized to make such regulations and arrangements as he may deem expedient, for the safe-keeping, support, and removal beyond the limits of the United States, of all such negroes, mulattoes, or persons of color, captured by vessels of the United States, as may be delivered to the marshal of the district into which they are brought; and to appoint a proper person or persons residing upon the coast of Africa, as agent or agents for receiving the negroes, mulattoes, or persons of color, delivered from on board vessels seized in the prosecution of the slave trade by commanders of the United States armed vessels.

A doubt immediately arose as to the true construction of this act. It is quite clear from its terms that the president was authorized to provide, for the safe-keeping penses of the Government, ought to admonish us all, in our respective spheres of duty, to the practice of rigid economy. The objects of expenditure should be limited in number, as far as this may be practicable; and the appropriations necessary to carry them into effect, ought to be disbursed under the strictest accountability. Enlightened economy does not consist in the refusal to appropriate money for constitutional purposes, essential to the defence, progress and prosperity of the republic, but in taking care that none of this money shall be wasted by mismanagement, in its application to the objects designated by law.

Comparisons between the annual expenditure at the present time and what it was ten or twenty years ago are altogether fallacious. The rapid increase of our country in extent and population renders a corresponding increase of expenditure, to some extent, unavoidable. This is constantly creating new objects of expenditure and augmenting the amount required for the old. The true questions, then, are, have these objects been unnecessarily multiplied? or, has the amount expended upon any or all of them been larger than that commports with due economy? In accordance with these principles, the heads of the different executive departments of the government have been instructed to reduce their estimates for the next fiscal year to the lowest standard consistent with the efficiency of the service, and this duty they have performed in a spirit of just economy.

The estimates of the Treasury, War, Navy and Interior Departments, have each been in some degree reduced, and unless a sudden and unforeseen emergency should arise, it is not anticipated that a deficiency will exist in either within the present or the next fiscal year. The Post Office Department is placed in a peculiar position, different from the other departments, and to this I shall hereafter refer.

I invite Congress to institute a rigid scrutiny, to ascertain whether the expenses in all the departments cannot be still further reduced; and I promise them all the aid in my power in pursuing the investigation.

I transmit herewith the reports made to me by the Secretaries of War, of the Navy, of the Interior and of the Postmaster General. They each contain valuable information, and important recommendations, to which I invite the attention of Congress.

INCREASE OF THE NAVY.

In my last annual message I took occasion to recommend the immediate construction of ten small steamers of light draught, for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the navy. Congress responded to the recommendation, by authorizing the construction of eight of them. The progress which has been made in executing this authority, is stated in the report of the Secretary of the Navy. I concur with him in the opinion that a greater number of this class of vessels is necessary, for the purpose of protecting in a more efficient manner the persons and property of American citizens on the high seas and in foreign countries; as well as in guarding more effectually our own coasts. I accordingly recommend the passage of an act for this purpose.

The suggestions contained in the report of the Secretary of the Interior, especially those in regard to the disposition of the public domain, the pension and bounty land system, the policy towards the Indians, and the amendment of our patent laws, are worthy of the serious consideration of Congress.

DEFICIT IN THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

The Post Office Department occupies a position very different from that of the other Departments. For many years it was the policy of the Government to render this a self-sustaining Department, and if this cannot now be accomplished, in the present condition of the country, we ought to make as near an approach to it as may be practicable.

The Postmaster General is placed in a most embarrassing position by the existing law. He is obliged to carry these into effect. He has no other alternative. He finds, however, that this cannot be done without heavy demands upon the Treasury over and above what is received for postage; and these have been progressively increasing from year to year until they amounted for the last fiscal year ending on the 30th of June, 1858, to more than four millions and a half of dollars; whilst it is estimated that for the present fiscal year they will amount to $6,290,000. These sums are exclusive of the annual appropriation of $700,000 for "compensation for the mail service performed for the two houses of Congress and the other departments and offices of the government in the transportation of free matter."

The cause of these large deficits is mainly attributable to the increased expense of transporting the mails. In 1832 the sum paid for this service was but a fraction above four millions and a quarter. Since that year it has annually increased until in 1858 it has reached more than eight millions and a quarter; and for the service of 1859 it is estimated it will amount to more than ten millions of dollars.

The receipts of the Post Office Department can be made to approach or to equal its expenditure only by means of the legislation of Congress. In applying any remedy, care should be taken that the people shall not be deprived of the advantages, which they are fairly entitled to enjoy from the Post Office Department. The principal remedies recommended to the consideration of Congress by the Postmaster General are to restore the former rate of postage upon single letters to five cents, to substitute for the franking privilege the delivery to those now entitled to enjoy it, of post office stamps for their correspondence, and to direct the department, in making contracts for the transportation of the mail, to confine itself to the payment of the sum necessary for this single purpose, without requiring it to be transported in post coaches or carriages of any particular description.

Under the present system, the expense to the Government is greatly increased, by requiring that the mail shall be carried in such vehicles as will accommodate passengers. This will be done without pay from the de-thousand one hundred and nine-five dollars and fifty-six cents, ($70,129,194 56.)

The expenditures during the first quarter of the present fiscal year, were twenty-one million, seven hundred and eighty-eight thousand one hundred and ninety-eight dollars and fifty-one cents, ($21,706,198 51,) of which one million and ten thousand, one hundred and forty-two dollars and thirty-seven cents ($1,010,142 37) were applied to the payment of the public debt and the redemption of treasury notes and the interests thereon.

The estimated expenditures, during the remaining three-quarters to the 30th June, 1859, are fifty-two million three hundred and fifty-seven thousand six hundred ninety-eight dollars and forty-eight cents, ($52,357,698 48,) making an aggregate of seventy-four million sixty-five thousand eight hundred and ninety-six dollars and ninety-nine cents, ($74,065,896 99,) being an excess of expenditure, beyond the estimated receipts into the treasury from ordinary sources, during the fiscal year to the 30th of June 1859, of three million nine hundred and thirty-six thousand seven hundred and one dollar and forty-three cents, ($3,936,701 43.) Extraordinary means are placed by law within the command of the Secretary of the Treasury, by the re-issue of Treasury notes redeemed, and by negotiating the balance of the loan authorized by the act of the 14th June, 1858, to the extent of eleven million of dollars, which, if realized during the present fiscal year, will leave a balance in the Treasury, on the 1st day of July, 1859, of seven million sixty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-eight dollars and fifty-seven cents, ($7,063,298 57.)

The estimated receipts during the next fiscal year ending 30th June, 1859, are sixty-two millions of dollars ($62,000,000,) which with the above estimated balance of seven millions sixty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-eight dollars and fifty-seven cents, ($7,078,298 57,) making an aggregate for the service of the next fiscal year, of sixty-nine million sixty-three thousand two hundred and ninety-eight dollars and fifty-seven cents, ($69,063,298 57.) The estimated expenditures during the next fiscal year ending 30th June 1860, are seventy-three million one hundred thirty-seven thousand one hundred and forty-seven dollars and forty-six cents, ($73,139,147 46,) which leaves a deficit of estimated means compared with the estimated expenditures for that year, commencing on the 1st July, 1859, of four million and seventy-five thousand eight hundred and forty-eight dollars and eighty-nine cents, ($4,075,848 89.)

In addition to this sum, the Postmaster General will require from the treasury, for the service of the Post Office Department, three million eight hundred and thirty-eight thousand seven hundred and twenty-eight dollars, ($3,838,728,) as explained in the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, which will increase the estimated deficit on the 30th of June, 1860, to seven million nine hundred and fourteen thousand five hundred and seventy-six dollars and eighty-nine cents, ($7,914,576 89.) To provide for the payment of this estimated deficiency, which will be increased by such appropriations as may be made by Congress not estimated for in the report of the Treasury Department, as well as to provide for the gradual redemption, from year to year, of the outstanding treasury notes, the Secretary of the Treasury recommends such a revision of the present tariff as will raise the required amount. After what I have already said, I need scarcely add that I concur in the opinion expressed in his report, that the public debt should not be increased by an additional loan, and would therefore strongly urge upon Congress the duty of making at their present session, the necessary provision for meeting these liabilities.

AMOUNT OF THE PUBLIC DEBT.

The public debt on the 1st July, 1858, the commencement of the present fiscal year was $25,155,977 66.

During the first quarter of the present year, the sum of $10,000,000, has been negotiated of the loan, authorized by the act of 5th June, 1858, making the present outstanding public debt, exclusive of Treasury notes, $35,155,977 66. There was on the 1st July, 1858, of Treasury notes issued by authority of the act of December 23, 1857, unredeemed, the sum of $19,764,800—making the amount of actual indebtedness, at that date, $54,910,777 66. To this will be added $10,000,000 during the present fiscal year—this being the remaining half of the loan of $20,000,000, not yet negotiated.

The rapid increase of the public debt, and the necessity which exists for a modification of the tariff, to meet even the ordinary ex-

ing, support and removal of those negroes up till the time of their delivery to the agent on the coast of Africa; but no express provision was made for their protection and support after they had reached the place of their destination. Still, an agent was to be appointed to receive them, and it could not have been supposed, that Congress intended to should desert them at the moment they were received, and turn them loose on that inhospitable coast to perish for want of food, or to become again the victims of the slave trade. Had this been the intention of Congress, the employment of an agent to receive them, who is required to reside on the coast, was unnecessary, and they might have been landed by our vessels anywhere in Africa, and left exposed to the sufferings and the fate which would certainly await them.

Mr. Monroe, in his special message of the 17th December, 1858, at the first session after the act was passed, announced to Congress what, in his opinion, was its true construction. He believed it to be his duty under it, to follow those unfortunate in Africa, and make provisions for them there, until they should be able to provide for themselves. In communicating this interpretation of the act to Congress, he stated that some doubt had been entertained as to its true intent and meaning, and he submitted the question to them, so that they might, should it be deemed advisable, amend the same before further proceedings are had under it. Nothing was done by Congress to explain the act, and Mr. Monroe proceeded to carry it into execution according to his own interpretation. This, then, became the practical construction.

When the Africans from on board the Echo were delivered to the Marshal at Charleston, it became my duty to consider what disposition ought to be made of them under the law. For many reasons, it was expedient to remove them from that locality as speedily as possible. Although the conduct of the authorities and citizens of Charleston, in giving countenance to the execution of the law, was just what might have been expected from their high character, yet a prolonged continuance of three hundred Africans in the immediate vicinity of that city, could not have failed to become a source of inconvenience and anxiety to its inhabitants. Where to send them was the question. There was no portion of the cost of Africa to which they could be removed with any regard to humanity, except Liberia.

Under these circumstances, an agreement was entered into with the Colonization Society on the 7th of December last, a copy of which is herewith transmitted, under which the Society engaged, for the consideration of forty-five thousand dollars, to receive these Africans in Liberia from the Agent of the United States, and furnish them during the period of one year thereafter, with comfortable shelter, clothing, provisions and medical attendance, causing the children to receive schooling; and all, whether children or adults, to be instructed in the arts of civilized life, suitable to their condition.

This aggregate of forty-five thousand dollars was based upon an allowance of one hundred and fifty dollars for each individual, and as there has been considerable mortality among them, and may be more before they reach Africa, the society have agreed in an equitable spirit, to make such a deduction from the amount, as under the circumstances may appear just and reasonable. This cannot be fixed until we shall ascertain the actual number which may become a charge to the society.

It was also distinctly agreed, that, under no circumstances, shall this Government be called upon for any additional expenses.

The agents of the society manifested a laudable desire to conform to the government, throughout the transaction. They agreed that, after a careful calculation, they would be required to expend the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars on each individual in compliance with the agreement, and they would have nothing left to remunerate them for their care, trouble and responsibility. At all events, I could make no better arrangement, and there was no other alternative. During the period when the government itself, through its own agents, undertook the task of providing for captured negroes in Africa, the cost per head was very much greater.

There having been no out-standing appropriation applicable to this purpose, I could not advance any money on the agreement. I therefore recommend that an appropriation may be made, of the amount necessary to carry it into effect.

Other captures of a similar character may, and probably will, be made by our naval forces, and I earnestly recommend, that Congress may amend the second section of the act of March, 1819, so as to confer upon the ambiguity which has so long existed, and render the duty of the President plain in executing its provisions.

THE DISTRICT.

I recommend to your favorable regard the local interests of the District of Columbia. As the residence of Congress and the Executive Departments of the Government, we cannot fail to feel a deep concern in its welfare. This is heightened by the high character and the peaceful and orderly conduct of its resident inhabitants.

I cannot conclude without performing the agreeable duty of expressing my gratification that Congress so kindly responded to the recommendation of my last annual message, by affording me sufficient time before the close of their late session for the examination of all the bills presented to me for approval.

This change in the practice of Congress has proved to be a wholesome reform. It exerted a beneficial influence on the transaction of legislative business and elicited the general approbation of the country. It enabled Congress to adjourn with that dignity and deliberation so becoming to the representatives of this great Republic, without having crowded into general appropriation bills provisions foreign to their nature, and of doubtful constitutionality and expediency. Let me warmly and strongly commend this precedent, established by themselves, as a guide to their proceedings during the present session.

JAMES BUCHANAN.
WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 6, 1858.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD.
A Sorrel Horse, sixteen and a half hands high—Star in the forehead, nip on the nose, and H. on the left shoulder.

The above reward will be paid if returned to—
JAMES B. DORSON.

[Continued from 1st page.] provisions so materially that Gen. Johnston was obliged to reduce the ration, and even with this precaution there was only sufficient left to subsist the troops until the first of June.

Our little army behaved admirably in their encampment at Fort Bridger, under these trying privations. In the midst of the mountains, in a dreary, unsettled and inhospitable region, more than a thousand miles from home, they passed the severe and inclement winter without a murmur. They looked forward with confidence for relief from their country in due season, and in this they were not disappointed.

The Secretary of War employed all his energies to forward them the necessary supplies, and to muster and send such a military force to Utah as would render resistance on the part of the Mormons hopeless, and thus terminate the war without the effusion of blood. In his efforts he was efficiently sustained by Congress. They granted appropriations sufficient to cover the deficiency thus necessarily created, and also provided for raising two regiments of volunteers, "for the purpose of quelling disturbances in the Territory of Utah, for the protection of supply and emigrant trains, and the suppression of Indian hostilities on the frontiers." Happily, there was no occasion to call these regiments into service. If there had been, I should have felt serious embarrassment in selecting them, so great was the number of our brave and patriotic citizens anxious to serve their country in this distant and apparently dangerous expedition. Thus has it ever been, and thus may it ever be.

The wisdom and economy of sending sufficient reinforcements to Utah are established not only by the event, but in the opinion of those who, from their position and opportunities are the most capable of forming a correct judgment. General Johnston, the commander of the forces, in addressing the Secretary of War from Fort Bridger, under date of October 18, 1857, expresses the opinion that "unless a large force is sent here, from the nature of the country, a protracted war on their (the Mormons) part is inevitable." This he considered necessary, to terminate the war "speedily and more economically than if attempted by insufficient means."

In the meantime it was my anxious desire that the Mormons should yield obedience to the Constitution and the laws, without rendering it necessary to resort to military force to aid in accomplishing their object. I deemed it advisable, in April last, to dispatch two distinguished citizens of the United States, Messrs. Powell and McCulloch, to Utah. They bore with them a proclamation addressed by myself to the inhabitants of Utah, dated on the sixth day of that month, warning them of their true condition, and how hopeless it was on their part to persist in rebellion against the United States, and offering all those who should submit to the laws a full pardon for their past seditions and treasons. At the same time I assured those who should persist in rebellion against the United States, that they must expect no further lenity, but look to be rigorously dealt with according to their deserts.

The instructions these agents, as well as a copy of the proclamation, and their reports, are herewith submitted. It will be seen by their report of the third of July last, that they have fully confirmed the opinion expressed by General Johnston in the previous October, as to the necessity of sending reinforcements to Utah. In this they state that they "are firmly impressed with the belief, that the presence of the army here and the large additional force that had been ordered to this Territory, were the chief inducements that caused the Mormons to abandon the idea of resisting the authority of the United States. A less decisive policy would probably have resulted in a long, bloody and expensive war."

These gentlemen conducted themselves to my entire satisfaction, and rendered useful services in executing the humane intentions of the government.

COL. KANE. It also affords me great satisfaction to state, that Governor Cumming has performed his duty in an able and conciliatory manner, and with the happiest effect. I cannot, in this connection refrain from mentioning the valuable services of Col. Thomas L. Kane, who, from motives of pure benevolence, and without any official character or pecuniary compensation, visited Utah during the last inclement winter, for the purpose of contributing to the pacification of the Territory.

I am happy to inform you that the Governor and other civil officers of Utah are now performing their appropriate functions without resistance. The authority of the Constitution and the laws has been fully restored, and peace prevails throughout the Territory.

A portion of the troops sent to Utah are now encamped in Cedar Valley, forty-four miles southwest of Salt Lake City, and the remainder have been ordered to Oregon to suppress Indian hostilities.

The march of the army to Salt Lake City through the Indian Territory, has had the powerful effect in restraining the hostile feelings against the United States, which existed among the Indians in that region, and in securing emigrants to the Far West against their depredations. This will also be the means of establishing military posts and promoting settlements along the route.

A LAND OFFICE FOR UTAH. I recommend that the benefits of our land laws and pre-emption system, be extended to the people of Utah, by the establishment of a land office in that Territory.

CHINA. I have occasion, also, to congratulate you on the results of our negotiations with China.

You were informed by my last annual message, that our minister had been instructed to occupy a neutral position in the hostilities conducted by Great Britain and France against Canton. He was, however, at the same time directed to co-operate cordially with British and French ministers, in all peaceful measures to secure by treaty those just concessions to foreign commerce, which the nations of the world had a right to demand. It was impossible for me to proceed further than this, on my own authority, without usurping the war-making power, which under the constitution, belongs exclusively to Congress.

Besides, after a careful examination of the nature and extent of our grievances, I did not believe they were of such a pressing and aggravated character, as would have justified Congress in declaring war against the Chinese Empire, without first making another earnest attempt to adjust them by peaceful negotiation. I was the more inclined to this opinion, because of the severe chastisement which had then but recently been inflicted upon the Chinese by our squadron in the capture and destruction of the Carriker forts, to avenge an alleged insult to our flag.

The event has proved the wisdom of our neutrality. Our Minister has executed his instructions with eminent skill and ability. In conjunction with the Russian plenipotentiary, he has peacefully, but effectually, co-operated with English and French plenipotentiaries; and each of the four powers has concluded a separate treaty with China, of a highly satisfactory character. The treaty concluded by our own plenipotentiary will immediately be submitted to the Senate.

JAPAN. I am happy to announce that, through the energetic yet conciliatory efforts of our Consul-General in Japan, a new treaty has been concluded with that empire, which may be expected materially to augment our trade and intercourse in that quarter, and remove from our countrymen the disabilities which have heretofore been imposed upon the exercise of their religion. The treaty shall be submitted to the Senate for approval without delay.

GREAT BRITAIN. It is my desire that every misunderstanding with the government of Great Britain, should be amicably and speedily adjusted. It has been the misfortune of both countries, almost ever since the revolution, to have been annoyed by a succession of irritating and dangerous questions, threatening their friendly relations. This has partially prevented the full development of those feelings of mutual friendship between the people of the two countries, so natural in themselves and so conducive to their common interest. Any serious interruption of the commerce between the United States and Great Britain, would be equally injurious to both. In fact, no two nations have ever existed on the face of the earth, which could do each other so much good or so much harm.

THE RIGHT OF SEARCH. Entertaining these sentiments, I am gratified to inform you that the long-pending controversy between the two governments, in relation to the question of visitation and search, has been amicably adjusted. The claim on the part of Great Britain, forcibly to visit American vessels on the high seas in time of peace could not be sustained under the law of nations, and it had been overruled by her own most eminent jurists. This question was recently brought to an issue by the repeated acts of British cruisers, in boarding and searching our merchant vessels in the Gulf of Mexico, and the adjacent seas. These acts were the most injurious and annoying, as these waters are traversed by a large portion of the commerce and navigation of the United States, and their free and unrestricted use is essential to the security of the coastwise trade between different States of the Union.

Such vexatious interruptions could not fail to excite the feelings of the country, and to require the interposition of the Government. Remonstrances were addressed to the British Government against these violations of our rights and sovereignty, and a naval force was at the same time ordered to the Cuban waters with directions to "protect all vessels of the United States on the high seas, from search or detention by the vessels of war of any other nation." These measures received the unqualified and enthusiastic approbation of the American people. Most fortunately, however, no collision took place, and the British Government promptly avowed its recognition of the principles of international law upon the subject, as laid down by the Government of the United States, in the note of the Secretary of State, to the British Minister at Washington, of April 10, 1855, which secures the vessels of the United States upon the high seas from visitation of search in times of peace, under any circumstances whatever.

The claim has been abandoned in a manner reflecting honor on the British Government, and evincing a just regard for the law of nations, and cannot fail to strengthen the amicable relation between the two countries.

The British Government, at the same time, proposed to the United States that some mode should be adopted by mutual arrangement between the two countries, of a character which may be found effective without being offensive, for verifying the nationality of vessels suspected, on good grounds, of carrying false colors. They have also invited the United States to take the initiative, and propose measures for this purpose. Whilst declining to assume so grave a responsibility, the Secretary of State has informed the British Government that we are ready to receive any proposals which they may feel disposed to offer, having this object in view, and to consider them in an amicable spirit.

A strong opinion is, however, expressed, that the occasional abuse of the flag of any nation, is an evil far less to be deprecated, than would be the establishment of any regulations which might be incompatible with the freedom of the seas. This Government has yet received no communication specifying the manner in which the British Government would propose to carry out their suggestion. I am inclined to believe that no plan which can be devised, will be free from grave embarrassments. Still, I shall form no decided opinion on the subject, until I have carefully, and in the best spirit, examined any proposals which they may think proper to make.

THE CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY.

I am truly sorry I cannot also inform you that the complications between Great Britain and the United States, arising out of the Clayton and Bulwer Treaty of April, 1850, have been finally adjusted.

At the commencement of your last session I had reason to hope that, emancipating themselves from further unavailing discussions, the two governments would proceed to settle the Central American questions in a practical manner, alike honorable and satisfactory to both; and this hope I have not yet abandoned. In my last annual message, I stated that overtures had been made by the British government for this purpose, in a friendly spirit, which I cordially reciprocated.

Their proposal was to withdraw these questions from direct negotiation between the two governments; but to accomplish the same object, by a negotiation between the British government, and each of the Central American republics, whose territorial interests are immediately involved. The settlement was to be made in accordance with the general tenor of the interpretation placed upon the Clayton and Bulwer treaty by the United States, with certain modifications. As negotiations are still pending upon this basis, it would not be proper for me to communicate their present condition. A final settlement of these questions is greatly desired, as this would wipe out the last remaining subject of dispute between the two countries.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA. Our relations with the great empires of France and Russia, as well as with all other governments, are of Europe except that of Spain continue to be of the most friendly character.

SPAIN. With Spain our relations remain in an unsatisfactory condition. In my message of December last, I informed you that our envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Madrid had asked for his recall, and it was my purpose to send out a new minister pending court with special instructions as to questions pending between the two governments, and with a determination to have them speedily and amicably adjusted, if it were possible. This purpose has been hitherto defeated by causes which I need not enumerate.

The mission to Spain has been intrusted to a distinguished citizen of Kentucky, who will proceed to Madrid without delay, and make an effort to obtain justice from that government. The Spanish officials, under the direct control of the Captain-General of Cuba, have limited our national flag, and imprisoned our citizens, and have from time to time seized our property on the grounds and property of our citizens. These have given birth to numerous claims against the Spanish government, the merits of which have been ably discussed for a series of years, by our successive diplomatic representatives. Notwithstanding, we have not arrived at a settlement in any single instance, and the late Administration, and that Black Warrior, our present minister, have both presented our claims as a character as would have presented an immediate resort to war. All our attempts to obtain redress have been baffled and defeated. The frequent and recurring changes in the Spanish ministry, have been employed as reasons for delay, and the new minister shall have had time to investigate the justice of our claims.

Even when they have been demonstrated to be just, more than a hundred of our citizens are daily interested have furnished no exception. These claims were for the refunding of duties unjustly exacted from American vessels at different custom houses in Cuba, so long ago as the year 1844. The principles upon which they rest are so manifestly a right, that upon which they rest are so manifestly a right, that just, that after a period of nearly ten years, in 1854, they were recognized and instituted to ascertain their amount, and this was finally decided according to their amount (with which we were satisfied) at the sum of one hundred and twenty-eight thousand six hundred and thirty-five dollars and fifty-four cents. Just at that moment, after a delay of fourteen years, when we had reason to expect that they would be repaid with interest, or have received a proposal of fifty per cent. refund, and seventy-eight dollars and twenty cents, and without interest, if we would accept this in full satisfaction. The offer is, also, accompanied by a declaration that this indemnification is not founded on any reason of strict justice, but is made as a special favor.

One alleged cause for procrastination in the examination and adjustment of our claims, arises from an objection that it is the duty of the Spanish government to remove. Whilst the Captain-General of Cuba is in removal, with general despotic authority in the government of that island, the power is withheld from him to examine and redress wrongs committed by officials under his control, on citizens of the United States. Instead of making our complaints directly to him at Havana, we are obliged to present them through our minister at Madrid. The same is then referred back to the Captain-General in preliminary investigations and correspondence between Madrid and Cuba, before the Spanish government will consent to proceed to negotiation.

Many of the difficulties between the two governments would be obviated, and a long train of negotiations avoided, if the Captain-General were invested with authority to settle questions of minor importance on the spot, where the facts are fresh, and could be promptly and satisfactorily ascertained. We have hitherto in vain urged upon the Spanish government to confer this power upon the Captain-General, and our minister at Spain will again be instructed to urge this subject on their notice. In this respect we occupy a different position from the powers of Europe. Cuba is almost wholly a Spanish colony, and our commerce with it is greater than that of any other nation, and it is situated in a position which is in habits of daily and extended intercourse with the United States. It is therefore, a matter of great importance, which might be easily settled at the moment, we should be obliged to resort to Madrid, especially when the very first step to be taken there is to refer it back to Cuba.

The truth is that Cuba, in its existing colonial condition, is a constant source of injury and annoyance to the American people. It is the only one spot in the civilized world where the African slave trade is tolerated, and we are bound by treaty with Great Britain to maintain a naval force on the coast of Africa, at much expense both of life and treasure, solely for the purpose of arresting slaves bound to that island. The late serious difficulties between the United States and Great Britain respecting the right of search, now so happily terminated, could never have arisen if Cuba had not afforded a market for slaves. As long as this market shall remain open, there can be no hope for the civilization of the African slave trade, which will be waged among the petty and barbarous chiefs in Africa, for the purpose of seizing subjects to supply this trade. As long as the condition of affairs, it is impossible that the light of civilization and religion can ever penetrate these dark abodes.

It has been made known to the world by my predecessors, that the United States have, on several occasions, declined to acquire Cuba from Spain by honorable negotiation. If this were accomplished, the last relic of the African slave trade would instantly disappear. We would not, if we could, acquire Cuba in any other manner. This is due to our national character. All the Territory which we have acquired since the origin of the government, has been by the free and voluntary France, Spain and Mexico, or by the free and voluntary of the independent States of Texas, in blending her feelings with our own. This course we shall ever pursue, and no circumstances should occur, which we do not now anticipate, rendering a departure from it nearly justifiable, under the imperative and overruling law of self preservation.

The Island of Cuba, from its geographical position, commands the mouth of the great Gulf of Mexico, and annually intercepts that noble river, now flowing from the valley of the States of the Union. With the Island under the dominion of a distant foreign power, this trade, of vital importance to these States, is exposed to the danger of being destroyed in time of war, and it has hitherto been subjected to perpetual injury and annoyance in time of peace. Our relations with Spain, which ought to be of the most friendly character, must always be placed in jeopardy, whilst the existing colonial condition of the Island would be of great importance to the United States, its value to Spain is comparatively unimportant. Such was the relative situation of the parties when the great Napoleon transferred Louisiana to the United States. Jefferson, at the time, was of the opinion that the interests of France, ever war, or the national honor and interests of France, to no person throughout the world had inspired claims to him for the acquisition of Louisiana from France, and by that of Mr. Polk in view of the acquisition of territory from Mexico. I refer the whole subject to Congress, and commend it to their careful consideration.

The publicity which has been given to our former negotiations upon this subject, and the large appropriation which may be required to effect this purpose, render it expedient, before making another attempt to renew the negotiation, that I should lay the whole subject before Congress. This is especially necessary, as it may become indispensable to success that I should be authorized by the means of making an advance to the Spanish government, immediately after the signing of the treaty, without awaiting the ratification of it by the Senate. I am, therefore, encouraged to make, by the example of Mr. Jefferson previous to the purchase of Louisiana from France, and by that of Mr. Polk in view of the acquisition of territory from Mexico. I refer the whole subject to Congress, and commend it to their careful consideration.

I repeat the recommendation made in my message of December last, in favor of an appropriation "to be paid to the Spanish government for the purpose of distribution among the claimants in the Armistad case." President Polk first made a similar recommendation in December, 1847, and it was repealed by my immediate predecessor in December, 1853. I entertain no doubt that indemnity is fairly due to these claimants under our treaty with Spain of the 27th October, 1795; and whilst demanding justice, we ought to do justice. An appropriation promptly made for this purpose, could not fail to exert a favorable influence on our negotiations with Spain.

MEXICO. Our position and relation to the independent States South of us on the continent, and especially those within the limits of North America, is of a peculiar character. The northern boundary of Mexico is coincident with our own southern boundary from ocean to ocean, and we must necessarily feel a deep interest in all that concerns the well being and the fate of so near a neighbor. We have always cherished the kindest wishes for the success of that republic, and have indulged the hope that it might at last, after all its trials, enjoy peace and prosperity under a free and stable government. We have never hitherto interfered, directly or indirectly, with its internal affairs, and it is a duty which we owe to ourselves, to protect the integrity of its territory, against the hostile interference of any other power. Our geographical position, our direct interest in all that concerns Mexico, and our well settled policy in regard to the North American continent, render this an indispensable duty.

Mexico has been in a state of constant revolution, almost ever since it achieved its independence. One military leader after another has usurped the government in rapid succession; and the various constitutions from time to time adopted have been set at naught almost as soon as they were proclaimed. The successive governments have afforded no adequate protection, either to Mexican citizens or foreign residents, against lawless violence. Heretofore, a seizure of the capital by a military chieftain, has been generally followed by at least the nominal submission of the country to his rule for a brief period, but not so at the present crisis of Mexican affairs. A civil war has been raging for some time throughout the republic, between the central government at the city of Mexico, which has endeavored to subvert the constitution last framed, by military power, and those who maintain the authority of that constitution.

The antagonistic parties each hold possession of different States of the republic, and the fortunes of the war are constantly changing. Meanwhile, the most reprehensible means have been employed by both parties to extort money from foreigners, as well as natives, to carry on this ruinous contest. The truth is, that this fine country, blessed with a productive soil and a benign climate, has been reduced by civil dissension to a condition of almost hopeless anarchy and imbecility. It would be vain for this government to attempt to enforce payment in money of the claims of American citizens, now amounting to more than ten millions of dollars, against Mexico, because she is destitute of all pecuniary means to satisfy these demands.

Our late minister was furnished with ample powers and instructions for the adjustment of all pending questions with the central government of Mexico, and he performed his duty with zeal and ability. The claims of our citizens, some of them arising out of the violation of an express provision of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, and others from gross injuries to persons as well as property, have remained unredressed and even unnoticed. Remonstrances against these grievances, have been addressed without effect to that government. Meantime, in various parts of the Republic, instances have been numerous of the murder, imprisonment, and plunder of our citizens by different parties claiming and exercising a local jurisdiction; but the central government, although repeatedly urged thereon, have made no effort either to punish the authors of these outrages or to prevent their recurrence. No American citizen can now visit Mexico on lawful business, without imminent danger to his person and property. There is no adequate protection to either; and in this respect our treaty with that Republic is almost a dead letter.

This state of affairs was brought to a crisis in May last, by the promulgation of a decree levying a contribution pro rata upon all the capital in the republic, between certain specified amounts, whether held by Mexicans or foreigners. Mr. Forsyth, regarding this decree in a light of a "forced loan," formally protested against its application to his countrymen, and advised them not to pay the contribution, but to suffer it to be forcibly exacted. Acting upon this advice, an American citizen refused to pay the contribution, and his property was seized by armed men to satisfy the amount. Not content with this, the government proceeded still further, and issued a decree banishing him from the country. Our minister immediately notified them that if this decree should be carried into execution he would feel it to be his duty to adopt "the most decided measures that belong to the powers and obligations of the representative office." Notwithstanding this warning, the banishment was enforced, and Mr. Forsyth promptly announced to the government the suspension of the political relations of his legation with them, until the pleasure of his own government should be ascertained.

The Government did not regard the contribution imposed by the decree of the 15th May last to be in strictness a "forced loan," and as such prohibited by the 10th article of the treaty of 1828 between Great Britain and Mexico, to the benefits of which American citizens are entitled by the treaty; yet the imposition of the contribution upon foreigners was considered an unjust and offensive measure. Besides, internal factions in other parts of the Republic were at the same time levying similar exactions upon the property of our citizens and interrupting their commerce. There had been an entire failure on the part of our Minister to secure redress for the wrongs which our citizens had endured, notwithstanding his persevering efforts. And from the temper manifested by the Mexican government he had repeatedly assured us that no favorable change could be expected, until the United States should "give striking evidence of their will and power to protect their citizens," and that "severe chastening is the only earthly remedy for our grievances."

From this statement of facts, it would have been worse than idle to direct Mr. Forsyth to retrace his steps and resume diplomatic relations with that government; and it was, therefore, deemed proper to sanction his withdrawal of the Legation from the city of Mexico.

ABUNDANT CAUSE FOR A WAR WITH MEXICO. AND WHEN IT SHOULD BE COMMENCED.

Abundant cause now undoubtedly exists, for a resort to hostilities against the government still holding possession of the capital. Should they succeed in subduing the constitutional forces, all reasonable hope will then have expired of a peaceful settlement of our difficulties.

SEIZURE OF MEXICAN TERRITORY.

On the other hand, should the constitutional party prevail and their authority be established over their republic, their reason to hope that they will be animated by a less unfriendly spirit, and may grant that redress to American citizens which justice requires, so far as they may possess the means. But for this expectation, I should at once have recommended to Congress to grant the necessary power to the President to take possession of a sufficient portion of the remote and unsettled Territory of Mexico, to be held in pledge until our injuries shall be redressed and our just demands be satisfied. We have already exhausted every milder means of obtaining justice. In such a case, this remedy of reprisals is recognized by the law of nations, not only as just in itself, but as a means of precluding actual war.

RECOMMENDS A PROTECTORATE OVER THE NORTHERN PROVINCES.

But there is another view of our relations with Mexico, arising from the unhappy condition of affairs along our southwestern frontiers, which demands immediate action. In that remote region, where there are but few white inhabitants, large bands of hostile and predatory Indians roam promiscuously over the Mexican States of Chihuahua and Sonora.

Continued on 2d page.]

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, JANUARY, 4, 1859.

Unparalleled Legislation.

On Tuesday last, the Utah, or more properly speaking, the Mormon Legislature was in session in this city; and the history of its day's proceedings exhibits a degree of barefaced affrontery and assumption that has no parallel in the records of any similar body in any State or Territory of the Union. A mendacity not unlike those secret inquisitions of ancient ecclesiastical European tyranny that at a nod broke men's and women's bones upon the rack or assigned them for life to the filthy, gloomy precincts of a dungeon. This principle of ecclesiastical absolutism has manifested itself in a modified form in this Territory, and a voice has been given to it by the action of the Utah Legislature: we intend to aid that voice to roll on, until in trumpet tones it pierces the ears, not only of the people of this Territory, but our citizens in the States. We have no personal grievance to offer, because we do not settle such matters through the medium of a newspaper; but when a Legislature who are presumed to be wise, however violent the presumption may be in this instance, takes upon itself to legislate upon the merits or demerits of a newspaper, it simply renders itself ridiculous and its action contemptible; and the Legislature now in session in this city have placed themselves in this attitude, for the proof of which we invite the attention of the public to the following facts:

Several weeks ago, in connection with the agents of the Eastern and Western divisions of the two mail lines, we united with them for the purpose of putting the President's Message through over this overland mail route to California in the shortest possible time. This was an enterprise worthy of commendation. It was in our power to facilitate them, and we accredited an express-office to the office of the Missouri Republican, while the mail company sent one to Washington. The Metropolitan express failed; ours, with the facilities we had given him, secured the Message, and as is well known made the trip from St. Joseph to this city in eleven days. According to our letter of instructions three copies were sent through, one directed to Major Chorpennig, one directed through, and the other to our own address. It was promptly delivered, and we put it in type, and issued our paper as soon as it could be worked off. It was our private property, obtained by our exertions and influence, and the Mormon theocracy consequently are very "jealous and sorely exercised thereof." This is one of the secrets of the ill-timed, ill-tempered, and low-flung legislation that characterized the proceedings of last Tuesday. The other, and prevailing reason, is, that a free press, ever the guardian of the liberties of the people, is dangerous to the corrupting influences of the Mormon hierarchy.

When the Message was issued from our press, the Legislature was in session, and believing that a body of that kind would feel an interest in reading and considering a State paper, emanating from the highest department of our Government, we put up forty copies, and sent them to the place where the Legislature was in session, and a copy was left on each member's desk. The paper contained nothing scarcely but the Message, and after it was "read and inwardly digested," it was contemptuously spurned, and the Sergeant-at-arms was authorized to collect the paper and return it; which ignoble and slavish task he was bound to do, and did perform.

We publish therefore a synopsis of the resolution which was introduced by H. B. Clawson, son-in-law of Brigham Young, for the reason that we were unable to obtain a copy. It declares that the "Valley Tan" is a libellous, scandalous and scurrilous sheet—directed the number which we sent them, containing the Message, to be returned to Secretary Hartnett; at the same time, assuring him that they meant no disrespect to him, or to the President, and that it was calculated to create dissensions, &c., in the community—this is the substance.

Why the President's Message should have been returned to Secretary Hartnett, we do not know. We sent the Message to them as an act of personal courtesy; we understand the conventionalities that attach to gentlemen, and if the Mormon Legislature are ignorant of them, in all charity we can only say, it is their misfortune. It will be seen that they lay great stress upon the fact that no insult is intended to the President. But compare the declarations of this resolution to previous assertions, made time and again, when the Chief Magistrates of the United States have been assailed in the most vituperative, gross and indecent language, and we ask what confidence can be placed in it? Precedents are dangerous things, and even the gratitude that ought to attach to a proclamation of mercy, must make us doubt and pause upon the honesty of their intentions. Do they require the facts and dates?—if so we can give them, and where treason has once existed, it may exist again. Shakespeare, that great delineator of the human heart and passions, has well said: "a man may smile, and smile again, and still be a villain."

The resolution farther asserts that the "Valley Tan," is a libellous, scandalous and scurrilous sheet, &c., which assertions are intended to bolster up their fortunes; we tell them now, that although we have no voice upon the floors of their councils, yet, we can still be heard, and will be, unless we "go under."

We challenge and defy them to place their finger upon one word of scandal in our editorials.

Unless, indeed, the reproduction of the disgusting harangues which have been promulgated from their own pulpits is so considered, in which case we plead guilty, they certainly are obscene and treasonable enough; but for this we are not responsible.

As to creating dissensions, if the establishment of a free press that dares to speak is to be "put under," then let them try their hands upon the "Valley Tan." A special committee of three was appointed, to wait upon the Secretary of the Territory, and out of more than forty papers containing the President's message, we received only nineteen, and we can well afford to make a present to them of the remainder.

Among the first issues that were struck off we sent two to President Young, because we knew and were advised that he was anxious to see it, and so far as we know he accepted it in the spirit in which it was sent. So far as the debate upon the resolution went, reflecting upon us personally, we do not care a straw; our character, we believe, is in higher keeping than the trust of the Mormon Legislature, and from which we need no vindication; if we did so, we could appeal to Gov. Cumming and Secretary Hartnett, who have known us from our childhood, as well as to many others in the Camp. We suppose that the next assumption and arrogance upon the part of the Legislature, will be a committee to take charge of our press to edit and conduct it.

Since the above was written, we understand that the Legislature, on the following day, expunged the resolution, although it does not appear upon the record, but where it should, and we insist, shall appear.

Military Review.

On last Friday we were present at a General Military Review at Camp Floyd. We have not space or time at present to go into details, but we can state that we were witnesses of a spectacle that but few people in the "States," where all the "sights" are, ever saw. More than three thousand men under arms paraded upon the plateau, and formed a line of brave and well-disciplined soldiers that stretched across the valley almost from one mountain to the other. As we looked upon the scene, we felt an honest pride in our gallant army, and how vaunting the boast that has been made that they could soon be "wiped out"—what a jolly time it would be in a rubber of that kind.

Gen. Johnston is the idol, and deservedly so, of his army, combining a military skill with a thorough, practical and statesman-like view of the circumstances which have and do now surround him; he has proven himself both a gallant soldier and an able civilian.

It would be wrong for us to institute comparisons among regiments, where all done so well and acquitted themselves so handsomely; but we must be pardoned, if we say that Maj. Phelps' battery filled our eye; and as he manoeuvred across the field we felt, although peaceably inclined, what a sight it would be if any circumstances should transpire, which would "let slip the dogs of war" which lay upon the carriages.

Bill Ignored by the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury, on Tuesday, ignored the bill against Christianson, charged with the murder of the deaf and dumb boy. Thus ends this chapter of blood, and the charnel-house conceals the record of the crime forever. We understand however, that a portion of the Grand Jury presented a memorial to Judge Sinclair, begging to be discharged.

The reason for this, although the memorial does not state it, is that they are satisfied the laws cannot be executed in this Territory, and hence a petition for their discharge.

What action the Court will take upon it, remains to be seen. The condition of the U. S. Courts, in this Territory, is one of serious import, and we feel satisfied that both Judge Sinclair and Cradlebaugh, will meet it firmly, let the consequences be what they may.

War Expenditures.

It will be observed by the Secretary of War's Report, that the present-war estimates are less by over nine millions of dollars, than the appropriations of the last fiscal year. They are less than the estimates of the last session by $2,700,000. The Secretary gives us the gratifying information that, so far as can now be foreseen, there will be no call for a Deficiency Bill.

We received, a few days since, a fine photograph of the Residence of Pres. Brigham Young and a likeness of the distinguished gentleman himself. It was executed by Mr. Cannon, a daguerrean artist of this city, and reflects great credit upon his skill.

Secretary of War's Report.

We extract the following items, received by the last mail from the report of the Secretary of War, and which will be interesting to the people of this Territory:

"UTAH."

The operations of the army in connection with the Territory of Utah, since the date of my last report, deserve particular notice. They have been in themselves important, and fraught with most important results.

With the inception and progress of the Mormon rebellion, up to the meeting of Congress last year, the country is familiar. It is familiar also with the importance ascribed to it by Congress, with the reasons assigned by that body for appropriating the large sums of money necessary for crushing the treason at a single blow. The preparations at first made to accomplish this object I have heretofore reported. But the final preparations for fitting out the expedition, and the actual movement of the troops upon that remote and difficult Territory, have not until now been made the subject of official communication, nor have the highly beneficial consequences resulting from the policy of that movement been as yet brought to your notice or to that of the public.

After the open acts of war perpetrated by the Mormon people against the United States, in seizing the provision trains of our army, and destroying them with fire, and in stealing and driving off the herds of cattle and horses belonging to the command, although these were essential, as everybody supposed, to the maintenance of our troops and their protection against starvation; these people continued to manifest every proof of a fixed determination to push their treason to the extremity of bloodshed and war. They not only proclaimed martial law in that Territory without a pretext, but against every principle of justice, of law, and of the Constitution; they embodied their whole force of effective men and kept constantly drilled and under arms, hovering about our encampment, seeking a favorable moment, if one should ever offer itself, to cut off and destroy the whole command. They fortified the narrow mountain passes leading towards the town and chief settlements where they reside, and collected from remote neighborhoods all the deluded people belonging to their sect. Every preparation which indicated a spirit of determined hostility, of rebellion, of treason and war, characterized these people in every action, and nothing but menace and defiance towards the United States authorities ever fell from the lips of their chief impostor or any of his confederates.

When a small force was first sent to Utah, the Mormons attacked and destroyed their trains, and made ready for a general attack upon the column. When a sufficient power was put on foot to put success beyond all doubt, their bluster and bravado sank into whispers of terror and submission.

This movement upon that Territory was demanded by the moral sentiment of the country, was due to a vindication of its laws and constitution, and was essential to demonstrate the power of the Federal Government to chastise insubordination and quell rebellion, however formidable from numbers or position it might seem to be. Adequate preparations, and a prompt advance of the army was an act of mercy and humanity to those deluded people, for it prevented the effusion of blood.

These people, however, still evince a spirit of insubordination and moody discontent. They keep up strictly their organization, which has for its object and end the complete exclusion of federal authority from all participation in the governmental affairs of the Territory, beyond a mere hollow show. The head man or chief of their sect rules the people with absolute power, and under his dictation the temper they manifest towards the Government and the army is that of a conquered people towards a foreign enemy. The necessity which called for the presence of troops in Utah will require a strong force still to be kept there. The reports from the commissioners sent to Utah for the purpose of ascertaining the exact condition of things are already in your hands, and are at once useful and interesting. Nothing could be more praiseworthy than the just and impartial manner in which those gentlemen discharged their delicate and responsible duties.

The conduct of both officers and men attached to the army of Utah has been worthy of all praise. The commander, Brevet Brigadier General A. S. Johnston, who joined his command at a time of great trial and embarrassment, with a calm and lofty bearing, with a true and manly sympathy for all around him, infused into his command a spirit of serenity and contentment which amounted to cheerfulness, amidst uncommon hardships and privations which were unabated throughout the tedious and inclement season of the winter. The destruction of our trains by the Mormons, the disasters which necessarily flowed from it, drove Gen. Johnston to the necessity of sending a detachment of men to New Mexico for supplies essential to preserve the whole command from the greatest extremity, and to enable him to prosecute his march with all practicable despatch.

This expedition was intrusted to Captain R. B. Marcy of the 5th infantry; and, without intending to make an invidious comparison between the services of officers where all are meritorious, it is but just to bring the conduct of this officer and his command to your especial notice. It may be safely affirmed that in the whole catalogue of hazardous expeditions scattered so thickly through the history of our border warfare, filled as many of them are with appalling tales of privation, hardship, and suffering, not one surpasses this; and in some particulars it has been hardly equalled by any.

Captain Marcy left Fort Bridger on the 24th day of November, 1857, with a command of forty enlisted men and twenty-five mountain men, herders, packers, and guides. Their course lay through an almost trackless wilderness, over lofty and rugged mountains, without a pathway or a human habitation to guide or direct, in the very depth of winter, through snows for many miles together reaching to the depth of five feet. Their beasts of burden very rapidly perished until very few were left; their supplies gave out; their luggage was abandoned; they were driven to subsist upon the carcasses of their dead horses and mules; all the men became greatly emaciated, some were frost bitten; yet not one murmur of discontent escaped the lips of a single man. Their mission was one of extreme importance to the movements of the army, and great disaster might befall the command if these devoted men failed to bring succor to the camp. They had one and all volunteered for this service, and, although they might freeze or die, yet they would not complain.

After a march of fifty-one days they emerged from the forests, and found themselves at Fort Massachusetts, in New Mexico. During their whole march Captain Marcy shared all the privations of a common soldier—marching, sleeping and eating as they did. After a short delay at this post, for the purpose of recruiting his party, and procuring all necessary supplies for his return, he set out for the army at Fort Bridger.

In the mean time information reached the department that the Mormons were organizing a party to intercept Captain Marcy's return with the supplies; to "stampede" his animals; and cut off his party. Prompt measures were taken to reinforce Captain Marcy, so as to prevent such a catastrophe. Information of this further Mormon treason reached General Garland, then commanding the Department of New Mexico, in time to send a detachment of the mounted rifles sufficient for protection.

These preparations necessitated a further delay on the part of Captain Marcy, otherwise he would have reached the army at Fort Bridger with his supplies after an absence of about three months, having accomplished a march of more than 1,300 miles. I herewith transmit a short report prepared by Captain Marcy, at my request, which, I am sure, will be read with interest.

BRIGADIER GENERALS.

Wherever two regiments are brought together in a brigade, a general of brigade should be in commission to command it. If our whole army were now organized for the field, we should need nine generals of Brigade, and in the necessary arrangements of peace, the three in commission are not sufficient to command on the frontiers and in the military departments. These brigade commands, therefore, in our army, are generally devolved on the senior regimental officer, who is thereby withdrawn from the proper duties of his own appointment and commission. But as regimental officers are not, by right of seniority, to be commissioned generals, neither ought they, by such rule, to exercise the functions of generals. In all armies generals are selected for commands by Government. A sufficient number should always be in commission for that purpose not attached by law or their commissions to specified commands as regimental officers are. The assignment of brevet officers to brevet commands does not always serve the purpose, and, where it does, it is only by conferring two commissions and two offices on one officer who can only discharge the duties of one; the expense to Government is the same whether the officer exercises command by a brevet or by a proper commission. There is great need of three additional brigadier generals to those now in commission, and I recommend their appointment.

Great improvements have been made in the roads through the Territory of Utah since the march of the army thither. A new route has been opened from Fort Bridger to the present encampment of the army, near Utah Lake, by what is called the Valley of the Timpanogas, which diminishes the distance to California in comparison with that usually traveled by Soda Springs, two hundred and fifty miles, and is shorter, by one hundred and thirty miles, than the present route through Salt Lake. An appropriation of a moderate sum to be expended on the road west of Utah Lake or Rush Valley towards Carson Valley, would no doubt be both judicious and beneficial. It would open and materially improve a route which may be very essential at some time in transporting supplies from the Pacific side to any troops stationed in Utah.

Post Office Statistics.

NUMBER OF POST OFFICES.

The whole number of post offices in the United States on the 30th of June last was 27,977, of which 400 are of the class denominated presidential. The number established during the last fiscal year was 2,121, and the number discontinued 730, being an increase of 1,391. The number of postmasters appointed during the year was 8,284. Of these 4,595 were to fill vacancies occasioned by resignation, 998 by removals, 271 by deaths, 292 by change of names and places, and 2,121 on establishment of new offices. The whole number of offices on the 1st of December, 1858, was 28,573.

UTAH ROUTE.

The routes between St. Joseph, Missouri, and Salt Lake City, and between Salt Lake and Placerville, California, have been so improved, that the trips through from St. Joseph to Placerville, and back, are performed once a week in thirty-eight days each way.

For some months past this service has been performed with remarkable regularity, inasmuch as to merit special commendation.

It has received from the people of California the warmest applause, and called forth public demonstrations of a most enthusiastic character.

Kirk Anderson, Esq.

SIR:—In our article of the 21st ult., we cited a few clauses of the Federal Constitution, vesting the citizen with certain rights, and stated that the ecclesiastical code of Mormonism interfered with the proper enjoyment of those rights; but as we may be expected to define more explicitly the nature of this interference, we again propose calling the attention of your readers to the subject.

What the entire nature of this law, and its bearings upon the Constitutional rights of the citizen are, it may not be safe to undertake to discuss minutely; for much of this code, as we have before stated, is confined to the subject secretly, and as we have never passed the ordeal of initiation, we could not speak unequivocally upon this point. We are of opinion however, that this ecclesiastical law wrests the citizens from the custody of the State, and, after inflicting in a summary manner, the most cruel and unusual punishment, and that too in violation of the most sacred provisions of the Federal Constitution, the still more barbarous rite of shedding the blood of the citizen as an atonement for sin is sanctioned by its provisions.

And to corroborate our opinions we shall avail ourselves of the privilege of quoting a few paragraphs from some of the leading oracles of the Church.

President B. Young, on page 19 of the 6th Vol., "Deseret News," says:

"When this people have lived long enough upon the earth, to have the principles of life and salvation disseminated among them, and to have their children taught in those principles, so that they fully know the principles of eternal salvation, then let us, or our children turn away from the commandments of God, as some do now, and I could tell you what would become of them. Br. Woolley has said, the time is not far distant, but it will never come until the inhabitants of the earth, and especially those who have been gathered together, have a sufficient time to be educated in the Celestial law, so that each person may understand for himself. Then if they transgress against the light and knowledge they possess, some will be stoned to death, and judgment will be laid to the line, and righteousness to the plummet. But people will never be taken and sacrificed for their ignorance, when they have had no opportunity to know and understand the truth."

Again he says: "The law is very strict, and in this congregation there are men and women who with uplifted hands to heaven, before the Father, the Son, and all the holy angels, made solemn covenants that they never would do thus and so. For example, one obligation is, 'I never will have anything to do with any of the daughters of Eve, unless they are given to me of the Lord.' Men will call God to witness that they never will transgress this law, and promise to live a virtuous life so far as intercourse with females is concerned; but what do we see? A year will not pass away, before some few of them, are guilty of creeping into widow's houses, and into bed with the wives of their brethren, debauching one woman here, and another there. Do we enforce upon them the strict penalty of the law? Not yet."

From the above paragraphs we are led to conclude that the penalty for violating this law is death; but the author seems to be of opinion that the time for its execution should be postponed, till the people are more enlightened; and at what time that will be accomplished, we are not informed. But in about six months afterwards, he again presents this subject upon his audience with a zeal that admonishes the offenders that the law must be fulfilled; that ample time and opportunity have been afforded for the people to see and understand the nature of the law, and must be made to feel its penalties; and begins to prepare the minds of his hearers to receive the law and execute its judgments.

On page 235 of the same volume, he says, "I know, when you hear my brethren talking about cutting people off from the earth, that you consider it is strong doctrine; but it is to save them, not to destroy them."

Again he says, "I do know that there are sins committed, of such a nature, that if the people did understand the doctrine of salvation, they would tremble because of their situation; and furthermore, I know that there are transgressors, who, if they knew themselves and the only condition upon which they can obtain forgiveness, would beg of their brethren to shed their blood, that the smoke thereof might ascend to God as an offering to appease the wrath that is kindled against them; and that the law might have its course. I will say further, I have had men come to me and offer their lives to atone for their sins."

There is a caution manifested in these remarks that seems to impress the mind of the reader with the author's distrustfulness. He approaches the subject apologetically, shows what the law is and the nature of the penalty, charges the guilt of its violation upon some, and shows the willingness of others to shed their blood as an atonement for their sins; but leaves us to presume that the penalty of the law is not executed on account of the law being not sufficiently understood.

But Pres. Grant is less merciful, and seems to insist upon the execution of the law, for on the same page he uses this very rare and emphatic language:—"I say that there are men and women that I would advise to go to the President immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their case; and then let a place be selected, and let that committee shed their blood."

We have those amongst us, that are full of all manner of abominations, those who need to have their blood shed, for water will not do—their sins are of too deep a dye.

You may think I am not teaching you Bible doctrine; but what says the Apostle Paul? "I would ask how many covenant breakers there are in this city, and in this kingdom. I believe there are a great many; and if they are covenant-breakers, we need a place designated, where we can shed their blood."

Talk about old clay; I would rather have clay from a new bank, than some that we have had clogging the wheels for the last nineteen years. They are a perfect nuisance, and I want them cut off, and the sooner it is done the better."

Pres. Grant seems impatient for the sacrifice, and insists upon the necessity of the immediate erection of the guillotine, and a wholesale theocratic butchery commenced. He seems of opinion that the smoke from the altar of human sacrifices is a soothing incense in the nostrils of the God he serves. And it is not from any desire to persecute or annoy, that we undertake to review these doctrines, but because we believe them to be founded in superstitious vagaries that cannot be tolerated under an enlightened system of free government.

—Appear to forget that the State has a life and services of the citizen, around which the strong environs of the Federal constitution have been cast; and of which they cannot deprive her without a violation of that sacred instrument, and hence the opinion that we have before asserted, that Mormonism and the Constitution of the United States are incompatible, and cannot exist together in a state of integrity.

January 1st, 1859.

UTAHUS.

Our Carson Valley Correspondence.

GENOA, CARSON VALLEY, U. T.,
Nov. 13, 1858.

EDITORS OF THE SAN FRANCISCO HERALD:

A few weeks ago we had a slight fall of snow here, which led some to believe we would have an early and severe winter; but since that the weather has been remarkably fine, and wagons continue to cross the Sierra Nevada without interruption.

We had an election here for county officers on the 30th ult. Two parties appeared in the field, the Mormon and Anti-Mormon, the latter prevailing. The officers elected were, however, instructed beforehand not to qualify, it being the wish of a large majority of the people that we get along without government until the organization of the Territory of Nevada, rather than submit to be ruled by a band of foreign outlaws, and taxed for the support of Brigham Young's seraglio.

Some of those engaged in constructing the telegraph to this place from Placerville came into town two days ago for provisions. They reported the work within ten miles of Genoa, and say they will get here in four or five days more.

A person well qualified has lately opened a school here, the first ever started in the valley.

TENNESSEE.

PIC AND PORK.—When my lady sees master pig munching and wallowing in a ditch, she curls up her nose and lifts her shoulders at his nastiness. (And, lo! when the same pig's leg, fragrant with sage and patriarchal onions, smokes upon the board, the same lady sendeth her plate three times.

Interesting from Mexico.

THE LIBERALS DEFEATED IN A SANGUINARY BATTLE.

The New Orleans Delta, of the 28th October, publishes the following interesting letter from Mr. Israel B. Bigelow, giving a detailed account of the sanguinary battle between the Liberal party, under General Vidaurri, and the Government troops, under General Miramon:

BROWNVILLE, Oct. 12, 1858.

EDITOR CIVILIAN:—Some weeks ago, I wrote you that it was impossible for the Northern faction in Mexico long to sustain themselves in opposition to a government having its headquarters about the city of Mexico and sustained by the Catholic clergy. Recent events have verified that statement.

General Santiago Vidaurri is emphatically whipped out and used up! Vidaurri—after having entered the city of San Luis Potosi, without opposition, and about which so much was said—finding that the presence of his army was obnoxious to the citizens, retreated from the city to the hacienda La Parada, about eight leagues from San Luis.

On the 26th of September, General Miramon sent a detachment of 1300 men to reconnoitre his camp, with orders to fall back in the event of an attack.

On the 28th, he sent out a larger detachment with similar instructions, and after having made himself thoroughly acquainted with Vidaurri's strength and position, on the morning of the 29th, prepared for a general attack.

His army consisted of 11,000 men, officered by the best men in Mexico.

Having determined to make the attack with the bayonet and lance alone, he detailed 3,000 men to retain as a guard for the artillery and military stores.

He then ordered 3,000 lancers to take positions on the right and left wings of Vidaurri's army, at safe distances, and hold themselves in readiness to cut off the fugitives in the event of a route.

He then placed himself at the head of 5,000 infantry and cavalry and moved toward the camp of Vidaurri.

As the army arrived upon the hills which commanded the plain where Vidaurri with 8,000 men were encamped, General Miramon ordered a halt, and pointing with his sword across the plain, said: "Soldiers of Mexico! there are the enemies of the Republic, and the enemies of the Church; this day we shall strike a blow that will give rest to the Republic, and rebuild the altars of our holy religion."

When these words were concluded, shouts from 5,000 voices of "Viva la Republica, Viva la Iglesia!" resounded in tones of the deepest enthusiasm, throughout the lines.

So soon as silence was restored, the bugles sounded, and the army advanced with fixed bayonets and lance, orders having been given for not a musket to be fired until the batteries should be taken.

As the attacking army advanced, Vidaurri's gunners were distinctly seen holding in their hands their lighted port fires, awaiting the orders of their commanders, but the army of Mexico steadily advanced.

When within two hundred yards of Vidaurri's lines, the order to fire was given, and sixty pieces of cannon and eight thousand small arms belched forth their murderous hail upon the assailants.

In an instant, and before the troops had time to waver, the order to charge rang down the line from the sharp voice of General Miramon; the order was obeyed—and before the artillerymen could re-load their pieces, a large portion of them were lanced at their guns, and the batteries were taken.

Simultaneously Miramon's infantry had fallen upon Vidaurri's voluntarios with their bayonets with such fury as was irresistible. Lances and bayonets were clotted with blood, while bullets pierced the frightened fugitives.

Footmen were trampled under the feet of the cavalry that had been posted upon the right and left of Vidaurri, and many of them lanced.

The plain to the north and east of the hacienda was covered with fugitives, flying towards the mountains, almost breathless, from the impetuous lancers.

It was a San Jacinto victory; 500 are reported killed; 1100 wounded—one-half supposed to be mortally; 2000 taken prisoners, the balance made their escape into the mountains with the exception of about 250, mostly officers, who escaped with General Vidaurri.

The victors took 560 mules and horses, 320 wagons, 60 pieces of artillery, 90,000 pounds of ammunition, besides muskets and the usual amount of camp equipage.

General Vidaurri, in an express to Monterey, wrote, "All is lost," which, being interpreted, means that he will no longer handle the public revenue.

These disturbers of the public peace are brought up at last, as they ought to have been twelve months ago.

If there is a compensation in nature, as some believe, men can not in the name of liberty, or in any other name, long be allowed to plunder private property, rob and demolish churches, murder and banish priests, without being called upon for a settlement—and General Miramon, although but 26 years of age, seems to have been the employed agent in the hands of an overruling Providence, to check the operations of this band of plunderers and make them account.

Overland Mail Routes.

Since the subject of overland communications with the Pacific has become of such general interest, and these communications are likely to prove of such vast utility to the country, it becomes proper that the various routes should be thoroughly examined, with reference to distance, climate and the obstacles to be overcome, and their relative merits brought before the country, that the government may be induced to extend its aid and fostering care to each in the proportion that it promises to advance the great interests of the whole Union.

The route now most prominent starts from St. Louis and Memphis, converging at Fort Smith and terminates at San Francisco. The St. Louis branch, however, has alone produced practical benefits; the distance from Fort Smith to Memphis having been made so slowly that dates, &c., over it were fully anticipated by the earlier arrival at the former place. By reference to the map it will be observed then that this route starts from the Mississippi river at about thirty-eight degrees and forty minutes north latitude, and proceeds in a south-westerly direction to Fort Smith, Fort Chadbourne, and to a point of north latitude about thirty-one degrees and forty minutes, or more than four hundred miles out of a direct course; thence to El Paso, Fort Buchanan, Fort Yuma, Los Angeles and San Francisco, a distance of about two thousand four hundred miles. It will be seen, too, that a large portion of this route is below latitude thirty-two, which is suggestive of intolerable heat, in midsummer, especially upon the deserts of sand. Over this route the Messrs. Butterfield are now carrying the mails semi-weekly, making the time from St. Louis to San Francisco in twenty-four days; for which they get the munificent sum of six hundred thousand dollars per annum, besides the donations of lands for mail stations. We do not make these remarks for the purpose of finding fault with the Department, but that we may compare the merits of our own with this route, and that it may appear which has the strongest claims upon the government, and which promises, with an equal endowment, the greatest benefits to the country.

The route next in importance is that from this city by way of Fort Kearney, Fort Laramie to Salt Lake city, upon which Messrs. Jones, Hockaday & Co. are contractors. It leaves the Missouri river at St. Joseph, in latitude thirty-nine degs. and forty minutes north, and proceeds in a westerly direction, bearing north, to the forty-third parallel, thence to Salt Lake City, where it connects with Chorpeneing & Co.'s line from Placerville. The distance between this city and Salt Lake is between a thousand and eleven hundred miles, and from thence to Placerville is about six hundred miles, as indicated by the map, making the whole distance between St. Joseph and Placerville about eighteen hundred miles, or from here to San Francisco less than two thousand miles. On the route between here and Placerville there is weekly service, the time from here to Salt Lake city being, according to contract, twenty-one days, and thence to Placerville—if memory serves us—twelve days, making thirty-three days to accomplish a distance of eighteen hundred miles, whereas on the Southern route two thousand four hundred miles are traversed, semi-weekly, in twenty-four days!

It should be borne in mind, too, that this route is, in every sense, more important than the Southern route. Through it we hold intercourse with Utah, and all the Forts of the Northwest, and may have by far the best facilities of communication with Oregon and Washington Territories, to say nothing of the time that may be saved by making it the chief channel of intercourse with California. It is, without any sort of question, more central in its eastern termination as well as its entire course. By means of the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad, its termination at this City is of easy access from every quarter of the Union—approachable by Railroad connections from everywhere. In this respect neither St. Louis nor Memphis will have any advantages to plead upon us.

It will perhaps be said that the high latitude through which this route passes will offer formidable climatic barriers during a great portion of the year. That there will be some obstacles of this character cannot be reasonably denied; but it may be fairly doubted whether they will be found of a magnitude equal to those to be encountered in the hot, dry season upon the route of the Messrs. Butterfield. This is a matter which will be determined, however, within the lapse of a few months. But it is a matter fixed beyond peradventure, that through nine months of the year the route from this city, via Salt Lake, is superior to all others that have been tested.

Of the route of Messrs. Barrow, Porter & Co., from Kansas City to Stockton, we will not speak at present, as its practicability has not been fully tested. We, however, confidently predict its success.

These routes are all much needed, and all traverse regions of territory which must be supplied with mail facilities; and by their establishment the administration has won golden opinions from all sections and all parties. Post Master General Brown, in these attentions to Western interests, has endeared himself to the people of the West, who will not be slow to testify their gratitude when the occasion may offer. But it is hoped and believed that the facts which we have adduced above will be apprehended by the Department and acted upon as their importance would suggest.

It is by the route from this city, thro' the South Pass, Salt Lake City and Placerville that San Francisco anticipates the most important results. It is upon this route that the people of California are now erecting a line of telegraph, and it is upon it that the settlements of the South Platte are springing up. In speaking of the Overland Telegraph the Alta Californian says: "Where shall we build it? Of course on the main line of travel—on the line by which we expect to have most intercourse with the Mississippi valley. That line is by Carson Valley, Salt Lake City, the South Pass, and St. Joseph. By that route nine-tenths of the overland immigrants now in California have come, and it is that route by which the great majority of future immigrants will come."—St. Joseph Gazette.

GEN. HARNEY'S PROGRAMME.—We find the following in the Pioneer and Democrat of December 3:

"We learn of Chief Justice McFadden, of this Territory, that it is the purpose of Gen. Harney, through the agency of the United States troops under his command, to open as nearly as practicable, a direct line of overland communication between the various military posts within the district. During some portions of the winter season, the Columbia river, both above and below Fort Vancouver, is usually blocked up more or less with ice, rendering the transportation of men, munitions of war, etc., from headquarters to other posts impracticable. To obviate this, Judge McFadden informs us, it is the design of Gen. Harney to open military thoroughfares, thro' the aid of the service, connecting the Columbia river with Puget Sound, Fort Vancouver with the Dalles—uniting all the military posts in a common chain of communication. The value to these Territories that would attach to the consummation of such a project is too obvious to require comment or explanation. And whilst the prosecution of this enterprise is going on, Judge McF. further states that it is the determination of the General to afford a strong and vigilant military protection, the coming season, to the immigrant trails leading into these Territories. With this assurance, the region of country between the Rocky and Cascade mountains will be disarmed of its former terror to the immigrants to these shores, and comparative security of life and property anticipated."

ANNEXATION OF "SOUTH PLATTE" NEBRASKA, TO KANSAS.—The movement indicated by the caption of this article, is certain to receive the attention of the present session of Congress. In truth we doubt not the bill is already matured, and will be among the first measures proposed for the consideration of that body.

The reason which will chiefly influence the supporters of this annexation movement, will be the fact, that it will at once divest the subject of the admission of Kansas—which will again come up—of the difficulty arising out of the English bill, which provides that she shall not come into the Union until her population will entitle her to a member of Congress. By the annexation of that portion of Nebraska lying south of the river Platte, any inability from this cause will be removed. The geography of the two Territories seems eminently favorable to the policy of annexation; and from what we have been able to glean from various sources of information, the people directly interested in the question will support the movement.

The Brownville Advertiser, of the 3d inst., holds this language upon the subject: "In the first place, Platte river is a natural boundary line; has been, is, and always will be, an almost insuperable barrier dividing the two sections at Nebraska; known as 'North Platte,' and 'South Platte.' Full one half the season it is utterly impassable. It cannot be bridged except at enormous expense; and should this be done, owing to the treacherous embankments and bed of the river, nine chances to one, the first freshet after its completion, would sweep it away."

"Again there has grown up a bitter sectional or local feeling between those two portions of the country, entering into almost every question that may be agitated, which always has and always will prevent harmonious effort, and retard the progress and development of the Territory. In short, there are no interests in common at stake."

Nebraska City, the first town in importance in this district of the Territory, was formerly supposed to be favorable to the change. The News, under Secretary Morton, discussed the matter elaborately, though recently we have no recollection of seeing any thing in its columns upon the subject.

By reference to a telegraphic despatch from Berry's Station, Carson Valley, it will be seen that the Placerville and Humboldt Telegraph Company have stretched their lines beyond the snow-clad summits of the Sierra Nevada, and are rapidly urging the good work still farther. It is a great and glorious enterprise, and commands the admiration and gratitude of every Californian. It will be observed that the dispatch is exclusively to the Herald.

BRIGHAM YOUNG LOSING $10,000.

—The North American's Washington correspondent says:

"Among the curious developments of the stoppage of a banking house here, recently, is the fact that Brigham Young comes out minus some $10,000, having been a confiding depositor to that extent, through the agency of the Territorial delegate who transacted his financial matters in this quarter. It seems, with all Brigham's devotion to Mormonism, he thought it was well to provide for a wet day elsewhere, and hence has been emulating the example of some other rulers, who made investment at a distance from the scene of threatened or impending revolution. In this instance, however, fate ruled adversely to the sensual spectator and he has to mourn the loss of both principal and interest."

Julius Caesar Hannibal, giving an account of his sea voyage, says: "All day passengers was now heaven, and as if dat wasn't enough, de captain give orders for de ship to heave too, and she hove too."

SIO REWARD.

STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Lewis' Ranch) one strawberry horse, branded JB on the near shoulder. Tho above reward will be given for his return.

BADFORD, CABOT, & CO.

LOST.

ON Monday night between Dr. Clinton's and William Snow's, a pair of gold spectacles. Any person who has found the same, and will return them to Dr. Sprague, will be liberally rewarded for their trouble.

10-11

W. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS.

WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Stebbins, at the Store of Livingston, Kinkaid & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for repairs.

G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859.

10-12

FOR SALE.

LARGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Mogo, Burr & Co.

10-13

FOR SALE.

ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.

10-14

CHARLES MOGO.

Hot Spring Brewery.

HUMOROUS!

It's the last ostrich feather that breaks the husband's back.

Rats and conquerors must expect no mercy in misfortune.

The man who was filled with emotion, hadn't room for his dinner.

Beware of the gaming table—you can't always "nick."

What fishes have their eyes nearest together? The smallest.

When is the weather favorable to hay makers? When it "rains pitchforks."

"Can you return my love, dearest Julia?" "Certainly, sir. I don't want it, I'm sure."

If petticoat government is not more oppressive now than formerly, it is certainly double in extent.

A man can no more believe with another man's faith, than he can satisfy his hunger by seeing another man eat.

Washing shirts, says an exchange paper, wears them out. When they get dirty, rub them over with chalk. "Economy is wealth."

When you hear the phrase, "I may say without vanity," you may be sure some characteristic vanity will follow in the same breath.

"Jack, I think your father is going to flay you and make leather of your skin." "Why so?" "Because I heard him say that he would tan your hide well for you."

The New York Evening Post tells a large story of freaks of lightning in France. A young girl was struck by lightning and changed to a boy. We don't believe it.—Albany Statesman.

We cannot say as to the changing, but we have observed, that a girl, whenever she was in danger is apt to turn to a boy—if there's one about.—Louisville Journal.

It can hardly be said of a man when he is hung that he pays the debt of nature; it is altogether likely that he goes into a state of suspension.

Every rose has its thorn. We never helped to hawl the flower of a ball room without being convinced, by painful evidence, that she had a pin about her.

A celebrated divine, wishing a large collection at the conclusion of a charity sermon, discoursed in the following style upon the beauty and efficacy of that charity which works silently and unheralded to the world: "I have often remarked, as the contribution is being taken up, that the silver pieces tunable into the box with a great noise, while the paper money drops in silently as the dropping of a snow-flake."

A REAL GRIEVANCE.—A fat man enters the following grievance:—"I am a fat man, and require room. I had to travel by diligence from Macon, in France. I sent the rascally garcon from the hotel to book two places for me, and paid for them. When I came to the office to take my place, I found they had booked one seat inside and one out."

NEWSPAPER BORROWERS.—Hear how editors talk to the borrowing individuals: "Got a paper to spare?" "Yes, sir, here's one of our last. Would you like to subscribe, and take it regularly?"

"I would, but I'm too poor." "That man just came from the circus—cost fifty cents; lost time from his farm, fifty cents; liquor, judging from the smell, fifty cents; making a dollar and a half actually thrown away, and then begging for a newspaper, alleging that he was too poor to pay for it!"

That's what we call saving at the spigot and losing at the bung hole.

How is it that girls can always tell a married man from a single one? The fact is indisputable. Blackwood says that "the fact of matrimony or bachelorship is written so legibly in a man's appearance that ingenuity cannot conceal it. Everywhere there is some inexplicable instinct that tells us whether an individual (whose name, fortune and circumstances are totally unknown) is Green, mail contractor on the route before or is not a married man. It may be a green Albuquerque and Neosho, Mo., certain subdued look, such as that which characterizes the lion in a menagerie, and distinguishes it from the lions of the desert, or some other such trait; but learn the time and place of the battle, that such is the truth we positively affirm."

SPIRITUALISM IN ITALY.—A funny story is told in a communication to the Spiritual Age, by Mr. J. J. Jarves, the distinguished author of "Art Hints," "Confessions of an Inquirer," &c., now residing in Florence, Italy. It is as follows:

"At a recent circle in this city, a skeptical physician unexpectedly entered on a visit, and seeing what the family were about, asked permission, 'for the fun of the thing,' to sit with them. The phenomena soon began, and directed toward him too.

"Who is it wants me?" he asked. The medium's hand (a titled lady of great refinement and distinction in society) was made to write:

"One of your patients, whom you killed, dam you!"

Imagine the confusion of both parties. The doctor disappeared, and has made no further attempts at a funny investigation of spiritualism; and the mortification of the lady medium has scarcely abated yet."

HOSTILE INDIAN CAGED.—Epiet, the Indian chief who led the massacre at the Cascades in '56, has again been endeavoring to incite the Indians to commence hostilities upon the settlements, but has had a quietus put upon further operations. At the order of General Harney, Lieut. Mallory, went up to White Salmon river last week and succeeded in capturing him. He was brought down yesterday on the Mountain Buck and lodged in the guard house at Vancouver.—Standard 24th.

RELIEF FOR MAJOR VAN DORN.—The San Antonio Herald says that Gen. Twigg has ordered Major Van Dorn's expedition to continue operations in the Indian country until spring. General Twigg has ordered the movement of Captain Oakes' company from Fort Clark, and a company of cavalry from Fort Mason, to repair immediately to Major Van Dorn's camp, near the late battle-ground, and report to him for service. This is following up that gallant officer's victory in the right spirit.

A LUCKY ESCAPE.—One fine day during the reign of his gracious majesty George III., a tar-ry breeched British man-o'-war-man essayed, by dint of an unseemly missile in the shape of a paving stone, to crush the cranium, or, in the culprit's phrase, to "crack the cocoanut," of a certain nobleman or other distinguished dignitary of the realm, whose name is not distinctly remembered. But it occurred in London, near Eastcheap, on Easterday, and either Lord North, Sir Benjamin West or Doctor South was the proposed victim. At any rate, from all points of the compass, the usual congratulatory catarracts and avalanches were showered upon the fortunate pate which the villainous pebble did not happen to hit. Some envious epigrammatist of the time—possibly the assailant himself—adding insult to injury, perpetrated this cruel additional fling upon the occasion:

"Talk no more of the 'lucky escape' of the head.
From a flint so unluckily thrown;
I think very different from thousands indeed,
'Twas a lucky escape for the stone."

A TURKISH BEAUTY.—It is quite true that a Turkish beauty—really a beauty—"strikes you all of a heap," as the sailors say. The princess sat, bending slightly forward in the carriage, her "gazelle eyes" resting thoughtfully on a Turkish fan of snow-white feathers, which she held in her hand, the centre of which was entirely of emeralds and diamonds—slight as a fairy, the exquisite tint of her skin, seen through the misty white veil, just the hue of a shell where it approaches pink. The delicate robe of palest sea-green, and the wreath of diamonds trembling round her head like splendid drops of water in a charmed crown, instantly reminded me of Undine in her softest mood, travelling in the rich but fantastic equipage to visit some great River Queen on shore for the day.—Mrs. Hornby's Stamboul.

FIGHT WITH COMANCHES.—Mr. W. L. Shurlds, the only through passenger who arrived with the overland stage last evening, says he heard at Las Vegas a report that Lieut. Beale and Mr. Green, mail contractor on the route before or is not a married man. It may be a green Albuquerque and Neosho, Mo., certain subdued look, such as that which characterizes the lion in a menagerie, and distinguishes it from the lions of the desert, or some other such trait; but learn the time and place of the battle, that such is the truth we positively affirm."

Review of the Sixth Regiment U. S. Infantry at Benicia.

On Wednesday last, Gen. Clarke, U. S. A., the General Commanding the department of California, visited Benicia, to inspect the 6th Regiment U. S. Infantry, lately arrived at that place, after a long march of 2100 miles from Fort Leavenworth—which place they left on the 7th of May last. Numerous visitors from San Francisco, Sacramento, etc., including the whole population at Benicia, attended to witness so interesting a sight. The Regiment looked remarkably well, and afforded evidence of the pains and care taken by their officers to perfect them in discipline and drill.

The barracks not being sufficiently commodious to accommodate so large a body of men, they were under tents and appeared as they did after eight days march, in the course of their long route, except that the numerous trains of wagons, some 150 in number, which accompanied them, bearing the extensive supplies, necessary for so long a journey, were packed beyond the confines of the camp.

We counted no less than 80 tents, equidistant, &c., forming regular avenues, to the rear of which were these occupied by the Lieut.-Col. commanding the regiment. At about 11 A. M. the whole force marched into the parade ground and formed a line, when the review and inspection was held.

Gen. Clarke and a brilliant staff closely inspected each company, and, as we understood, expressed himself much pleased with their appearance and soldierly deportment. The color borne by the regiment was the identical one carried by it during the memorable campaign in Mexico, in which the 6th gained such deserved laurels. It presents the evidences of many a deadly affray, pierced by bullets, and rent in numerous places. Of course it was the object of marked attention.

The review terminated, the officers of the regiment invited the visitors to partake of a very handsome collation given to their gallant General, at which speeches were made, some excellent toasts given, and the good wine freely circulated. We are informed that it is the first time that Gen. Clarke, although its Colonel for twelve years, has ever seen the whole regiment in a body. By reference to the army list, we find that he was promoted to a captaincy in the regiment he now commands in 1815, and was breveted Brigadier General in 1847 for his marked skill and gallantry at the siege of Vera Cruz. His late successes in terminating an extensive Indian war in Oregon in so short a campaign, sufficiently attests that the veteran of 1812 and one of the most distinguished heroes of the Mexican war, has lost none of the fire and vigor of youth, and fully justifies the confidence reposed in him by the General Government.

We regret to learn that the regiment will soon be separated, by the allotment of six companies South, two to the Presidio, one to San Diego, and one to Humboldt Bay. Wherever they go, we feel assured they will give a good account of themselves. We regret that we were unable to witness an elegant ball given by the officers in the evening, which, we are told by one who did attend, was a brilliant affair.

TO SALT LAKE VIA HONEY LAKE.—The people of Honey Lake valley and vicinity are anxious to have a mail to Salt Lake. The Quincy Argus says:

Time of the Salt Lake and Marysville mail, by way of Honey Lake and the American Valley: Salt Lake to Honey Lake six days, Honey Lake to American Valley one day, American Valley to Marysville one day; total from Salt Lake to Marysville, eight days. In order to make the above time, an expenditure of a small amount of money is needed between Honey Lake and Indian Valley, also, between Indian and American valleys. The balance of the road is now a passable stage road; true, it might be improved everywhere, but it is equally true, that every improvement would diminish the time requisite for making the trip. When an appropriation is called for in behalf of the central route, let there be a line from Salt Lake to Marysville, by way of Honey Lake, and we are content to abide the result of a fair test of the merits of the two routes.

When is a door more than a door? When is it to (two). Why is the medical profession the most tedious? Because it requires more patience (patients) than any other.

A Suspicious Rabbit.

A gentleman, relating the incidents of his travels while in Paris, says: "I entered a restaurant on the other side of the Seine, and ordered a rabbit. I was green, verdant as the first cucumber, even as early peas, or I should not have done thus. The rabbit came; and I offered the Moniteur to an old Frenchman opposite, whose eyes were fixed upon my plate, but he bowed a negative. The bow puzzled me; it was too much. 'Monsieur has not been long in Paris?' 'No, I have just arrived.' 'Monsieur is going to eat that?' 'Yes; may I offer you a slice?' 'Monsieur will you allow me to make a small suggestion?' inquired the Frenchman, with a frightful grimace. 'Certainly,' I replied, becoming alarmed. 'Monsieur that rabbit once mewed,' he replied with the utmost gravity."

PERORATION.—The following is the eloquent peroration of an argument of the counsel of the defendant in a recent assault case which was tried in the Boston Municipal Court. It was an "up-hill case," and the lawyers not the most eminent:

"Common sense, gentlemen, is better than all your flummery! Yes I'd rather have a pound of common sense, than—than everything else in the world; and I hope, your Honor, that the jury will act on the common sense principle, and give the defendant an acquittal from the fact—from the very fact that he is not guilty; I tell you he is not guilty, because—because—I say he wasn't there."

AMBROTYPES, MELANOTYPES AND PHOTOGRAPHS.

may be had at the old establishment a few doors North of Perry's Store, in the building occupied by A. Taylor & Son. Entrance up the stairs at the South end. 7-24

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS, WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz: Tea, Coffee, Sugar, Powder, Pepper, Nuts, Raisins, Currants, Prunes, Apples, Peaches, Pears, Plums, Grapes, &c. &c. Also, French Mustard, Durham do, Assorted Jams, do Jellies, do Syrup, do Cordials, Brandy Peaches, do Cherries, do Pears, Assorted West India Preserves, Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Peach do, Apple do, Plum do, Raspberry do, Gooseberry do, Blackberry Brandy, Raspberry Brandy, Fresh Lobster, Pickled do, Fresh Clams, Mince Meat, Sausage Meat, Fresh Cauliflower, Pickled do, Worcestershire Sauce, Stoughton Bitters, Fresh Salmon, Fresh Tomatoes, French Pickles, Hostetter Bitters, Boker's do, Le Drard's do, Royal Windsor do, Maraschino, Curacao, Absynth, Scotch Ale, London Porter, Scheidam Schapps, Golden Grape Cognac, Figs, Old Virginia Peach Dates, Brandy, Mountain Dew Whisky, Family Supplies, Morning Call, Indian Queen Maderia, also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Gents Boots & Shoes, Ladies Shoes, Woolen Gloves, do Mitts, do Scarfs, Stationery, &c., All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce. G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858.

FANCY GROCERIES. French Mustard, Durham do, Assorted Jams, do Jellies, do Syrup, do Cordials, Brandy Peaches, do Cherries, do Pears, Assorted West India Preserves, Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Peach do, Apple do, Plum do, Raspberry do, Gooseberry do, Blackberry Brandy, Raspberry Brandy, Fresh Lobster, Pickled do, Fresh Clams, Mince Meat, Sausage Meat, Fresh Cauliflower, Pickled do, Worcestershire Sauce, Stoughton Bitters, Fresh Salmon, Fresh Tomatoes, French Pickles, Hostetter Bitters, Boker's do, Le Drard's do, Royal Windsor do, Maraschino, Curacao, Absynth, Scotch Ale, London Porter, Scheidam Schapps, Golden Grape Cognac, Figs, Old Virginia Peach Dates, Brandy, Mountain Dew Whisky, Family Supplies, Morning Call, Indian Queen Maderia, also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Gents Boots & Shoes, Ladies Shoes, Woolen Gloves, do Mitts, do Scarfs, Stationery, &c., All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce. G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858.

WANTED. A good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY. WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

COW STRAYED. ON the 23d October last, a small young light red cow, white face, and a thick rope tied around her horns, horns small, was given notice, think she was branded Atwood on the horn, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis R. Bolton, 12th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded.

LOOK HERE. A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI FORM BOOK" has been borrowed from the office of J. Harnett, Secretary of State. He earnestly requests the person having it to return it without delay.

WORK CATTLE. 100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co. Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

WANTED. A LARGE Sheet-iron Stove, for which a good price will be paid. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858. The undersigned would most respectfully inform citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same uniform rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKADEE & CO. In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our train so long expected. L. K. & Co.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR, AT LAW. Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-17.

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW. Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's store. 2-17.

LAW OFFICE. W. J. McCORMICK. T. S. WILLIAMS. McCORMICK & WILLIAMS, ATTORNEYS AT LAW.

Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.

OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store. G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858. 1-17. Missouri Republican and N. Y. Herald will please publish 3 months daily, and send bill to this office.

RADFORD, CABOT & Co., WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC. At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T. 1-6m.

NEW GOODS. JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market. GILBERT & GERRISH.

WAGONS. A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH.

BILLIARDS. THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon, J. M. WALLACE, (op. stairs) between the Police Office, and Gilbert and Gerrish's Store, is now open for visits.

The tables are new and perfect, and no pains will be spared to make it an agreeable resort for gentlemen. The exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation life 2-17.

EMPIRE SALOON. THE BAR is now furnished with all the large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c. &c. Child classed with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESOME refreshments is respectfully called. 2-17. JOHN M. WALLACE.

DESERT READING ROOMS. EAST TEMPLE STREET. REESE'S BUILDINGS. IS NOW OPEN.

WE solicit NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES, and other PERIODICALS, from all parts of the Union; on receipt of which subscription will be remitted.

Books for Reference, &c., as donations, will be thankfully received. If in those in this vicinity, who receive foreign papers, we shall be glad to obtain them on loan or otherwise. 2-17. WILLIAM EDINGTON, H. W. NASHVILLE.

WANTED. A FEW good Mules in exchange for a good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY. WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

COW STRAYED. ON the 23d October last, a small young light red cow, white face, and a thick rope tied around her horns, horns small, was given notice, think she was branded Atwood on the horn, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis R. Bolton, 12th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded.

LOOK HERE. A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI FORM BOOK" has been borrowed from the office of J. Harnett, Secretary of State. He earnestly requests the person having it to return it without delay.

WORK CATTLE. 100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co. Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS.

WANTED. A LARGE Sheet-iron Stove, for which a good price will be paid. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

WANTED. A good price will be paid for a Sheet-iron Stove. RADFORD CABOT & Co. 7-11.

THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, JANUARY 11, 1859.

NUMBER 11.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:
Single copy, for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

JOE BOWERS' WEDDING.

BY ONE WHO WAS "THAR."

The county of —, "away up in the mountains," boasts of one of the best judges in California. On the bench he is firm, decided, and prompt, not caring the snap of his finger for either the applause of friends, or the mutterings of enemies. He is, perhaps, the most devoted man to the law in all creation, and has his head so full of what he terms "judicial talk," that he not infrequently finds himself making learned charges and passing sentence outside of the court room.

On a recent occasion, the judge was called on to exercise the "power and authority in him vested," in the case of a young couple, who desired to have their hearts united in the holy band of wedlock. Of course he consented to perform the pleasing duty, and on the appointed evening, was promptly on hand, at the house at which the affair was to come off. The room was crowded by the beauty and fashion of the town, and none looked more dignified or happy than the judge himself, who was dressed within an inch of his life.

It is customary on occasions of the kind referred to, for the good folks of the mountain towns to pass around the wine quite freely, and to their everlasting credit, we will add, they consider it no harm for one to manifest his interest in the joyous event, by getting "lively." The judge is an ardent admirer of the fair sex, having in the course of his life led the third one to the altar. To use his own language, he is "a great believer in weddings," and that he should become a little mellow amid the glorious scene of the evening, was not to be wondered at by those who knew him intimately. He had the weakness of all good judges. He would take his "tod."

The wine had passed round and round. The music had ceased. The time for making Joseph Bowers and Nancy Harkens one, had arrived. Every heart throbbed with the most delightful emotions. The young gentleman desired to know how "Joe" would stand it, and the young ladies were anxious to see how "Nance" would suffer the awful shock. Others, again, who had closely observed the turn of affairs during the evening, fixed their attention upon the judge to see how he would come out of the scrape.

At length the trying moment was announced. The judge arose very cautiously from the chair which he had occupied in one corner of the room, and casting his eye over the company, he recognized the sheriff of the county, who was present as an invited guest. The judge had imbibed just enough to make him forget the nature of his business. He was full of "judicial talk," and required nothing but the presence of the sheriff to start him. Looking sternly at the officer, he shouted:

"Mr. Sheriff, open the Court and call order!"

A general twitter followed this command, in the midst of which the sheriff took "the court" gently by the arm, and led him to his seat in the corner, at the same time informing the august personage of his mistake.

Everything now bid fair for a pleasant and sudden termination of the affair, until another annoyance, which was nothing less than the absence of the bridegroom, was observed. It turned out that he had just stepped across the street to join his friends in a parting drink, but before his return, some cold-blooded wag had whispered into the ear of our foggy judge, the cause of "delay in proceedings." Instantly the chair corner moved, and in that direction all eyes were fixed.

"Mr. Sheriff," slowly drawled the judge, "bring Joe into court on a supenor"—the judge had his own way of pronouncing the word—then addressing the bride who stood in the foreground, and hung her head in confusion, he added, "I spose you're the plaintiff. Well, don't take on. Innocence and virtue will be protected by this here court."

This was the saddest blunder of all. The judge was again made to see his mistake, and would have been considerable set back, had it not been for a corrective in the shape of "forty drops of the critter," which he instantly applied.

In a few moments all was ready, in right down earnest. The bridegroom had arrived, full of joy. The bride in "gorgeous array" stood at his side. The company pressed forward. The excitement was intense. The judge never looked so dignified in his life. He evidently felt every inch a judge.

"J-J-o-e B-B-o-w-e-r-s," commenced the man of law, in that distressing style of speech with which he was invariably troubled when under the influence of liquor. "J-J-o-e B-B-o-w-e-r-s, stand up. Have y-y-you anything to s-s-say w-w-why s-s-sen-tence?"

"Stop, stop, stop, Judge," shouted the Sheriff from the back part of the room. "You are not going to hang the man, but marry him."

The Judge drew a long breath and blinked rapidly, but stood his ground well. Recovering himself, he proceeded:

"J-J-J-o-e B-B-B-o-w-e-r-s, do y-y-you t-t-take Nancy H-H-Harkens for your wife, so h-h-h-e-lp you God?"

This was a tolerable effort, and Joe nodded assent.

"N-N-Nancy Harkens, it now remains for this here C-C-Court to—"

Here the Sheriff again interrupted the Judge, reminding him of the real business of the evening.

"Miss N-Nancy," resumed the Judge, after being set aright, "d-d-do y-y-you t-t-take J-J-Joe B-B-Bowers for a husband, t-t-to the best of your knowledge and b-b-belief, or d-d-do you not?"

"You bet!" softly answered the light-hearted Nancy.

The Judge then took the hands of the happy couple, and joining them, wound up the business as follows:

"It now r-r-remains for this here C-C-Court to pronounce you, J-J-Joe Bowers, and y-y-you, Nancy Harkens, man and wife; and" (here the Judge paused to wipe the perspiration from his face,) "m-m-may G-G-God Or-mity h-h-have mercy on y-y-y-your souls! Sheriff, remove the culprits!"

The company roared. Joe and Nancy weakened. The Sheriff was taken with a leaving. The Judge let himself out loose in a glass of apple jack. Taken by and large, it was the greatest wedding ever witnessed.

At a sale of farming stock at Gloucester, the auctioneer gave the following extempore description of a cow:

Long in her legs, bright in her eyes,
Short in her legs, thin in her thighs,
Big in her ribs, wide in her pines,
Full in her bosom small in her shins,
Long in her face, fine in her tail,
And never deficient in filling her pail.

The Last Hope of Mexico.

We receive, almost together the cheering advices of the opening of the Tehuantepec transit and the success of the Democrats in Mexico. There is an intimate relation between the triumph of the Liberals and the creation of what both countries supremely require—the shortest, safest, and most advantageous lines of inter-sea traffic. President Juarez, the Democratic and constitutional Chief Magistrate of Mexico, understands the value as clearly and desires as ardently the opening of such mediums of development as the Tehuantepec transit, and a direct continental road to the Gulf of California, as President Buchanan. The news of the early and firm establishment in power of Juarez is therefore an object of general interest to the people of both countries.

President Benito Juarez is heartily, radically, and unchangeably American in his plan of foreign policy, and as thoroughly Democratic in his aspirations for the domestic regeneration of Mexico. All this is but dimly understood in the United States, for Juarez, Ocampo, Mata, and their special colleagues among the "Liberals," represent a new class of men, which is only beginning to be felt in Mexico, and of which hitherto we have had no practical knowledge in our relations with her. These men are the cream and flower of the native sons of Mexico; men in most of whose veins flows more or less of the blood of the original lords of that magnificent empire; men in the prime of manhood, who have learned in the stern apprenticeship of anarchy and misrule that the adulterous union of Church and State is equally fatal to the purity of religion and the elevation of the masses; men who, having studied with care the springs of the unexampled prosperity of the Union, have learned why Mexico, though rich in all the elements of greatness, is sinking into an abyss of misery, through the restless ambition of a legion of revolutionists by profession.

Zuloaga and most of his predecessors, back to Santa Anna, are of this tribe of anarchists, and all of them have united to this selfish disregard of the internal peace and development of their unfortunate country—an unlimited subservience to anti-American propositions of European policy.

President Juarez is in every point of view the enemy of these revolutionary leeches. He accepted the thorny honors of the Presidency as a mission of regeneration, in the hope of making the first step in the emancipation of the Mexican people from their long servitude to the crushing despotism of all that is worst in monkish and military intolerance. To bring in capital and industry from every part of the world, Juarez proposes a just and liberal (though judiciously guarded) system of colonization and mining development, which is something very different from the crude, uncertain, and inefficient projects which have hitherto been attempted; and if his are carried out they will treble the value of every mine and every yard of good soil in Mexico, and will give profitable employment to thousands of her laboring classes. To open to immediate production her rich but half depopulated mining districts, and at the same time establish permanent and mutually advantageous relations with this Government, President Juarez accredited Don Juan M. Mata as Minister to the United States. Senor Mata's distinguished personal qualifications, as well as the dignified tenor of his official representations, commanded the instant respect and confidence of the members of our Cabinet; and it is believed that nothing but the formality of Juarez taking possession of the Mexican capital is now wanting to complete a cordial alliance equally honorable and beneficial to both Republics.

The first fruits of the treaty, we anticipate, will be a consummation of a priceless system of free highways to the Pacific, by Tehuantepec and the Gulf of California, with neutral ports at the termini, under such guarantees on the part of both Governments as will protect the sovereign dignity of both Republics, and secure to the inhabitants of each all the immunities and privileges in the territory of the other which they enjoy under their own flag.

The Decline in Immigration.

The total number of immigrants landed at this port up to November 3rd is only 70,525, about one fourth the number which used to arrive to the same date a few years ago. The cause of the decline is obvious. Since the encumbered estates act went into effect in Ireland the condition of that country has rapidly improved; and the wretched failure of the political attempts of 1848 has diverted men's minds into better and more profitable channels. Germany has lost so much blood that it is not in a healthy state, and the progress of German manufacturers affords employment to the entire population. Throughout Europe, for many years, the harvests have been good; a blessing which must be ascribed partly to the bounty of providence, and partly to the improved agricultural methods lately adopted.

That the United States is a better country for young men to settle in than any of the countries of Europe must be obvious to all who study rightly the economical consequences of abundance of cheap land and absolute freedom, industrial, commercial, and social. No country of Europe offers such opportunities of well-doing to the hardy emigrant as the United States. If the truth were known, therefore, and no such feeling existed as love of home, it would be depopulated, and the United States would be filled with foreign immigrants of every race, type, and nation.

But the checks of the operation of the rule are powerful. Notwithstanding the large emigration to America, a very imperfect notion of the prospects of immigrants here is entertained in Europe. In the rural district of continental Europe, the United States are still a land of adventure, of uncertainty, of peril. No man will risk himself here if he have any prospects at all at home. Furthermore, the home feeling is powerful in the mind of all the European races; Germans, English, Scotch, French, and Irish regard the United States as an inferior country to their native land. They would rather stay at home and live moderately, than come here and feast plenteously. The feeling may be unphilosophical; but it is natural, and it is general.—Register.

A DESTRUCTIVE WEAPON.—It seems a paradox, but it is nevertheless a fact, that the more deadly and destructive war is made, the greater the economy of human life—the more certain the missile, the fewer the number on the death roll. Gunpowder, with musketry and cannon, destroyed the use of defensive armor—yet battles are now gained with less loss of life than in the days of the long bow, cross-bow, and the deadly hand-to-hand encounter.

These considerations must be our excuse, on the ground of humanity and true patriotism, for calling most forcibly the attention of Government to a very important implement of warfare. We do so the more earnestly, as we believe it will afford us a means of improving our coast defense.

The failure of the Lancaster shell makes it doubtful, if we succeed in manufacturing rifle cannon, whether they could be applied to anything but the propulsion of round shot. To increase the deadly nature of our round shot, with the same instrument, we divided our shot into parts, or contrived to burst it into fragments among our adversaries. Seeing that we cannot rifle our cannon, because of the mass of metal we have to deal with, Sir Charles Shaw—the author of the invention which we now proceed to describe—proposes to divide our cannon itself as well as the shot. He replaces the field piece, cannon or howitzer, by a row of rifle barrels, twenty-five in number. These are accurately placed on the same level, each barrel diverging slightly from the central, and so that the volley of rifle bullets discharged by the barrels will cover a width of about five yards at a distance of eight hundred yards. Sir Charles Shaw's infernal machine, placed on wheels, and made far lighter and far more manageable than a brass nine-pounder gun.

This implement may, therefore, be regarded as a rifled cannon, divided into twenty-five portions, as destructive as grape or canister shot at 600 yards, the Shrapnell shell at 800 yards, with its deadly aim extended as far as the rifle can reach. Conceive a battery of horse artillery with four of Sir C. Shaw's infernal machines substituted for their guns. The rifle battery is equal in effect to 25 rifles deliberately aimed, not from a man's shoulder, but from a fixed rest. It is no exaggeration, therefore, to regard one rifle battery manned by three riflemen, as a fair equivalent for a company of soldiers firing from the ranks.—London News.

A LITTLE DIFFICULTY IN THE WAY.

An enterprising traveling agent for a well-known Cleveland Tombstone Manufactory lately made a business visit to a small town in an adjoining county. Hearing in the village that a man in a remote part of the township had lost his wife, he thought he would go and see him, and offer him consolation, a grave stone, on his usual reasonable terms. He started. The road was a horribly frightful one, but the agent persevered and finally arrived at the bereaved man's house. Bereaved man's hired girl told the agent that the bereaved man was splitting fence rails "over the pasture, about two miles." The indefatigable agent hitched his horse and started for the "pasture." After falling into all manner of mudholes, scratching himself with briars and tumbling over decayed logs, the agent at length found the bereaved man. In a subdued voice he asked the man if he had lost his wife. The man said he had. The agent was very sorry to hear of it, and sympathized with the man very deeply in his great affliction; but death, he said, was an insatiable archer, and shot down all of both high and low degree. Informed the man that "what was her loss was his gain," and would be glad to sell him a grave stone to mark the spot where the beloved one slept—marble or common stone, as he chose, at prices defying competition. The bereaved man said there was "a little difficulty in the way." "Haven't you lost your wife?" inquired the agent. "Why, yes, I have," said the man, "but no grave stone ain't necessary; but you see the cussed critter ain't dead. She's scooted with another man!" The agent retired.

When is a boat like a knife? When it is a cutter.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, JANUARY, 11, 1859.

A FREE PRESS.

There is no subject of more importance than this great lever of public opinion, and especially the influence it can and must exert in a new Territory. It is a part of the magna charta of the free institutions of America, a constituent element of Liberty itself, which can never be assailed without attacking the very principles which lay at the root of our free institutions. We have established a free press in this Territory, and the assurance we have received from both correspondents and the Press abroad warrant us in asserting that we have their cordial support and warmest sympathies. We have been assailed here most vituperatively, but it matters not; the Valley Tan will go on, and our friends in the States may rest assured that we shall endeavor to give them the latest and most reliable intelligence concerning the affairs and incidents in this Territory.

The Message and the Overland Mail Routes.

We observe that the subject of Overland Mail routes to the Pacific is attracting considerable attention in the East, and the Butterfield route, is the especial theme of Anna's from the Press.

We have no objection to any of the rival routes. On the contrary, they deserve all the praise that can be bestowed upon them; but then, we have a right in this latitude, to ask and demand, especially from the Government, "fair play." However interested the Government may be, in the transmission of its mails, its high functions should not be used as an engine of oppression, where individual enterprise is in competition.

In the transmission of the President's Message to California, it looks very like there was some "Shenanigan" used; and that the Southern routes, and particularly the Butterfield route, was especially favored. The contractors on this, the Salt Lake route, Messrs. Hockaday & Co., of the Eastern division, and Chorpennig & Co., of the Western, went to great trouble and expense to fix their respective lines in order, for a race with all the other routes, whether of steam, mules, or mules. Sharing an honest pride in the measure, we in connection with the Contractors, deputed a special messenger to St. Louis, and accredited him to the office of the Missouri Republican, where every facility was offered him, and he secured the Message, as soon as an impression of it was taken upon the form of the Republican, and started. The messenger, George Merrick, is one among the very best conductors on the line, and he put it through in an almost incredible short space of time.

Major Chorpennig started his messenger immediately upon its arrival here, and if there had been no favoritism used, the San Francisco papers would have had it by our route inside of seventeen days. But the Butterfield Ponies it appears, out-jockeyed our arrangements by making a false start, and went off several days in advance of the tap of the drum. Still it is not without its good results, it has demonstrated the fact that the Salt Lake route is the shortest, and can be made the swiftest route to the Pacific. While the other routes carried the Message through, we distanced them altogether on time, and without bragging can do it always.

This time it should be remembered was made in mid-winter, when the storms of the South Pass, Rocky Ridge and the Rocky Mountain canyons had to be encountered. In the rival routes across, and through the wilderness, let us have at least an open field, and a fair fight.

U. S. District Court.—This court, Judge Sinclair presiding, is still in session, and has under consideration the case of James Ferguson, who was indicted for threatening and attempting to intimidate a United States officer, while in the discharge of his official duties. The result has not transpired, but then it would not require even the proverbial sagacity of a Yankee to guess it;—now persons, which being very liberally interpreted means "you bet."

The Legislature has been in session now several weeks, and but little has been effected, except an act districting the Territory into Judicial districts, and the granting of exclusive and personal franchises, which has hitherto in a measure formed the sum total of Utah legislation.

We must apologise to our readers if there is a lack of editorial in this week's issue, as we have been confined to our room for several days by indisposition, and scarcely in the condition to pen a paragraph.

Personal.

The Mail that came in last night, brought us about a bushel of exchanges. Our friends of the Press gang in the States, will please, one and all, accept our thanks for the many kind and friendly notices they have taken of us, and the interest they manifest in our enterprise.

PREACHING.—On last Sunday, the Tabernacle was crowded, and a discourse was delivered by Mr. Orson Pratt. It was doctrinal, and, to his credit be it spoken, free from those displays of blackguardism which has so signally characterized similar discourses from the same platform heretofore.

MARRIAGE.—Last week the rites of matrimony were solemnized between two parties in this City, in which Governor Cumming officiated. The Governor performed the ceremony in the most impressive manner, and to the surprise of all us Bachelors, who were present and expected to have some fun.

The ceremony was an imposing one, and reflected great credit upon the Governor's first effort. At the conclusion, and before the Bach's could get a chance, he took the first kiss from the Bride, and we followed close after, his Excellency's official position giving him the advantage of our good looks in the premises.

We are indebted to "Langton's Pioneer Express" for late files of California papers.

We have received several communications, which we are compelled to defer until our next.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The Eastern mail arrived last night, and through it we have full files of Eastern exchanges. There is no news of importance. Congress, it appears, is occupied in considering the question of impeaching Judge Watrons, who is charged with fraud and peculation. Hon. Stephen A. Douglas has been ousted by a caucus committee from his position as chairman of the Committee on Territories, and it is supposed the action of the caucus will be confirmed by a vote of the Senate. This in the short term, and from all appearances so far, it does not promise much in the way of business. A proposition similar to the one suggested last winter is on foot to abrogate the Clayton Bulwer treaty.

A bill has been introduced in the house by Mr. Curtis, of Iowa, to secure the construction of a central Pacific Railroad, provides for branches from two points on the navigable waters of the Missouri river—one opposite to Iowa, and the other opposite to Missouri—the two branches to converge and unite within two hundred miles of the Missouri river, and thence run to the navigable waters of the Sacramento. The usual appropriation of the alternate sections within six miles are to be appropriated, and government is to appropriate to the contractors twelve thousand dollars a mile, to be reimbursed to the government in transportation of mails and military stores—the construction to be offered by the President to the best bidder, as proposed by Senator Gwin's bill.

This plan starts at the outer rim of our present railroad connections, and terminates on the navigable waters in the centre of California population. It is claimed that it would be equally convenient to slave and free States—convenient to the North and South—and convenient for connections with all our Pacific Territories. It would follow the emigrant route up the Platte, through Utah, and be about sixteen or eighteen hundred miles long.

The bill was referred to the Select Committee on the subject of the Pacific Railroad, which was revived for the purpose of its consideration.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6, 1858. Lieut. Ives, of the Topographical Engineers, has prepared a preliminary report of the results of his expedition for the exploration of the Colorado of the West, which will probably appear with the report of the Secretary of War. The expedition was a highly successful one, and the results are of an important character. He ascended that river in a steamboat five hundred miles, and considers the navigation practicable for that distance for steamers of light draught. It is thought that the opening of this river may develop an economical avenue of transportation to large portions of New Mexico, California and Utah.

After the hydrographic survey, an examination was made of the previously unknown region along the thirty-sixth parallel, which is traversed by the Upper Colorado and its tributaries, and the country was found to possess such novel and remarkable features as to render the explorations of the highest interest.

There is little if any doubt that a law will be passed at the present session of Congress extending the pre-emption laws to Utah. At present no settler in the Territory has a legal title to his land. The surveys are progressing, and already two millions of acres are ready for the market. From what is said in military quarters, it is probable that a strong force will continue to be kept in Utah. The Mormons are quiet at present, they are not resigned to the circumstances which surround them.

TERRITORIAL AFFAIRS.

Mr. Bernhisel, of Utah, offered a resolution, which was adopted, instructing the Committee on Military affairs to inquire into the expediency of refunding to Utah the expenses incurred by said Territory in suppressing Indian hostilities in 1853; also instructing the same committee to inquire into the expediency of constructing a military road from Bridger's Pass to Salt Lake City.

Mr. Stevens, of Washington, offered a resolution, which was adopted, instructing the Committee on the Military to inquire into the expediency of constructing a wagon road from Fort Arbuckle to Seattle, Puget's Sound, Washington Territory, and the survey of the Upper Missouri and Columbia rivers for military purposes.

Adjourned till Thursday.

We have received the following communication from a lady, and cheerfully publish it, for it shall never be said we were wanting in gallantry towards the sex:

Mr. Anderson:—My husband belongs to the Legislature of Utah; and I heard him say that the body of which he is a member wanted the President's message, but not your paper. In their ignorant simplicity and frankness, they told you so, and sent it back to you; and this is all there is about it. He hopes that treason is not committed by this act.

Will you please insert this communication in your paper. If, however, you decline, you will show how liberal you are. Reject the humble tribute of a lady! I am persuaded that your gallantry will not permit you to do it.

Respectfully, B. M. W.
G. S. L. CITY, Jan. 6, 1859.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
January 8th, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.:

I think I have heard you say that you designed publishing an independent journal, and that communications properly authenticated and couched in proper language could always find admission into your columns.

A few issues since reference was made to the existence in this Territory of a Danite band; permit me in all honesty and sincerity to assure you such is not the fact. I have been a resident of the Territory many years, and know its workings; but no such organization as referred to never did, nor does not now exist here. I know it is a common rumor, and many, doubtless, honestly believe it; but it is a common error. Notwithstanding your prejudices, and knowing you socially, I do not believe that you would intentionally do a wrong; and as you profess to conduct an independent paper, I respectfully submit the above to your consideration.

TRUTH.

CALIFORNIA NEWS.

We have made arrangements with the Placerville and Humboldt Telegraph Company, which will enable us to furnish news two days in advance. The following is a summary received by the last mail. The Company, we are informed, are now in successful communication from Genoa in Carson Valley with all the principal cities in the State of California:

Telegraphic.

FEB. P. AND H. LINE TO GENOA, CARSON VALLEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 26, 1858.

The President's Message arrived at 3 o'clock this morning, via Butterfield route, in nineteen days and eighteen hours, from St. Louis.

From the Mariposa Democrat we learn that on Thursday last, Col. Jno. C. Fremont passed through Quartzburg towards Stockton at a rattling speed. In a few moments the Under-Sheriff of the County hove in sight, also in full speed. On being asked the cause, the officer said he was in haste to overtake Fremont; and had no time to explain. Whether he effected the arrest, we have not learned, as the "Col." is hard to catch when he gets a good start.

SACRAMENTO CITY, Dec. 26, 1858.

No news of interest. We are now receiving the President's Message, by telegraph, from San Francisco. Weather cloudy, but mild.

PLACERVILLE, Dec. 26, 12 m.

Weather cloudy, with appearance of rain. The Salt Lake mail just arrived. Three days within schedule time.

GENOA, Dec. 26, 1858.

P.S.—Langton & Co.'s Pioneer Express arrived to-day direct from Downville via the "Henness Pass." First trip. It is the intention of the Co. to run regular on this route during the season.

Proceedings of the Meeting held at the Clear Creek House, Dec. 11th, 1858.

Below will be found a notice calling a meeting at Clear Creek, in this county, on the 11th inst., together with the full and entire proceedings of the meeting held under said call, as handed to us by the Secretary:

NOTICE.

There will be a Mass Meeting of the citizens of Carson, Jacks, Eagle and Washoe Valleys, Gold Canon and Truckee Meadows, held at the Clear Creek House on the 11th inst., to take into consideration the best system of Government, and for the adoption of some form whereby the will of the majority shall be heard.

Let every lover of our common country be in attendance.

Pursuant to notice, a general mass meeting of the citizens of Carson, Jacks, Eagle and Washoe Valleys, Gold Canon and Truckee Meadows, convened at the Clear Creek Ranch, Dec. 11th, 1858, to consider the measures best adapted to secure a fair expression of the majority in the election of officers and the general welfare of the country.

The meeting was called to order by Maj. Wm. M. Ormsby, of Genoa; John L. Carey, of Carson Valley, was elected President; and B. L. King, of Eagle Valley, and Hiram Mott, of Carson Valley, chosen Vice-Presidents; Samuel Tyler was chosen Secretary.

The object of the meeting was stated by Maj. Ormsby. The minutes of the last Committee Meeting, upon which the call for this convention was based, were then called for and ordered.

These minutes contain a memorial to John S. Child, and said resolutions.

It was moved and seconded that the convention take up and consider one resolution at a time, in the order that they had been read, commencing with the first resolution.

Carried.

It was moved and seconded that resolution one be adopted.

A. S. Hammuck, Esq., Maj. Ormsby and John Musser, Esq., discussed the resolution with much interest, energy and ability.

It was then moved and seconded to reconsider the former vote. Carried.

It was then moved and seconded that the convention take up the minutes of the last Committee meeting and consider them as a whole, as far as resolution No. 2, inclusive.

Carried.

Moved and seconded that the President appoint a committee to draft and present resolutions to the convention, for the government of resolutions No. 3 and 4, in the minutes of the last Committee meeting, in case of their adoption by the convention. Carried.

Theo. Winters, Maj. Wm. M. Ormsby, Mr. Barber and Saml. Tyler were appointed as such committee, and required to report to the convention as soon as practicable.

The Convention then adjourned until the committee should prepare their report.

In a few minutes the convention was again called to order by the President.

The report of the committee read and received, and the committee discharged.

The former question was then called up.

The memorial and resolutions now before the convention were read.

Maj. Ormsby, A. S. Hammuck and John Musser, Esq., then ably and intelligently discussed the matters before the convention, evincing an earnest zeal that the people of Carson county should retain their rights.

It was moved and seconded that the memorial to John S. Child be adopted.

The memorial was then ordered read, and after its reading, was adopted.

MEMORIAL TO JOHN S. CHILD.

CARSON VALLEY, Nov. 1858.

To John S. Child: We are a law-abiding people; we love our country; we are Americans, and not traitors to our native land. Would to God all our citizens could say the same, then there would be no differences in our feelings. We live in a Republican government, and we are Republicans; we wish to be governed by the majority and not by the minority; therefore, we wish you to listen to our common voice; then, let your acts be governed by the dictates of your own conscience, if, thereby, the heavens fall.

We are honest in our motives; you be the same. We do not wish to be governed by Mormon Laws; you and your particular clans do. Those laws are obnoxious to Americans, and we repeat we are Americans. Then, hear:

Whereas, a few of our citizens did meet in secret, in the town of Genoa, Carson Valley, Utah Territory, in the month of July last, and there with more of the undermining and dishonorable feelings than with that of the interest of their country, petition, unknowingly to the masses; to his Excellency Governor Cummings, of said Territory, for an appointment of a Probate Judge, giving said Judge full powers of organizing (or re-organizing) a county under the statutes of said Territory, to be called Carson County; and whereas, said Governor did here grant said petition, though contrary to said statutes, and through gross misrepresentations appoint one John S. Child, an incapable person and incompetent to fill the high post of Probate Judge of the now to be created county; and whereas, said Governor did appoint said Child as said Probate Judge; and said Judge did call an election for the election of the various officers to fill the offices under said statutes, viz: one Assemblyman; 1 Sheriff; 1 County Recorder; 1 County Surveyor; 1 County Treasurer; 3 Selectmen; 1 Justice of the Peace, and 1 Constable for each precinct; said election to be held on the thirteenth day of October, 1858; and whereas, said election was had and held at said time, in obedience to said call of said Judge; and the inspectors or Judges and Clerks of said election at the various precincts forwarded to said Judge and his Clerk their respective returns.

His Honor, the Probate Judge, did pretend to feel and think that he had the discretionary power "to furnish certain precincts with a copy of the Territorial Act concerning Elections, and others none but leave them in ignorance how to vote, make returns, &c.," and said Judge did, in connection with his Clerk, S. A. Kinsey, "use the discretionary power" to throw out all the returns of said election, except the 1st and 2d precincts, and thereby declaring the election of men (excepting two) who, according to the vote cast, are obnoxious to a large majority of our citizens; and whereas, in said tie (as we understand) said Judge has contrary to all law "or usages proceeded in connection with said Clerk to draw cuts or lots" as who should be said Assemblyman; and whereas, we think and believe, after deliberate consideration, that all proceedings both of the Governor and Judge Probate to be wholly illegal and made void under the organic act. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That, whereas we, the "People's Committee," authorized by the people of the different valleys on the Eastern Slope of the Sierra Nevada, having no other body to be governed by, deem it proper to give this due notice to the would-be Probate Judge, John S. Child, to withhold from action in attempting to enforce laws on us repugnant to a majority of our citizens.

SECTION 2d. That we, the Committee, believing and knowing, in fact, that we compose the "large" majority and holding the sound doctrine that the majority should rule; pledge our lives and property to sustain this action of ours to the contrary of all courts organized under Mormon Statutes.

SEC. 3. Resolved further, That after the adoption of the foregoing, if the said John S. Child does make effort to carry out his present course, he be dealt with according to the opinion of this Committee.

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to wait on S. A. Kinsey and require him to transfer the records and all the papers of the citizens Recorder's Office into their possession, and retain them until they can be placed in possession of some competent person to take charge of them, after taking suitable security from said person for the faithful discharge of his duties as Recorder; and also for the transfer of all Records and papers in his possession to his successor, upon his election and qualification.

After the adoption of the memorial, it was moved and seconded that the 1st resolution be adopted. After a lengthy debate it was adopted.

On motion, the 2d resolution was adopted, without further discussion.

Moved and seconded that the Chair appoint the committee provided for in resolution No. 2. Carried.

The Chair forthwith proceeded to appoint such committee:

Bolin Abernethy, Samuel Tyler, Richard Sides, Wm. Wade, Wm. M. Ormsby, Walter Cosser, David H. Barber, Theo. Winters, Mark Stebbins and Samuel Swager.

Major Wm. M. Ormsby was appointed Chairman of said committee by the President.

The resolutions drafted by the committee, intended for the government of resolutions 3 and 4, adopted by the last committee meeting, were then called up and read, viz:

Resolved, That in case of the adoption by this convention of resolutions 3 and 4, adopted by the last committee meeting, Luther Olds be allowed one month in which to make his exit, providing his behavior is satisfactory while he remains to the "People's Committee."

Resolved, That the Sheriff is hereby directed to exercise strict vigilance with regard to the department of L. Olds; and at the expiration of the time allowed for his stay, in case he does not conform to the spirit of resolution No. 1, then to summon to his assistance such men as he may deem necessary, and arrest his person and proceed to await upon him the verdict rendered by the Jury at Clear Creek Ranch, the 16th day of June, 1858.

It was moved and seconded that the 1st resolution be adopted.

A lengthy and general discussion then took place, and the resolution was so amended as to read five months instead of one. Adopted.

Moved and seconded that the 2d resolution be adopted. Carried.

Moved and seconded that resolutions 3 and 4 be adopted of the last resolution No. 3.

Resolved, That this committee recommend the people to sustain the award of the Jury empaneled at Clear Creek on the 16th day of June, 1858; pledged pur lives to the faithful execution of its awards.

Resolved, That the Sheriff is hereby directed to possess himself of the person of L. Olds, and have him (the said L. Olds) forthcoming for the action of the meeting on the 11th day of December, 1858.

Luther Olds being present, the verdict of the Jury at Clear Creek, was then read. Upon the reading of this, Mr. Olds made some remarks, stating as a reason for his coming back that he supposed he had received sufficient punishment for the crime he had committed, and expected to find the civil authorities fully organized; that he supposed he was coming within the pale of the civil laws, and that a majority of the people were willing for him to come; and if handled at all, he would be handled by the civil authorities.

The question being called on three and four, they were adopted.

Major Wm. M. Ormsby then offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That, at all hazards we sustain the action of this meeting. It was adopted without a dissenting voice.

A majority of the meeting then signed a pledge to sustain the action of the meeting. After which, the meeting adjourned.

SAMUEL TYLER, Secy.

Proceedings of the Meeting held at Genoa, December 23rd, 1858.

A meeting of the citizens of Genoa and vicinity was held, pursuant to notice, at the Old Station, on Thursday evening last 23rd inst. The following is the proceedings of said meeting:

Pursuant to notice, a meeting of the citizens of Genoa and vicinity was held at Genoa, on Thursday, December 23rd, 1858.

The meeting was called to order by electing C. S. Kellogg, President, W. M. Carey, Secretary.

On motion, a committee of four was elected to draft preamble and resolutions.

From the Washington Union, December 3.

THE OLD YEAR.

Hear the bugle and the drum,
The old year's tattoo;
To-morrow will be the revelry
Of the young—the new.

It has a mournful sound to-night,
The echoing blast all up the Valley;
A requiem to the waning light
Of the hopes and fears of all old years,
That these last moments rally.

The old year—
It crept an infant, then a child;
It was in youth a little wild;
Its manhood was so quickly past,
It fell to age! Ah, how fast—
Its end—how drear.

Thus, forever,
The old goes, and comes the new;
Deceitful, as the old is true.
And hopes will bud, with the coming morrow.

To end like this, sadly—in sorrow—Satisfied never,
Trust not the new, await the end,
However the shade and sunshine blend
Along the shadowy vale, descend,
Till time shall sever.

The old year, we'll bury him here,
Where his gathering clouds, descend like shrouds,
And the wrecks of his flowers are near;
This bugle blast shall be his last.
The drum may sound no reveille,
For the past that sleeps eternally.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T., December 31st, 1898.

NEW TERRITORIES.

Dakota at the North and Arizona at the South will present themselves to Congress this winter, the first by two delegates, each of whom claims to be the choice of the people, and will ask for recognition as Territories of the United States. The President has specially recommended the organization of Arizona. Some serious steps have been taken to carve a new Territory, to be called Superior, out of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. An application, it has been said, would be made to Congress at this session. But this statement is contradicted by the Detroit Free Press. What has really been done has been the assembling of a Convention professing to represent the people of the proposed Territory, and the passage of resolutions favorable to the project, together with the appointment of a committee to draft an address to the legislatures of the States interested.

It does not appear that popular sentiment in Superior is unanimously in favor of the project. Besides the Territories named, there has been a talk in the newspapers of a Territory to be framed out of Western Utah and part of California, a Sierra Nevada Territory. The latest conceit of the Territory-mongers is the proposition of a flighty genius, who appears to think that Pike's Peak will have to be organized into a Territory.

Of all these, none probably, will be considered by Congress as having any weighty claims to the privileges asked for, but Arizona and Dakota. Of the latter, not a great deal is yet known, though it is believed to possess resources which will, one day, make a respectable State. Arizona has become very prominent. Its silver mines and auriferous treasures attract unusual attention. There is no doubt of an abundance of silver ore there; and we trust the hopes held out by the recent reports of the gold washings will be realized. Copper is to be found in immense quantities, is easily extracted, and will probably pay after shipment to Guyamas. Lead and iron are equally plentiful. In short, there is, probably, no spot of earth of equal extent which is so rich in mineral resources.

THE SIZE OF UTAH.—The area of Utah is 269,170 square miles. To engineers and a few others, this will give a just idea of its vast extent, but the majority of the people will form a better estimate by being told that it is as large as the whole of the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

One thousand troops have left Fort Belknap, Fort Chadbourne, Fort Smith, etc., under Lieut. Van Horn, for the Camanche Mountain District, one hundred and fifty miles, to meet in battle 1,500 Camanche warriors, under Buffalo Hump.

The United States and Mexico.

It would be silly affectation to say that the people and Government of the United States are not deeply interested in the conduct and fate of the neighboring Republic of Mexico. If that Republic had shown an ability to maintain itself, to preserve order, and fulfill the obligations of an independent State, the Government and people of the United States would have aided them in all reasonable and effective ways. But, in truth, Mexico is in a sad condition of disorder. It is not too much to claim that her Government is a radical failure. She has become a prey to intestine quarrels, and if this state of things shall long continue, it is highly probable that the benevolence and philanthropy of the world will have to be taxed to feed and subsidize her population. It is rank folly, under such circumstances, to pretend that we are indifferent to Mexican affairs. We occupy the continent in partnership with her people. They owe to us special obligations growing out of the determinate relations and interests. We have sought to open the interior of the continent by roads and state conveyances, to connect the Atlantic with the Pacific States, to develop the resources of our country, and to consolidate as far as possible, our material and political interests; but, with a border territory sweeping along our whole southern line in utter anarchy or in possession of hostile tribes who find a safe retreat on Mexican soil, this work cannot be accomplished.

If we appeal to the Government of Mexico, the answer is always the same: "We have the disposition to preserve order, but we lack means of enforcing it." The Federal Government has purchased at high rates of the Mexican Republic the Territory of Arizona, or a portion of it; but it is extremely questionable whether we can render it available without commanding the districts of Sonora and Chihuahua. Those countries were once inhabited, and to a considerable extent cultivated and worked; but small bands of Indians, whose original homes were north of the Gila, have made incursions into the border of Mexican countries, driven out the settlers, and now permanently occupy the Territory. In point of fact, the tribes make use of Sonora, Chihuahua, and other Mexican States, where they are masters, as secure retreats against the armies of this country. We cannot send our troops across the line, because that would be an act of war; nor can we command peace and protection to our border settlements, because the foe is lodged safely within the Territories of a friendly nation.

This problem is one which can be solved upon rational and just principles. The Government of Mexico should be required to maintain order and secure a complete ascendancy over the feeble tribes who now command absolute jurisdiction over the States referred to. We ought not in other words, to be called upon to respect a Territory which is used by a hostile people to rob, plunder and murder within our own jurisdiction. If Mexico cannot enforce her laws upon her borders so as to protect our frontier inhabitants, the right to exercise the means of self-protection becomes obvious indeed.

It would, indeed, seem impossible much longer to postpone decided action in regard to Mexico. The descent of that country is rapid, and it promises nothing in the way of improvement for the future. Its central government is almost absolutely helpless, while its border States are wholly at the mercy of hostile Indians. In the management of the latter we are not only directly interested, but we have a clear right, on principles of self-protection, to intervene, and command the enforcement of order. This right accrues to us as a government of law; its enforcement is due to our own people and to the system which we have faithfully operated during our existence as a nation. We owe it to the Democratic principle which underlies this Republic that it shall not be degraded by the distracting elements of the Mexican country, without an effort on our part to avert the calamity.

It would be folly, indeed, to contend, in view of the sensitiveness of the governments of the world, that this Mexican problem is one of easy and quick solution. However unanimous may be the judgment that our neighbors have forfeited all just claims to be regarded as an independent nationality with power to make and enforce laws, to establish and maintain international intercourse, the application of remedies may be expected to evoke disagreements, if not conflicts. The United States have, however, so repeatedly declared the general principles by which they will be governed in all purely American affairs—in the adjustment of governmental questions affecting the populations and territories of this continent—that, whatever shall happen, their position may be regarded as distinctly defined.

Letter from Mexico.—Insults to the American Ex-Minister.

The Picayune of Tuesday contains a long letter from its Mexican correspondent, giving an account of the insults offered to Mr. Forsyth, and other interesting matters. We are only able at present to extract the former. The correspondent writes:

On the 21st instant the American Ex-Minister took his departure from here. Five or six days before he had notified the Government of his intention to depart, and expected an escort that had been promised him, but the Government absolutely refused to give any escort but three or four men to sit on the box of the coach, when bands of thirty and more robbers have lately made their appearance on the road. As escorts of fifty well mounted men are usually tendered to Ministers, and escorts of fifteen are given to ordinary travelers, it was clear that the offer of three or four useless soldiers to ride on the box of the diligences was intended for an insult. Mr. Forsyth took it so, and very properly gave the government his opinions in declining the offered escort. Mr. Forsyth, however, provided himself with a lot of his countrymen, and, as we learn, has fought his way through the robbers and arrived safely at Vera Cruz, not even one of his party receiving a wound from the shots fired upon them.

The night before his departure from here the government caused a great scandal before the door of his room in the hotel by an attempt to arrest a person who was going off with him. The particulars of this affair would take too long to tell, and I suppose the Ex-American Minister will make explanations on the subject. At all events, the police besieged Mr. Forsyth's door, and carried the scandal farther by surrounding the hotel with police, as if to call the attention of all the world to what was going on to mortify and disgrace the representative of the United States. The person pursued at last paid $30,000 for the privilege of commencing his journey, but we learn that it was only for the commencement, as he was seized at the end of the second day's journey and $60,000 more are to be extracted from him. Some say all of this has been done to annoy Mr. Forsyth, but at all events it is a high-handed act for a government professing to give guarantees.

How to Manage Mexico.—An intelligent Mexican correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune, in speaking of the condition of things in that country, says: "There is not the least probability of either party subduing the other, or of their ever reconciling their disputes and arranging their difficulties, so as to restore order and tranquillity to the country again. In fact, both live on the public by contributions, forced loans and pillage, no road in the country being safe for traveling nor for transporting goods. Industry and commerce are paralyzed, and the whole country is in a complete state of anarchy and ruin, while each of the contending parties treats the foreigners ill when its suits them, in direct violations of international law and treaties, as has taken place more particularly in Mexico, San Luis and Tampico. This being the state of things, if the United States does not intend to keep the country in order, the Europeans must, notwithstanding the famous Monroe doctrine, for they can not permit the present course adopted by Mexicans towards their subjects to continue any longer."

"It therefore becomes our countrymen and our rulers to examine well what is best to be done with this country in as short a time as possible, and if, as I suppose, the United States must take Mexico in hand, let our rulers avoid annexation; let this country remain as it is—Mexican; let the United States direct its foreign policy, place a Governor over it, with an armed force, to keep order and tranquillity in it, and with a council if necessary, of a certain number, elected by the municipality of the country, let the United States collect its revenues and attend to the administration of justice by one or more Supreme Courts, part of whose Judges might be Mexican and part American; but let our rulers interfere no further, and in the course of time, under this guidance, the Mexicans may, perhaps, become civilized and useful to themselves as well as to their neighbors, but not until after a long time."

BAPTIZED IN THE RIVER JORDAN.—An accomplished young lady from Albermarle, Va., was baptized recently in the river Jordan, by Dr. James T. Barclay, missionary in Jerusalem.

UNITED STATES ARMY.—The present military force of the United States consists of nineteen regiments of the line, composed of the following corps:—Five regiments of cavalry, four regiments of artillery, ten of infantry, making a grand aggregate of 13,000 rank and file of all arms. This little army covers an area of over two millions square miles, being two thirds the area of all Europe. There are 1,100 commissioned officers, including 100 medical officers, 850 of whom graduated at the Military Academy, and 250 civil appointments. The nativity of these officers is as follows: Born in the United States, 1,060; Ireland, 14; France, 5; England, 6; Germany, 3; Scotland, 2; Austria, 1; Italy, 1; Cuba, 1; Turkey, 1; Poland, 3; at sea, 3. The militia force of the United States is computed at 3,000,000 effective men.

NEW OVERLAND STAGE ROAD.—There has been a great deal said, from time to time, concerning the late contemplated change in the Central Overland Stage Road. It has been argued by many as an objection to the route south of the Goose Creek mountains, recently surveyed by Major Chorpene, that the alkali flats, common in that country, would become so thoroughly saturated with water as to render them soft and impassable during the winter months.

We learn, from a gentleman recently from the Shoshonee Station, who is acquainted with the country, that the flats referred to are not unlike those of the same nature on the Humboldt—generally frozen during the winter, and are, therefore, not only passable but in good condition.

We hope this may prove true, as the distance will be materially shortened, and other important advantages will be gained over the old route. We shall soon know whether the route is practicable or not, as the stock and stations have been placed upon it, and henceforth the coaches will pass over it. Territorial (Carson Valley) Enterprise.

NEW CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.—A German Sunday paper, published in New York, suggests Morrissey as a proper candidate for the Presidency in 1860. The editor insists that no one in Congress then would be so audacious as to refuse the appropriation of money, or to oppose the measures of the Administration; for who would like to fight eleven rounds with His Excellency, the President, to have his head and breast smashed? The United States would then have a strong Government. He says:

"Morrissey, Esq.," is also a "self-made" man. The Rough-Skins, Blood-Tubs, Mackerel Boys, Dead-Rabbits, Plug-Uglies, and other patriotic associations and clubs, have already opened the campaign at Long Point, Canada, where Morrissey used striking arguments against his opponent, Heenan, Esq. The following ticket is suggested for the Cabinet:

For Secretary of State—Yankee Sullivan, Esq.

For Secretary of the Treasury—Dad Cunningham, Esq.

For Secretary of War—Tom Hyer, Esq.

For Secretary of the Navy—Jno. Dobson, Esq.

For Postmaster General—Billy Mulligan, Esq.

For Secretary of the Interior—Benicia Boy, Esq.

For Indian Affairs—Ayful Gardner, Esq.

A SINGULAR PHENOMENON.—In the recent address of Hon. T. L. Clingman before the North Carolina State Fair, he mentions in connection with the manufacture of wine, and the difficulty on the Atlantic slope of the United States of preventing its acetous fermentation, a remarkable fact concerning a locality of the western part of that State. In a district of a few miles in extent on the Tryon Mountain, neither dew nor frost is ever known. The same district is remarkable for the variety and excellence of its native grapes, and they are often found in fine condition in open air as late as December. The dryness of the atmosphere in the locality mentioned and its equability of temperature are most remarkable, and we should like to know more concerning it.

NOTICE.

THE Fifty Dollar DRAFTS made by Russell, Major & Waddell on Smoot, Russell & Co., Leavenworth City, will be redeemed hereafter in cash of Treasury drafts at our counter. LEB, RUSSELL & CO. 6. S. L. 677, Jan. 3, 1899.

HUMOROUS

PARODY.

I never had a sucking pig,
And fed and nursed it in the sty.
But when 'twas grown up fat and big,
And fit to kill—'twas sure to die.

Why can not a deaf man be legally condemned for murder? Because the law says, no man can be condemned without a hearing.

"I never complained of my condition," says the Persian poet, Sadi, "but once, when my feet were bare, and I had no money to buy shoes; but I met a man without feet, and was contented with my lot."

PICKING UP CHARACTER.—Jerrold met Alfred Bunn, one day in Jermyn-street. Bunn stopped Jerrold and said: "What! I suppose you're strolling about, picking up character?"

Jerrold—"Well, not exactly; but there's plenty lost hereabouts."

A countryman, who witnessed a lady lifting up her dress, exclaimed, upon beholding the numerous tiers of hoops that encircled her petticoat in the shape of crinoline: "Well, may I be hanged, if she ain't got a five barred gate wrapped round her."

HUNGER PROOF.—Boswell, the biographer and worshiper of Dr. Johnson, observing to the latter that there was no instance of a beggar dying for want in the streets of Scotland—"I believe, sir, you are very right," says Johnson, "but this does not arise from want of beggars, but the impossibility of starving a Scotchman."

"Sambo, what you git dat watch you wear to meeting lass Sunday?"

"How you know I had a watch?"

"Bekase I seed de chain hang out de pocket in front."

"Go way, nigger! spose you see halter on my neck, you tink dar is hoss inside of me."

STRETCHING THINGS.—An impatient Welshman called to his wife, "Come, come, isn't the breakfast ready? I've had nothing since yesterday, and tomorrow will be the third day!" This is equal to the calling of the stirring housewife, who roused her maid at four o'clock with: "Come, Bridget, get up! Here 'tis Monday morning. To-morrow's Tuesday, next day's Wednesday—half the week gone, and nothing done yet!"

"DOWN BELOW."—The faculty of Williams College used to employ an Irishman named Jemmy to make fires, sweep, wait on the students, and do "chores" generally. One of the boys pretended to be quite mad at him one day, and, after blowing him up badly, went on to say, "Jemmy, this can't last always; by and by you will get your deserts, and you'll go to the bad place; what do you suppose you'll do there?"

"Oh," said Jemmy, "I suppose they'd set me to waiting on the students just as they do here."

Diggs saw a note lying on the ground, but knew it was a counterfeit, and walked on without picking it up. He told Smithers the story, when the latter said:

"Do you know, Diggs, you have committed a very grave offense?"

"Why, what have I done?"

"You have passed a counterfeit bill, knowing it to be such," said Smithers, and without a smile he fled.

SNOZING.—A Western statesman, in one of his tours in the far west, stopped all night at a house where he was put in the same room with twenty strangers. He was very much annoyed by the snoring of two persons. The black boy of the hotel entered the room, when our narrator said to him: "Ben, I will give you five dollars if you will kill that man next to me, who snores so dreadfully."

"Can't kill him for five dollars; but if massa will advance on the price, I'll try what I can do." By this time the stranger had ceased his nasal fury. So, stepping up to the other, he woke him, and said: "My friend, you're talking in your sleep, and exposing all the secrets of the Brandon Bank, (he was a director) you had better be careful." He was careful, for he did not go to sleep again that night.

A MODEST WITNESS.—We find in a Pennsylvania paper a fancy report of a crim. con. case, in which one Jerry Slade, a rough countryman, was the principal witness. We give the nub of it, as it contains a great moral lesson. The parties to the dialogue are the counsel for plaintiff and Jerry. "Spondulix" is Jerry's phrase for money; referring in this instance to a couple of "saw-horses," that is, ten-dollar bills:

"And do you know the reason Captain Bumper gave Mrs. Nicely these two saw-horses as you call them?" "I don't, sir; I hear him say that them spondulix would buy a silk frock like Mrs. Weithere'll's, and she said yes, it would; but I ain't a-going to swear to anything more'n this." "Did Mrs. Nicely's dress appear much disordered?" "I guess not. It was d—d badly torn, I recollect. Mebby you mean that?" "I do, and am much obliged to you for your straightforward testimony. How did you come to see the parties in the grove?" "Well, I was there myself a-lying off under an old tree, an' I seed Mrs. Nicely a kissen old Captain Bumper, and if you want to know any thing further; just turn them wimmen out of court, that's all!"

"I would do anything to gratify you; I would go to the end of the world to please you," said a fervent lover to the object of his affections. "Well, sir, go there, and stay, and I shall be very much pleased."

DIVIDING A DEAD ARCH-DUCHESS.

We translate the following curious details from a German private letter recently received from Vienna:

"The Habsburgers (the reigning house of Austria) while living must be revered—when dead, they must be worshiped. As a proof of this, let me relate to you what disposition was made of the dead body of the Archduchess Margaret (whose death was some time since announced.) Archducal dust must not return to dust; and priestly cunning and monarchical tradition call for the enactment in one of the largest and most brilliant capitals of Europe, of a drama, fit only to be performed by barbarians in the dark ages.

"The Saxon Princess Margaret, wife of the Archduke Charles, was laid upon a block and chopped in pieces, in order to send different parts of the body to various parts of the country. The chopping-up process took place in the chapel of the Castle, in the presence of the dead woman's husband. Extended on a red-draped block lay the naked white corpse, surrounded by priests chanting in Latin, youths swinging censors, and a number of men armed with choppers, saws, and other instruments. First, the heart was cut out of the body, enclosed in a golden case, and placed in an urn. It was then sent to Rome, to be consecrated by the Pope, after which it was sent to the Loretto chapel, and thence returned to Vienna. But it was not to rest here. Ten cities claimed the honor of being Homer's birthplace, and six Austrian bishoprics claimed the privilege of possessing all, or a part, of the sainted Margaret's body. The bishop of Prague would be content with the arms, the bishop of Salzburg wished to obtain the head and shoulders, while the bishop of Linz anxiously desired to possess the two middle fingers. The Vienna consistory was obliged to decide between the claimants, and the heart was at length forwarded to the Common Council of Innsbruck, in Tyrol, accompanied by two autograph letters of the Archduke Charles—one of which was directed to the Chief of the Jesuits—in which the hope was expressed that 'Tyrol, the always faithful,' would for all time cherish the memory of the Archduchess, who was a saint upon earth."

"Had the heart alone been separated from the body, the chopping-up process would soon have been finished; but the Church demanded more. Hence the Archduke Charles directed the cutting open of his wife's abdomen—which was done. The intestines were taken out, placed in copper, silver, and golden capsules, and sent with an autograph letter to the Cathedral of St. Stephens, where the said intestines were first exhibited upon the altar, and then buried beneath the altar. Hereupon the two middle fingers were severed from the body, and sent with another autograph letter to Dresden. All that remained of the Archduchess was then wrapped in red velvet, and laid in state on a catafalque; and ultimately the mutilated corpse was placed in a coffin and deposited in the imperial tomb."—Evening Post.

"THE SALT, IF YOU PLEASE."

Everybody has a partiality for dinner, and one of the most frequent expressions at a dinner table is the one which forms our caption; and in order that our readers may know something of the substance they are using, we will tell them a few facts about salt. Salt is a chemical compound of twenty-three parts by weight of a beautifully silver white but soft metal, called sodium, discovered by Sir H. Davy in 1807, and thirty-five parts of a pungent yellowish grain gas called chlorine, discovered by Scheele in 1774; these two combined form this the most widely-diffused and useful of any one compound in the world. It is found in the sea and in the rocks, from which our principal supply comes. The most wonderful deposits are in Poland and Hungary, where it is quarried like a rock; one of the Polish mines having been worked since 1251. The Polish salt mines have heard the groan of many a poor captive, and have seen the last agonies of many a brave man; for until lately they were worked entirely by the state prisoners of Austria, Russia, or Poland, whichever happened to be in power at the time; and once the offender, or fancied hindrance to some other person's advancement, was let down into this subterranean prison, he never saw the light of day again. So salt has its history as well as science. Other large deposits are found in Cheshire, England, where the water is forced down by pipes into the salt and pumped up as brine, which is evaporated, and the salt obtained. To such an extent has this been carried that one town in the "salt country," as it is called, has scarcely an upright house in it, all the foundations having sunk with the ground to fill up the cavity left by the extracted salt.

In Virginia there are beds of salt, and the Salmon Mountains, in Oregon, are capable of affording large quantities of the same material. The brine springs of Salina and Syracuse are well known, and from about forty gallons of this brine one bushel of salt is obtained. There are also extensive salt springs in Ohio. The brine is pumped up from wells made in the rock, and into which it flows and runs into boilers. These boilers are large iron kettles set in brickwork, and when fires are lighted under them the brine is quickly evaporated. The moment the brine begins to boil it becomes turbid, from the compounds of lime that it contains, and which are soluble in cold but not in hot water; these first sediments are taken out with ladles, called "bittern ladles," and the salt being next deposited from the brine is carried away to drain and dry. The remaining liquid contains a great quantity of magnesia in various forms, and is given the name of "bittern," from the taste peculiar to magnesia in every form.

"But how did this salt come into the rock?" is the natural query, and the wonder seems greater when we recollect that salt beds are found in nearly every one of the strata composing the earth's crust. This fact proves another, that as the majority of these salt beds have come from lakes left in the hollows of the rocks by the recedence of the sea, the sea has through all the geologic ages been as salt as it is to-day. Let us take the Great Salt Lake as an illustration, it being the largest salt lake in the world, but by no means the only one, as such inland masses of saline water are found over the whole earth: but as ours is the greatest in extent, it will form the best example. It is situated at an elevation of 4,200 feet above the sea, on the Rocky Mountains, and has an area of 3,000 square miles; yet, high as it is, "once upon a time," as the story books of our juvenility used to say, it was part of the sea, which retired by the upheaval of the rocks, and that great basin took its salt water up with it. Should this in time evaporate, and its salt become covered with mud and sand; and the land again be depressed; then at some distant future age the people would be wondering how the salt got there, little thinking that the Mormons had ever built a city on its shores when it was a great salt lake. There are also, however, salt rocks taking their place in regular geologic series with other rocks, interspersed between red sandstone, magnesian, and carboniferous strata; these we can only account for as we do for other stratified rocks, viz., that they were deposited from their solution in water, or carried mechanically to the spot where now found by that ever noble liquid. We fear we should be accused of an attempt to put our readers in pickle, so we'll stay our pen, hoping they will remember these bits of information, when next they say, "The salt, if you please."—Scientific American.

PRACTICAL JOKING.

"A few days since," writes an attorney, as I was sitting with brother C in his office, in Court Square, a client came in and said:

Squire D—, W—, the stabler shaved me dreadfully, yesterday, and I want to come up with him."

"State your case," says D—.

"I asked him how much he'd charge me for a horse to go to Dedham. He said one dollar and a half. I took the team and when I came back he said he wanted another dollar, and a half for coming back and made me pay it."

"D—, gave him some legal advice, which the client immediately acted upon as follows: He went to the stabler and said:

"How much will you charge me for a horse and wagon to go to Salem?"

Stabler replied—"Five dollars."

"Harness him up."

"Client went to Salem, came back by railroad, went to the stabler, saying:

"Here is your money, paying him five dollars."

"Where is my horse and wagon?" says W—.

"He is at Salem," says client, "I only hired him to go to Salem."

"What did you give for that horse, neighbor?"

"My note."

"Well, that was cheap enough."

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS.

WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, in large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches of Watch material, committed to their care. Charles Stebbins, of the firm of Livingston, Kinkead & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage.

G. S. L. City, January 2nd, 1889.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS.

WINE, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea,	Coffee,	Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar,	Spice,	Smoking Tobacco,
Powder,	Shot,	Playing Cards,
Pepper,	Mace,	Cinnamon,
Nutmegs,	Caps,	&c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy,	Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do	Bourbon do do
New York do do	Rectified do do
Gin,	Port Wine,

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard,	Mixed Pickles,
Durham do	Assorted do
Assorted Jams,	Gherkins,
do Jellies,	Piccolilli,
do Syrrups,	Pickled Onions,
do Cordials,	Tomato Catsup,
Brandy Peaches,	Walnut Catsup,
do Cherries,	Mushroom Catsup,
do Pears,	Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India Preserves,	Celery Seed,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit,	Spanish Olives,
Peach do	Pepper Sauce,
Apple do	Assorted Sauce,
Plum do	do Nat. Preserves,
Raspberries do	Capers Capotter,
Gooseberry do	Natural Pres'd Pine,
Blackberry Brandy,	Roast Turkey,
Raspberry Brandy,	Roast Chicken,
Fresh Lobster,	String Beans,
Pickled do	Green Peas,
Fresh Clams,	do Corn,
Mince Meat,	Assorted Herbs,
Sausage Meat,	do Sweetmeats,
Fresh Cauliflower,	Natural Preserved Peaches,
Pickled do	Nat'l Preserved Strawberries,
Worcestershire Sauce,	Natural Preserved Damsons,
Stoughton Bitters,	Mushrooms,
Fresh Salmon,	Asparagus,
Fresh Tomatoes,	Tarragon Vinegar,
French Pickles,	Fields Oysters,
Hostetter Bitters,	Cove do
Boker's do	Pine Apple Cheese,
Le Drard's do	Olive Oil,
Royal Windsor do	Assorted Candles,
Maraschino,	Raisins,
Curacao,	Almonds,
Absynth,	English Walnuts,
Scotch Ale,	Brazil Nuts,
London Porter,
Scheidam Schnapps,
Golden Grape Cognac, Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy, Mountain Dew Whis-Pecans,
ly,
Family Supplies,
Morning Call,
Indian Queen Maderia,
also a large and well selected stock of
Clothing,	Hats and Caps,
Gents Boots & Shoes,	Hardware,
Ladies Shoes,	Notions,
Woolen Gloves,	Hosiery,
do Mitts,	Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs,	do Mitts,
Stationery, &c.,	do Gauntlets,
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.
G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1888.

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 14, 1888.
The undersigned would most respectfully inform citizens of Utah that they are still doing business, their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same low rates. It may be an object for those families traveling south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are asked at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKEAD, & Co.
In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our return expected.

L. K. & Co.

$10 REWARD.
STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Laws Ranch) one strawberry roan Horse, branded B on the near shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return.

RADFORD CABOT, & Co.

FOR SALE.
Larger Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Mogo, Burr & Co.

RADFORD, CABOT & Co.

FOR SALE.
One Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.

CHARLES MOGO.

Hot Springs Brewery.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's store.

LAW OFFICE.

W. J. MCCORMICK. T. G. WILLIAMS.

MCCORMICK & WILLIAMS, ATTORNEYS AT LAW.

Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Court, and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.

Office—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co's store.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1888.

Missouri Republican and N. Y. Herald will please publish 3 months daily, and send bill to this office.

RADFORD, CABOT & Co.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC.,

At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T.

NEW GOODS.

JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected especially for this market.

GILBERT & GERRISH.

WAGONS.

A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by

GILBERT & GERRISH.

BILLIARDS.

THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon.

J. M. WALLACE, G. S. L. City, between the Post Office, and Gilbert and Gerrish's Store, is now open for visitors.

The tables are new and perfect, and no pains will be spared to make it an agreeable resort for gentlemen, in the exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation.

2-12

EMPIRE SALOON.

THE BAR is now furnished with large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., purchased with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESALE & RETAIL trade is especially called.

JOHN M. WALLACE.

WANTED:

A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to

GILBERT & GERRISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

S. X. X. ALLY, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, we have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an active hustler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals, — 61 00

Supper breakfast and lodging, — 2 00

For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50

and doubling those prices for feed per night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered to the Brewery.

Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

COW STAYED.

ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick rope tied around her horns, horns small, was given milk but think she was branded Atwood on the horn, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis E. Bolton, 12th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded.

1-12

LOOK HERE.

A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI FORM BOOK" has been borrowed from the office of J. Harnett, Secretary of State. He earnestly requests that person having it to return it without delay.

WORK CATTLE.

100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by

GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.

Wholesale and retail dealers in

FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES,

Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps,

HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS,

and outlying goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figures, for Cash or Country Produce.

1-12

THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1859.

NUMBER 12.

THE VALLEY TAN.

PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

It Isn't All in Bringing Up.

It isn't all in "bringing up,"
Let folks say what they will;
To silver-scur a pewter cup,
It will be pewter still.
Even he of old, wise Solomon,
Who said "train up a child,"
If I mistake not, had a son Proved rattle-brained and wild.

A man of mark, who fain would pass
For lord of sea and land,
May have the training of a son,
And bring him up full grand;
May give him all the wealth of lore,
Of college and of school,
But after all may make no more Than just a decent fool.

Another raised by penury,
Upon her bitter bread,
Whose road to knowledge is like that
The good to heaven must tread;
He's got a spark of nature's light,
He'll fan it to a flame,
Till in its burning letters bright
The world may read his name.

If it were all in "bringing up,"
In counsel and restraint,
Some rascals had been honest men—
I'd been myself a saint.
Oh! it isn't all in "bringing up,"
Let folks say what they will;
Neglect may dim a silver cup—
It will be silver still.

A Soldier's Courtship.

Another marriage, which makes even more stir than that of Malakoff, amongst a certain set, has just been published—that of Colonel Charras, who is now in exile at Zurich. He is about to espouse Mlle Mathilde Kestner, the daughter of the proprietor of chemical works established at Thaum. The history of the Colonel is rather burgeois when compared with the interferences of emperors and mighty potentates of the earth, as in the case of that of his old comrade Pelissier. The Colonel was returning alone from an excursion in the neighborhood of Zurich, in the humble and grotesque looking patache which conveys travelers in search after pleasure in the environs of that quiet little place. He had walked far before coming up with the patache, and had fallen fast asleep in spite of its hard sides and hide bound cushions. On awaking, he found himself sitting opposite a young lady who had entered the patache during his slumber, and curiously enough had fallen asleep likewise. Upon her knee lay an open volume, which the Colonel recognized at once as the History of the revolution of February. The life of Col. Charras was just the place where the reader had opened it, and on awaking, the Colonel, highly amused, entered easily into conversation concerning the men and events of that day. The young lady professed herself an ardent admirer of the whole of the patriotic party, particularly of Charras, the incidents of whose career she declared herself never weary of reading. The Colonel, much flattered of course, ventured to dispute with the young lady several questions upon which she was in error concerning the hero she sought to defend with so much zeal.

The question of his personal appearance particularly, was one upon which she was of quite a different opinion from that of her companion; and concerning everything relating to his habits and manners of life, as she had her information from people who passed their whole existence with him—of course he must know, and could not therefore, accept the contradiction of an entire stranger. Hereupon the Colonel, completely beaten, was forced to silence—and merely looking at the book once more, as if to examine the date, he adroitly inserted his card, as if by way of marking the place. In a few moments more the young lady alighted at the iron gate of a fabrique close to Zurich, and the Colonel, of course, deem the acquaintance at an end. The next day he received a charming note from the fair incognita, who, full of shame and repentance, excused herself for the apparent impertinence of which she had been guilty, in sustaining an opinion concerning her idol against that of an evident friend of his, and begging him to pay her a visit, in order to give her an opportunity of rectifying the impression which she must have produced in the patache by her obstinate outrecuidance. The Colonel needed no second invitation. Already charmed beyond expression, the delicacy and the tact displayed in her note completely achieved the conquest of his heart, and he surrendered without condition.

The delight and astonishment of the fair Mathilde may be easily conceived when she learned that it was Colonel Charras in person, and no counterfeit, whose acquaintance she had made. Cupid's wings fly fast at a certain period of life, and as no time was to be lost, the marriage was fixed at once for the 23rd of this month, the day on which the fair bride will attain her 25th birthday. [Court Journal.]

LIFE.

The following beautiful illustration of life, is by the celebrated Bishop Heber:

Life bears on like the stream of a mighty river. Our boat at first glides gently down the narrow channel, through the playful murmurings of the little brook, and the windings of the grassy border. The trees shed their blossoms over our heads; the flowers on the brink seem to offer themselves to our young hands; we are happy in hope and we grasp eagerly at the beauties around us; but the stream hurries us on, and still our hands are empty.

Our course in youth and manhood is along a wider and deeper flood, and amid objects more striking and magnificent—we are animated by the moving picture of enjoyment and industry which passes before us—we are excited at some short lived success, or depressed at some short lived disappointment. But our energy and dependence are in vain. The stream bears us on, and our joys and griefs are alike left behind us; we may be shipwrecked, but we cannot anchor; our voyage may be hastened, but it cannot be delayed; whether rough or smooth, the river hastens to its home, the roaring of the ocean is in our ears, and the tossing of its waves is beneath our heels—the lands lessen from our eyes, and the floods are lifted up around us—and the earth loses sight of us, and we take our last leave of its inhabitants; and of our further voyage there is no witness but the Eternal.

And do we still take so much anxious thought for our future days; when the days that have gone by, have so strangely and uniformly deceived? Can we so still set our hearts on the creatures of God, when we find by sad experience that the Creator only is permanent? And shall we not rather lay aside every weight and every sin which does not easily beset us, and think of ourselves henceforth as wayfaring persons only, who have no abiding inheritance, but in the hope of a better world; and to whom that would be worse than hopeless, if it were not for the Lord Jesus Christ and the interest we have obtained in his mercy.

Steam-Doctoring.

Those who knew the good old-fashioned and eccentric Mr. Morrisette, of Monroe County, will at once recognize the following as a "true bill." It is true to the letter, and "just like him."

Some years ago a bill was up before the Alabama Legislature for establishing a Botanical Medical College at Wetumpka. Several able speakers had made long addresses in support of the bill, when one Mr. Morrisette, from Monroe, took the floor. With much gravity, he addressed the House as follows:

"Mr. Speaker, I can not support this bill unless assured that a distinguished friend of mine is made one of the professors. He is what that college wishes to make for us, a regular root doctor, and will suit the place exactly. He became a doctor in two hours, and it only cost him $20 to complete his education. He bought a book, sir, and read the chapter on fevers, and that was enough. He was called to see a sick woman once; so he tucked his book under his arm, and off he went. She was a very sick woman indeed, and he felt her wrist, looked in her mouth, and then turning to the husband, asked solemnly if he had a sorrel sheep. 'Why no; I never heard of such a thing,' said the man. 'Well, there is such things,' said the doctor, nodding his head knowingly. 'Have you got a sorrel horse, then?' 'Yes,' said the man, 'I drove him to the mill this morning.' 'Well,' said the doctor, 'he must be killed immediately, and some soup made of him for your wife.' The woman turned her head away, and the astonished man inquired if something else would not do for the soup; the horse was worth a hundred dollars, and was all the one he had? 'No,' said the doctor, 'the book says so, and if you don't believe it I will read it to you: 'Good for fevers—sheep sorrel or horse sorrel.' There, sir. 'Why, doctor,' said the man and his wife, 'it don't mean a sorrel sheep or horse, but—' 'Well, I know what I am about,' interrupted the doctor; 'that's the way we doctors read it, and we understand it.' Now," continued the speaker, amidst the roars of the House, "unless my sorrel doctor can be one of the professors, I must vote against this bill."

The blow most effectually killed the bill, it is needless to state.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.—One of our exchanges says: "The wife crop of Gasconade County, Mo., this year is estimated at twenty-five thousand galls." The wine crop was referred to, but twenty-five thousand galls will make a good crop of wives notwithstanding. The Hartford Times, noticing the death of an editor, says: "He was a high winded gentleman, and a pungent writer." Perhaps he was a stump-speaker of the high-winded school of oratory. A Locofoco editor says: "The Democracy are licked like a band of brothers," instead of linked, and another says: "We have vet the enemy, and we are theirs!" Types, play, ead, praple. — Louisville Journal.

PRINCIPLE.

Though a person may perform a good act, or utter a noble sentiment, from the spontaneity of his good nature, we would sooner trust, for all emergencies, the person who acts and utters well from deliberate forethought. Generous impulses are admirable, but he who is governed by impulse habitually, is as liable to do unintentional wrong as unintentional good—though his afterthought may condemn his wrong doing. Not so with him who, desiring to do good, always considers that he does, and is governed by a careful estimate of results. His actions are the unfailing fruit of conscientious motives, and though thereby sometimes less flattering to his vanity, being less noticed by the world, they cannot but continually add to his dignity of character and peace of mind. A life regulated by principle has the consistency of a plan, and its whole is necessarily more harmonious, perfect and beautiful, than one spent under the spur of impulse. Indeed, if the entire acts of an impulsive life were good, they would reflect less credit than an equal measure of acts inspired by principle—for action, strictly judged, takes its moral and merit from the intention that originated it. Moved by passionate impulse, one may purpose harm and yet do good; it is the purpose, therefore, and not the result, that must be credited to the actor. The good done upon principle is never thus done accidentally or unintentionally. The doer has a clear motive and knows just what he is doing. He acts, too, not like the man of impulse, perhaps, solely because the act is self-pleasurable, but because it is right and good in itself. He cannot be true to his convictions and act otherwise. As "order is Heaven's first law," so principle is the chart and compass of such a man. With all, and especially with the young, it is a matter of the first moment to subjugate impulse and cultivate principle. Where virtuous principle is the law of life, all is well—or if failing thereby sometimes in our temporal purposes and desires, we shall have the solid reward of "a conscience void of offense."

I'D RATHER CARRY IT.—Going from market the other day, we observed a very small boy who gave no special indication, by dress or face, of other than ordinary sensations of training in life, carrying a basket that was so heavy as nearly to bear him down beneath it. We observed, "my boy you have a heavy load." "Yes," said he, "but I'd rather carry it than mother should." The remark was one of a nature we love to hear; but we do not know that we should have thought enough of it to have chronicled it, had we not seen across the street a highly accomplished young lady playing the piano, while her mother was washing the windows. We have no reason for forestalling the reflections and comparisons of our readers on these facts. — Wheeling Gazette.

The New Orleans Picayune says that there are hundreds of young men in that city who can not get employment, and dissuades all from venturing there who have not previously secured positions. On the other hand, there is a great scarcity of seamen, and several vessels have been detained for days for want of a crew.

CONVICTED.—Henry C. Tomlinson, for the murder of his brother-in-law, Thomas Estes, in Scott County, on the 18th of September last, was tried last week, found guilty of man-slaughter, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for six years.

RAISING TURKEYS.—I propose giving my mode of raising turkeys. It is my opinion that farmers can raise a pound of fowl easier and cheaper than a pound of pork. Heretofore I have been unfortunate in raising turkeys, but this season I adopted a different mode—a plan of my own invention—by which I have been very successful. Others may have adopted the same course, but not to my knowledge.

Young turkeys are apt to die before they attain to the age of three weeks. I came to the conclusion that the fatality among them was caused by vermin, heavy feed, and cold, damp weather. My method this season has been this:—Take the eggs of the first laying and set under hens; the second laying let the turkeys hatch. Two or three days before hatching, sprinkle the nest and the fowls themselves with sulphur. When the young were hatched I took a little sulphur, gunpowder and lard, mixed, and greased their heads and necks to keep off the vermin while the young brooded. If it does not remain on, in eight or ten days put on another coat.

Mode of Feeding.—I took equal quantities of wheat bran and Indian meal, and wet with sour milk, or lapped milk, with a good lot of fine-cut shavings once in two or three days in with it, and feed them till a month or six weeks old; then lessen the bran. Feed them early in the morning to keep them from rambling in the dew.

Such has been my method of feeding and management, and I have lost but two out of forty hatched. Ducks managed in the same way—lost three, by accidental causes out of thirty-five hatched. One only died while young. Chickens in like manner, with greased heads and sulphured nests—lost three in about sixty. This is my mode and my success. — Prairie Farmer.

REMARKABLE DWARF.—A dwarf named Richebourg, who was only twenty-three and a half inches high, had just died in the Rue du Four St. Germain, Paris, aged ninety. He was when young, in the service of the Duchess d'Orleans, mother of King Louis Philippe, with the title of "butler," but he performed none of the duties of the office. After the first revolution broke out he was employed to convey dispatches abroad, and for that purpose was dressed as a little baby, the dispatches being concealed in his cap, and a nurse being made to carry him. For the last twenty-five years he lived in the Rue du Four, and during all that time never went out. He had a great repugnance to strangers, and was alarmed when he heard the voice of one, but in his own family he was very lively and cheerful in conversation. The Orleans family allowed him a pension 3,000f.

MARRIED A SQUAW.—A Kentuckian has been marrying a Kickapoo squaw. At Shawnee, K. T., on Wednesday evening, the 10th instant, by Rev. Mr. Spencer, Jonathan Gore, Esq., formerly of Nelson County, Ky., to Miss Sallie, daughter of Charles Blue Jacket, U. S. Interpreter.

GREAT SHOOTING.—The President of one of the best managed Banks in Essex County had great luck on a gunning expedition last week. He started from home after breakfast, and returned in season to dine with his family. During the forenoon he shot and secured sixty-four elder ducks.

There are said to be twelve millions of dollars of claims docketed against Mexico in the State Department.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, JANUARY, 18, 1859.

Our regular publication day hereafter will be on Tuesday.

Advices from Washington plainly indicate that questions connected with this Territory will form the subject of some consideration in our National Councils this session. The time is too short for much to be done, but truths and facts will be elicited in discussion which will throw some light upon the Mormon imbroglio question. In this complication of affairs the Mormons of this Territory are singularly unfortunate in the representation of their interests in Congress. The present delegate is, we doubt not, a very clever and industrious old gentleman; but this is an age of progression, and the fires of Young America light up the Cabinet, the camp and the forum; and when the steel strikes, no palsied hand, however honest the intentions, can stand the clash of more youthful vigor. Our advice may be considered impertinent, for the Mormons, we know, have no love for us; yet at the risk of being considered presumptuous, we can afford to tell them a few wholesome truths, and risk suggestions which they can treat just as they please, for it is a matter of the most profound indifference to us. Casting aside, therefore, all considerations of the Church hierarchy, which we despise, there are interests of a local nature, important subjects of legislation, involving greatly the welfare of this Territory, which require the services of a young and energetic legislator. There is even a choice in the Theocracy that prevails in this Territory, and the Church has such men in their midst; and if it were necessary we could designate them, where intelligence and industry, notwithstanding the heretical and odious dogmas of Mormonism, could accomplish some good in developing and forwarding the interests of this Territory. But then our suggestions would not be even respected in the premises, and our endorsement would in itself extinguish the political fortunes of any young man in the Church who had an ambition for such a position. We know where we stand; and while we have no favors to ask in any shape, manner or form, yet we can allow ourselves to be magnanimous enough to pause upon our prejudices, and even wrongs and insults, and give them the benefit of our judgment in matters in which "this people" are interested, and in which we are not involved a fig.

A question of great national importance, and which is attracting the attention of the people of the whole Union, is now before Congress, and has so far progressed, that although it may not be definitively acted upon this session; yet the indications are that the next Congress will finally pass upon it; we refer to a railroad to the Pacific coast. Without entering into an opinion or discussing the merits of the various routes proposed, yet it is all-important when a proposition has been made which looks to the Valley of Great Salt Lake as a line for this great national highway, that this Territory should be ably and most energetically represented, represented with all the force that can be brought to bear, viewed both in a national and especially in a local light. The lauded interest of the Territory is another matter of great importance. Contemplating the perfection and integrity of titles to the soil, and the rights of pre-emption, &c., and for these objects the attributes of perseverance, industry, and intelligence are required. There are other matters to which we could refer, but we have not space or time now.

We know that our suggestions will not be considered of much importance, but we volunteer them at all hazards, and without professing to be either a "prophet" or a political seer: we have sufficient confidence in our judgment to believe that our assumptions are well taken. "This people" have the thing in their own hands, and there is no opposition or competition for the prize outside of their peculiar set; and we therefore reiterate, if they desire to serve their own interests, they should look well to the character, ability and energy of their next delegate in Congress. As we are not in the habit of complimenting them much, they could well afford in this instance to give us credit for frankness and fair dealing, although we do not expect or even desire it.

Several persons will leave this city this week for Pike's Peak. Among those who leave to-morrow is Capt. A. B. Miller, of the firm of Miller, Russell & Co., who goes out to prospect and with a view, if it suits, to divert one of his merchandise trains to the auriferous region.

A Banter.

Wagering we know is not the most convincing way to bring a fact to the attention of the Public, yet in its very nature it is an evidence of judgment and confidence.

All the Overland Mail routes, with the exception of the Salt Lake, have come in for a full share of newspaper praise, and Government greasing, and for the purpose of testing the question as to the speediest route to California, we are authorized to offer a wager of ten thousand dollars from five of the most responsible gentlemen of this Territory, that the trip from St. Louis to San Francisco, can be made by way of Salt Lake, in quicker time than by any other route upon the Continent; nay farther, that San Francisco can be reached in quicker time from any point on the Mississippi river than any other route—this lets in Tehuantepec,—the trial to come off next summer. This, it will be seen is a sweepstake arrangement, and if the friends of any Overland trial to the Pacific, desire to have a race, all they have to do, is to address a note to us, and we assure them the preliminaries will soon be arranged.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT.—Nothing of any particular importance has transpired, except the acquittal of James Ferguson, Esq.

Mr. Ferguson conducted his own case, and we give him the credit of doing it with tact and ability. The United States was represented by Mr. Wilson, the U. S. District Attorney, who has proven himself in the management of the legal business which has devolved upon him, to be a zealous, industrious and sound lawyer.

The Court was occupied on Monday in hearing motions, and will in all probability adjourn to-day (Tuesday) sine die, or until the next term in course. The reasons for this step we shall discuss hereafter. Judge Sinclair has taken the responsibility, and we doubt not he will be sustained by the voice of the County at large.

Dr. Forrey, the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, leaves shortly for the North, and from thence will cross over to the Camp, where he has an engagement to meet the Ute chief Arrapine, who contemplates being there at the full of the moon.

Dr. F. will be accompanied by Mr. Jarvis, the newly appointed Indian Agent.

We shall publish in our next issue the speech of the Hon. Mr. Thompson, of New York, delivered in Congress last winter, upon the Mormon question. We had the pleasure of being present, and listening to this splendid effort, and we can assure our readers, they will be amply repaid by its perusal.

FIKE.—This (Tuesday) morning about seven o'clock, a fire was discovered in the cellar of the store of Radford, Cabot & Co., and a few minutes later the conflagration would have been most disastrous. It caught from the flue into which the stove pipe in the store is inserted, the flue not being closed below, the embers and soot fell through into the cellar among some straw and boxes, and soon got into a blaze. It was fortunately discovered in time, and after considerable exertion the fire was extinguished before any damage was done.

CONGRESSIONAL.—Our last dates indicate nothing very interesting in Congress. The Pacific Railroad bill appears to be looming up a little, and the impeachment case of Judge Watrons still "drags its slow length along."

We observe that Mr. Morrell has introduced a bill in relation to Polygamy, but what its features and provisions are we are not advised. A Mr. Wright has sent in a memorial praying Congress to aid in re-issuing the Book of Mormon, on the grounds that the book itself contains the most conclusive arguments against the institution of Polygamy. We presume that Congress is now fairly at work, and as the Kansas bone is bleached there is nothing for them to howl over, and it is to be hoped they will address themselves to business.

We understand that a memorial has been considered in the Legislature, and whether acted on or not, we are not advised, contemplating asking for admission into the Union, under the old State of Deseret Constitution. This is rather hasty to say the least of it, and exhibits a want of intelligence, which we were not prepared to see, even in a Utah Legislature. They should have known that there were certain initiatory steps to be taken, provided for under the Constitution, and by law, before a Territory can emerge from a chrysalis state and wheel into the array of States.

Utah is very lightly we know, but it is hardly to be expected, that she should by a single leap, like the fabled Goddess, from the brain of Jove, jump at once into the armor of sovereignty, with boots, cap, spurs and helmet on.

The last Eastern mail arrived several hours in advance of its schedule time, notwithstanding the severe snows and storms. The California mail generally comes in from 24 to 36 hours inside of its schedule time.

Mount Vernon House at Camp Floyd.

This House has recently passed into the hands of Mr. Charles Harrison, a gentleman well known by all habitués of the Camp. The Mount Vernon, since it has been under the management of Mr. Harrison, has undergone many changes for the better, and all persons visiting the Camp, can make their home with Charlie, with a certainty of having everything the market affords. The table is all that the most confirmed epicure could wish; while the sleeping apartments are comfortable. It is the determination of Mr. C. Harrison, and his affable aid-de-camp, J. H. Morrison, to please or perish in the attempt. We wish Charlie and his House, as well as his boarders, a heap of luck.

We are requested to state that the next Assembly Soirees, will take place on next Thursday evening, at the usual time and place.

A proposition has been introduced into Congress by Mr. Morris, of Illinois, to make the Governors, Judiciary and other officers of Territories elective. This is popular sovereignty with a vengeance, but we rather think that "swine" has a "devil" concealed in it, which will be either developed or "cast out" before the present session closes.

PORT BRIDGER, Jan. 9, 1859.

EDITOR OF VALLEY TAN:—

On the 15th of last month the bodies of three men were found by John Baker, on what is known as Bryant's road, about one half mile east of Green River. The men were evidently murdered, the holes of the balls through their heads and breast being found. They were genteely dressed, but no other trace of their identity could be discovered, save a small comb in the vest pocket of one with the name of John Ravellin engraved upon it. The snow having fallen very deep since the killing, no other discoveries could be made.

JAMES BAKER.

G. S. L. CITY, Jan. 17, 1859.

ED. VALLEY TAN:—

In your last issue I observe with pleasure that you gave place to a communication over the signature of "Truth," denying the existence of any organization called Danites. I ask a similar privilege, and can fully corroborate all that "Truth" in his communication alleges. It is difficult to prove a negative, and when especially an error has run so long uncontradicted. I am one of this people, and have been here many years; and I can testify that I never knew of such an organization. As you have shown some little disposition for fair play, I add my testimony to that of "Truth."

JUSTICE.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
January 10, 1859.

On Saturday evening we were present at the theatre, and found not only the lady with the obliquity of vision, but the other two abortions have remained in statu quo. We should like to see these eye sores to good taste removed; white wash would not be expensive. The performance commenced with the Farce or Interlude of "The Day after the Wedding." It was very respectably performed, with one exception (Lord Rivers), a first appearance, which was a complete failure; not so another first appearance introduced by (Mrs. Davis) Mrs. Westwood with good effect; it was a novelty (although not in the piece) in the shape of a poodle dog, who seemed much delighted at being placed in such a prominent position, and somewhat loth to leave the boards, on which he made not his first bow, but on which he had first the honor of wagging his tail.

In the next place Mr. Doyle sang, "The adventures of Larry McFlinn," with irresistibly comic effect; he was deservedly cheered throughout. This was followed by the farce of "The Secret of the hole in the wall;" (Dupuis) Mr. Warren, (Volare) Mr. Thatcher, (Cicile) Mrs. Tuckett, (Angelica) Miss Whitlock, (Thomas) Mr. Crawford: where all was excellent, it would be almost invidious to name one; at the same time we cannot refrain from expressing our admiration of the cool, gentlemanly acting of Mr. Warren, it was neither under nor over done. It affords us the highest gratification to bear our testimony to the entire success of this neat, classical little piece; every one knew their parts. There were no hitches or stops, it was gone through with that degree of smoothness and finish, on which so much depends in a theatrical representation. Not only is the piece good in itself, but it was performed with an entirety which would have done credit to any theatre.

Mr. Willis next gave us his celebrated stump speech, with its allusions and delusions; he was justly applauded several times.

The whole concluded with a romance of real life, entitled "Box and Cox," respectively taken by Mr. White and Mr. Willis (Mrs. Bouncer), Mrs. Loug. This was gone through in a creditable manner, and sent a crowded house home well pleased with the good things provided for their entertainment.

There has been a great improvement, particularly in the ladies; and we hope that the efforts of all to please, will meet with that best proof of success, "a full treasury."

"DRAMA."

P.S.—We understand that the Lady of Lyons and the Stranger are in rehearsal—a bold flight.

CAMP FLOYD, Jan. 10, 1859.

MR. EDITOR:—

Since my last, nothing of importance has transpired in our Camp; Christmas and New Year's both, passed off without anything to remind one of the days. On the 31st of December, the Troops were reviewed by General Johnston, in person, and was I expect one of the largest that has taken place since the Mexican war; and had it been any where else, I should not hesitate in pronouncing it a very fine affair. At night a Ball, given by the Dramatic Association, came off, and is pronounced by all as being the Ball of the season.

There is at present, a good deal of speculating, as to the destination of the different regiments now here, in the Spring; but as nothing official has yet been received, all reports are pronounced "gas."

The Quartermaster's Department are making a great improvement in the Camp, by conducting the water through it by means of troughs under ground; at regular intervals are tanks or hydrants; this when completed, will add greatly to the convenience and comfort of the Camp, particularly in dry weather, as I suppose there will be some means by which the parades and roads can be kept damp. The work is under the immediate supervision of Captain P. T. Turnley, Assistant Quartermaster.

The Dramatic Association is doing first rate; they have a new member, Mr. White, of the tenth Infantry, who is without a doubt a first-rate Comedian, and upon every appearance has succeeded in pleasing every one. In his appearance, as John Due, in the "Jacobite," he proved himself the best Comedian in the Association. Mrs. Whitlock, as "Patty Pottle," did full justice to the character and play. If Camp Floyd, will be allowed a Star in the Theatrical world, Mrs. Whitlock, is entitled to the honor. I understand that on Wednesday night, we are to have quite a treat; I shall try and be there.

COMEDY.

KIRK ANDERSON, E.EQ.

Your correspondent over Truth denies the existence of a Danite band in Utah, but we may reasonably doubt whether this assertion is entitled to any credit for veracity or not. We are at a loss to know whether your correspondent has properly personated himself or not. We have heard of persons stealing the livery of Heaven to serve the Devil in; and there are inklings appearing frequently in the teachings of the leading members of the church, which seem to justify our suspicions on this point.

On page 143, Deseret News, Vol. 7, Prest. B. Young says, "If men come here and do not behave themselves, they will not only find the Danites, whom they talk so much about, biting the horses' heels, but the scoundrels will find something biting their heels. In my plain remarks, I merely call things by their right names."

With the concluding sentence attached, this paragraph cannot be construed ironically. That a secret band, or junto, once existed among the Mormons, by that name, can scarcely be denied.

But Truth denies its existence now. This may be; they may have changed their name for the purpose of executing more successfully the duties enjoined upon them.

It may not be out of the course of facts occasionally. We well remember, when it was first reported that polygamy was, or would be incorporated, into the Mormon creed, it was most positively denied by their Apostles and Elders; some of whom even went so far as to appear indignant and insulted at the idea, pronouncing it but another name for whoredom, and a base slander upon their community; while we have reasons to believe that it existed at the time, and was inculcated as a part of their religious creed. Subsequent developments have exposed their venality, and cast doubt upon the credibility of any statement they may make in regard to their institutions.

Polygamy is now the strong link in the chain that binds them together; the essential basis of their theory of man's future state of exaltation, and its successful adoption the chief anchor of his hopes of celestial felicity.

Under these circumstances what claims have they upon our credulity?

In this connection, we may justly complain of the secrecy and mystery with which every thing seems to be shrouded by the ordinances of the church. Prest. B. Young, in same vol. of Deseret News, page 21, says: "Do some of you men know something that you can not tell your wives? O, I have received something in the endowment that I dare not tell my wife, and I do not know how to do about it. The man who can not know millions of things that he would not tell his wife, will never be crowned in the celestial kingdom; never, never, NEVER. It can not be; it is impossible."

Again, on page 180 of same vol., speaking of his connection with the rest of the world, he says, "I shall take it as a witness that God designs to cut the thread between us and the world, when an army undertakes to make their appearance in this Territory to chastise me, or to destroy my life from the earth. I think that we will find three hundred who will lap water, and we can whip out the Midianites."

But we can only discern in part in these discourses what the real sentiments of their authors are, for they are so completely garbled that much of the gist of the matter is lost, as is partially admitted in a succeeding paragraph, viz.: "Br. Heber says that the music is taken out of his sermons, when Br. Carrington clips out words here and there, and I have taken out the music from mine, for I know the traditions and false notions of the people. Our sermons are read by tens of thousands outside of Utah. Members of the British Parliament have those Journals of Discourses, published by Br. Watt; they have them locked up; they secrete them, and go to their rooms to study them, and they know all about us. They may perhaps keep them from the Queen, for fear that she would believe them, and be converted."

Are we a set of wild beasts that we are to be inveigled into the church by stratagem? or, are we to be deceived by the most blatant sentences that can be selected from the catalogue of their theory, till we are bound hand and foot, irretrievably, and then to be chastised with thongs and pitchforks? Then what right has your correspondent to expect our confidence, though he comes to us clothed with the veritable signature of Truth?

But it matters little whether they admit the existence of such a name or not; facts speak louder than words; and history, that is fresh in the memory of thousands, is fraught with the most flagrant and unblushing violations of the laws, both of the country, and of humanity; and if Mr. Truth insists upon it, we may yet be able to lift the curtain, and expose the actors in some of these secret tragedies, whether they be called Danites or not.

It is not that crimes are severely punished, that we complain of the people of Utah, but because we are forced from a chain of circumstances to believe that crimes of the most startling character are perpetrated in the chambers of secrecy; and whether the victim be guilty or innocent, it matters not, the voice of justice and pity are stifled in the inception, and no one dare question the propriety of the deed.

Why is it that an affray between two negroes, resulting in the death of one, is made the subject of such elaborate commentaries by your neighbor of the Deseret News, while Dummy meets a more revolting fate within sight of the city, at the hands of a brother, without eliciting the first syllable from his pen? Why is it that a shooting affair between two gamblers is heralded to the world as an exhibition of modern civilization, while three citizens of the Territory are brutally murdered within a stone's throw of the town in which they lived, and this immaculate editor is as mute as death, or passes it by as unworthy of his notice? Why is it that the lawless incendiary can promulgate about the streets of Zion at the dead hour of night, and inflict summary, brutal punishment upon citizens for crimes of which they had not been convicted, or perhaps for no crime whatever? Why are houses torn down, offices broken into, and men's property destroyed, while the perpetrators may be seen dodging the corners in groups and laughing with secret pleasure at the work of their destruction, and not a single note of disapprobation from the Deseret News and its coadjutors is heard?

This may be the work of Danites or destroying and may be please mitigate the attach to sue hypocrisy and complain should not fee

From our

W

KIRK ANDERSON

at the hands your "Valley" what a name to drop your your last wit for you to p see fit, but s not burthen oxen and m white close, I feel some far away fro but am so nouncement, new paper h "embanked" being the ca traps and st Pardon my rors, which because, as placed in he lar attitude tions, allow is about fo

The Mes been sent t "papers" on you before from perus think about isfaction, able and A respect to the views heartily se lates to the been decid rect taxat it can hard anything t tionists' th Message Administ to allow, closer ap law will the countr

In the yet to hea offer any the extens der State transit ro matters, t popular v rule for t down in sats subje of our n company general t ions of weight, that the rebuking How ju cannot, are full reach us Making tions of constrai monism leaders, moral s ambition as being part I v as the they ha ation, to penet found a dermess object t logy, sc sally a But in gence i may fc friends, means, current

Of e any bu but tw day in Speake frame, day of day of

day of

day of

destroying angels, or what name soever you may be pleased to call them; yet it does not mitigate the enormity of guilt that must attach to such a state of things; and the hypocrisy that can pass them silently over, and complain of grievances of which they should not feel half so much interest.

E. X. Y.

From our Washington Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

December 8th, 1858.

KIRK ANDERSON, ESQ.:

MY DEAR SIR:—Having recently received at the hands of a mutual friend, a copy of your "Valley Tan," (shade of Joe Smith, what a name!) I thought I would take time to drop you a short epistle from the scene of your last winter's labors. I intend the letter for you to publish or let alone, just as you see fit, but as the distance is great, I will not burden your "prairie steamboats," with oxen and mules—with any extra paper, but write close, and on both sides of the sheet. I feel some regret to think that you are so far away from the Capitol and Joe Hamlin's, but am somewhat reconciled by the announcement, in your introductory, that your new paper has an "ardent," and that you have "embarked" in that far off Valley. This being the case, you will hardly pack up your traps and start for a new ranch in a hurry. Pardon my alluding to your typographic errors, which are only the more excusable, because, as you state, your compositors are placed in horizontal, instead of perpendicular attitudes. But without further reflections, allow me to state what is doing, and is about to be done at this Metropolis.

The Message of Mr. Buchanan having been sent to Congress, and published in the papers on Monday, it will, no doubt, reach you before my letter does, and you will know from perusal what to do with it, and what to think about it. Here we regard it with satisfaction, and generally consider it a very able and truly Democratic document. In respect to every topic to which he alludes, the views of the President are such as I can heartily sanction; except, only, so far as relates to the tariff. As I am and have always been decidedly in favor of free-trade and direct taxation, if the system were practicable, it can hardly be expected that I should favor anything favoring so strongly of the protectionists' theory, as a few paragraphs of this Message do. But I shall not oppose the Administration on this ground, and am free to allow, that under present circumstances a closer approximation to a protective tariff law will tend to relieve embarrassments of the country.

In the matter of acquiring Cuba, I have yet to hear any one, not a Black Republican, offer any objection. So, also, in respect to the extension of a protectorate over the border States of Mexico, and to protecting the transit routes over the isthmus. On all these matters, the President, I think, expresses the popular view. So, also, with respect to the rule for the admission of new States, as laid down in his well-timed remarks on the Kansas subject; and relative to the improvement of our national defenses. The reports accompanying the Message, meet with similar general favor, and the several recommendations of the Secretaries will have no little weight with Congress. You will perceive that the Secretary of War alludes rather rebukingly to a portion of your community. How just these animadversions may be I cannot, of course, know personally; but they are fully borne out by the reports which reach us at this distant point from the scene. Making every allowance for the exaggerations of biased and prejudiced minds, we are constrained to regard the adherents of Mormonism in a most unfavorable light. The leaders, we look upon as impostors, whose moral sensibilities have been deadened by ambition, and the people, for the most part, as being deluded and deceived. For my own part I would think were otherwise, inasmuch as the enterprise, energy and perseverance they have evinced, is highly worthy of laudation. Truly, it was no unimportant task to penetrate the vast solitudes of Utah, and found a city in that almost inaccessible wilderness. The industry was worthy a better object than the foundation of system of theology, so utterly at variance with the universally acknowledged laws of right and wrong. But I may be offending, through this indulgence in animadversions against those who may form a portion of your patronizing friends. I do not mean to do so, by any means, but simply to express what are the current opinions at this point.

Of course, Congress has not transacted any business yet. They have been in session but two days, having adjourned over yesterday until to-morrow, in order to give the Speaker, your friend, Colonel Orr, time to frame the standing committees. On the first day of the session an effort was made by Mr.

Dewart, of Penn., to introduce a resolution looking to the increase of the tariff. This was even before the receipt of the Message. The House refused to suspend the rules, by a vote of yeas 98, nays 106, two thirds being required, you remember. You will admit that this vote apparently betrays a strong tariff sentiment in the House, and the protectionists are greatly encouraged by it. They contend that they will be able to pass a protective tariff during the session. On the second day, an effort was made in the House to kill off a bill, lying over from last session, providing for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. It did not succeed, the vote being 102 against laying it on the table, to 87 in favor. This treaty you know allows England, or any other nation, to make what terms they can with the Central American States; provided, always, that the United States is to enjoy precisely the same facilities; and that no nation is to attempt to acquire possession of any portion of the Isthmian territory by conquest, or purchase, unless the consent of all parties be first obtained. Ever since and before the treaty was made, England has held the Mosquito province on the Isthmus; and refused to surrender it, notwithstanding the constant admonitions and reprehensions of our Government. She contended that the terms of treaty were not retrospective, and as she held the province prior to its existence, she persisted in holding it still. The object of Congress is to abrogate that treaty, compel England to relinquish her claim on the Mosquito country, and restore the Monroe doctrine, which forbids the nations of this continent to form alliances with European powers, unless by the general consent of neighboring nations. This should have been our policy always, and would have been, most likely, but that we have had just enough White Administrations to thwart the true interests of the country. The opposition would now throw away this Isthmus, just as the country North of Washington Territory, to the latitude of 54 degrees 40 minutes was thrown away; and swear that it is not worth having. But I forget that I am talking to people away out in Utah, who probably feel no interest in the subject.

Yesterday, general consent being obtained in the House to introduce bills and resolutions from the territories, the call was made, and Mr. Otero, New Mexico, introduced bills for the completion of military roads from Fort Union to Santa Fe, New Mexico; and from Taos to Santa Fe; and for making a grant of lands in New Mexico, Kansas and Missouri, to aid in the construction of railroads; Mr. Bernhisel introduced resolutions instructing the Committee on Military Affairs to inquire into the expediency of refunding to the Territory of Utah the expense incurred in suppressing Indian hostilities in 1853; also, to inquire into the expediency of constructing a military road from Bridger's Pass to Great Salt Lake City; also, that the Committee on Territories inquire into the expediency of making a small appropriation to increase the territorial libraries. Mr. Stevens introduced bills for the construction of a wagon road from Fort Abercrombie, on the Red River of the North, to Seattle, on Puget's Sound, and for the survey of the Upper Missouri and Columbia rivers. All these matters were referred to the appropriate committees, and from what I know of the objects and of the general sentiment of Congress relative thereto, I am almost confident they will all meet with favor, except that looking to the refunding of moneys to your territorial authorities. In view of the heavy expense to the country of fitting out an expedition to Utah, to quell rebellion there, it hardly seems fair that the country should be called on to pay any such claim, and Congress will not be in a humor to allow it just now, at any rate.

Gen. Beale, who is constructing a road from Fort Smith via Albuquerque to the Rio Colorado del West, is the object of great solicitude here, on account of the reported hostile attitude of the Indians along his route. It was rumored that he had already encountered no little trouble from the Camanches, but this is now contradicted by positive information through a member of his party who has already returned home. He has two companies of cavalry for an escort; and his own company is fifty strong, yet, as he is to traverse the country of the warlike Mojave and Navajo Indians, the War Department has seen fit to order Gen. Clark to send him two other companies from the California side, for his protection. Both these last named tribes are said to be very troublesome. As I have sent you about all the news current, I will wind up by adding that I have transferred numerous articles from the "Valley Tan" to the Star, and hope you will give me a chance to do it again. I will send you the Star, if you can afford to reciprocate by sending your twenty-five cent sheet in exchange; and you shall hear again from me. If you publish this, please to sign me by the old familiar name, "E. X. Y."

[From the N. Y. Herald.]

THE WALKER EXPEDITION.

MOBILE, Dec. 9, 1858.

The schooner Susan escaped on Tuesday afternoon. The cutter McClelland got aground in Navy Cove, and when she got off the schooner was about four hundred miles away.

The filibusters here are greatly elated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9, 1858.

It is said the Nicaragua filibusters have their rendezvous somewhere in the Florida Keys. There is little if any doubt that the steamer Fashion, which left Mobile on the 1st of December, professedly for Texas, carried out a large number of them, together with ammunition. Our government is not kept fully advised of their plans and movements.

OUR MOBILE CORRESPONDENCE.

MOBILE, Dec. 3, 1858.

Gen. Walker Again Turned Up—He Goes Before the Grand Jury—The Filibusters in General.

Gen. Walker "turned up" again on last Tuesday, in about as sudden and mysterious a manner as he disappeared on the 20th ult. The Grand Jury occupied the whole of Tuesday and a portion of Wednesday in his examination. What was elicited from him is of course unknown to outsiders; but it has leaked out that he answered fully as much as was expected, bearing severely upon the "misstatements of facts" in the proclamation of the President and also in the recent charge of Judge Campbell to the jury.

Col. Bruno Von Natzmer, who was at the head of the Commissary Department of the Walker-Nicaraguan army, and who has been here among the emigrants during the past month, was required to "declare his intentions" on Wednesday.

Col. Frank Anderson passed safely through the legal furnace, at New Orleans, and is now here—moustache and all—"filibustering" terribly among the fair Mobilians. Majors Ellis, Hooff, Doubleday, Colonels Swingle, Tucker and Henry are all here, watching and praying—

For every minute is expectancy of more arrivals.

J. Hesse & Co., agents of the bark Alice Tainter, advertise in the papers of yesterday that the trip of that vessel to Greytown is abandoned on account of the refusal of the government to grant a clearance, and further notify all persons holding tickets for the passage, to call and receive back the money paid for the same. The bark is now in an undoubtedly "legitimate trade," as she is very briskly taking in cotton for Hamburg.

Some of the emigrants have given up all hopes of getting off to Nicaragua, and have gone to their homes. Nearly two hundred, however, remain "strong in the faith," confident that some means may yet be discovered by which they may reach their destination.

Meanwhile, the indefatigable individual who like unto Matthew of old, patiently "sits at the receipt of customs," keeps a sharp lookout. Visions of bloodless "skull and bones" emblazoned on black bunting seem to be his only mental pabulum, like some romantic youngster in his dreams, after devouring the "Pirate's Own" and a large supper before retiring.

[From the Washington Union, Dec. 11.]

THE ESCAPE OF THE SUSAN.

It must be palpable to every one that the escape of the Nicaraguan "emigrants" or filibusters from Mobile, may precipitate at any moment a crisis in the foreign relations of this country. From manifestations that have been given out, it can hardly be doubted that the British and foreign forces in Central America are on the eager lookout for excursions of this sort in that direction, and that the "emigrants" may either be intercepted by capture before landing, or be pursued on land, combatted and arrested after disembarking. The news of such an event would at once rouse the volunteer feeling in this country to the highest degree of excitement, our whole southern and eastern coasts would be in a blaze, immense reinforcements would rush from our shores to rescue our countrymen and sustain our interests in Central America; collision would ensue between these bands and the European forces found in that region, and the most angry and threatening state of things probably result between our government and those of Great Britain, France and Spain.

Nor could our government itself look calmly upon an exercise of force by European powers for the regulation of affairs in the central portions of our continent. It has given abundant earnest of its own purpose to repress illicit excursions from its own shores against the peace of the Central American States, and even overstepped the limits of constitutional and international law in arresting, at one time, on the shore and within the limits of the local jurisdiction there, an illegal expedition of this sort; but it is hardly probable that it would look with complacency upon an interference on the part of any European power in the local affairs of Central America, for the purpose of protecting its feeble governments from assaults of out people, which we have given every proof that we will prevent by all legal and constitutional means at our command. There would arise not merely the ethical question whether the particular act of the foreign government were justified in morals, but the great political question whether European governments should be allowed to interfere for the regulation of affairs upon the American continent.

It is in this view that the otherwise trifling event of the sailing of a few "emigrants" from our shores on a professedly "peaceful" enterprise, really possesses a momentous importance. It is not to be denied that the efforts which have been going on for some time to recruit and embark such an expedition has given our government a great deal of annoyance; and it is for this reason that it has employed every means it was clothed with by the law to baffle and defeat the expedition. We do not suppose any one fears that, if unmolested by third parties, the "emigrants" would do any very great harm to anybody else than themselves in carrying out their project; but it was in view of the serious political crisis which they might bring on between our government and European Powers, if they should be intercepted by European war vessels on their way, or arrested by European forces on the territory of Nicaragua, that these efforts were made by our government.

It must be confessed that the endeavors of the government to avoid such a crisis as may now be brought on have not been as fully sustained by public sentiment in the Gulf States as it had good reason to expect that they would. If there is any region of the Union more directly and profoundly interested in the preservation of the peace of the world—especially of the peace between this country and England and France—it is the region composed of the cotton growing States. It is quite natural that Louisiana, largely interested in a sugar monopoly, should look with indifference upon war and the suspension of a commerce which brings vast quantities of foreign sugar into competition with her own; but it is almost inexplicable that the cotton States of the Gulf, so far from endeavoring to repress the filibuster movement, should have so openly and actively encouraged it.

It was the duty of the administration under the imperative requirements of the laws standing upon our statute books—which the cotton States have made no effort to repeal—to use all lawful means in its power to repress this movement; and, added to this imperative mandate of the law, there was every thing in the diplomatic aspects of the case to extort from the administration all the exertions it could put forth to defeat the whole scheme. Unmistakeably encouraged, however, in the cotton States, the very States which it may affect most suddenly, intensely and injuriously, a portion of the expedition has got off, not large enough, indeed, to effect any design it may have in Central America; but large enough to bring about the very political crisis which our government has been deprecating so continually and so anxiously.

It is to be hoped, however, that our own naval vessels may yet succeed in intercepting the fugitive Susan, bringing her back to our ports, and preserving this filibuster question still longer as a purely domestic one in our policy. Upon the vigilance of our officers in the waters of the Gulf, may depend in a great measure, the peace of the world. Let us hope that our little fleet, in those waters will be fortunate enough signally to illustrate on this occasion the importance of an efficient and patriotic navy to the preservation of peace between nations.

Rich gold diggings have been found between the Arkansas river and the South Platte, paying four dollars to the pan.

A Touch of Reality and a Bit of Romance.

H. B. S. Williams, of Hickory Springs, Fayette county, Tennessee, sent the following interesting communication to the Memphis Avalanche on the 12th inst:

"On one of those cold, rainy nights just passed, a couple of sprightly and hardy-looking little Yankee boys, bare-footed, badly clad, and without budget, about eleven and thirteen years of age, calling themselves John and Thomas Anderson, brothers, all the way from the North, came to my residence in search, as they said of a home and work, and readily finding both, they are now with me, the happiest little fellows you ever saw."

Their story is full of adventures as it is affecting. They hail from the town of Patterson, New Jersey, and say they are factory boys, and orphans, and their father died a long time ago, and their mother nearly two years since, leaving them working in a cotton factory, without friends or relations thereabouts—having no brothers and an only sister, Martha, who married one Fredrick Green, of whom they have heard nothing for a long time, and know not where they are; that about two months since, being badly treated, they struck out South, without a cent of money, and worked their way along, assisted by railroad conductors, and steamboat captains, until reaching Memphis, where they tarried but a little while, starting out on foot on the track of the Memphis & Ohio railroad, which they followed to the Wythe depot, and meeting there a small negro boy of mine, who, hearing their story, politely, and in the spirit of true Southern hospitality, invited them along with him to his master's house.

The accounts these little fellows give of themselves I believe to be true; and they are welcomed in the South—to my home, shall have my protection, and an open and aided future. It has been suggested that they are runaway Northern apprentices; and by this discovery of their whereabouts, a requisition, or something of the sort, will be attempted. To this I will take occasion to declare in advance, that in such an event, I will resist at all hazards and to the last extremity the fugitive-slave law, if sought to be enforced for the reclamation of the poor enslaved factory boys of the North, who fled South for freedom and friends. My little black slave Leo, who brought the fellows to my door, will doubtless find some under-ground railroad for their escape, should danger threaten."

DEATH OF AN ARMY OFFICER.—The War Department has received information of the death of Captain James N. Caldwell, of the first infantry, on the 6th instant, at St. Anthony, Minnesota.

RECRUITING FOR THE ARMY.—Recruiting for the army of the United States has been so brisk this fall that it has been decided to discontinue enlisting at Buffalo, New Haven and several other important stations in various States. The applications being more numerous than the service requires, the recruiting officers are enabled to select a better class of men than can be secured when there is an active demand for soldiers.

DEATH OF AN ARMY OFFICER.—Brevet Col. John L. Smith, major corps of engineers, U. S. A., died at his residence in the city of New York on the evening of the 13th inst.

THE GOVERNMENT LOAN.—Mr. Secretary Cobb has re-issued $1,100,000 of the Treasury notes received in payment of customs and other public dues. Messrs. Riggs & Co., of Washington, get $800,000, the remaining $300,000 is awarded to several brokers in New York. Messrs. Van Vleck, Read & Drexel, Hoffman & Co., Trevon & Colgate, all to carry 4 1-2 per cent. interest.

The notes are to run twelve months from date. The gold is now depositing at the Sub-Treasurer's office.

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,
AT
CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.
CHARLES HARRISON,
PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best the market affords, and neat and comfortable apartments. P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.
12-11

THE VALLEY TANNER

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1859.

NUMBER 13.

THE VALLEY TANNER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

THE ABSENT MOTHER.

BY MRS. NORTON.

It is the twilight hour,
The daylight toil is done,
And the last rays are departing
Of the cold and wintry sun.
It is the time when friendship
Holds converse so fair and free;
It is the time when children,
Dance around the mother's knee.

But my soul is faint and heavy,
With a yearning sad and deep;
By the fireside lone and dreary
I sit me down and weep.
Where are ye, merry voices,
Whose clear and birdlike tone
Some other ear now blesses Less anxious than mine own?

Where are ye, steps of lightness,
Which felt like blossom-showers?
Where are ye, sounds of laughter,
That cheered the pleasant hours?
Through the dim light slow declining,
Where my wistful glances fall,
I can see your picture hanging
Against the silent wall.

They gleam athwart the darkness
With their sweet and changeless eyes,
But mute are ye my children,
No voice to mine replies.
Where are ye? Are you playing
By the stranger's blazing hearth;
Forgetting in your gladness
Your old home's former mirth?

Are ye dancing? Are ye singing?
Are ye full of childish glee?
Or do your light hearts sadden
With the memory of me?
Round whom, oh, gentle darlings,
Do your young arms fondly twine?
Does she press you to her bosom,
Who hath taken you from mine?

Oh, boys, the twilight hour
Such a heavy time hath grown—
It recalls with such deep anguish
All I used to call my own—
That the harshest word that ever
Was spoken to me there Would be trivial—would be welcome
In this depth of my despair.

Yet, not despair shall sink me,
While life and love remain;
Through the weary struggle I'll fight me,
And my prayers be made in vain,
Though at times my spirit fail me,
And the bitter tears drop fall,
Though my lot be hard and lonely,
Yet, I hope—I hope through all!

Mormonism—Increase of the Army.

SPEECH of Hon. John Thompson, of New York, delivered in the House of Representatives, January 27, 1859.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. Chairman, in the course of the storm which the discussion of the Lecompton constitution has raised, and will raise, if ever presented here, into fiercer convulsions, and until which time I shall defer what I may have to say on that topic, will avail myself of a temporary lull to bring to the consideration of the committee a subject which has not yet been discussed, but to which our attention will probably be directed, even before the affairs of Kansas shall be brought up for action.

For the first time since the organization of this Government, we are called upon to authorize the increase of the Army, ostensibly for the purpose of being employed against the people of one of our Territories. Under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, article four, section three, new States may be admitted; and Congress has power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States. By virtue of this provision, Congress has, from time to time, out of territory acquired by the General Government from the original States, or by cession or purchase from foreign Powers, organized territorial governments, which, after due political tutelage, have applied for admission as States, and been received, to take the rank and privileges belonging to the original thirteen States of the Union. Year after year has the tide of emigration from Europe and the eastern States surged on, and on, tracking the path of the retreating savages, plowing up the pasture of the wild buffalo, felling the forests, harnessing the waterfall to the wheels of mechanical and manufacturing industry; gemming the landscape with towns, villages, and cities—the abodes of peace, prosperity and refinement. Thus has the forest belt that lay around the original thirteen States been broken; the wigwam has disappeared; and double the number of co-equal sovereignties now dwell in fraternal concord beneath the wide dome of the Republic! What was known as the Far West in the days of our boyhood, is now the Far East; and the representatives of millions of men stand beside us on this floor, whose tasteful dwellings have been reared where, within half a century, the war dance of the Indian was celebrated, or the panther of the wilderness made his lair. The valley of the Mississippi has become dotted with the homes of empires, fronting on that Father of Waters—to them as an inland sea and an outlet to the ocean. The trapper retreats to the headwaters of the Missouri, and gathers his spoil from the streams that thread the slopes of the Rocky Mountains. Up to their wooded bases surge the tides of advancing civilization; and beyond and over them breaks the wave, foaming on to the shores of the Pacific. Across vast plains—twelve hundred miles from the Missouri, sentinelled by mountain ramparts; the dry bed of a vast inland sea, with its salt waters sunken to an inconsiderable lake, whose margin sparkles with its twelve crystals, and four thousand two hundred feet above the sea level—lies the central Territory of the Republic—Utah! Ten years ago—a single decade—and not a dwelling dotted that valley; across it wound the rugged road of the trader, the bridge or war path of the Shoshone and his savage allies or foes. Standing on an eminence of the Wahsatch mountains, to the east, their glittering peaks lifting themselves eight thousand feet in the clear, silent air, and fringed far beneath by shaded masses of pine and fir and balsam, appear receding ranges of hills and streams, sparkling like silver threads, narrow gorges, looking like abysses in the distance; and westward the mountains become lower, and gradually melt away, until a valley, holding in its bosom this lake of salt, spreads out before it. All around on the slopes of the descending hills run even benches, formerly the water levels of the lake, and now used for cultivation or pasturage. At the foot of these rise the mud walls of a city, covering an area of six square miles, the abode of half the people of the Territory, which now holds more than sixty thousand souls! As by a common impulse, they have come together from all parts of the world—from Germany, Sweden, Denmark, Scotland, England, Australia, and the United States. They have become a nation in a day; they have a code, industry, manufacturing and mechanical skill; they have law, government, and a religion. They are a homogeneous people; act by common impulse upon definite and fixed principles; and after having applied as a Territory for an organic law in 1850, and been organized in pursuance of its provisions, received a Governor, judges, a marshal, and a district attorney, from Federal appointment; after sending their Delegate to sit in the councils of the nation, they have seen fit to repudiate the paternity and power of the General Government; to break up the Federal courts; to deny all political influence in their councils coming from or through the agency of Federal officers, and fall back upon a theocratic polity that impiously claims the immediate inspiration of the Most High as its source and authority, revealed through His servant and prophet, Brigham Young.

This leader, who rules this people with an unquestioned despotism, through a machinery I shall examine, after temporizing under Mr. Pierce as Governor and Indian agent, has at length grown desperate enough to declare openly his defiance of the General Government; and emboldened by distance and long success, gathered from the supineness of the executive power, that had employment nearest home for all its energies, comes out by proclamation declaring military law, usurps all the functions of territorial government in his person, and is training and marshaling his battalions for resistance and encounter. Three thousand brave men—our brothers and our sons—have, in obedience to the executive mandate, crossed the plains and rest in their tents near the mountain passes that girdle that Territory. The wintry snows have not dampened their ardor, or cooled their glowing courage; the howl of the savage, impelled to run off their horses and cattle by the stimulus of Mormon craft, has not made them irresolute or desponding; the driving tempest and the icy hail rattle upon their canvas covering, but the camp is merry with glee and the martial airs of Columbia echo through the passes and linger on every lip.

Why they were ordered off at a season which compelled this inevitable exposure, contrary to all prudent foresight, and against the advice of wise and experienced councils, let those who did it explain and justify to the people and the country, if they can. Whether the loud and deep murmurs that began to roll from all parts of the land towards the capitol, condemning the retention of five thousand troops in Kansas Territory, under the pretence of maintaining law and order, and compelling a free people to vote or refrain from voting under the roar of United States artillery, according to settled programme formed at Washington, had the effect of starting forward the enterprise too long delayed, it is impossible accurately to determine. Should the disasters which now threaten our brave men, and which were anticipated by the sagacious in consequence of their long and unnecessary detention and late march, eventually fall upon them; should not Providence defend, and the enemy tempted, be better than our fears, or our deserts, they who were instrumental in this dreadful exposure will be held to a strict and exacting account. Men in the plenitude of power, and backed by a dominant party hurrying them on, may for a time defy public opinion; but its edicts are unsparing upon imbecility or crime, and its vengeance sure. Let them remember that, Yes, sir, let them remember it!

Such is the aspect of things at this hour. The General Government has superseded Young as Territorial Governor. His successor (Cumming) has issued his proclamation, exhorting the people to lay down their arms and refrain from all disorderly and treasonable projects. The idle wind that sweeps those plains is not more idle and ineffective than these proclamations upon that people. Their imperial priests, despot, and dictator, from his dual throne, the potentate of the Saints and vicegerent of the Almighty, laughs them to scorn. Entrenched behind the material bulwarks of distance and the wall of rock which nature has provided, girded by sterile plains and verdureless hills, and guarded by a blind fanaticism that knows no law beyond his will, and will shed its last drop of blood at his behest, he has become foolhardy by impunity and the unquestioning devotion that encircles him. The wily craft of the conspirator and the low cunning of the knave have given place to the grasping ambition of the chieftain and the hopeful enthusiasm of the traitor and the prince.

In his plotting brain the time has arrived to cast off the allegiance he swore to this Government, which heaped needed to subdue or wheedle the savage, around whom he now believes he has thrown stronger toils. A sway of more than six years, as head of the State and of the Church—wielder at once of the sword of territorial sovereignty and the crozier of spiritual might—has compacted and cemented in his grasp a dominion he is impatient to extend, and will not surrender. Ten thousand swords will leap from their scabbards at his beck; thirty thousand hands of male and female alike, will toil incessantly to sustain his power, linked, as they believe it to be, with their best interests in time and their salvation forever.

What is this moral and political phenomenon that looms up so grandly, and has ripened so soon; defying the forces of the Republic, and attracting the attention of the civilized world? Mormonism as a religious system had its origin in a romance, written about the year 1810, by Solomon Spaulding, a native of Connecticut, who had been educated for the ministry, but followed a mercantile employment, removed to Cherry Valley, New York, where he amused his leisure hours by weaving into a book entitled by him the "MSS. Found," the notion entertained or suggested by some writers that the American Indians are the descendants of the lost ten tribes of Israel. Hence, he starts them from Palestine, invents for them various fortunes by flood and field, wars, quarrels, turmoils, strifes, separations, until they people this continent, and leave behind them the vestiges of mounds, tumuli, fortifications, sculpture, and cities dilapidated, which are discovered in Northern and Central America. It is written somewhat in scriptural style, and uses the machinery of the Jewish economy throughout. He reads his manuscript to various persons who yet remember it, but was not successful in procuring its publication. Somewhere in the year 1823, this manuscript fell into the hands of Jo Smith, a native of Windsor County, Vermont. Smith was about twenty years of age, and already exhibited that singular compound of genius and folly, of cunning and absurdity, of indolence and energy, of craft and earnestness, which distinguished him to the end of his career.

Under the new light preachers of that day Smith became imbued with all the wild and extravagant notions of seeing sights; hearing voices; receiving revelations; meeting and fighting the devil in bodily form; which indicate a diseased imagination, and want of all solid instruction and fixed principles on religious subjects. Enthusiasm ran mad through the whole region where he dwelt, and Smith was one of its most brilliant exemplifications; ultimately having a revelation that all existing systems of religion were wrong, and that he should be made the prophet of a new faith. For more than five years he vibrated between his caution and his enthusiasm; giving out, occasionally, dark hints about certain mysterious plates, to be dug up by him; containing a new revelation. Part of his time was spent in lying, swindling, and debauchery, and the remainder in visions and repentance; the vulgar habits of the brute contending with the higher functions of the prophet. At length he pretended to dig out the plates from the side of a hill in Palmyra, Wayne County, New York; placed himself behind a curtain, permitting no one to enter, from which sanctum he translated from the plates the Book of Mormon to an amanuensis, reading it all from Spaulding's manuscript in his possession, one hundred and eighteen pages of it having been stolen by Martin Harris. With this new Koran our modern Mohammed started upon his career.

On the 5th of May, 1829, John the Baptist came back to earth to baptize Smith; and on the 6th of April, 1830, the first Church of Latter-day Saints was organized at Manchester, New York, consisting of four Smiths and two converts out of the family—Pratt, Rigdon, Kimball, and Young, joining afterwards. This Bible, unlike that of the Christians of Musselmans, purports to be chiefly historical, and does not enunciate or enforce a system of moral and religious truth in a philosophic or didactic form; all its incidental lessons upon life or manners being derived from current doctrines of this day. It is consequently incapable of comparison with any other extant form of religious faith. One might as well compare the Christian religion with Fenelon's Telemachus, or one of James's novels.

And out of these monuments he constructed an edifice, if of grotesque, yet gorgeous proportions, and blazoned with the decorations of oriental splendor; but the materials of the Mormon book, though mostly derived from the same source, are so crazily jumbled together, so inartificially constructed, that if a whirlwind had scattered the leaves of the sacred record, and combined them again with the feats of Baron Munchausen by machinery, it could not have surpassed this production of insanity and folly.

Two things may be remarked upon this Koran of Mormonism. 1st. It does not sanction the central principle of the new faith as now practiced—Polygamy; this was the growth of after years. 2nd. It does not purport to be a full and complete revelation; indeed it discloses that twenty-one plates and stones are still buried and undiscovered in the hill "Comorah" in the State of New York. But neither the plates dug up, nor those still unknown prevented Smith from having direct visions and revelations from the Most High; and it is by this instrumentality, and not by any potency in the doctrines embodied among the contemptible literature of the Mormon Bible, that the system has grown into its present magnitude. A very similar organization existed a short time before at Sing Sing, in the State of New York, headed by Matthias Folger, and others, which soon ripened and died out with a disclosure of the vices and selfishness of its founders. There is nothing whatever in the distinctive doctrines or truths of Mormonism which would tend to give it perpetuity. These elements he in its polity, which was not at first a matured system, but grew up gradually, as circumstances gave it development.

First. An eldership of two and two was organized to preach the new system, consisting principally of violent harangues against all existing forms of religious faith.

Second. An apostleship of twelve, after the model of the early Christian Church, with plenary power over inferior orders.

Third. A commission of seventy, now very much enlarged, to go through the world and propagate the new faith.

Fourth. A location for the "New Zion," where, without disturbance from Gentile powers, it could carry out and display its inherent strength, and evince its glory on a scale proportioned to the greatness of its origin and the divine superintendence it commanded.

Fifth. A perpetual and infallible inspiration, through the High Priest designated by Heaven, according to whose revelations all the personal, social, domestic, economic, political, military, and religious concerns of the Church are to be regulated, in the minutest matter, without hesitation, question, or appeal.

There was an attempt, by Smith, to introduce communism while the saints were located at Jackson, in Missouri, in 1832; but the principle of meum and tuum, was yet too strong for the immature fanaticism of the early disciples, and the experiment has not been repeated.

This element of spiritual despotism pervades all the several orders, and runs through the entire line of this singular affiliation. It grasps and encompasses every interest, the vast and the minute, public as well as private. No circle is too sacred for its prying consorship and approach. Its thousand eyes gaze upon all the promptings of ambition, all the workings of its industry, all its complainings, discontents, hopes, affections. Through mysterious and hidden conduit pipes flow to the ear of this dictator the secrets of every domicile, the throbbings of every soul; and back like a thunderclap, comes a revelation that goes crashing on its remorseless way, through heart and home of the disciple, who takes up his staff and flies to fulfill its stern decrees. It is a despotism which combines all the traditional force of Mohammedan absolutism with the shifting policy of Jesuit craft—dominant at once over State and Church, intolerant, exclusive, and fatalistic. If "the priest of superstition rides an ass, and the priest of fanaticism a tiger," here is a double proof and representation of the fact.

Every convert is a zealot; every zealot a herol. To believe in these ravings and inspirations, reason and history, science and the world's progress, all the morals of Christianity and all the precious boons of civilization are first ignored and repudiated; a blind, bigoted, unreasoning, mindless faith supplants and swallows everything beside itself; and having laid down its majestic independence and its mandoo, and accepted the fetters of a slave, the wilder the rant the sooner it obtains credence. We have deemed, in our complacency, that no wide-spread delusion could roll its turbid waters over the surface of social life in these ends of the nineteenth century; but we wake up to this phenomenon growing under our eyes and at our hearthstones, that involves the reign and rage of certain principles of human nature we had hoped were long ago discarded; that comes raving for its victims in the circle of our religious and political institutions; and by the fascinations of its egotism and impotent imposture, its intemperance, its folly, its blasphemous atrocity, carries them forth to exhibit to our baffled hopes and sickened sensibilities a spectacle of incredulity and virulence, such as we had hoped his prying recorded only for warning, and not imitation!

It discards the fanaticism of the scourge, as penances and personal afflictions are not within its policy, except so far as direct and practical devotion to the interests of the "Saints" demand individual sacrifices. It passes by the fanaticism of the brand; its lust is not that of cruelty, and its jaws do not yet rack in blood. Its common hatred has not yet risen to an immortal abhorrence, nor its wrath availed to execration. Fear and policy, and no inherent virtue of the system, have restrained this manifestation of its ature; for if all external pressure was removed, and the gleam of American bayonets did not glitter before the Mormon eye, it would persecute instead of curse, and exterminate Gentile contumacy where it had failed to convert. But it grasps with a lusty arm the fanaticism of the banner!

Clad in the sacerdotal robes of the Priest, over which are drawn the vestments of the lay, this unscrupulous, and traitorous warrior-ecclesiastic rings out the blended war-cry of the Chieftain with the imperial edict of the Pope! From the sacred seclusion of the cloister, he emerges with mailed glove and plumed helmet. The will of the Almighty comes from his mouth, and His direct wrath foams on his hissing lip. "To your tents, O Israel! defiance is safety! to crouch is to die! strike at once for your homes, your altars, your wives, and your little ones!" This appeal finds an echo in every heart. He covers his designs under the pretext of a religious persecution. Gog and Magog are coming up against the Saints! Patriotism, national pride, calculations of policy, motives of ambition, resentment at foreign interference, the revenge of detected hypocrisy, all mingle in profound excitement, to give it the character of a religious war!

But let me not blend the elements of its polity with the web of its historical development. One or two points more of the former, and I will then turn to the latter—its practical workings being only the outgrowth of its inner spirit. It is unlike either that fanaticism of the Papacy, that swept Europe of its brave chivalry, in the crusades, and poured its best blood on the cradle of its faith, or that fanaticism of Mohammedanism, which leaped into the saddle, and flashing its comet in the sun bade the nations bow to the crescent; its battle cry being: "There is no God but God, and Mohammed is his prophet!" Each of these was invasive, aggressive, sive, and acted independently of the political structures existing among the people they inflamed, and with which they did not meddle; but this is defensive, secluded, intense, because driven in upon itself. It blends in one the polity of State and Church, in imitation of the Hebrew theocracy, and spends its missionary zeal in proclaiming through every clime that God has come down to men; that a Millennium on earth has opened; that within its peaceful walls care and sorrow and pain are no more; that a brotherhood of love and concord is established, where, surrounded by all that can gratify the taste and please the senses, the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. This earnest, enthusiastic proclamation and promise is one of the grand agencies of its success—the secret of its marvelous enlargement.

What wonder that the down-trodden, famishing masses from Wales, Scotland, Sweden, Germany, France, and all parts of the other world, without education, without moral instruction, are caught by the picture, and start in troops for this earthly Paradise? What marvel that eager crowds begreined with the soot of the dark mine, or pale from the faintness of the heated factory—what marvel that the victims of an ecclesiastical system, that is known only by its oppressions, and taxes and tithes, while it fails to bless or enlighten—what marvel that they crowd round the earnest man in the thronged marts of the continent, or on the corners of the rural hamlets of England, and drink in his words, blazng with his own enthusiasm, as he paints the earthly glories of the God-defended Eden of the West, which sparkles to the eye of faith in the distance, the embodiment of all excellence that the imagination ever painted? And then comes in the aid of "organized emigration," in vast communities, with the order and precision of an army, they set their faces resolutely for their new home; and along every avenue, from the Atlantic and Pacific alike, in winter and in summer, toil on with a dogged energy, that in itself is morally sublime. Sixty thousand souls at least own the sway of this occidental hierarchy. Men and women of low intelligence, burning zeal, simple habits; but guided and governed in all their affairs by this inspired priesthood—a priesthood constituted mainly of the Yankee element, as to nationality—an element, in this case, of canting, calculating hypocrisy, which first inquires whether it will pay; and secondly, whether it promises power; and, thirdly, whether it imposes any limitation upon license and lust; and having satisfactorily settled these profound questions of the pocket and the flesh, with the cool devilry of an ordinary speculation, places itself in the priesthood council and eldership; leers about from its high seat in the sanctuary for beautiful inmates of its harem, and stimulates its palpitating appetites by new victims, as often as exhausted passion loathes the worn and wasted forms that cease to amuse or please, where the heart is never touched, and woman is so degraded and defiled.

Sir, are the leaders—the master-minds of this fanaticism sincere? Smith was more hypocrite than enthusiast. His whole story of the origin of his bible was a lie; and, knowing that, he could not be sincere. Nor do I entertain a higher respect for Young, or Kimball, or Pratt, or the other leading spirits who sustain them. Power and polygamy hold them there, and not a man of American birth and education would remain any longer than he could help it, if permanently deprived of both of these luxuries.

I need not argue before a Christian people this question of polygamy. If all the Abrahams and Solomons of the Old Testament practiced it, it is no less devilish and damnable. As long as the Almighty preserves by births and deaths the average equality of the sexes, what right has one man to thirty wives any more than one woman to thirty husbands? thus defrauding twenty-nine in the social body of their rights. As long as the human heart demands and responds to a congenial and equal sympathy in the opposite sex; as long as man is capable of honor, or woman of love, so long will this licentious system which degrades her into a plaything of idle dalliance, or a breeding animal for children—every element of self-respect, every ray of sentiment, every upspringing impulse of her bleeding and bursting heart crushed out of her; her sense of equality, her queenly pride as wife and mother, her sacred place at the board and the arthstone, gone, lost, sunken, in the shameful contentment of herding in droves like swine, beneath the roof of a creature who regards her as at once mental, mistress and slave; so long will nature protest, with all the force of its outraged sensibilities, against this horrid desecration.

To argue such a question is to insult the mother that bore us, despite the home of our boyhood, and the virtues that refine and exalt the society in which we live. In a word, when we reflect that the primitive institution of marriage limited it to one man and one woman; that this institution was adhered to by Noah and his sons, amidst the degeneracy of the age in which they lived, and in spite of the examples of polygamy which the accursed race of Cain had introduced—when we consider how very few, comparatively speaking, the examples of this practice were among the faithful—how much it brought its own punishment with it, and how dubious and equivocal those passages are in which it appears to have the sanction of the Divine approbation; when, to these reflections we add another, respecting the limited views and temporary nature of the more ancient dispensations and institutions of religion—how often the imperfections, and even vices, of the patriarchs and people of God, in old times, are recorded, without the express notification of their criminality—how much is said to be commanded, which our reverence for the holiness of God and his law will only suffer us to suppose were for wise ends, permitted—how frequently the messengers of God adapted themselves to the genius of the people to whom they were sent, and the circumstances of the times in which they lived—above all, when we consider the purity, equity and benevolence of the Christian law; the explicit declarations of our Lord and his apostle, St. Paul, respecting the institution of marriage, its design and limitation—when we reflect, too, on the testimony of the most ancient Fathers, who could not possibly be ignorant of the general and common practice of the Apostolic Church—and, finally, when to these considerations we add those which are founded on justice to the female sex, and all the regulations of domestic economy and national policy—we must wholly condemn the revival of polygamy.

Sir, the common law, as well as the law of nature, deems it a great crime. The municipal law of every State in Christendom has made it a felony; and the wretch who, in the immunity of territorial distance and ecclesiastical protection, will practice it, is worthy of the felon's character, and should receive the felon's doom.

And then this sealing process—a mystery of abominations that no devil not first brutalized could have invented. As a consequence of its polygamous intercourse, divorces are granted freely at the parties' option, and woman goes through the process of legal transference from one master to another, as the authorities may determine, many marrying five or six times, and their husbands all living—the whole invention being hardly a veil for promiscuous intercourse.

The history of this fanaticism is soon told. The church was organized in 1830. In August 1831, they commenced a settlement at Independence, Jackson county, Missouri—revealed to Smith as the site of the "New Jerusalem." Smith wandered long between this place and Kirtland, Ohio, where in 1833 they commenced building their first temple, which was finished in 1836, at a cost of about fifty thousand dollars. In 1839, they relaid the foundation of their temple in Missouri. They left this region again for Nauvoo, in Illinois, where another temple was soon erected. Jo. Smith's life and labors ended together in Carthage jail, where, on the 27th of June, 1844, he was shot by a gang of border ruffians.

And here endeth the first lesson, in the decease of the first saint of Mormonism by martyrdom. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church;" and it proved true of this, not less than of other causes. From a plotter, trickster and buffoon, Smith ascended the ladder, and in the apotheosis became a saint and protecting divinity. Faith could now see in him qualities which sight would have contradicted.

And while the heaving mass was surging to and fro, and looking for direction, Brigham Young steps forward upon the scene. With consummate tact and a master hand he seized upon the reins of authority. This modern Elisha drew upon his shoulders the falling mantle of his master, and with a will that never wavers, and an eloquence of action and tongue that masters, subdues, and overwhelms, he sways the mass before him as with the stroke of an enchanter's wand.

Illinois spews them out; Missouri rejects them. Smith had aspired to the presidency, and the Saints wielded a banded political influence on which no party could count, and which could at any time turn the scale in a contest between them. "Disensions grew up, blood was shed in bitter broils; and as the land became too straight and their numbers increased, in 1845 they turned their eyes westward—to Vancouver's Island, to Texas, to California, and finally to a valley in the Rocky Mountains. In 1848, as the young grass was peering from the sod and the buds were bursting into flowers, in the month of May, the exodus commenced. Pioneers having gone before, across the Mississippi they pass, and away over the prairie and plain, men and women, flocks and herds—the heavy vain drawn by the lowing cattle—the patient tramp of feet, great and small—filling along the long line of fifteen hundred miles to a land naked as it came from the hands of its Maker; it was the heroism of faith! How sad that it had no worthier end!

From that day Young has reigned supreme and thousands and tens of thousands have flocked to his standard. The unsettled religious sentiment of the lower grades of mind gravitate there. It is the Botany Bay of the world! There it stands rampant and defying. Its hand on its sword-blade and its eye flashing fire; a territory and not a territory!—a Republic in embryo—a despotism consummate, wearing the show of popular approval and bending willingly to the nod of a tyrant. There it stands—it is before you in your path to the Pacific—it will not away at your bidding; a huge, ugly, stubborn fact, which no ignorance can disregard and no political fatuity despise.

What will you do with it? Will you turn despot and sabre sixty thousand souls because they believe in Brigham Young and polygamy? Will you meet the fanaticism of folly and fraud by the fanaticism of extermination? Will you make the city a desert and the region a howling wilderness on the one hand; or, will you suffer this moral cancer, inflaming political treason, to grow on untouched until it becomes too vast to handle? Will you permit an independent and defiant despotism, organized in the very heart of this continent, and embracing the vilest and most intractable elements of which a community can be composed, to compact and strengthen its defences, to train its battalions, to call home its forces, and light a fire at your threshold which all the forces of the Republic cannot subdue?

What will you do with Utah? Will you retrace your steps, and in defiance of the principle of the Kansas-Nebraska act, legislate polygamy out of the Territory, and so declare, and not leave them free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way? Will you repeal the territorial act which they have practically nullified; annex it to adjoining States or Territories, and let them deal with this sin to the family, and this treason to the State? What will you do? As an individual, I will say what I would do: There is no way of avoiding peril, but in the face of ten thousand Kansas-Nebraska acts, and all the false principles they embody, I would pass a law making polygamy a crime in the territories, and then send a force sufficient to scatter every harem to the four winds. If it be objected that an ex post facto law cannot reach past evils, this may be true; yet the offence has been committed in defiance of the common law and moral sentiment of the civilized world, and should receive no favor. In any event, such a law would stay the tide, and the sore would slough off in one generation.

Secondly, I would send an army there sufficient to apprehend Young and all his conspirators against the authority of the General Government—who will be found to include every lord of the seraglio—try them for treason, and hang every one, without distinction, who should be found guilty; excluding every Mormon from any participation in the legal processes of the court.

Thirdly, I would secure to the inhabitants a republican form of government, and see that they enjoyed their freedom without the heel of a despot, spiritual or temporal, on their necks; and I would wait patiently to see the results; and if all thus failed, I would turn that city into a camp—a vast military depot, to guard and protect the highway to the Pacific.

There is but one question more. When and how shall it be done?

When? I answer now, without delay.—This religious fanaticism has now assumed the form of a civil polity, and this civil polity is anti-republican and despotic; and this despotism has committed overt treason against the Government of the United States. The authority of every Federal officer is denied, or a reign of terror instituted over all their acts. War is proclaimed in fact.—Forces are levied and trained for action.—Slaughter is threatened. Our troops are defied, our courts closed, our officers insulted; the savages incited to plunder and ravage. Peaceful citizens, with their wives and little ones, pursuing the path of emigration are surprised and murdered in scores, with not a straggler left to tell the tale, their mangled corpses, or white skeletons, bleaching in the sun, disclosing the horrid tragedy. If anything is to be done not a moment should be lost. Every day strengthens its forces and compacts its power. Its agencies are hurrying home as fast as steam and money can speed them.

I know some think we should let them alone, and that the system must soon fall to pieces. But how long has Mohammedanism lasted? How much less reliable is the fanaticism of to-day than that of ten centuries ago? What element of this structure gives signs of impotence or decay? What limb of this hale giant is already smitten with moral paralysis, and gives tokens that its energies are spent, or even wearied? Sir, we have let them alone; and from a contemptible handful, they have grown into a nation! The citizens of Illinois and Missouri could eject them without aid; but now they stand behind a wall of ten thousand bayonets, and dare you to the encounter. The unorganized fanaticism of the world gravitates to Utah, and there it is molded into armies. Eight tenths at least of these elements are foreign, uneducated by and unaccustomed to our institutions, with no love for democracy, and no reverence for national law; restless masses, impatient of restraint, and fraternizing only on the lust of license and the hope of power.

If it might not be deemed too fanciful, I would suggest a historical parallel in that of the fanatical Jew who rebelled against the Roman power, and brought Titus Vespasian to raze his city and temple, and level with the dust every vestige of his power, and every monument of his ancestral glory—a rebellion in which the fanaticism of the religious and military sentiments were equally brought into combination. Sir, this is not a religious war; a persecution for conscience sake, any more than that. As well may the Thugs of India protest their religious principles in justification of assassination! Suppose the devotees in Utah adopt treason as an item of their religious creed; will such a baptism give them immunity for conscience sake? By no means.

But gentlemen fear the great cost of this war! They look round upon an empty Treasury and an accumulated debt; upon $6,000,000 unpaid for the Oregon war; upon unknown sums for the California campaign, to be ascertained and adjusted! They look upon commerce prostrate, manufacturing industry paralyzed, and the avenues of business closed by symptoms of derangement and distrust; our sources of national income diminished by decreasing imports, and by limited sales of the public lands. They see a system of wasteful expenditure organized in every governmental department; they discover that $100,000,000 per annum will be needed to keep us from bankruptcy; and they are appalled at the prospect of running the State into financial ruin, by an expensive intestine war!

I admit the truthfulness of the picture, in all its aggravations. But some matters are above money; there are crises in the life of a nation, when, whatever her financial burdens, she must incur heavier; when her integrity and honor, and prestige, her existence, are all at stake; when to calculate is folly, to hesitate is to perish. Did General Washington hesitate and temporize and count the cost, when a part of Pennsylvania rebelled on the whisky tax? No, sir; he sent fifteen thousand men into the field, and this promptitude, energy, manliness, itself quelled the storm, without shedding a drop of blood! The saints of Utah may be as wise as the whisky dealers of the land of Penn, if they find the Government are equally in earnest. If they choose to risk a battle, I trust it will be such a battle as has not been seen on this continent—overwhelming, decisive, complete; such as our brave Army will fight, even if fanaticism provokes to feats of superhuman valor.

Let those who must bear the responsibility of the war determine mainly how it shall be waged, and what shall be the amount and character of its appointments—whether the additional force shall be that of volunteers, to which opinion I incline, or an increase of the regular Army—whether it shall approach from the east or from the west—whether it shall employ horse or foot. But let them not have to say to the nation that a formidable rebellion has ripened, and is rioting unchecked among us, and we refuse the agencies to counteract or destroy it. I hope this may not become a party question—a shuttlecock for political partisanship to hurl to and fro. Let us deal with it as if we felt a common danger, and were only anxious to cope with and overthrow it. While I leave myself free to vote as I shall deem best upon all details, I stand committed, for one, to give my voice and vote to stay the march of this prairie fire; to fight it out at once, before it involves our homes and ourselves in the ruin of its spreading conflagration.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, JANUARY, 25, 1859.

DISTRICT COURT.

The United States District Court, which has been for some time past in Session in this City, was adjourned sine die on Tuesday last. All the business brought before it, concerning the United States having been disposed of. Judge Sinclair announced that he was ready to consider cases arising under the Territorial laws. The Marshal for the Territory, being under strict instructions to incur no expenses whatever, attending the sitting of the Court, except when engaged on business of the United States, the statutes of the Territory were looked to for adequate provisions for the Court, in the exercise of its jurisdiction under them. Astonishing, as the fact is, no law could be found providing, in any manner, for the United States Court, when engaged on Territorial business; nor had any Statute been enacted for the support and disposition of criminals charged with offences against the Territory. Governor Cumming had in his Message, called the especial attention of the Legislature to this anomalous condition of affairs.

The Judge finding his authority utterly paralyzed by this apparently studied omission in the Territorial Legislation, and by other circumstances which may be more fully exposed hereafter, ordered an adjournment of his Court sine die.

In this he will be sustained by the general judgment of the country. The fact of this forced adjournment of a United States Court, is a matter of serious import to the people of this Territory.

Nearly nine years have elapsed since the passage of their organic act, by which the United States retained its jurisdiction in the hands of Federal Judges, expecting that jurisdiction to be respected in good faith. Has that reasonable expectation been realized?

The truth is that Utah is under ecclesiastical government, and despises all attempts at the exercise of civil authority outside of their peculiar organization. The Church has its own laws, its own measure of punishment for crimes, and its own mode of execution. Obedience to counsel in all things is its fundamental requirement.

Our readers will remember in this connection the views of Jedediah Grant, upon the subject of juris, which we published some time since, from which we learned that in Utah, ecclesiastical counsel not only made its way into the jury box, and sought to corrupt the fountain of justice; but the act was boasted of in a public harangue in the tabernacle? Does this look like respect to civil authority? Is this "rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God, the things that are God's?"

United States Courts have never been popular in this Territory. Where Judges assume that independence, which belongs to their position—defy threats, and resist the seductions of studied flatteries,—they become distasteful to the leaders in Zion, who want to have everything their own way.

Failing to win them over to their own purposes,—the course of some has been to assail the motives and impugn the character of Federal officers, annoying them by concealed insult, and endeavoring to fatigue them into compliance with their measures,—surrounding them with an espionage of which Italy never saw the parallel.

In the Court of Judge Sinclair lately held, the Church had its counseled Stenographic reporters, endeavoring to catch every word that fell from any body's lips in the Court room.

What was the object of this? To make the meagre report which appeared in the Church Organ, not at all; but to report for the Church Historian; to make up a private record of the doings of the Court to be sworn to, and verified hereafter, if necessary against its open records.

Is this a friendly attitude towards the Courts of the United States? Is there no distrust and enmity displayed here? But we opine Judge Sinclair's record will withstand any misrepresentations, which have been made, or will be made of it.

Any repetition of the attempts heretofore made, by indulging in assaults on him.

His well known character abroad is far beyond the range of any battery that may be brought to bear upon his official action. We shall recur to this subject hereafter.

Mirabala Dietu.

The asthmatic Organ that every week wheezes out its doleful ditties to the church, has at last got the President's Message and actually published it in its last issue.

This sublime piece of enterprise is worthy of especial note, particularly when we take into consideration the fact that all the papers both from the States and California, came burdened with it at least ten days previous and we published it in the Valley Tan, and distributed it through the Territory more than a month ago. What a swift and energetic set they are to be sure. We intend to beat them all the time, the spavined, galled, wind-broken hacks that drag the Organ, can not compete with the blooded, mettled, and silver-heeled lightning of our winged-horse Pegasus.

The last Eastern mail came in on time. The trail is now so well broken that no difficulty need be apprehended hereafter, about its making its connections promptly.

If the present weather continues there will doubtless be several trains in during the month of February. There are a great many trains that have gone into winter corral upon the plains, that will now very soon make a move.

We give up a great portion of our space to-day to the speech of the Hon. John Thompson, of New York, delivered in Congress last winter upon the Mormon imbraglo. It is bold, chaste, eloquent and searching, and will be read with interest.

Assembly Soirees.

The next Assembly Soiree will take place on next Thursday evening at the Assembly Room. We were unable to be present at the last one, but are told that it was the most brilliant one of the series. Gallant men—pretty damsels—twinkling feet—soul-stirring music—and "eyes that looked love to eyes that spoke again," formed the elements of a re-union not often witnessed in the deep wilds of the Rocky Mountains.

Arra-peen—the Indian Chief it will be seen by reference to a communication from Dr. Forney, has been on a visit to the Camp, where a "talk" was held between Gen. Johnston, Superintendent Forney and the Chief. Everything we are told, was made satisfactory to him, and after strolling around the Camp and seeing the curiosities he was suddenly impressed with the idea that his little band of Utes couldn't whip the "sojers."

The Legislature has adjourned after a long labor, and have done but very little. Parturient montes nascitur ridiculus mus.

Personal.

We thought when we took refuge in the Rocky Mountains, that all recollections and imputations as to our "personal good looks" would cease. But we are still pursued and our features made the theme of new persecutions. Witness the following note:

G. S. L. CITY, Jan. 22.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.:

Having learned that a committee of ladies in St. Louis "once upon a time" presented you with a knife as a token or the appreciation they felt for your homely features, a portion of the ladies in Utah beg leave to endorse the action of the St. Louis ladies in the premises, and herewith present you with a regular Valley Tan Knife, believing that you are eminently entitled to it.

Yours, &c.,

MANY LADIES.

It is related of that great poet and wit, Saxe, that when he was very young, he was horribly ugly, but that on one occasion a horse kicked him flat in the face which made such a decided change in his mug by restoring the lineaments of his features in a more decent shape, that he has since passed for being a tolerably good looking man. Now, if our tormentors do not let us alone we will undertake a similar desperate remedy, and plunge into some Corral, filled with vicious mules, and tempt some of their heels in contact with our countenance.

While upon this question we entirely endorse the philosophy of some ugly fellow whosays:

"If you are ever threatened with a handsome man in the family, just take a clothes-pounder while he is yet in bed, and batter his head to a pumice. From some cause or another, handsome men are invariably asses; they cultivate their hair and complexion so much, that they have no time to think of their brains. By the time they reach thirty, their heads and hands are equally soft. Again we say, if you wish to find an intelligent man, just look for one with features so rough that they might use his face for a nutmeg-grater."

We publish the following correspondence. After asking Judge Sinclair a question and after his answering it, some gross epithets were applied to both the letter and himself by the Solons who control the destinies of Utah. We also understand that Secretary Hartnett received a liberal quantity of left handed compliments:

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY U. T.
COUNCIL CHAMBER, SOCIAL HALL.
January 20, 1859.

Hon. CHAS. E. SINCLAIR, Associate Justice of the United States, for the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah.
SIR: The Legislative Council respectfully request your Honor's report of "all omissions, discrepancies, or other evident imperfections of the law which have fallen under your observations," as required in chap. 1, sect. 4, "an act in relation to the Judiciary."

Very Respectfully,

Yours, &c.,

DANIEL H. WELLS.

Pres't. of Council.

LEO HAWKINS, Secretary.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.,
January 21st, 1859.

Hon. D. H. WELLS,
President of Council Legislative Assembly, Utah Territory:

SIR: I am in receipt of your communication of the 20th inst. The act referred to seeks to make it imperative on the Judges to make report to the Legislature of "all omissions, discrepancies or other evident imperfections of the law which have fallen under your (their) observation." With due respect to the honorable body over which you preside, I beg to say, that I do not recognize the binding authority of such an enactment. I came into this territory under a commission from the President of the United States to enforce the laws of the U. S. and the laws of the territory in subordination to them. It is the function of the Governor to give to your Assembly information of the State of the Territory, and to recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient. This includes the whole service, which the act of the Legislature seeks to impose on the Judiciary. The Judiciary is an independent division of the Government, whose duty it is to pass in judgment on laws enacted; but not to recommend or advise them. To illustrate the view which I take of this matter, permit me respectfully to say that if I obeyed your requirements, I should unhesitatingly state to you that in my best judgment there is an omission in your statutes to provide a punishment for polygamy—a crime, which is extensively practiced in this territory, and which is severely punished in every State and Territory in the Union—this alone excepted.

Might it not occur to the Legislative body that in such case I would be transcending my powers; and still could you say that the report would not be in compliance with the commands of your act? In a communication to His Excellency, Gov. Cumming, my associate, Judge Cradlebaugh and myself, informed him of the omission in the legislation of this Territory to provide for defraying the expenses of the Court of the United States whilst setting in the exercise of Territorial Jurisdiction; and the failure also to provide for the maintenance and disposition of criminals to be brought to trial at its bar; which omission practically ousted the Courts of the United States of the jurisdiction which the organic act contemplated would be accepted in good faith.

The Governor made a special recommendation to the Legislature on this subject.

I am very Respectfully,

Your Obedt. Serv't.

CHARLES E. SINCLAIR,
Associate Justice, Supreme Court, Utah Territory and Ex-Officio Judge, 3d Judicial District.

G. S. L. CITY, Jan. 24, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.

Dear Sir: I returned late last night from Camp Floyd, where I filled an engagement with Arra-peen, a principal chief of the Utah tribe. I invited him and his sub-chiefs, some time ago to visit Camp Floyd. My object for this was to remove from the minds of these Indians all prejudice against the Army and soldiers.

The interview between Gen. Johnston, Chief Arra-peen and myself at Camp Floyd, last Saturday was entirely satisfactory. The chief said many things had been told him calculated to prejudice him and his people against the soldiers, and that in future he would listen to no talk against the soldiers. The chief made no demands for the accidental killing of sub-chief Pin-tete, (his half brother,) last September, by a soldier at Spanish Fork. These Indians are kindly treated by the officers and soldiers at Camp Floyd, and I feel confident that their visit will be productive of much good. If I can find time, I will give you a full statement of the causes of the recent confusion among a portion of the Utah tribe. Three sub-chiefs accompanied Arra-peen to Camp Floyd.

I also visited, during my absence, a large band of Go-Sho-Utes, (encamped at Grantsville,) these are very destitute. I continue to provide for them.

Yours Respectfully,

J. FORNEY.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
January 16, 1859.

It is with pleasure that we announce a new epoch in the theatricals. The management have at last discovered its error in so long treating the audiences to farces only, and last night produced "The Lady of Lyons," on the occasion of Messrs. Tuckett and Lougee's benefit, with the following cast:

Claude Melnotte..... Mr. WHITE,
Mons. Deschappelles..... Mr. Rutledge,
Col. Dumas..... Mr. Willis,
Mons. Beaumont..... Mr. Thatcher,
Mons. Glavis..... Mr. Smith,
Mons. Gasper..... Mr. Warren,
Landlord..... Mr. Crawford,
Pauline..... Mrs. TUCKETT.
Madam Deschappelles..... Mrs. Lougee, Widow Melnotte..... Mrs. Westwood.
As we remarked in our last, it was "a bold flight," we are happy to say it was entirely successful, and met with the heartiest approbation of the audience. There are many affecting passages, and were so well recited as to bring down thunders of applause. It would be invidious to particularize the performers, they all having rendered their parts well, but we cannot refrain from mentioning the two principal characters, Mr. White and Mrs. Tuckett, these were especially applauded and were loudly called for at its conclusion.

In the scene in the Widow's cottage, Claude showed to great advantage, the parting with his mother was very fine. We may make the same remark with regard to Mrs. Tuckett, who evinced the mingled emotions of love and pride struggling for the mastery with, perhaps not the same artistic ability, but at the same time with that pure regard to nature which went home to every heart. When we come to consider the high character of the piece, and the manner in which it has generally been produced with such casts as Forrest, Macready, Anderson, Kean, Sullivan, &c., for Claude, Julia Dean, Ellen Tree, Helen Fawcett, and a host of others, for Pauline, it is no slight praise to say the piece was well performed. Even the little part of Gasper was made something of.

Mr. Willis, whose forte, as we before remarked, is low comedy, agreeably surprised us as Col. Dumas.

The performances concluded with the farce of "The Irish Tutor," which we are sorry to add was a failure. Dr. O'Toole, (Mr. Doyle) being the only character, well sustained. This was attributable to most of the characters being engaged in heavy parts in the first piece, and is on that account excusable.

On the whole they have fully succeeded in satisfying the audience of their ability to attempt a higher order of plays.

Before closing this notice we cannot but mention the universal regret felt by the community at the loss we have sustained by the withdrawal of Messrs. Tuckett and Lougee, these ladies were deservedly favorites, and we are sorry that the Association had not enough tact to know the difference between principle and interest.

THE REASON OF THEIR LEAVING.

The Solons of the green room considered it was better to have some low parody on "Root Hog or Die," sung and insult the feeling of these ladies, than retain their services.

LET THE PUBLIC JUDGE.

We must honor the ladies for the position they have taken, they are right and let them stand by it, they will be more thought of when they again appear and shew the "Pacha with fifteen tails" the meaning of the word "principle."

DRAMA.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.

GENERAL ORDERS, NO. 15.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, Dec. 10, 1858.

Promotions and appointments in the army of the United States made by the President since the publication of General Orders No. 8, of July 3, 1858.

PROMOTIONS.

Medical Department.—Assistant Surgeon James Simmons, to be surgeon, vice Harney, deceased—to date from August 29, 1856, and to take place on the Army Register next below Surgeon David C. DeLeon.

Corps of Engineers.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Richard K. Meads, jr., to be second lieutenant, July 29, 1858—the date of Captain Sanders' death.

First Regiment of Dragoons.—Second Lieutenant Wm. D. Pender, to be first lieutenant, May 17, 1858, vice Taylor, killed in action. (Company C.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Samuel W. Ferguson, of the Second Dragoons, to be second lieutenant, vice Pender, promoted—to date from June 14, 1858—(Company I.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Marcus A. Reno, to be second lieutenant, vice Gaston, killed in action—to date from June 14, 1858. (Company E.)

Second Regiment of Cavalry.—Second Lieutenant John B. Hood, to be first lieutenant, August 18, 1858, vice Radzinski, deceased. (Company K.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Manning M. Kimmel, of the First Cavalry, to be second lieutenant, August 18, 1858, vice Hood promoted. (Company G.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant George A. Cunningham, of the First Cavalry, to be second lieutenant, October 1, 1858, vice Van Camp, killed in action. (Company D.)

Regiment of Mounted Riflemen.—First Lieutenant Robert M. Morris, to be captain, June 14, 1858, vice Rhett, appointed paymaster. (Company G.)

Second Lieutenant Joseph G. Tilford, to be first lieutenant, June 14, 1858, vice Morris promoted. (Company E.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Ira W. Claffin, to be second lieutenant, June 14, 1858, vice Tilford promoted. (Company H.)

Third Regiment of Artillery.—Second Lieutenant Lyman M. Kellogg, to be first lieutenant, July 31, 1858, vice Mowry, resigned. (Company A.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Wm. Sinclair, of the second artillery, to be second lieutenant, July 31, 1858, vice Kellogg promoted. (Company K.)

Eighth Regiment of Infantry.—First Lieutenant Lafayette B. Wood, to be captain, July 19, 1858, vice Longstreet, appointed paymaster, deceased. (Company I.)

Second Lieutenant Thomas M. Jones, to be first lieutenant, July 19, 1858, vice Wood promoted. (Company A.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant James J. Van Horn, of the first infantry, to be second lieutenant, July 19, 1858, vice Jones promoted. (Company G.)

Ninth Regiment of Infantry.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Charles G. Harker, of the second infantry, to be second lieutenant, August 15, 1858, vice Allen, died of wounds received in action. (Company C.)

Tenth Regiment of Infantry.—First Lieutenant Cuvier Grover, to be captain, September 17, 1858, vice Pitcher, deceased. (Company F.)

Second Lieutenant James Deshler, to be first lieutenant, September 17, 1858, vice Grover promoted. (Company H.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Sardine P. Reed, of the 3d infantry, to be second lieutenant, September 17, 1858, vice Deshler promoted. (Company E.)

APPOINTMENTS.

Subsistence Department.—First Lieutenant William W. Burns, of the 5th infantry, to be commissary of subsistence with rank of captain, November 9, 1858, vice Bowen, deceased.

Medical Department.—J. Cooper McKee, of Pennsylvania, to be assistant surgeon, October 2, 1858, vice Simmons, promoted.

Pay Department.—Brevet Major Jas. Longstreet, captain in the 8th regiment of infantry, to be paymaster July 19, 1858, vice Dashiell, dismissed.

Daniel McClue, of Indiana, to be paymaster, October 28, 1858, vice Denny, deceased.

Ordnance Department.—Richard Fathery of Arkansas, to be military storekeeper, August 9, 1858, vice Andrews, deceased.

TRANSFERRED.

Brevet Second Lieutenant John S. Sanders, second artillery, to the Ordnance department, September 1, 1858.

Second Lieutenant Lafayette Peck, seventh infantry, to the eighth infantry, November 30, 1858.

Second Lieutenant Charles H. Ingraham, eighth infantry, to the seventh infantry, November 30, 1858.

CASUALTIES.

Resigned; (2)—First Lieutenant Sylvester Mowry, third artillery, July 31, 1858.

Second Lieutenant Edgar O'Connor, seventh infantry October 22nd, 1858.

Commissions Vacated by New Appointments; (2) By Paymaster James Longstreet, his commission as captain in the eighth infantry, July 19th, 1858.

By Paymaster Thomas G. Rhett, his commission as Captain in the regiment of mounted riflemen, June 14th, 1858.

Died; (15)—Brevet Lieut. Col. Francis Taylor, major first artillery at Fort Brown, Texas, Oct. 2, 1858.

Brevet Major John Sanders, captain corps of engineers, at Fort Delaware, Del., July 29, 1858.

Capt. Isaac Bowen, commissary of subsistence, at Pass Christian, Miss., Oct. 3, 1858.

Capt. Mathew S. Pitcher, tenth infantry, at New York, N. Y., Sept. 17th, 1858.

Capt. Lafayette B. Wood, eighth infantry, at Washington, D. C., Oct. 19th, 1858.

Brevet Capt. Oliver H. P. Taylor, first lieutenant first dragoons, killed in action, on Colville Trail, Washington Territory, eighty-five miles north of Snake river, May 17, 1858.

First Lieut. Charles Radzinski, second cavalry, at Memphis, Tenn., August, 1855.

Second Lieutenant Newton F. Alexander, corps of engineers, at Biloxi, Miss., Oct. 10, 1858.

Second Lieutenant Cornelius Van Camp, second cavalry, killed in action, near the Wichita Village, Texas, Oct. 1, 1858.

Second Lieutenant Jesse K. Allen, ninth infantry, of wounds received in action, on the Upper Yakama river, Washington Territory, August 15th, 1858.

Second Lieutenant William F. Gaston, first dragoons, killed in action on Colville Trail, Washington Territory, eighty-five miles north of Snake river, May 17, 1858.

Brevet Second Lieutenant John T. Magruder, first cavalry, at Marysville, Nebraska Territory, June 28, 1858.

Surgeon Benjamin F. Harney, medical department, at Baton Rouge, La., August 29, 1858.

Paymaster St. Clair Denny, at Pittsburgh, Pa., August 18, 1858.

Military Storekeeper William R. Andrews, Ordnance Department, at Little Rock Arsenal, Arkansas, August 2, 1858.

Dismissed; (1)—Paymaster Jeremiah Y. Dashiell, July 10, 1858.

Officers have been arranged in the foregoing order to the companies to which they succeeded in the natural course of promotion or appointment. Should a different assignment, however, have since been made by competent authority, it will take precedence of the former.

By order of the Secretary of War.
S. COOPER,
Adjutant General.

PLACERVILLE AND SALT LAKE TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The Stockholders of this company met at the Court House, Thursday evening last. A full report was made by the President, of the amount expended in constructing the first section to Genoa, Carson Valley, cost per mile, &c., &c.

We are informed that the report was highly satisfactory. Measures were taken to push the work on to its destination. The capital stock was increased to one hundred thousand dollars for that purpose. The Board of Directors was increased from five to twelve for the purpose of giving other localities a fair representation in the Board. Arrangements have been made by the agent of the company East, to form a connection at Salt Lake City with the line from St. Louis, on terms very advantageous to the Placerville and Salt Lake Co. Congress will undoubtedly assist by an appropriation to build the two lines.—Mountain Democrat.

A Young Hero.

A little boy in Holland was returning one night from a village to which he had been sent by his father on an errand when he noticed the water trickling through a narrow opening in the dike. He stopped and thought what the consequences would be if the hole was not closed. He knew, for he had often heard his father tell the sad disasters which happened from such small beginnings; how, in a few hours, the opening would become bigger and bigger, and let in the mighty mass of waters pressing on the dike, until the whole defence being washed away, the rolling, dashing, angry waters would sweep on to the next village, destroying life and property, and everything in its way. Should he run home and alarm the villagers, it would be dark before they could arrive, and the hole might even then be so large as to defy all attempts to close it. Prompted by these thoughts, he seated himself on the bank of the canal, stopped the opening with his hand, and patiently awaited the approach of some villager. But no one came. Hour after hour rolled by, yet sat there the heroic boy, in cold and darkness, shivering, wet, and tired, but stoutly pressing his hand against the dangerous breach. All night he stayed at his post. At last the morning broke. A clergyman walking up the canal heard a groan, and looked around to see where it came from. "Why are you there, my child?" he asked, seeing the boy, and surprised at his strange position. "I am keeping the water back, sir, and saving the village from being drowned," answered the child, with lips so benumbed with cold that he could scarcely speak. The astonished minister relieved the boy. The dike was closed, and the danger which threatened hundreds of lives was prevented.

In whatever you engage, pursue it with a steadiness of purpose, as though you were determined to succeed. A vacillating mind never accomplished anything worth naming. There is nothing like a fixed, steady aim! It dignifies your nature, and insures your success. Who have done the most for mankind? Who have secured the rarest honors? Who have raised themselves from poverty to riches? Those who were steady in their purpose. They move noiselessly along, and yet what wonders they accomplish! They rise—gradually, we grant—but surely. The heavens are not too high for them, neither are the stars beyond their reach. How worthy of imitation.

The most remarkable instance of indecision we ever heard of, was that of the man who sat up all night, because he could not decide which to take off first, his coat or his boots.

It is not more than twenty years ago since the tinder box was in universal use. It is abolished now. The invention of the friction match spread slowly, but who, at this day, would venture to say they could do without it. Its significance as matches appear to be, single factories, with extensive machinery, cut up large rafts of timber annually for them.

The latest case of absence of mind occurred to a friend of ours, he purchased a brace of ducks and a bottle of whisky; he hid the ducks in his straw pile and put the whisky in the hen-coop.

The question is whether we can weather this tight weather without getting weather-bound, but the weather-wise say we must weather it whether we can or not.

To a friend who had married a lady who was on the point of taking the veil, Jerrold said: "Ah, she evidently thought you better than nan!"

"It is a curious fact," says some etymologist, "that it is only the female musquito that torments us." A bachelor says it is not at all curious.

THE SHOEMAKER'S BOY.

At the Mistletoe Bough.

Der meat-chopper banged on der vittamied vally.
Der no gustomer oomed to der putcher's shed—
Der sausage machine was no longer in play.
And der putcher pays all had a holiday.
Der shoemaker's boy comed here to shildie
On der door of der seller, but ahtailed inside.
Mit der chopping machie, a he p. planned to make free,
Un he cried, "dere is nobody looking at me."
Oh! der shoemaker's boy,
Un, oh, der shoemaker's boy.

Der day goed avay, and der night comed on,
Un der shoemaker vound dat his boy was gone.
He called up his vrow, un der enich prang
To look for der boy, un vild him to dey can.
Dey seeked un asked for him at every door.
At der putcher's der paker's an grocery shlore,
At der lager p. der seller, der station house.
But der answer dey getted vas "nobody cum avay."
Oh! der shoemaker's boy,
Un, oh, der shoemaker's boy.

Dey seeked him all night, un dey seeked him next day,
Un der more ash a mont vash der dayvit to pay,
In der alley, der houses un every place round,
Der toms, in der rife un in der dog pound.
Dey seeked him in vain until veych vas last,
Un der sh. anker goes to his AWL at LAST,
Un ven he's pass by, all der beesies vound cry,
"Dere goes der shoemaker vat loomd his boy."
Oh! der shoemaker's boy,
Un, oh, der shoemaker's boy.

At length der meat-chopp'ng machien was in need,
Der putcher good, to it, un der hee-seed.
A pundle of ponch, un der shoes vas der,
Vat der long lost shoemaker's boy did veer.
His jaws vas still vaggig, un der hee-seed,
"Ven no one vas here, I got in to play—
It closed mit a st. pring—and der boy so green Vas made sausage meat by der chopping machien."
Oh! der shoemaker's boy,
Der LAST of der shoemaker's boy.

Southern vs. Central Route.

The interest and anxiety created here by the report that the Central Route had made better time with the President's message than the Southern Route, induced our friends Messrs. Smith and Lindsey to telegraph for correct information, to whom we are indebted for the following reply:

P. H. & S. L. TELEGRAPH CO.,
Placerville, 9 A. M.
Jan. 6, 1859.

SMITH & LINDSEY, GENOA:
Southern Route 19 days, 11 hours; Central Route, from St. Joseph, Mo., to Salt Lake City, 11 days; from Salt Lake to Placerville, Cal., 6 days and 14 hours.

F. CHORPENING.

The great contest between the Central and Southern overland mail lines has terminated in a signal and glorious victory in favor of the Central Route. What now will become of the prejudices and stupidity of the bline horde who have wasted so much ink and paper in spreading before the public the superiority of the G-r-e-a-t Southern Overland Mail Route? And where are those whose judgment was so good, and whose opinions were so well founded that they felt called upon to back them up by an advance of a few hundreds, or a few thousands?

We imagine that on being aroused from their stupidity, by the undeniable proof of the superior advantage of the Central over the Southern Route, they shrunk back with amazement at the silly leaps they had made while shrouded in the cloak of prejudice. The San Francisco Weekly Herald of the 31st of Dec. says:

"We believe the time made and the extraordinary feat accomplished will settle the question about the superiority of the different routes."

We can well imagine with what an air of triumph certainly the editor of the Herald penned the above. We hope, however, that "the time made, the extraordinary feat accomplished," by the passage over the Central Route with the President's Message, in 17 days and 14 hours, will put an everlasting quietus on the croakers for the Southern Line, and learn them to remain quiet with such as they have. We have not a word to say against the Southern Line, it has done that which merits for it the highest praise, and we must say that in making the trip in 19 days and 11 hours our expectations were more than realized. We congratulate the line on its success.

We acknowledge that the President's Message arrived in California first by the Southern Route. But the time which was occupied in crossing the continent over the two contested routes is the proper criterion by which to judge of the superiority of the one route over the other.

We regard the above dispatch as reliable, we do not know the real cause of the difference in time in favor of the Southern Route; we cannot think for a moment that the President could so far lose sight of the dignity of his position as to have delivered his Message to the Southern Route several days in advance of its delivered to the Central Route. Whatever may have been the difficulty it will soon be brought before the public.

Territorial (Carson Valley) Enterprise.

EARTHQUAKE AT SAN JOSE.

About one o'clock on Sunday morning, December 12th, there occurred a shock of an earthquake in this vicinity. The motion was from west to east and reverse; a single gentle forward and back movement, which did not even awaken from their slumbers more than half the inhabitants. In the country around about the effect was nearly the same. There was a heavy rain falling at the time. About an hour later, another and still lighter shock was felt by a number of our citizens. We did not perceive it.—San Jose Tribune.

The steamer Wm. M. Morrison, from New Orleans, brought up on Friday the remains of Capt. J. Bowen, U. S. A., and his wife. Capt. Bowen was stationed at New Orleans during the prevalence of the late epidemic, and when his duties authorized him to do so, he left the city and went to Pass Christian. There, after a time, both of them sickened and died of yellow fever, leaving two children. On hearing of their deaths, D. Bowen, Esq., of Buffalo, N. Y., at once repaired to the south, and caused the removal of the remains of his kindred to Buffalo. They were given in charge of the American Express Company, and are now on their way, by railroad, to their final resting place.—Missouri Republican.

A FAMILY OF BROTHERS IN JAIL.—The Gallipolis Dispatch says that Hugh, Thomas A. and Robert Clark, brothers, are all in the jail of that county, the first being charged with passing counterfeit money, and the others for setting the Court-house on fire on the 9th inst.

KILLED BY A PAIR OF SCISSORS.—A girl twelve years of age died in New York City last week, from the effects of a wound received on the 10th inst., by falling on a pair of scissors, which pierced the jugular vein.

DOINGS IN CHURCH.—Without any comments of our own, except to say that the matter speaks for itself, we copy the following from the Memphis Avalanche, of the 30th ult.

A Disagreement between Brethren.—We have the particulars of an awkward affair between two ministers of the gospel, which occurred in this city, on Sunday last. A visiting minister was invited to fill the pulpit in one of our leading churches, and met the appointment promptly. Not being a member of the denomination of Christians to whom the church edifice belonged, and indulging "close" ideas of communion and fellowship, the strange minister did not invite the stationed minister to accompany him into the pulpit. In the prelude to the sermon the visiting brother alluded to the circumstance, adding that he did not recognize the permanent minister as a member of the "household of faith," and that he did not deem it consistent with his profession to occupy a pulpit in common with one with whom he could not fellowship. The minister thus alluded to very promptly left the church, and was followed by the majority of the congregation. Before the close of the evening's service the gas was turned off, and the congregation was left in darkness. But the visiting brother was not to be daunted even by this last exploit; and reminded that portion of the congregation which remained that the suppression of the gas afforded a realization of the old biblical truth that there were "those who chose darkness, rather than light." The affair was an exceedingly awkward one, and perhaps did not afford very great edification to the members of the church militant who were present on the occasion.

An exchange relates the following story: "Governor King, of Maine, a large, pompous gentleman, was traveling a few years ago in a stage-coach with a little Frenchman, whom he didn't deign to notice. On arriving at the Hotel where they were to sleep, the Governor called out in a loud authoritative tone: "Waiter, bring me a boot-jack, a pair of slippers, a beef-steak, and a cup of coffee." The little Frenchman, vexed at his Excellency's superciliousness, and determined not to be outdone, cried in his shrillest tones: "Vataire, give me two boot-jacks, two pair slippers, two beef-steaks, and two cup cafe."

A Rich Poet.—A manufacturer and vender of patent medicines recently wrote to a friend out West for a good strong recommendation of his (the manufacturer's) "Balsam." In a few days he received the following, which we call pretty strong:

"DEAR SIR:—The land composing my farm had hitherto been so poor that a Scotchman could not get a living off it; and so stony that we had to slice our potatoes and plant them edgewise; but hearing of your 'balsam,' I put some on a ten-acre lot, surrounded by a rail-fence, and in the morning I found that the rocks had entirely disappeared; a neat stone wall encircled the field, and the rails were split into oven wood, and piled up systematically in my back yard. I put half an ounce in the middle of a blackberry swamp; in two days it was cleared off, planted with corn and pumpkins, and a row of peach-trees in full blossom through the middle. As an evidence of its tremendous strength, I would say that it drew a striking likeness of my eldest son out of a mill-pond, drew a blister all over his stomach, drew a load of potatoes four miles to market, and eventually drew a prize of ninety-seven dollars in a lottery."

At a social meeting of his fellow church members, among other things, each member was relating his causes for joy and sorrow; when Mr. — said: "In my family, of children I have much to cause joy, and also much to distress me. There is my son —, a good, reverent and dutiful boy; but there is my son Bill, he is an audacious scamp. He left his poor, grey-headed father many a day ago, and it has been a long time since I have heard from him; and when I last heard from him he was way up the Galena, a raft of saw-logs, playing seven-up, and boss-racin'; but, thank the Lord, he is making money by the trip. Ain't he, sister?" "Yes, he is, and no mistake."

A good anecdote of Professor Agassiz is told in a new volume in press at Boston. The Professor had declined to deliver a lecture before some lyceum, or public society, on account of the inroads which previous lectures given by him had made upon his studies and habits of thought. The gentlemen who had been deputed to invite him, continued to press the invitation, assuring him that the society were ready to pay him liberally for his services. "That is no inducement to me," replied Agassiz, "I can not afford to waste my time in making money."

Mrs. Partington said she was once son struck, but she has no fear of its occurring again, as she gave him what will do him for the rest of his life, for it.

What is the difference between an attempted homicide and hog-killing? One is an assault with intent to kill, and the other is a kill with intent to salt.

An Editor in Kansas says that the publication of his paper will be suspended for six weeks, in order that he may visit St. Louis with a load of bear-skin, hoop-poles, shingles, oak-bark, pickled catfish, &c., which he has taken for subscription. He is bound to raise the "soap" on them.

There is a rail-road down South which runs one train a day, drawn by a locomotive of about coffee-pot power. The conductor is so polite that if a lady shouts out: "Mr. Conductor, I should like a drink of water," he immediately jumps off, blocks the train with a stick, and attends to the lady's wants.

A young man stepped in to a bookstore and said he wanted to get a "Young Man's Companion." "Well, sir," said the bookseller, "here's my daughter."

A few days since, a Missouri sheriff, after making a legal return to a writ, added: "I think it right for me to mention that there is no such person as John Doe in the State."

A lawyer in one of the Western courts lately threw a cane at the head of another. The court required him to apologize for it. He did so, and added: "While I am about it, I may as well apologize beforehand for throwing another cane at him the first chance I can get."

Why is a dandy like a bunch of venison? He is a bit of a buck.

What kin is that child to its father who is not its father's own son? His daughter.

When is the letter a like one of the United States? When it is in Diana (Indiana).

Why is a nail, fast in the wall, like an old man? Because it is in firm.

What word is that to which if you add a syllable, it will make it shorter? Short.

How can five persons divide five eggs, so that each man shall receive one, and still one remain in the dish? One takes the dish with the egg.

The Woburn Budget thinks there has been considerable "wire pulling" lately between England and the United States.

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,
AT
CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.
CHARLES HARRISON,
PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best of the market affords, and next to comfortable apartments. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.

NOTICE.
THE Fifty Dollar DRAFTS made by Russell, Major & Ward on Smith, Russ & Co., Leavenworth City, will be redeemed hereafter in coin or Treasury drafts at our counter.
MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.
G. S. L. City, Jan. 6, 1859.

D. W. BAYLES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS.

WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches brought to them, and at their cost. They also keep the store of Livingston, Kinkaid & Co.; is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage.

G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS.

WINE, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea,	Coffee,	Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar,	Spice,	Smoking Tobacco,
Powder,	Shot,	Playing Cards,
Pepper,	Mace,	Cinnamon,
Nutmegs,	Caps,	&c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy,	Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do do	Bourbon do do
New York do do	Rectified do do
Gin,	Port Wine,

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard,	Mixed Pickles,
Durham do	Assorted do
Assorted Jams,	do Gherkins,
do Jellies,	Piccolilli,
do Syrups,	Pickled Onions,
do Cordials,	Tomato Catsup,
Brandy Peaches,	Walnut Catsup,
do Cherries,	Mushroom Catsup,
do Pears,	Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India	Celery Seed,
Preserves,	Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit,	Pepper Sauce,
Peach do do	Assorted Sauts,
Apple do do	do Nat. Preserves,
Plumb do do	Capers Capoties,
Raspberry do do	Natural Pres'd Pines,
Gooseberry do do	Roast Turkey,
Blackberry Brandy,	Roast Chicken,
Raspberry Brandy,	String Beans,
Fresh Lobster,	Green Peas,
Pickled do do	do Corn,
Fresh Clams,	Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat,	do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat,	Natural Preserved
Fresh Cauliflower,	Peaches,
Pickled do do	Nat'l Preserved Straw-
Worcestershire Sauce,	berries,
Stoughton Butters,	Natural Preserved
Fresh Salmon,	Danmons,
Fresh Tomatoes,	Mushrooms,
French Pickles,	Asparagus,
Hostetter Bitters,	Tarragon Vinegar,
Boker's do do	Fields Oysters,
Le Drard's do do	Cove do
Royal Windsor do	Pine Apple Cheese,
Maraschino,	Olive Oil,
Curacao,	Assorted Candies,
Absynth,	Raisins,
Scotch Ale,	Almonds,
London Porter,	English Walnuts,
Scheidam Sch apps,	Brazil Nuts,
Golden Grape Cognac,	Fig,
Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy,	Prunes,
Mountain Dew Whis-Peckins,	Crackers,
ky,	Cracknels,
Family Supplies,	E. D. Cheese,
Morning Call,
Indian Queen Maderia,

also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps, Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware, Ladies Shoes, Notions, Woolen Goggles, Hosery, Buck Gloves, do Mitts, do Scarfs, do Gauntlets, Stationery, &c., do Gamblets, All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.

G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858.

Why is a dandy like a bunch of venison? He is a bit of a buck.

What kin is that child to its father who is not its father's own son? His daughter.

When is the letter a like one of the United States? When it is in Diana (Indiana).

Why is a nail, fast in the wall, like an old man? Because it is in firm.

What word is that to which if you add a syllable, it will make it shorter? Short.

How can five persons divide five eggs, so that each man shall receive one, and still one remain in the dish? One takes the dish with the egg.

The Woburn Budget thinks there has been considerable "wire pulling" lately between England and the United States.

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,
AT
CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.
CHARLES HARRISON,
PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best of the market affords, and next to comfortable apartments. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.

NOTICE.
THE Fifty Dollar DRAFTS made by Russell, Major & Ward on Smith, Russ & Co., Leavenworth City, will be redeemed hereafter in coin or Treasury drafts at our counter.
MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.
G. S. L. City, Jan. 6, 1859.

D. W. BAYLES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS.

WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches brought to them, and at their cost. They also keep the store of Livingston, Kinkaid & Co.; is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage.

G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS.

WINE, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea,	Coffee,	Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar,	Spice,	Smoking Tobacco,
Powder,	Shot,	Playing Cards,
Pepper,	Mace,	Cinnamon,
Nutmegs,	Caps,	&c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy,	Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do do	Bourbon do do
New York do do	Rectified do do
Gin,	Port Wine,

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.

The undersigned would most respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same form rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are sold at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKAD, & CO.
In the course of ten days we shall be able to meet our friends with certainty concerning our train so expected.

L. K. & CO.

$10 REWARD.
STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Lewis Ranch) one straw-colored horse, branded JLT on the near shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return.

NADFORD CABOT, & CO.

FOR SALE.
LARGER BEER and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by MORGAN, RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

FOR SALE.
ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.

CHARLES MORGAN.
Hot Spring Brewery.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

S. M. BLAIR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's.

LAW OFFICE.
W. J. M'CORMICK. T. S. WILLIAMS.

MCCORMICK & WILLIAMS,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW.

Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Court, and Supreme Court. They give office attention to all professional engagements.

OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858.

Missouri Republican, and N. Y. Herald will please publish 3 months daily and send bill to this office.

HEADFORD, CABOT & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC.

At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt City, U. T.

NEW GOODS.
JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market.

GILBERT & GERRISH.

WAGONS.
A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by

GILBERT & GERRISH.

BILLIARDS.
THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon.

J. M. WALLACE, (up stairs) between Post Office, and Gilbert and Gerrish's Store, is open for visitors.

The tables are new and perfect, and no pains will be spared to make it a desirable place for gentlemen to exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation.

EMPIRE SALOON.
THE BAR is now furnished with

Large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., purchased with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESALE refreshment is respectfully called.

J. M. WALLACE.

WANTED:
A good Working Cattle. Apply to

GILBERT & GERRISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.
WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

X. N. ALB, PORTER, and our unrivaled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, we have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Supper, breakfast and lodging, $1.00

For animals, for a single feed of hay, p. r. head, 25

For animals, for a single feed of hay and grain, 1.00 and double the prices for feed and hay.

N. B. The highest cash price paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery.

MORGAN, RADFORD, CABOT & CO.
Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

COW STRAYED.
ON the 23d October last, a small young light red cow, white face, and a thick neck, about 18 months old, was given milk, and she was branded ATWOOD on the horn, and not certain. Please bring her to Curtis E. Bolton, Esq., G. S. L. City, opposite the School House, and well rewarded.

LOOK HERE.
A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI FORK

BOOK" has been forwarded from the office of the Secretary of State. It contains a full and complete history of the Missouri River, and is a valuable work for all who are interested in the history of the West.

WORK CATTLE.
100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by

GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,
Wholesale and retail dealers in

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS.

HARDWARE, WINE, LIQUORS, AND CIGARS, and all other goods generally, are now receiving.

most complete stock of goods in their line that has been brought to this Territory, which they offer at low prices, for Cash or Country Produce.

G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858.

THE

THE

THE

THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T. TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1859.

NUMBER 14.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

The Printer's Hour of Peace.

Know ye the printer's hour of peace?
Know ye an hour more fraught with joy
Than ever felt the maid of Greece
When kissed by Venus' am'rous boy?

'Tis not when round the mazy case
His nimble fingers kiss the types;
Nor is it when, with lengthened face
The sturdy devil's fall he grips.

'Tis not when news of dreadful woe
His columns all with minion fill;
'Tis not when brother printers quote
The elusion of his stump-worn quill.

'Tis not when in Miss Fancy's glass
Long advertisements meets his eye,
And seem to whisper as they pass,
"We'll grace your columns by and by."

No, reader, not the printer's hour,
His hour of sweet repose,
Is not when by some magic power
His list of patrons daily grows.

But, Oh, 'tis when the weather's clear,
Or clad in rain, or hail, or vapor,
He hears in accents soft and clear
The words of praise and cheer.

Further Testimony.

The arrival of the Overland Mail, by the El Paso route, has added to the testimony that a copy of the Message was refused to the agent of the Salt Lake route, while every facility was furnished to the El Paso route, including copies of the Message.

Under date of December 9th, the St. Louis correspondent of the Bulletin writes of the preparations for expressing the Message, as follows:

"The management of the Washington part of the business of sending it overland was intrusted to A. R. Corbin, a lobby agent in that city, whose services were called into requisition during the process of engineering the Overland Mail bill through Congress. He was looked to for the work of procuring the necessary copies, while Butterfield, who was spending a few weeks at his old home in New York, busied himself in hunting up Pardee, an old and experienced expressman, renowned for energy and hardihood, for the duty of conveying the Message and Reports overland in the shortest possible time—fifteen days, if it could be accomplished in so brief a period.

His instructions were to take the mail bags, if they did not impede his progress; if they were burdensome, he was to abandon them at any convenient station, and transfer himself and his pouch from the mail coach to the back of the best conditioned mule or horse to be found in the Company's stables.

Hockaday & Co., the Salt Lake mail contractors, are heavy sufferers by some piece of jugglery. These gentlemen long ago made application for a package of the Message and documents, to be forwarded by a similar express through Utah to San Francisco, desiring to make a test of speed to the Pacific with the Butterfield Express. Additional horses were purchased, sent out on the road and disposed along at the stations, so as to form perfect and regular relays. A promise was obtained from Washington that the documents would be forthcoming, and a messenger came down from St. Joseph to St. Louis to await their coming, as promised, to "care of Republican office;" but, strange to say, the President refused them a copy of his Message (so I learn from Washington) and Hockaday's agent, instead of getting a fair start with Pardee, is still in this city, with no prospect of obtaining the document until it appears in the columns of our city papers. The enterprise will necessarily be abandoned, although the mail contractors incurred an expense of $8,000, to consummate it in proper style. As Corbin is in the interest of the Southern route, he may explain why and how the Northern Mail line was deprived of its design of making a trial of speed with the other.

I should have extended my introductory paragraph to say that in regard to the President refusing a copy of his Message to Hockaday & Co., a prominent gentleman in Washington threatens to publish a card exposing the matter, and denouncing the Administration for attempting to foster the Southern to the detriment of the Northern route.

The Alta's St. Louis letter, of the same date, says: "The Message of the President has not been received in this city, and no news of it other than it was read in Congress on the meeting of that body. It was said that three copies had been transmitted from Washington—one for New Orleans, to be sent by the Tehuantepec route; another by the Southern Overland route, and one via Salt Lake. The latter was not received, however, by the agent here, and I am informed he is still waiting for it, with a special messenger to go out with it. A large number of extra horses had been placed on the route by Hockaday & Co., for relays. The copies for the Southern route were not received until a much later hour than was anticipated."

After examining the above, we think the reader will agree with us that the Message was withheld from the agent of the Central route, with the intention of giving the other line such an advantage as would insure to it the prestige of having first delivered the Message in California. It was a very small business, and the people of California will express their astonishment that the President should have permitted such a shameful act of partiality to be perpetrated in his name. But it will react in favor of the Central route.

On the 9th of December the agent of Hockaday & Co. was still in St. Louis waiting for his copy of the Message. This was six days after it was delivered to the agent of the Butterfield line, and three days after it started by express to San Francisco. The intention was to send it through in fifteen days, if possible, but over nineteen were consumed in the trip. Yet Hockaday & Co., nothing daunted by the adverse circumstances which had presented themselves, and notwithstanding all chance for being first in California had been destroyed by some unfair management in Washington, determined to send through the Message from St. Joseph, as originally contemplated; and, with the efficient aid of the contractor on this side of Salt Lake, it was accomplished in seventeen days in mid-winter. This feat has never before been performed. The Message was ten days from St. Joseph to Salt Lake, and seven days from that city to Placerville. It seems to us that this trip of seventeen days ought to go far towards convincing men in Washington, who are not wilfully blind, that the Central route can be traveled at all seasons of the year in less time than any other. The transmission of the Message across the continent in the time named was, all the circumstances taken into consideration, a triumph to the Central route. The result shows pretty conclusively that had the Message been delivered to the agents of the two routes on the same day, it would have been first delivered in California by the Salt Lake line.

It is stated that the Postmaster General has issued orders to have the schedule time on the Central route reduced from thirty-eight days—the present time, though reported at thirty-four—to thirty, some time next April. But this reduction would not prove beneficial; for the reason that the schedule time by the El Paso line is twenty-five days, and the steamers usually make their trips within that time. To place the Central route upon anything like equal terms, the time ought to be reduced to twenty-five days, and we believe it might be reduced with safety to twenty-one days. A weekly mail ought to run over each line instead of a semi-weekly one, at an extra expense of $200,000 to the Department. By leaving on alternate days, the two lines would form a semi-weekly. Such an arrangement, too, would test the advantages of the two routes fairly, as well as the capacity of the contractors.

How it was Sent.

The President's Message, sent by the Butterfield route, was taken from St. Louis by Mr. Pardee, an old express man. Mr. Corbin went to Washington, got the Message, and went to St. Louis. The Bulletin's correspondent says:

A small leather pouch, with a strap to fit over the carrier's shoulders, was improvised, and almost before the last stitch was fastened, Corbin was in the City for the fulfillment of his share of the enterprise. Half a dozen copies of the Message, and official papers to accompany it, composed his budget, and they were put on their way westward at the earliest moment, addressed to B. F. Washington, the head of the Custom House in your City. This I learned after closing my own communication, and after Pardee and the mail were whirling away at a fearful speed, over the Pacific railroad to Tipton. His instructions were to take the mail bags, if they did not impede his progress; but if they were burdensome, he was to abandon them at any convenient station, and transfer himself and his pouch from the mail coach to the back of the best conditioned mule or horse to be found in the company's stables.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE BY THE SALT LAKE ROUTE.—The President's Message arrived at Placerville on the morning of the 1st inst., in 21 days from St. Louis, which city it left on the 7th ult. It will be remembered that President Buchanan sent his message from Washington on the 3d ult., to be forwarded to California by the Southern Overland Mail route, and it started from St. Louis on the 6th, and came through in 19 days to this city. Our Washington correspondent writing on the 3d ult., stated that President Buchanan had refused to give his message to the Salt Lake Mail agents; and the truth of his statement is now proved. It is true that the message did not make the trip Overland by Salt Lake in so brief a period as it did by El Paso; but we do not know what might have been done on the Northern route if there had been a fair race. As for this favoritism shown by Buchanan, it can not be justified; and we are astonished that he could have committed an act so foolish.

A starving Irishman, wandering about London, came to a building bearing the inscription: "Lying in Hospital."

"By the powers!" he exclaimed, "that's the place for me, for I've been lying out for a fortnight."

FATE OF THE APOSTLES.—St. Matthew, the apostle and evangelist, is supposed to have suffered martyrdom, or to have been slain with a sword at a city in Ethiopia. St. Mark was dragged through the streets of Alexandria, in Egypt, until he expired. St. Luke was hanged upon an olive tree in Greece. St. John was put into a cauldron of boiling oil, and escaped death; he afterwards died a natural death at Ephesus. St. Peter was crucified at Rome, his head downwards, at his own request, thinking himself unworthy to die in the same posture and manner as his blessed Master. St. James the Great was beheaded at Jerusalem. St. James the Less was thrown from a pinnacle or tower of the Temple, and then beaten to death with a fuller's club. St. Philip was hanged up against a pillar of Hieropolis, a city of Phrygia. St. Bartholomew was flayed alive by command of a barbarous king. St. Andrew was bound to a cross, whence he preached until he expired. St. Thomas was run through the body with a lance at Coronodol, in the East Indies. St. Jude was shot to death with arrows. St. Simon Zelotes was crucified in Persia. St. Matthias was first stoned and then beheaded. St. Barnabas of the Gentiles was stoned to death by the Jews at Salonicai. St. Paul was beheaded at Rome by the tyrant Nero.

How Coffee came to be Used.

It is somewhat singular to trace the manner in which arose the use of the common beverage coffee, without which few persons in any half or wholly civilized country in the world would seem hardly able to exist. At the time Columbus discovered America, it had never been known or used. It only grew in Arabia and Upper Ethiopia. The discovery of its use as a beverage is ascribed to the superior of a monastery in Arabia, who, desirous of preventing the monks from sleeping at their nocturnal services, made them drink the infusion of coffee, upon the report of some shepherds, who observed that their flocks were more lively after browsing on the fruit of that plant. Its reputation spread through the adjacent countries, and in about two hundred years it reached Paris. A single plant brought there in 1714, became the parent stock of all the French coffee plantations in the West Indies. The extent of the consumption can now hardly be realized. The United States alone annually consume it at the cost of its landing of from fifteen to sixteen millions of dollars. You may know the Arabia or Mocha, the best coffee, by its small bean of a dark yellow color. The Java and East Indian, the next in quality, are larger and of a paler yellow. The West Indian Rio has a bluish or greenish, gray tint.

A DINKY'S HONESTY.—The Mobile Advertiser gets off the following:

In passing down one of our back streets a few days since, we overheard a colloquy between a couple of dinkies, and were just in time to hear the following:

"Now, look'er yer, Charlie, Jim mout be a honest nigger, and then agin he mout be, ef I was a chicken, and knowed dat he was bout de yard, I tell you yot, nigger, I'd roost high, I would."

We were satisfied on the point of Jim's honesty, and therefore pursued our onward course.

A gentleman was complaining to a pious prelate, that a certain clergyman in his parish was gone mad, for that he did nothing but preach and pray. "I wish, then," said the good bishop, "he would bite some of my clergy."

Mrs. Partington in a Theatre.

Our readers who have read or heard recited by Jacques, in "As you like it," Shakespeare's Seven Ages of Man, will, we are sure, be interested in the good old lady's version of the affair.

But, Mr. Jones and I went to the theatre, and that beat all. We saw them perform a moral drama; Mr. Jones said it was called "Just As You-Like It." One part of it, they called "Spoke-shave Seven Edges," and it was the best part of the whole drama, I think. A man they called Jake spoke it, and I'll tell you all about it, for it made such an expression upon me that I learned it all by heart.

"All the world's a stage,
And all men and women merely passengers;
They have their exits and their entrances,
And no one man keeps this stage and plays his part,
And all the oxen have seven edges. First the baby,
Mewling, &c., in its nurse's arms;
And then the whining schoolboy (with his scratch-aw)
And shiny morning face, running like a snail
Unwillingly to school, then the lover,
Sighing like a foundry with an awrt bandage
Made for his mistress' eyebrows; then the soldier
Full of giraffe paths, and bearded like a patriarch, Zealous in horror, scrubbing a stick in quirely,
Stirring the blubber reputation
Into the cannon mouth; then a justice of the peace
In fair round belly, with good apron lined;
His eyes so sore and beaded of normal cut,
Full of old hand-saws and modern melancholies;
And so he brays his part, the sixth edge slumbers
Into the snoring and slippery path of pantaloon;
With youthful hose, well shaved, a world to wide
For his crook shank; and his big homely voice,
Turning a grain toward burdish pebble, pipes
And mizzles in his loudness, and last of all
That ends this stained repentful history,
Is second childishness and mere pavilion—
Sands' teeth, Sands' eyes, Sands' tasting, Sands' Say asparrilla."

A lawyer and a doctor came into collision, and the doctor came off second best, in the capital story that a Tennessee friend communicates to a cotemporary.

Col. Stone, a practising lawyer, and Dr. Mason, a practising physician, were rival candidates for the Senate, and were stumping the district together. Dr. Mason was a warm advocate for law reform and, in arguing its necessity, he referred to a certain case in which his competitor had been non-suited upon some technicality. "Now," said Dr. Mason, "we need to have the law reformed, or Col. Stone is incompetent to bring a suit correctly—he can take either horn of the dilemma."

Col. Stone replied: "Fellow citizens, the doctor has the advantage of me. When I make a mistake in my profession, he has only to go to the records of the court and find it, and publish it to the world; but when he makes a mistake in his profession he buries it six feet under ground."

"The people appreciated the lawyer's ready wit, and forgave him the blunder charged upon him, for the sake of the clever retort he made at the doctor's expense."

A DANGEROUS QUESTION.—A simple ostler being one day at confession with his priest, was asked by the father if he had never greased the teeth of the guests horses to prevent them from eating their allowance of hay and oats.

"Never," replied the ostler.

In a subsequent confession, the ostler acknowledged the frequent commission of that fraud.

"How?" asked the priest, "I remember at your last confession you said you had never done so."

"No more had I, then," answered the ostler, "for till you told me, I never knew that greasing a horse's teeth would prevent his eating; but, since you first put it in my mind, I have ever been tempted to practice the trick."

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, FEBRUARY, 1, 1859.

There can be no matter of doubt now but that favoritism has been shown in the transmission of the President's Message, both in the States and across the continent. Governments have their pets, and at this particular time when the Presidential coronet has to be entered for in the race for 1860 the political thimble riggers like petty "jokers" at a country quarter course are seated in the fence corners and playing the game of "now you see it and now you don't." "Squatter Sovereignty" is now an obsolete horse to win a purse and mustangs and mules 'Concord wagons, 'Ambulances, 'par fleash, 'pushmore, and all the various contrivances of an overland trip are the material elements upon which politicians now want to ride into power. Magnanimity has assumed an extra face, and with tearful eyes its vision, by some optical delusion, has penetrated beyond the Mississippi Valley, a Valley so long neglected abounding in splendid cities—the Old Father of Waters himself being an "inland sea" bearing upon his turbid bosom the products and commerce of every parallel of latitude where human energy and skill is available and rests its delighted sight upon one and only one trail to the Pacific.

Post Master General Brown, for whom personally, we entertain a high respect, should seek a better foundation for his reputation than that of the battered saharas, for if sand is to become an element, then without desiring to throw dust in any one's eyes we enter another man. One who has been greased by the Government, soaped by the press, his ears pinned back and like a raw oyster swallowed whole, we allude to the immortal Butterfield.

We do not wish to be understood as blaming Col. Butterfield "his head is all right," with $600,000 per annum to carry a very few pounds of letters, (letters exclusively,) and if Government officials lend themselves to him either pecuniarily or for glorious boatings he is not responsible, when tons of mail matter of every description come over the central route at one-third the cost. Yet the "Southern Overland" mail route is the theme of panegyrics, anthems and hosannas have been sung and Butterfield has been canonized as the very saint of mail bags.

We again say we have no reason to complain of Mr. Butterfield or poke fun at him, it's no fault of his if the press straddles his shoulders and he be the Sinbad—not of the old man of the sea—but the mountain, plain, and desert—but then too much butter may be laid on even a larger field than the Southern Overland Mail route. In all seriousness to men at this distance and from circumstances that have transpired it looks very much as if there was a decided and determined effort upon the part of those high in authority to favor certain overland mail routes to the prejudice of others with equal claims and what we consider far better facilities. We are aware that the "still small voice" from the Valley of the Wasatch range will be overpowered and silenced by the fiercer cannonading of heavier guns, whose thunders penetrate the ears of Cabinets, but then we consider it a duty as an independent journalist to use our feeble influence, in favor of the Salt Lake route, which has in truth and fact been demonstrated to be the best and quickest one to the Pacific—beating all other routes on time with the express of the President's Message, when the southern one was afforded facilities which this route, if not denied, certainly never received.

We are glad to see however, that Captain Craig, of St. Joseph, with his usual energy and ability, has taken the matter in hand, and that the interest of North West Missouri, and the country bordering upon the Missouri river, from whose shores in the procreation of new Territories, and the developments of mineral wealth, continental trails should start, will have the benefit of his experience and well known industry as a legislator.

While Missouri reaps the benefits of all the trails which promise yet to pour into her the wealth of new empires upon the Pacific as well as those of China, and the Indians, her delegation in the councils of the nation should be watchful, and see that particular local interests were not swallowed up, and a national importance given to some which they do not deserve.

Now if Fremont, whose peak he named after himself, and which we have looked at as being "tall," whose springs upon which he bestowed the same euphonious title, and out of which we have drank, together with a great many other Fremontian localities named in honor of himself, and by himself, was considered worthy of Presidential aspirations; then why not Butterfield, even in spite of the ovations now given to Douglas, and the peculiar and single idea of our most worthy Postmaster General. If the "woolly horse," and picture books of Mountain life, which no body out here can recognise was "jarrieted" in the black republican "corral" and rode to death, why not a coach be harnessed up with a full compliment of all the dangers of an "Apache" and "Camanche" trail make a break for the White House. We know, or at least suspect where the secret lies, and Gov. Brown, for whom we entertain a high respect, should his eye meet this—which we are pretty sure it will—take the advice of one on the Pacific slope of the mountains, he would do well to call to his recollection, the homely adage, not to "grease a fat sow"—too much.

We have treated this subject probably more lightly than we should have done, and have used Mr. Butterfield's name in a connection which is doubtless ridiculous, although we doubt not, he makes a very good President of an overland road; but then, with our small experience in Washington, we believe that projects were on foot by men in the Cabinet, to manufacture a certain amount of political Capital by running couriers across the continent.

In sober earnest, if the plains and mountain platform is to furnish the next President, we can pick one, and that too, not more than fifty miles from here, who unites the courage and daring of a soldier, with all the elements of a Statesman, and one whom we believe, would bring to bear the popular voice and admiration of the whole country, unschooled in politics as a system of jugglery, but of science, and unsullied by the prejudices of the day, and he may yet secure it.

Mr. Alexander Wilson, the United States District Attorney, received by the last mail his commission, dated 15th December, and for the period of four years, having been first appointed on the 14th of July, during a recess of the Senate.

In this connection we will just add a word: The Federal officers for the Territory, are most shamefully treated in regard to compensation. While it is a notorious fact that it costs more to live here, than any other place upon the continent, the Government with an economy, that borders upon down right stinginess, exact of its officers, the peril and hardships of crossing the plains, and then in some instances allow them a pittance that is almost contemptible. For instance the U. S. District Attorney receives a salary of two hundred and fifty dollars per annum, which really would not buy the eggs used in an ordinary household, and he has to attend his districts which reach from this City to California.

Honor is no doubt a very desirable thing, but then our Government should recollect that men are born with stomachs, and that the position of a Federal office will not satisfy itself, that principle which we all inherit—appetite, and an honest disposition for bread and butter.

There is not a Federal officer in this Territory, whose salary will begin to pay his expenses and Glory even if it was accessible in this latitude, would be dearly won, when the Spectre quantlet of starvation has to be run.

We invite attention to the communication of "A friend to Utah" in another column. It is a notorious fact that accommodations both for strangers and citizens, are wanting in this city. A good, commodious hotel, properly regulated would, we have no doubt, pay handsomely; and the suggestions of our correspondent are worthy of note. No time should be lost as spring is fast approaching, and there will be an influx into this Territory greater than was ever known before; and what is more, it will continue to come.

THE WEATHER is always a legitimate subject to talk or write about; and it may be interesting to our friends in 'America' to learn that it rained here last night. By the bye, speaking of rain, an error exists in the States that we never have any rain in Salt Lake Valley. We have seen as good specimens of showers in this locality as we ever saw any where, whether it is to be attributed to the presence of the Gentiles, the prayers of the Church, or natural cause we will not undertake to say—certain it is it does rain.

Mr. Craig, of Missouri, has introduced into Congress, a joint resolution for increasing the service on the mail route from St. Joseph, Mo., to Placerville, Cal., which was referred to the Committee on Post offices and Post roads.

THEFT.—A gentleman informs us that his house was visited a few nights ago, by some scamps, who stole several daguerreotypes, and all the cooking utensils belonging to the stove. He would be much obliged to them if they would call and take away the stove, as it is of no use to him at present.

Sports in Utah.

We understand that a grizzly made his appearance in Tobe valley one day last week, and after some pretty hard fighting, finally had to go under. At the Camp the officers amuse themselves almost daily in chasing and wolves in which Cedar valley abounds and who are attracted to the vicinity by the butcher establishment in its suburbs. It's fine sport, and the kiotes are invariably captured by the swift and thorough bred dogs that form no inconsiderable element of animal life in the Camp. The people in the "States" may therefore learn that although we are "corralled" in the mountains we draw to ourselves all the fun that is going. It will be seen by communications in another column that the Drama prevails to a very considerable extent in the Camp, and that with more than the boldness of an itinerant Theatre they do not hesitate to affect the "legitimate." And even if the scenes are painted in mustard, chalk and boot-blackening, we have seen in the States, Theatres with all the facilities and big pretensions that did not excel it, boasting to their corps of artists, whose gilded prosceniums flashed alone in the blaze and array of gas foot lights. There too is the Rocky Mountain Circus, whose spacious amphitheatre is the scene of all those exercises peculiar to saw dust and the ring, Minstrel too, in black and white, who revive the recollections of the plantation and chant ballads that bring back the reminiscences of home, and then too, sermons at the Tabernacle—who says Utah ain't a great country. Let our friends at home be assured of the fact that we are progressing and that to, to use the classic language of some filibuster, like the "slow but intrepid steps of a mule towards a peck of oats."

Late advices from the States have revealed to us some peculiar wonders. This part of Uncle Sam's domain, (if the Government is supposed to be recognized in this portion of the world,) affords at times, some remarkable exhibitions, and especially in the matrimonial line; but then we were somewhat startled when the news came to us that two of our old friends Gus Simpson, of the Boonville Observer, and Isaac H. Sturgeon, of St. Louis, had actually committed the same "overt act," and both got married, one wife each. In the Rocky Mountains we are always prepared for sensations, but this was almost overpowering. We bid them an affectionate adieu, from the brotherhood, both have so long graced, and trust that in the new sphere which they have entered, they may never have reason to complain, or regret the step they have taken. What the next phenomena that occurs in the "States" will develop, cannot be even guessed at—we await the arrival of the next mail.

Gold.

We hope none of our readers will be startled, as did Iago when Othello screamed "blood, blood" in his ears, but what we mean to say is this, for several days past a good many in this vicinity have been exercised upon the existence of this material element which seems to form the distinctive and prevailing passion of human nature. A party with visions of immense fortunes floating in their mind, scales of gold as big as those indigenous to Jordan or even Mississippi fish, dust of a greater quantity than which would fill the eyes even of a larger cavalcade than started prospecting, and nuggets as large as "our hat" all went out.

Sorry we are to record that the expedition ended in foam, the lead was tapped and instead of that divinity that presides over all deposits of precious metals, favoring the enterprise, Old Gambrius, the jolly, patron of Lager, with thick rotundity of person, came like a "spirit from the vasty deep" and beer flowed freely from the "gulch," and at the last accounts the "shaft" was yielding an immense quantity of the raw material—viva la hops.

Such was the demand for the last Valley Tan, containing Thompson's Speech on Mormonism, that, by special request, we issued a thousand in pamphlet form.

Placarding seems to be a source of some amusement with some of the "brethren" who prowl around of nights and stick the dirty emanations of their brain upon the corners of the street. The last effort of this kind was a few nights since, when one of these posters was placed on Perry's corner. They may rest assured that it does not annoy any one, and we have possession of this last sample, which we show around and intend to preserve as an evidence of Mormon stupidity and blackguardism.

Should any of our subscribers fail to get their papers at the Camp, they can secure them from any of the Sattler's stores to whom we always send extra copies.

Borrowing Papers.

There is nothing evidencing a small mind to a greater degree than the borrowing of newspapers. To a certain degree this crime is excusable in this territory, for papers from the States are bearers of good news to all and consequently all desire to see and read them. But when persons beg or borrow the paper published in their midst it is a deliberate act of cheater. Cheating the printer out of his hard earned pittance. The publishing of a paper in any part of the world is no sinecure, much less so in Utah. Consequently every one who borrows the paper robs the publisher of his just due. We have been led to these remarks by hearing a certain "people" say they "dearly loved to read the Valley Tan, but policy forbids us to subscribe." Now, all those who cannot afford to subscribe will be furnished a copy weekly "free, gratis, for nothing, without costing them a cent," if they will send in their names, for our desire is to furnish light to those benighted individuals who are groping in the darkness which enshrouds "this people."

Dr. Forney, the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, left this city on Monday for Grantsville, where it is rumored that the Indians were making preparations to run off the Government stock herded in that vicinity. The Indians seem to be dissatisfied for some reason or other, and we understand that Col. Crossman has left Camp Floyd and will be there this (Tuesday) evening for the purpose of looking into matters and taking the proper steps to secure the Government property.

We are requested to state that no passengers hereafter will be taken upon the mail line between this and St. Joseph, and no route or station agent is allowed to receive any money for such purpose. This order may be considered not only as positive but authoritative until further notice.

The next Assembly Soiree will take place at the hall on next Thursday evening. The last was very numerous attended and it was only until daylight, such was the interest and the pleasure experienced that the throng reluctantly gave up and abandoned the festive scene.

The last Eastern Mail which arrived on Sunday, brings but very little news from the States. Judge Douglas is being lionized Congress, is progressing after the same old style. The two new and gorgeous chambers of the Capitol are as usual the reservoirs of a good proportion of gas, which that greased conduit pipe, the Globe, and all the lesser daily pipes are constantly conducting to the country.

Mr. Morris' Territorial popular sovereignty bill, to make all Territorial officers elective, does not seem to meet with much favor.

HO! FOR ARIZONA.—A company of some sixty persons will leave Camp Floyd the latter part of this week for Arizona. The company is under the command of Messrs. M. F. Quinn and A. S. Sealy, late of the Quartermaster's department. Messrs. Trotter and Wall, a couple of experienced California guides, pilot the party.

FAST TYPE SETTING.—A compositor in our office, on last Saturday, set one thousand ems in thirty-eight minutes and twenty-four seconds. The matter was plain brevity; we do not think this can be beaten much in the States.

DREAMING TO SOME PURPOSE.—One night last week Mr. Richard James had a singular dream, which has since been realized. After he had fallen asleep he saw in his dream a fifty dollar piece hid away in a certain place. The next morning he visited the spot and found a $50 piece of California mintage. The only difference from the piece observed in the dream was, the one found was round the other octagon.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
January 24, 1859.

Sir: Please allow me to correct a slight mistake which appeared in an article of one of your November papers.

The Camp Floyd Theatrical Orchestra is not altogether composed of the Seventh Infantry Band, there being a violinist (first) of Company C Third Artillery, named John Schoefer, an excellent and steady player, who richly deserves commendation, also one from the Tenth Infantry Band (Frederick W. Lewis) who plays the leading clarinette, and contributes largely to the efficiency of the orchestra, both by his performances, and his exertion, in writing some of the best pieces which are nightly played. It is due to the Band Master (J. Pound), Seventh Infantry that his exertions as musical director should be noticed also.

Very Respectfully,
A. S. SUTHERLAND

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,

January 23, 1859.

Editor Valley Tan:

Sir: Perceiving your columns open for the discussion of any subject that tends to the bettering the condition of the famed Utah Territory and the city of Salt Lake in particular, I have presumed to write you on a subject of great importance to that place.

Postmaster General Brown has exhibited an amount of interest unprecedented in the annals of post office history for the western mails and has placed Utah and the great west under lasting obligations, and to the enterprising contractors and agents we owe much for their regular arrivals and departures. We are led to expect yet increased facilities and a great amount of travel through this Valley east and west. Does it not occur to you that no house of accommodation as a genteel, well-ordered hotel exists to meet the wants of the emigrant, or the person wishing to locate either temporarily or permanently, this lack we, of Camp Floyd, have seriously complained of, and we have withheld from visiting your city, because of it, less we should be compelled to resort to our off repeated practice of sleeping on counters, &c., and crowding our friends out from their own comfortable beds simply because no hotel having the accommodations suited to gentlemen who do not like a mixed, and from appearances, a very uncertain crowd. At my last visit I saw more than ever the lack, and heard many friends wish there was a No. 1 hotel; having genteel, not gorgeous, bed rooms and stabling to match. Now, sir, is it not possible in view of mails, railroad, gold fever, &c., to get up such a house to meet the wants of the great public.

I think a joint stock hotel could be started there, and the project receive a heavy pecuniary sanction. The merchants here and of your city would find it a profitable investment, as the house could be built spacious enough on the ground floor to admit of several rooms for stores, and the stockholders would thus have a great income. Offices of different kinds could also be added, such as post and stage offices, &c., thus making the house the very centre of business. A ball room could be included, as also a reading room, supported partially by the donated papers of friends and the present Utah library incorporated with it, and placed under the charge of the present or some thorough librarian, thus making the library, which is now closed to the people, what Congress de-large, asking, however, the congress to defray current expenses and increase or grant a new library, as it seems a shame and a disgrace to "this people" that no reading room or Library Institute of any kind exists. Baths could be easily added to the hotel. I do not design to cast any reflection on the management of the Salt Lake and California houses, for I conceive, of course, an amount of capital is required which no one or two men can command, to properly furnish a house, hence the necessity of a joint stock operation. There can be no doubt to any well posted individual that this city will be crowded with travelers and many to stay and it should be now the object to prepare and to commence now, and make every preliminary movement as soon as possible. Delay not a day.

I understand it is the intention to start some such an enterprise at Brown City, but to the reflecting it must be evident that so long as the Mormons make Salt Lake City their headquarters, just so long it will be the metropolis and then until a gentile population could be mustered strong enough to effect a change, which does not occur to me would be in any shape desirable. Brown City may be the depot for arriving and departing baggage trains but never the great city in Utah. The opening of a land office here will cause many, very many, to come. Of this I am assured, every mail which brings letters of inquiry and the argument is urged that health, large crops, and an unoccupied, consequently an undeveloped country, are the inducements that will compel thousands to come. The great depots of the daily or semi-weekly mails must be at Salt Lake City, and probably some government depots also, and if the present is not improved immediately it may pass into the hands of some enterprising Yankee. I am not aware that a prejudice exists against any house because of its ownership whether they be Mormon or not, the great question is the house, its appointments, known and recognized cleanliness and spirit of accommodation. Can you, Mr. Anderson, help the cause by urging its claims on the attention of the capitalists, and thus do a good thing to Utah and the wants of the many hundreds who will come and ask for eating, drinking and sleeping, and afford the regular boarder a place to sleep if he wants. Having determined on being a permanent citizen of Utah, even should the army move, which I assure you is by no means probable,

this will be a ace, I feel an and hope to see Yo

Mr. Enron
o had the pl ump our best only thing that our camp, ex rills, in which st, "oyer the
There were no
the troops; as roop now in ere; and I thin on a hear, to ropas, for the o California, which of the very dull, and will we be pa
the men who and others as whose fault it polly, and it number of de the men disa
On Saturda society," Lady of Ly
Mr. White a sustains the may say that no any. "Bo well sustaine repeated wile Baldwin of t and consider pare himself lheral, he su
On next V
Mrs. Whitte cel anything

We menti the Dramat able service
gee. We a have seen t ranged to t
Camp.

On the Lady of L as well p
There was ed by the v Society. A part did it been the i with the s mance, the rather negl to Messrs Westwood their acqu vised that that due r acting alv dience.

On the s ced:
The Golde
Old Mob
Jeremy T
Harry H
Lord Fitz
Wm. Har
Elizabeth
Louis...

Mr. W created a that an o part and performa
Mr. R received w
Mr. W satellite o ner in w his able fact he
Mr. G with goo nerism.
Eliza that life we have show m Louis
herself, good del
Altho was not the sam
The s was rec plause

U. T., 1859, 3

pen for the nds to the med Utah

ke in par-

you on a place.

exhibited

ted in the no western the great to the en-

we owe and deparincreased ol through not occur

ation as a o meet the on wishing manently ardually hold from less we our off re-aters, &c., rom their because ons suited mixed, and in crowd

n ever, the

there was gorgeous

Now, sir, railroad, house to be started pecuniand of le invest-spacious it of sev-

ckholders

Offices of such as aking the

s. A ball

a reading donated

Utah libra-

under the rough lily, which is ngress deess to deor grant and a dis-ding room exists—

e hotel. I on on the California

an amount ne or two furnish a joint stock

bt to any ity will be to stay and pare and to refinatory

Delay not a startsoma

, but to the so long as their head

re metropoation could ct a change be in any

y be the deggage trains

The open-

use many,

am assured,

of inquiry alth, large equently an inducements come. The semi-weekly

, and prob-

, and if the itely it may prising Yan-

justice, exists

s ownership et, the great pointments, is and spirit

r. Anderson, aims on the a thus do a s of the ma-

ask for eat-

d afford the

if he wants ermanent cit-

army move,

ms probable

this will be the great military recruiting are, I feel an interest in my suggestions, and hope to see a house grow out of it.

Yours in haste,

A FRIEND TO UTAH.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,

January 23, 1859.

Ma. Editor:—On Monday evening last we had the pleasure of welcoming to our camp our best friend—the mail. It is the only thing that is looked for with any interest in our camp, except the morning and evening drills, in which all hands take such an interest, "over the left."

There were no orders as to the destination of the troops, and the probability is that the troops now in the Department will remain here; and I think it about as well. Capt. Simpson, I hear, to start soon with a detachment of troops, for the purpose of constructing a road to California or Arizona. I do not know which of the two places. Camp Floyd is very dull, and the great question is, "when will we be paid; there are a large number of the men who have six months pay due them, and others as much as ten. I do not know those fault it is, but I do know that it is bad policy, and it will only tend to increase the number of desertions, and make the most of the men dissatisfied with the service."

On Saturday evening the "Dramatic Association," gave us quite a treat, in the "Lady of Lyons," Mrs. Tuckett as Pauline,

Mr. White as Claude Melnotte. Mr. White sustains the character very well, indeed I may say that as Claude, he would do honor to any "Boards," all the characters were well sustained. On Wednesday night it was repeated with a somewhat different cast. Mr.

Baldwin of the 7th Infantry as Col. Dumais, and considering the time which he had to prepare himself in, and appearing without a rehearsal, he sustained the character very well.

On next Wednesday night is a benefit to Mrs. Whitlock and will, I have no doubt, excel anything we have had yet.

COMEDY.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,

January 28, 1859.

We mentioned in our last with regret that the Dramatic Association had lost the valuable services of Messrs. Tuckett and Lou-

gee. We are happy to say that the society have seen the "error of their ways" and arranged to their re-engagement; thereby holding out a prospect of entertainment to the Camp.

On the 19th we had a repetition of the Lady of Lyons, which on the whole was not as well performed as on the first night.—

There was but one change in the cast, caused by the withdrawal of Mr. Willis from the Society. But as the gentleman who took his part did it respectably this could not have been the reason. We rather think elated with the success attending the first performance, the characters were too confident and rather negligent. This remark does not refer to Messrs. White and Rutledge, or Mrs.

Westwood, who we think improve on further acquaintance. They had carefully revised their parts, and in the fifth act received that due reward for their labors which good acting always will from an appreciative audience.

On the 22d the Golden Farmer was produced:

The Golden Farmer..... Mr. Warren,

Old Mobb..... Mr. Rutledge,

Jeremy Twitcher..... Mr. White,

Harry Hammer..... Mr. Crawford,

Lord Fitzallen..... Mr. Baldwin,

Wm. Harvey..... Mr. Lea,

Elizabeth..... Mrs. Tuckett,

Louisa..... Miss Beard,

Mr. Warren performed his part well and created a slight sensation. We may observe that an occasional Lepus Lingvæ marred the part and detracted from this otherwise good performance.

Mr. Rutledge knew his part and was received with just acknowledgement.

Mr. White. This gentleman has great versatility of talent shown by the truthful manner in which he rendered this character, after his able delineation of Claude Melnotte. In fact he seems at home in any part.

Mr. Crawford performed Harry Hammer with good effect—he displays too much man-nerism.

Elizabeth (Mrs. Tuckett) did not throw that life into it which the occasion required;

we have seen this lady on smaller occasions show more feeling.

Louisa, (Miss. Beard,) will yet distinguish herself; she has plenty of confidence, and a good delivery, but requires tuition.

Although Mr. Lea was tolerably good, it was not equal to his first representation of the same part.

The afterpiece, a farce, Sketches in India, was received with the largest meed of applause we have yet seen bestowed on a piece of this class. It might have been better performed.

Sir Matthew Scraggs, (Mr. Baldwin,) as usual drawled out his part, although we have seen him to less advantage. Cannot this gentleman throw off Aminadab Sleek.

Mr. Myers was suddenly taken sick and Mr. Westwood, who was prompted in part of the first piece, with only an hour's time to study Count Gloroux, impersonated the lively Frenchman to great advantage.

Capt. Harrington, (Mr. Crawford,) was quite out of his line.

Sally Scraggs, (Mrs. Whitlock,) was excellent.

Poplin, (Miss Beard,) was pert and lively.

On Wednesday evening last, Mrs. and the Misses Whitlock received a benefit. We cannot approve of the selection of pieces for this occasion, viz: The Maid of Croissey,

Perfection, or the Maid of Munster, and Five Pounds Reward. It is not that these pieces were not well performed that we object to them, but simply that the audience is surfeited with farces, and they were not on that account likely to be so well received;

this accounts, we think, for the house not being so full as on the occasion of Messrs.

Tuckett and Lougee's benefit. Unless the Association endeavor to make the theatre more attractive by something higher than such trivial pieces, they will wear out the indulgence of the public.

With regard to the manner, in which these particular pieces were produced we have no fault to find, excepting, perhaps, that the prompter was a little too loud, and was sometimes heard when there was no occasion.

It is quite sufficient that he exercises his office only when required.

Comedy informs us that we have a star in the Camp; we are quite ready to admit that, also the brilliance of her twinkling; but at the same time we have noticed a constellation which, without detracting from the brightness of this particular star, shed her rays of light on us, and adds, instead of diminishing from the lustre of the lesser one.

Surely two stars can shine at once, we only wish there were three, though probably one may be too high in the firmament for Comedy to discern:

The world is wide,

The Camp beside,

There's room enough for all.

DRAMA.

Pacific Railroad.

Following is a synopsis of the Pacific

Railroad Bill now pending in the Senate of the United States. An amendment offered by Mr. Polk, of Missouri, "to strike out in section 1, lines 7 and 8, the following words, viz: From a point on the Missouri river between the mouths of the Big Sioux and Kansas rivers," and insert, "between a point in the boundary of Minnesota, on the 49th parallel of north latitude, and the southern boundary line of the United States," was lost by a vote of 17 to 29.

Sec. 1. The enacting clause for the construction of a railroad from Missouri river to San Francisco, authorizing the President to appoint five acting engineers, citizens of the United States, to constitute a board to locate the route, for the transportation of the mails, troops, seamen, munitions of war,

&c., &c., through the region between 34th and 43d parallels, from a point between the mouths of the Big Sioux and Kansas rivers to San Francisco.

Sec. 2. That the commissioners take an oath faithfully to perform their own duties;

they shall appoint a secretary or secretaries, also to be sworn. Said commissioners shall have full power to summon and cause witnesses to be sworn. They shall meet at the city of Washington to organize said commission; and they must terminate their duties within two years from the date of their appointment.

Sec. 3. The salary of each commissioner shall be five thousand dollars per annum, and their Secretaries two thousand five hundred dollars. The President is also authorized to prepare for and meet contingent expenses.

Sec. 4. The commissioners shall determine on the selection of a route within two years and report their decision to the President, who shall announce it by proclamation as the route for the Pacific railroad.

Sec. 5. When the location is announced by the President, the Secretaries of War and

Interior, Postmaster General and Attorney

General shall constitute a board of commissioners to direct the construction of said road.

They shall, from time to time, issue proposals for its construction by contract, in sections of twenty-five miles. They shall report annually to the President, who shall report to Congress.

Sec. 6. That for the purpose of constructing said road the President be authorized, beginning at any time within twelve months after the date of his proclamation locating said road, annually to borrow, on the credit of the United States, such sums as are needful, not exceeding ten millions in any one year.

Sec. 7. Bonds shall be issued in sums not less than a thousand dollars each for the amount so borrowed, the principal to be paid in thirty years from the date of issue, and shall bear interest not exceeding five per ct., payable semi-annually with coupons attached; and the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized from time to time, as the President may require, to issue such bonds; and, the said Secretary shall report to Congress, at the commencement of each session, the amount of money borrowed under the act, with an abstract of all proposals, distinguishing those accepted and those rejected.

Sec. 8. From and after the passage of this act until the location of said railroad be announced, all public lands between 34th and 43d parallels be withheld from sale, but shall be open to pre-emption by actual settlers, after the date of the said proclamation by the President; the proceeds of all sales of public lands for a distance of 150 miles of each side of said railroad, with the exception of reserves for the purposes of education, shall constitute a fund for the construction of the road, and for payment of the interest and redemption of the principal of the bonds issued for the said construction.

Affairs in Oregon.

The Portland Statesman of November

9 publishes the following "treaty" with the Nez Perces Indians:—

Art. 1. It is agreed that there shall be perpetual peace between the United States and the Nez Perces tribe.

Art. 2. In the event of war between the United States and any other people whatever, the Nez Perces agree to aid the United States with men to the extent of their ability.

Art. 3. In the event of war between the Nez Perces and any other tribe, the United States agree to aid the Nez Per-ces with troops.

Art. 4. When the Nez Perces take part with the United States in war they shall be furnished with such arms, ammunition, provisions, &c., as may be necessary.

Art. 5. When the United States

take part with the Nez Perces in war

they (United States) will not require the Nez Perces to furnish anything to the troops, unless paid for at a fair price.

Art. 6. Should any misunderstanding arise hereafter between the troops and the Nez Perces, it shall be settled by their respective chiefs in friendly council.

The following accompanies the document as a marginal note:—

Filed:—Treaty of peace entered into between two powerful tribes—the Nez

Perces and the United States troops—at camp in the Walla-Walla Valley, August 6, 1858.

An order was issued some time ago

by the military authority forbidding settlers locating in the Walla-Walla country. Recently the order has been enforced, and the settlers were fast leaving the country under it. But four or five Americans were made exceptions to the rule, and permitted to remain. Those were engaged in raising grain, &c., to supply the post. Gen. Harney has revoked this order, forbidding settlement in the vicinity of any of the military posts in Oregon and Washington. This practically opens the country to settlement, we presume, though the intercourse laws still apply there as they did in this valley long after it was covered with settlements.

By a private letter from Fort Walla-

Walla we learn that the barracks of B and M companies, Third Artillery, United States Army, had been consumed by fire. Eleven cases of ammunition were also destroyed, and it was thought that a part of the force at that place would have to be sent elsewhere in consequence of the loss.

Texas Items.

The San Antonio Ledger expresses the opinion that "in the present state of affairs the Democratic party might do worse, and cannot do better than support for the next Presidency, Gen. David E.

Twiggs, of Texas—the hero of a hundred battles; a man alike respected for his consistency as a Democrat, and for his ability, not only as a general, but as a statesman."

A letter to the Dallas Herald, dated

Belknap, Nov. 24, gives the latest news from Major Van Dorn's expedition.

It says:

Company G, 2d Cavalry, Capt. Bradford, passed here this morning, Fort

Chadbourne, bound to Camp Radwinskie, the name given to Maj. Van Dorn's camp. When this company reaches there, the Major will have seven companies under his command. An express reached here yesterday morning from his camp, having left there on Saturday last. Major Van Dorn had just returned from an extended scout of eighteen days, having proceeded about 200 miles in a northerly direction, but had not seen the sign of an Indian all the time. He satisfied himself that there were no Indians within striking distance. It is su-posed that Gen. Twiggs will order the expedition to return into Texas as soon as the present despatches from Major

Van Dorn reach San Antonio. Major

Van Dorn had entirely recovered from his wounds. The express reports twelve inches snow at the camp when he left.

MAILS FOR THE GOLD REGIONS.

The Washington correspondent of the N.

Y. Tribune has the following item:

There is a project maturing here for changing the route of the Salt Lake

mail to a line 160 miles further South,

so as to run through the centre of Kansas into the Utah settlements south of Salt Lake City. The result will be the abandonment of Fort Laramie and the diversion southward of the whole overland emigration to California. Such a road would pass near Pike's Peak Diggings. A trail suitable for wagons existed over nearly the whole route.—

The Post Master-General is favorably inclined to the proposed change.

As will be seen elsewhere, some very good time has been made over the Central Overland Route, advices having been received at Placerville in seventeen days from St. Joseph and seven days from Salt Lake, being the quickest time ever made across the continent between the two termini of a post route. The Message was brought from St. Louis to this city in twenty-three days. The advices from St. Louis, which will be found elsewhere, are to December 9th, three days later than those brought by the Southern Overland Mail. The dates from the Atlantic States are not so late as those received by the Tehuantepec route.

The State Treasurer paid out on Saturday the sum of $39,800 on interest

due January 1st, the first interest paid for two years.—Sacramento Daily Union

Jan. 3.

FROM SALT LAKE.—The mail contractor to Salt Lake, it must be admitted, has performed his part of the undertaking to express the President's Message energetically and rapidly. He sent it through from Salt Lake to Placerville in seven days in the middle of Winter, and through the snow. During the past week large quantities of snow must have fallen upon the Sierra Nevada, but it has obstructed the road so little that it is not even mentioned. The Message arrived at Genoa Friday afternoon, and was delivered in Placerville Saturday morning, having been carried over the mountains and through the snow in one night. We doubt whether the feat has ever been performed before in the same time, in the month of December. On the new road to Salt Lake, from Carson

Valley, there was no snow of consequence, and it is evident that it does not fall on that line in quantities sufficient to interfere with carrying the mail. So far the road over the Sierra Nevada has been kept open, and there is now little danger of its being seriously obstructed this Winter. Thompson will be able to keep it in good traveling condition without difficulty for the remainder of the Winter. The cause of the delay was on the other side of Salt Lake, and so far as our information goes, the real cause was so far east of St. Louis as to have been in Washington City.

STATISTICS OF SAN FRANCISCO.—

According to statistics published in the Alta recently, we learn that, on the first day of the year, over eight hundred small shops and dwellings, besides churches and other large edifices, have been erected in that city during the past twelve months. The total number of buildings of all descriptions erected in 1858 is, probably, about eleven hundred.

Six months since, there were many houses to let, but the case now is far different. The city has largely increased in population. Large sums have been expended in grading, sewerage and planking. The street improvements have been of a more substantial character than formerly, and, instead of wooden highways, cobble stone, Russ and asphaltum pavements, flagged and brick sidewalks, supported by substantial curbstones, have generally been adopted. Upon the whole, it is plain to see that the improved mode of administering municipal affairs has been highly instrumental in bringing about many of these results. In former years, the resources of the city were expended upon party hacks and favorites; now they are employed in improving it, and securing to the people the benefits of good government.—Sacra- mento Union.

New Mode of Saving Gold.—The

Calaveras Chronicle states that nearly all the quartz mills at Angels and Alta-ville have adopted a new mode of saving gold or rather have gone back to first principles. They have thrown away all the shaking tables, blankets, &c., and adopted the Chilean bowl or batea, which is made of cast iron, about four feet in diameter, with a concave of six inches at the center from the level of the sides.

A rim three inches in height extends around the basin, only leaving sufficient space to discharge the water and crushed rock. This bowl is hung on three iron rods attached to the rim, and coming to a center at the top. On the under side of the bowl is a pivot to which is attached a crank, giving the bowl a rolling motion of about three inches from the center, keeping everything perfectly loose, and tends to settle all heavy particles to the bottom and amalgamate the gold with the quicksilver. These bowls, when in rapid motion, have almost the same movement of the old fashioned wooden

Chilean bowl when worked by hand.

The invention is by a gentleman of the Chrystal mill.

THE CENTRAL ROUTE.—The Mount-

tain Democrat, of January 1st, gives the following, from its Washington correspondence:

Craig, of Missouri, and myself called on the Post Master General, some days ago, and he promised us that that route should be made equal to any other, but said that he must have time to work it along. Nothing shall be left undone to secure it every necessary facility.

A VICTIM TO HIS PROFESSION.—Mrs.

Snow, who belongs to that long suffering but most estimable class, editors' wives, gives vent to her troubles in the following strain:

"Mr. Snow knows the name of every paper published in the United States and England, but he can't for the life of him tell the names of his children. He knows just the age of every American journal, but he does not know the age of his own babies. He knows how every contributor looks, but I don't believe he can tell whether my eyes are black or blue.

"The world says Mr. Snow is getting rich. All I know is, he gives me money to clothe and feed our boys, and that, too, without a complaint of poverty. I hope the world is right in opinion, and when I am fully satisfied that it is, I shall advise him to resign his editorial honors, and spend a few months in becoming acquainted with his wife and children.—

The little ones will feel much flattered in making the acquaintance of such a literary gentleman!"

Major Brereton had obtained great celebrity by his constant devotion to gambling. Sheridan, who had often seen him, meeting him after a long absence, said to him:

"How are you, Major? How have you been going on of late?"

"I have had a great misfortune," replied the Major, "since we met. I have lost Mrs. Brereton."

Sailors are often shipped without knowing where they are going, or anything about it. A black cook having been shipped in this way, he ventured to ask in what part of the world they proposed taking him.

"O, hold yer tongue," said the shipping agent, "yer too inquisitive, altogether; you'll be trying to find out what der cap'n's name is next."

L. & A. CARR,

WHOLESALE

BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS,

AND

BLANK BOOK MANUFAC-

TURERS,

No. 49 Main Street,

ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetic, grammar, geography, philosophy, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOW

EST PRICES.

Their stock of

FOREIGN AND

DOMESTIC

STATIONERY,

BLANK BOOKS,

PRINTING

AND WRITING

PAPER,

The Home of my Boyhood.

Of the home of my boyhood, my own country home,
The better I love it wherever I roam.
The love of proud cities, the wealth of the main,
Have never a charm like my own native plain.
There waved the old elm, the cottage lined street,
There warbled the birds in their woodland retreat.
The roar of the river, the forest crowned hills,
The star-light that gladdened, they dwell with me still.

I have wandered for years in this cold-hearted world,
I have braved every sea where a sail was unfurled,
I have met with the great and the noble of earth,
But never forgetting the home of my birth.
The laugh of my sister and brothers I glow,
It echoes around me wherever I go,
The stars in the heavens when grief clouds her eyes,
Are stars in the heavens when grief clouds her eyes.

Love in a Whaling Ship.

It has become very common but fashionable for the ladies to spend a few weeks at the springs or the sea-side in the summer season, for the professed object of improving their health, and their dear papas have to lay aside a few hundred dollars for that purpose every year, while at the same time their mammas have quite another object in view in their going. But we will not expose them.

In August last, a young lady of this city, of the writer's acquaintance, visited New London with, no doubt, the desirable object of regaling herself and enjoying the sea-breeze. The time of her proposed absence passed rapidly, and was no doubt agreeably spent, yet no tidings were received from her by her friends, until she appeared in person, gallantly by Captain of the ship, engaged in the whaling service. The captain is a fine looking man affable and a desirable companion to all appearances. I will not give the parties names, for I do not wish to be considered personal. The writer had a curiosity to learn how things had progressed with our fair one, and how she became acquainted with the gallant captain, and with much impudence I arrived at the following facts, picking up a little here and a little there, until I got the whole story, as I suppose:

At one time the young lady said: "One evening I received an invitation to attend the party of Mrs. W. She was a very agreeable and pleasant woman, and gave a good party, and I had a pleasant time that evening. I had not been there but a few minutes when Captain was introduced. He appeared to be a gentleman in every particular, and proved himself to be an excellent and attentive friend. He invited us all to visit his ship. The next day, in company with his sister, I went on board. It was a new ship, and everything looked clean and tidy. It appeared like a floating palace to ply between Europe and this country, in the merchants' service, as thought. I heard the captain say, at the party, that he would be happy to give any of his friends a passage in this ship. Well, I thought that I should like to take a trip in her and visit the Continent, for you know it might improve my health. I must have made some such remark, during my playful conversation, for the captain kept me laughing so much that I hardly knew what I did say. The next evening, again, I found myself and the captain and his sister at the tea-table of Mrs. W. The next day the captain had to go to New York on business, and his sister invited me to go with them, and we all three stopped at the St. Nicholas, and we had a delightful time. Oh such amusements!

"Well I do not care, the captain is a good man."
"In a few days we returned to New London, and one afternoon I again visited the ship, and being weary I sat myself down in the cabin with the captain. The rest of our company being on deck, the captain asked me if I would not like to take a trip in his ship. I replied that I should, if we could have a pleasant and agreeable company. The captain asked me if I did not think he was such a blunderer and it reflected on the captain's face. Not a word was said for five minutes, and until he requested an answer. I told him I would give him an answer at Hartford in a few days.
"I thought it all over, and came to the conclusion that a trip to England and the Continent would greatly improve my health, and I told the captain so in such a way that he understood it. I made preparations for a tour, and one day I asked the captain how long it would take him to make a voyage. He said, if he had good luck, about two years and a half, for whales are not easy to be found."

What are you engaged in the whaling business?

Yes, replied the captain.
Oh, horrid! said I, I'll never go in a greasy ship.
She refused to see the captain any more, but in about ten days afterward, she received a beautiful box containing the captain's card and the card of his lady and some wedding-cake. He married a very pretty German girl, who had not such a horror for grease.

A Laughable Story.

The following story, whether true or false we cannot say, is the talk of a village in the parish of Halifax, and bordering on Bradford. It appears that a certain woman felt her spouse an incubus, and the rigors of the law, resolved on his disposal after a method now, alas, too common. She applied to the druggist in the village for six penny worth of arsenic. He very properly refused to sell her the article, and informed her husband of the application, at the same time inquiring of him for what purpose his wife could require such a quantity of such an article. The husband replied, jocularly, that he could not tell, unless it was for the purpose of poisoning him; and told the druggist that, if she applied again, he must sell some harmless article in lieu of the arsenic, and they would see what her objects were. She did apply again, and the wary apothecary delivered her some carbonate of soda, magnesia, or other comparatively innocuous drug, warning the husband of what had occurred. When he went home he found a meat-pie prepared for dinner. He pretended at first want of appetite, and invited her to help herself. She refused and at last he ate a quantity of the pie. In a little time he professed himself unwell, then feigned thirst, then alarming sickness, and finally death. The treacherous woman manifested great concern during these proceedings, but the instant death appeared to her to have occurred, she passed a rope through the chamber floor, and knitted it to her husband's neck, in order that when neighbors were called in, he might appear to have hanged himself. She then ran up stairs to draw up and fix the rope. The instant she had disappeared, the dead man revived, released himself from the rope, and passed it round the leg of the table, and the woman hung that useful and domestic article, instead of the other one—the husband. The latter also ran up stairs, inquiring of the faithful woman, "what she was after drawing the table up that way?" The affair has ended for the present, in his, as the phrase is, taking the law in his own hands. He has given her, as Yorkshire folks say, a right down good hiding. — Leeds (Eng.) Mercury.

A Good One—Hog in! Hog out!

A good one is told of a worthy deacon in the city of S. in Northern Ohio. The deacon was the owner and overseer of a large pork packing establishment. His duty it was to stand at the head of the scalding trough, watch in hand, to "time" the length of the scald, and cry "Hog in!" when the just slaughtered hog was to be thrown in the troughs, and "Hog out!" when the watch told three minutes. One week when the press of business compelled the packers to labor unusually hard, Saturday night found the deacon completely exhausted. Indeed he was almost sick the next morning, when church time came, but he was a leading member, and it was his duty to attend the usual service if he could. He went. The occasion was one of unusual solemnity, as a revival was in progress. The minister preached a sermon well calculated for effect. His peroration was a climax of great beauty. Assuming the attitude of one intently listening, he recited to the breathless auditory:

"Hark! they whisper, angels say—
"Hog in!" came from the deacon's pew, in a stentorian voice. The astonished audience turned their attention from the preacher. He went on, however, unmoved.

"Sister spirit come away!"
"Hog out!" shouted the deacon—"Hog out!" This was too much for the preacher and audience. The latter smiled, some snickered audibly, while a few boys broke for the door, to "split their sides" laughing outside, within full hearing. The preacher was disconcerted entirely—sat down—arose again—pronounced a brief benediction, and dismissed the anything else than solemn minded hearers. The deacon soon came to a realizing sense of his unconscious interlude, for his brethren reprimanded him severely, while "the boys" caught the infection of the joke, and every possible occasion afforded an opportunity for them to say "Hog in!" "Hog out!"

POETICAL JUSTICE.—A cow which attacked women and children picking berries in a pasture at Templeton, made a misstep while chasing them down a steep hill, and broke two of her legs. Perhaps it wouldn't have happened if the cow hadn't had a couple of horns when she started.

LIST OF LETTERS

REMAINING in the Post Office at Camp Floyd, U. T., January 29th, 1859.

A Armstrong James Abbott Charles Atkinson John
Archer R M
B Bailey Jackson
Butler Hiram
Bates Joseph
Baurey F
Brown John 2
Basnell J W
Barrett West B
Bird Charles P
Ball J E
Byington J W
C Carling Herr John Churchill A W
Chandler George
Cullion Patrick
Clark Henry
Cochran John Clark Paul
Campbell Hugh 2
Clark John
Cody Thomas 2
Chapman Capt. John
Case Charles S
Canoran James
Curley W C
D Dabbys E W 3
Dooley Francis
Daigre Henry
Deering W H
Dohenahone Patrick
Dillon Malachi
Devlin James
Duncan Robert R
E Ellebe Napoleon G
F Franks W H
Farrell Edward Flick Thomas
Frid Edward S
Ferguson Henry
Fiedling William
Finigan Phillip
G Griger Henry C
Gordon C E 2
H Harris George Haskell T A Huston John
Hagan M
Herron Alexander 3
Hall Edward 3
Henkel Henry
Hudlestone Joseph
Heiry 8 1
Haverly William I
Harris William
Harris B D
Harder Guido
I Imhoff Samuel G
Johnson Washington 4
K Kent Thomas
Kunnefer Louis
Kelley Patrick 2
Killop N B
Keltz Alexander 2
King Frederick 3
Kempnick Robert
L Lamountain Joseph
Lefingwell H F
Lensing William Leshman James
Lurgiter J L
M Mattison G H
Menefu W H
Murphy John
McKenna E A
Marr K F
McClue James
Mitchel T B 2
Morgan W D
McLaughlin Patrick 2
Morley B P
Masterson Francis
McDermott John 3
Malony William
Montgomery A E
McGee David
Manns Robert
Meek Francis
McGuire John
Maloney Stephen
N Neils Lewis
O O'Neill John
Owens E S
Owens E A
P Potter Steve or Ben Pluchet Conrad 2
Plimton Lelen
Pur F A
Peterson Ben 2
Peppard Christopher Packard James S
R Rothermel Jackson
Rouse Geo L 5
S Scralka Wm F 3
Smith Brice
Suber John F
Shudy John
Smith Thomas E
Smith J L
Smith J J
Smith J A
Smith Samuel M
Sperry E M
Stule J H
Stallcup Charles
T Taylor A P
Towers John
Taylor Alma
Thompson J H
Tuch Ferdinand
U Utter Dowdy
W Wilson J E
Watts J K 2
Wilson Edward D 2
Williams Phillip 2
W Wilmet & Fields
Wilson T D 2
Webb Gilbert
Walker O O
Y Yarnall James T
Coe William A
Clark William
Conway Edward
Collins Michiel
Cluneworth Benjamin
Cranor William
Carter Joseph
Calson Daniel J
Cuddehay Patrick 2
Cushman Martin
Cunningham James
Carson Emily A
D Dwyer Thomas
Douglas James
Dewey John
Duffey William
Driggs George R
Dutcher Rodney 3
Day John E
Dittmer Charles
E Esseltyn, Milton
F Falkner James L
Foster Samuel D
Faulkner W H 2
Forey Joshua
Forrester Charles
Forbes H C
Faister Joshua N
G Gilea John
Gaby Finley
H Haywood William
Harman A M
Hiel Joseph
Hughes B R
Hamilton James 2
Hatch Thomas J 4
Huggins John
Hudson Sidney
Harris Daniel
Hisle Lloyd N
Hanry William
Harold Mr.
Hogan T 7th Infantry
I Ioff John
K Kirkbride E M
Kelley Wheldon Wm
Klim Emile
Knapp Lewis L
King Alonzo
Kilsendale John K
L Lipscomb L P
Latt John
Lemp Henry
Lamb Edwin
Lewelle W P 2
M McMichiel John 2
Morehead Mrs. E T
Miller David M 2
Masterson Frank
Mitchell David 4
Mages Steven
Maguire Michael
McIntosh John
McDonald Ronald
Mitchell Z W S 4
Moor John A
McMinnay H
Mack James
Miller Mr.
McGee Michiel
McGann James
Morehead Preston S
Mack Pateneck
Murray Daniel
N Neill Lu
O O'Callagan Thomas
O'Conner Hanora
Obrine Chas F
P Perker Thomas
Pigot Geo M
Pugh Edward or Mary
Pierce Isaac
Perry Montgomery
Pierce Ira
Pradebaugh W E
R Russell W B
Russell G F

Riley Harvey
Roberts John
Rowe Peter
S Scralka Wm F 3
Smith Brice
Suber John F
Shudy John
Smith Thomas E
Smith J L
Smith J J
Smith J A
Smith Samuel M
Sperry E M
Stule J H
Stallcup Charles
T Taylor A P
Towers John
Taylor Alma
Thompson J H
Tuch Ferdinand
U Utter Dowdy
W Wilson J E
Watts J K 2
Wilson Edward D 2
Williams Phillip 2
W Wilmet & Fields
Wilson T D 2
Webb Gilbert
Walker O O
Y Yarnall James T
Coe William A
Clark William
Conway Edward
Collins Michiel
Cluneworth Benjamin
Cranor William
Carter Joseph
Calson Daniel J
Cuddehay Patrick 2
Cushman Martin
Cunningham James
Carson Emily A
D Dwyer Thomas
Douglas James
Dewey John
Duffey William
Driggs George R
Dutcher Rodney 3
Day John E
Dittmer Charles
E Esseltyn, Milton
F Falkner James L
Foster Samuel D
Faulkner W H 2
Forey Joshua
Forrester Charles
Forbes H C
Faister Joshua N
G Gilea John
Gaby Finley
H Haywood William
Harman A M
Hiel Joseph
Hughes B R
Hamilton James 2
Hatch Thomas J 4
Huggins John
Hudson Sidney
Harris Daniel
Hisle Lloyd N
Hanry William
Harold Mr.
Hogan T 7th Infantry
I Ioff John
K Kirkbride E M
Kelley Wheldon Wm
Klim Emile
Knapp Lewis L
King Alonzo
Kilsendale John K
L Lipscomb L P
Latt John
Lemp Henry
Lamb Edwin
Lewelle W P 2
M McMichiel John 2
Morehead Mrs. E T
Miller David M 2
Masterson Frank
Mitchell David 4
Mages Steven
Maguire Michael
McIntosh John
McDonald Ronald
Mitchell Z W S 4
Moor John A
McMinnay H
Mack James
Miller Mr.
McGee Michiel
McGann James
Morehead Preston S
Mack Pateneck
Murray Daniel
N Neill Lu
O O'Callagan Thomas
O'Conner Hanora
Obrine Chas F
P Perker Thomas
Pigot Geo M
Pugh Edward or Mary
Pierce Isaac
Perry Montgomery
Pierce Ira
Pradebaugh W E
R Russell W B
Russell G F

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,
CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.
CHARLES HARRISON,
PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best of market supplies, and neat and comfortable apartments. For S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.

NOTICE.
THE Fifty Dollar DRAFTS made by Russell, Major & Wadgell on Smoot, Russell & Co., Leavenworth City, will be redeemed hereafter in cash or Treasury drafts at our counter. MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.
G. S. L. City, Jan. 6, 1859.

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS.
WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Stebbins, at the Store of Livingston, Kinkead & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, charge for cash, all watches placed in his hands, free of cost. G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS,
WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

I loving articles, viz:
Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco,
Powder, Shot, Haying Cards,
Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon,
Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do Bourbon do do
New York do Rectified do do
Gin do Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.
French Mustard, Mixed Pickles,
Durham do Assorted do
do Jellies, Piccolilli,
do Syrups, Pickled Onions,
do Cordials, Tomato Catsup,
Brandy Peaches, Walnut Catsup,
do Cherries, Mushroom Catsup,
do Peas, Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India Celery Seed,
Preserves, Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Pepper Sauce,
Peach do do Assorted Sauce,
Apple do do Nat. Preserves,
Plum do do Capers Capoties, Raspberries do do Natural Preserved Pines,
Gooseberry do do Roast Turkey,
Blackberry Brandy, Roast Chicken,
Raspberries Brandy, String Beans,
Fresh Lobster, Green Peas,
Pickled do do do Corn,
Fresh Clams, Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat, do do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved
Fresh Cauliflower, Peaches,
Pickled do do Nat. Preserved Straw-
Worcestershire Sauce, berries,
Stoughton Bitters, Natural Preserved
Fresh Salmon, do do Damsons,
Fresh Tomatoes, Mushrooms,
French Pickles, Asparagus,
Hostetter's Bitters, Tarragon Vinegar,
Bokker's do do Fields Oysters,
Le Drard's do do Cove do
Royal Windsor do Pine Apple Cheese,
Maraschino, Olive Oil,
Curacao, Assorted Candies,
Absynth, Raisins,
Scotch Ale, Almonds,
London Porter, English Walnuts,
Schleiden Schnapps, Brazil Nuts,
Golden Grape Cognac, Figs,
Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy, Prunes,
Mountain Dew Whis-Pecans,
ky, Crackers,
Family Supplies, Cracknels, Morning Oats, E. D. Cheese,
Indian Queen Maderia.

also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps,
Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware,
Ladies Shoes, Notions,
Woolen Gloves, Hosiery,
do Mitts, Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs, do Mitts,
Stationery, &c., do Gauntlets,
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.
G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858.

A CARD.
The undersigned would respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same form rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are sold at in this City.
Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit the continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKEAD, & CO.
In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our train to be expected.

SIO REWARD.
STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Lodge) Ranch: one strawed man Horse, branded J.K. on the neck shoulder. Above reward will be given for his return.
10-11
RADFORD CABOT, & CO.

FOR SALE.
LARGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Mago & Co. 10-11
RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

FOR SALE.
ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange wheat, oats, and barley.
CHARLES MOGO.
Hot Spring Brewery.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW.
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

S. M. BLAIR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR
AT LAW.
Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Baker's.

LAW OFFICE.
W. J. McCORMICK, T. S. WILLIAMSON
McCORMICK & WILLIAMSON,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW.
Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.
OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store.
G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858.
Missouri Republican and N. Y. Herald will publish 3 months daily, and send bill to this office.

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN
GOODS, ETC.
At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City.

NEW GOODS.
JUST received a full stock of Staple GROCERIES.

WAGONS.
A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale
by
HILBERT & GERBISH.

RELEASES.
THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon.
J. M. WALLACE, (up stairs), between the Post Office, and Gilbert and Gerish's Store, is now open for visitors.
The tables are new and perfect, and no pains will be spared to make it an agreeable resort for gentlemen, the exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation.

EMPIRE SALOON.
THE BAR is now furnished with large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., purchased with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESOME refreshments is especially called.
JOHN M. WALLACE.

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to HILBERT & GERBISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.
WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.
X. X. X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivaled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.
FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, we have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.
We have secured a large supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.
OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:
Single meals, 25 cts.
Supper breakfast and lodging, 50 cts.
For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50 cts.
We have secured a large supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.
OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:
Single meals, 25 cts.
Supper breakfast and lodging, 50 cts.
For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50 cts.
We have secured a large supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.
OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:
Single meals, 25 cts.
Supper breakfast and lodging, 50 cts.
For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50 cts.

COW STRAYED.
ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick rope around her horns, horns small, was giving milk, and was branded Atwood on the hock, but not certain. Please bring her to Curtis R. Bolton, Esq., G. S. L. City, opposite the School House, and well rewarded.

LOOK HERE.
A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI TOWN BOOK" has been borrowed from the office of the Hon. Sec. of State. He earnestly requests the person having it to return it without delay.

WORK CATTLE.
100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by HILBERT & GERBISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.
Wholesale and retail dealers in
FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES,
BOOTS & SHOES, HATS & CAPS,
HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS, AND CIGARS.
and outlying goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has been brought to this Territory, which they offer at low figures, for Cash or Country Produce.

KIRK ANDERSON'S VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1859.

NUMBER 15.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

My Mother Dear.

There was a place in childhood,
That I remember well,
And there a voice of sweetest tones
Bright fairy tales did tell;
And gentle words and fond embrace
Were given with joy to me,
When I was in that happy place,
Upon my mother's knee,
My mother dear, my gentle mother.

When fairy tales were ended,
"Good night!" she softly said,
She kissed and laid me down to sleep,
Within my tiny bed,
And holy words she taught me there;
Methinks I yet can see,
Her angel form as close I knelt,
Beside my mother's knee,
My mother dear, my gentle mother.

In the sickness of my childhood,
And the perils of my prime,
The sorrows of my riper years,
The pride of every time,
When doubt or danger weighed me down,
Then pleading all for thee,
It was the fervent prayer to Heaven,
That bent my mother's knee,
My mother dear, my gentle mother.

A Smith Family.

Henry Smith, the razor strop man, who is known all over the country as one of the originals, gave a sketch of some of the Smiths in one of his speeches to the citizens of Providence, R. I., a few days since. We copy it from a Providence paper.

Perhaps there are some gentlemen in this respected crowd who do not know who I am. That I am famous I know, and I also know that fame is of but comparative worth. There may be some gentlemen here, who, although highly intelligent and well versed in general knowledge, are yet so far behind the times as not to know that my name is Smith. To such I take great pleasure in introducing myself.

Gentlemen, my name is Smith, and I am proud to say I am not ashamed of it. It may be that no person in this crowd owns that very uncommon name. If, however, there be one such, let him hold up his head, pull up his dicky, turn out his toes; take courage and thank his stars that there are a "few more left of the same sort."

Smith, gentlemen, is an industrious name, and stands very high in the annals of fame. Let White, Brown and Jones increase as they will, Believe me, the Smiths will outnumber them still.

Gentlemen, I am proud of being an original Smith, not a SMITHE nor a SMYTHE but a regular natural, original SMITH, Smith. Putting a Y in the middle or an E at the end won't do, gentlemen. Who ever heard of a great man by the name of Smyth or Smithe? Echo answers who, and everybody nobody. But as for Smith, plain SMITH, Smith, why the pillars of fame are covered with that honored and reverend name.

Who were the most racy, witty, and popular authors of this country? Horace and Albert Smith.

Who was the most original, pithy and humorous preacher? Reverend Sidney Smith.

To go farther back, who was the boldest and bravest soldier in Sumpter's army, in the Revolution? A Smith.

Who palavered with Powhatan, galvanized with Pocahontas, and became the ancestor of the first families in Virginia? A Smith again.

And who I ask, and I ask the question seriously and soberly, who I say is that man and what is his name, who has fought the battles, made the most speeches, preached the most sermons, held the most offices, sung the most songs, written the most poems, courted the most women, kissed the most girls, runaway with the most wives, and married the most widows? History says, you say, I say, and every body says John Smith!

To go back still farther, the Scriptures speak of one Alexander the copper-smith. Farther back still, we read of Tubal Cain, who was an artificer, in brass and iron. He must undoubtedly have been a blacksmith. And I have no doubt, gentlemen, that the progenitor of our race would have been called Smith, if his name hadn't been Adam.

And now, gentlemen, in conclusion, let me ask, who is that benevolent and self sacrificing individual, who, regardless of the wants of humanity, strives to cheer the hearts of men, to dry up the tears of women, and hush the cries of children by declaring eternal and exterminating war against all, each and every dull razor, knife, shears and scissors in this great and "glorious" country? Modesty, respected fellow citizens, that natural and retiring modesty, which is so peculiar to that honored family of which I have spoken, forbids me to mention his name.

Let it suffice to say, that if any gentleman in this most respectable crowd, wishes to procure an article that is warranted to sharpen his wife's scissors, his boy's knife, his own razor, his wits or his appetite, I stand ready as the sole representative of all the Smiths, whether blacksmiths, whitesmiths, silversmiths, coppersmiths, or John Smiths, to sell him a keen, close, cute, cunning, capable, curious and capital razor strop of which I am proud to say, "I have a few more left of the same sort," and the price is twenty-five cents.

Care of the Eyes.

Crawford, the celebrated sculptor, had an inveterate habit of reading in a reclining position; one eye had to be taken out in consequence of a cancerous tumor forming behind it, and his life has paid the forfeit after years of suffering and the expenditure of a large amount of money. Prescott, the historian, in consequence of a disorder of a nerve, by which the eyes were rendered useless for all writing purposes, could not use a pen, as he was unable to see when it failed to make a mark for want of ink; nor could he distinguish the lines or edges of his paper; yet, with these disadvantages, he wrote all his historicals, using an agate stylus on carbonated paper, being guided as to the lines or edges by brass wires drawn through a wooden frame; but with all these hindrances, he has made himself one of the most readable of modern historians and earned a fortune beside.

To avoid these and similar calamities, we urge upon the young, especially, never to use the eyes by any artificial light; where nicety of sight is required, nor to use them in any strained position or while riding in rail cars or carriages. We urge upon parents in view of the many incurable eye diseases, to caution their children against reading, by twilight; that is, not before sunrise nor after sunset. It would be greatly better not to allow them to read or sew by any artificial light, but if that is unavoidable, let it be imperative that they cease by nine o'clock at night in summer, and by ten, at farthest, in the winter. It is a most inexcusable folly, and will, sooner or later, bring its punishment, to read or sew by gas, or lamp, or candle light, and then sleep after daylight next morning, as a habit. To persons of all ages it is a most injurious practice.—Hall's Journal of Health

The Camel.

Major Wayne, who for ten years has been occupied with the experiment of introducing the Camel into this country, states in the National Intelligencer the result. He says:

The camel does not consume more food than a horse or mule; prefers a coarser diet; satisfies itself readily, with either scanty grazing or browsing; requires feeding but once a day, being a ruminant; and would be with difficulty distressed for water. It requires no close stable, only a shed protecting it from cold northerly winds and from falling weather, and requires no grooming, tho' certainly healthier and better, like all other animals, for a clean skin. The camel is undoubtedly a hardier and tougher animal than the horse; not surpassed, if equalled, in these respects, by the mule, and with half the forage of either, and with two or three hours of grazing or browsing, can be kept in condition. In addition to the economy in forage, the use of camels saves the outlay for wagons and carts, harness, shoes, and the necessary repairs of them. The pack saddle being so simple in its construction as to be readily made on the plantations, its cost will be but trifling. Its weight moreover, compared with that of a wagon or cart, increases the physical energy devoted to the transportation of goods. For short distances, say about a plantation, or for six or eight miles on the road, a strong camel will carry, on an average, from eight hundred to one thousand pounds. The Tiulus of Asia Minor, the produce of the double humped Bactrian male on the single-humped Arabian female, will average, for the same distance, from one thousand to fifteen hundred pounds. All of the statements in my official report of what was done by the camels under my direction in Texas, are made from accurate weights and closely computed distances.

So far, the general advantages from using camels may be summed up as follows:

They will flourish as well in the United States as either horses or mules.

They may be introduced at Mobile or Pensacola at rates not greater—certainly not much greater—than present prices for good mules.

They are not so expensive to feed as horses or mules.

They require no close stable nor grooming.

They are as tough and as hardy as either horse or mule.

They save a heavy outlay for wagons, carts, harness and shoes, and a constant tax for their repairs.

Their physical energy is not largely drawn upon for the draught of a wagon or cart, and, therefore, is proportionately given more usefully to the transportation of goods.

They will do more work at the same cost and keeping than either horse or mule.

These are the general advantages that I think may be fairly claimed for the camel. Now let us examine how far this animal, with their advantages, may be suited for our plantation or farm uses.

In Egypt I have seen the camel used in cities and in the country, on plantations, in fields, and on the road, for every purpose that horses and mules are used with us. I have seen them transporting bricks and broken stone from yards and quarries for buildings, sleepers, rafters, scantling, boards for flooring, &c. I have seen them carrying chopped straw, corn, cotton, fodder, merchandise of all kinds, men, women and children, and with their burdens stepping intelligently and with sure-footedness into and out of clumsy ferry boats. And I have seen them usefully occupied in carrying burdens on the dams and check banks of rice plantations. Is there anything more or less than these uses that our plantations and farms require?

The camel has been known to thrive and be useful between 15° and 52° north latitude: the mean temperature of which region may be rated at from 50 to 68 degrees. The cost of a good serviceable camel, landed at Mobile or Pensacola, will be from $150 to $200. The animal is much less troublesome at sea than the horse—a hundred camels causing less anxiety than ten horses.

A Smuggler's Narrative.

"We shall be, my dear madam," said I to a fellow-passenger in the Dieppe boat, taking out my watch, but keeping my eye steadily upon her, "we shall be in less than ten minutes at the custom house."

A spasm—a flicker from the guilt within—glanced over her countenance. "You look very good natured, sir," stammered she. I bowed and looked considerably more so, to invite her confidence. "If I was to tell you a secret which I find is too much to keep to myself, oh! would you keep it inviolable?"

"I know it, my dear madam—I know it already," said I, smiling, "it is lace, is it not?" She uttered a little shriek, and yes, she had got it there among the crinoline. She thought it had been sticking out, you see, unknown to her. "Oh, sir," cried she, "it is only ten pounds' worth; please to forgive me, and I'll never do it again. As it is, I think I shall expire."

"My dear madam," replied I, sternly but kindly, "here is the pier, and the officer has fixed his eye upon us. I must do my duty." I rushed up the ladder like a lamplighter. I pointed that woman out to legitimate authority; I accompanied her upon her way, in custody, to the searching house. I did not see her searched, but I saw what was found upon her, and I saw her fined and dismissed with ignominy. Then, having generously given up my emoluments as informer to the subordinate officials, I hurried off in search of the betrayed woman her hotel. I gave her lace twice the value of that she had lost. I paid her fine, and then I explained: "You, madam, had ten pounds' worth of smuggled goods about your person—I had nearly fifty times that amount. I turned informer, madam, let me tell you, for the sake of us both. You have too expressive a countenance believe me, and the officer would have found you out at all events, even as I did myself. Are you satisfied, my dear madam? If you still feel aggrieved or injured by me in any manner, pray take more lace—here is lots of it." We parted the best of friends.—London Paper.

A NEW STEP IN COMETOLOGY.—The theory of the curvature of the comet's tail has been at length accomplished by Professor Pierce. It is so full and satisfactory that the form of the tail of the great comet which has just disappeared, rigidly computed by him from purely theoretical considerations, does not sensibly differ from the apparent form. The germs of it are to be found in the profound investigations of Kepler, Newton, Pringle and younger Herschel.—Boston Courier.

Much Capital.

Much capital is made by our Atchison neighbors about the starting of the Salt Lake Mail. The Champion says it starts from that city, and Kinnekuk might say the same thing with equal truth. On account of Hockaday & Co.'s large shipping interests, which are located at Atchison, and where they have consequently ample arrangements for taking care of stock, we understand they have made that the chief station at which to stop and start their mail trains; the mail itself, however, is made up and started from here, as per schedule, and is delivered here in the same manner. Atchison is not mentioned or known in the contract—the mail runs from St. Joseph, Mo., to Salt Lake City. As long as the contractors make their time it is of no consequence to us what town or station they run by. If so trivial a matter will aid Atchison in the struggle with the rival towns of Palermo, Geary City, Doniphan, Sumner and Kickapoo, let her make the best use of it.—St. Joseph Gazette.

We are indebted to some one for a most elaborate consideration of the sensible maxim, "There is no Use in Crying for Spilt Milk." It is a striking illustration of Maximus in Minimis, as may be gathered from "the ground laid out" in the very introduction. It opens with an assertion which has been somewhat questioned hereabout recently:

"The practice of using Milk as an article of diet, is by no means a novelty. Sheep and goats and cows and camels have yielded the nutritious liquid to the coaxing hand of man, from the earliest ages. In ancient times, lands which were exceedingly fruitful were said to 'flow with milk and honey,' that being the highest possible praise. And who can say when 'the milk of human kindness,' of which such frequent mention is made, first took its place among grateful cordials? Nor are the moderns the first sufferers from such accidents as that implied in our text. Doubtless antediluvian cows were as sensitive and freakish as their post-diluvian descendants, and frequently kicked over the 'operative' and their frothy treasure. To milk one of those wild heifers must have required no ill degree of skill and courage. But there were giants in those days, and they may have kept mastodons instead of cows. In that case milk-maids must have commanded high wages."

Milk has been spilled in all ages of the world. The stream of Time very much discolored by it. Nor does the experience of the past furnish up with the means of putting a stop to this waste. Almost six thousand years have rolled away since this evil first arose; but it still "obtains," as extensively as ever. And the worst of it is that mankind seem utterly careless and indifferent upon the subject. Flies may bite, tails whisk, feet kick, pails upset, and the creamy fluid be splashed about, and flow in torrents to the earth; yet men remain unmoved; no one thinks of making a stir in the matter.—[Knickerbocker.

HORRID.—It is supposed that the girls will, "to a man," quit going to school in Marietta township, Marshall county, Iowa, for the school directors have issued their official mandate that no girls attending any of the public schools of that district shall wear hoops. It is expected that crinolines will expand with indignation at this foray upon fashion.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, FEBRUARY, 8, 1859.

Federal Courts in Utah.

We promised our readers to recur to this subject. In discussing it, it is necessary to look, somewhat, into the record. Fortunately the history of Utah and of the Mormon people does not run back beyond the memory of man. The story of their emigration and settlement here, is contemporaneous with the history of the present generation.

When "this people" took up their line of march, from the borders of the Mississippi, they supposed they were bidding a long farewell to the jurisdiction and authority of the United States; that they were leaving its limits forever. They directed steadily the eye of their faith to the establishment, somewhere, towards the setting sun, of an independent government of their own, to constitute the Zion where the Saints of the nations of the earth, should take up their abode. They desired to establish a great central point, from which Mormon influence should radiate, uncontrolled by any but Mormon authority; until through their ecclesiastical machinery, of missions, emigration, and tithings, numbers swelled the community into a nation, that could lift up the banner of Zion and bear it, hopefully, if need be, against a world in arms. However preposterous this may seem to practical minds, it was their ambition then. It is their ambition now, and the initiated know it. Our treaty with Mexico vested the right to the soil in the Federal Government; and this ipso facto, remanded them to the jurisdiction from which they had fled. Congress organized the people into a territory and subjected them to all the conditions which the organic act by its terms and in its construction imposed. They received the favor so extended, and set their government in motion. A territorial code has been carefully prepared, adopted, and amended by such subsequent acts as their experience led them to suppose were necessary. These constitute their statute-law. Now, let us enquire into the spirit which presided over all these governmental arrangements, and still holds its seat in the Wittena-gemota.

The organic act conferred upon them qualified legislative power; and this was in their own hands. They had appointed over them the Governor of their choice—all this was well.

The executive, however, retained the appointment of Federal judges—selected, as had been the practice in all other territories, from the country at large. Here was a stumbling block in the way of exclusiveness. All the world beside the Saints, they apprehensively call Gentiles, and here thought they was a gap through which the devilish influence might creep in. They could not realize that they had not received the investiture of sovereignty. The difficulty embarrassed them. Independence had not then been declared in Cottonwood Canyon. Happily, however, an expedient presented itself; and the leaders betook themselves to the Legislature, and by cunning contrivance sought to present the appearance of observing the forms of an act, which they secretly hated, and the spirit of which they shamelessly violated.

They omitted to provide means for defraying the expenses of Federal Courts, in the exercise of territorial jurisdiction. They omitted to provide for the support and safe-keeping of offenders. They omitted to provide for the removal of offenders to their penal code. They omitted to provide for the removal of offenders to their penal code. They omitted to provide for the removal of offenders to their penal code.

More than this, they made their statute books with some glaring deficiencies. They sought to confer upon their Promissory Courts, concurrent jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases arising under territorial laws, with the District Courts of the United States.

There is a slight discrepancy between this provision, and that clause of the organic act which establishes the gradation of courts in this wise: "The judicial power of said territory shall be vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts, and Justices of the peace." A Probate Court with a grand jury, and a District Court with one, in session at the same time, each exercising concurrent criminal jurisdiction, would seem to show an imperfection in the laws somewhere. But suppose a Probate Judge should assume the power to discharge on habeas corpus criminals indicted in a District Court, how glaring the imperfection would appear!

To crown all, the Legislature proudly lifts up its head and declares the law of treason against the territory, as if Utah were a sovereign State to which allegiance was due.

There is a slight discrepancy between this act and the laws of the United States and the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

Thus leaving perfected the system so artfully contrived to make the operative Judiciary correspond with the Executive and Legislature, the lawgivers, with somewhat the ecstatic feeling that came over Newton when he discovered the laws of planetary motion, point to their work and say, "Who can object to that? Are not the forms all there?"

The Gentile Judges are invited in with deceitful smirks and smiles, to take their seats and "mind their own business."

"Won't you walk into my parlor, Said the spider to the fly?"
"Tis the prettiest little parlor That ever you did spy?"

But what of the Juries? This did not present much difficulty. We are not left to deductions or conjecture on this point. Jedediah M. Grant explains how this part of the business was managed, in his remarks delivered in the Tabernacle, on the 2nd March, 1859, published in the "Deseret News." Jedediah said: "Last Sunday the President chastised some of the Apostles and bishops who were on the grand jury. Did he fully succeed in clearing away the fog which surrounded them, and in removing blindness from their eyes? No, for they could go to their room and again disagree, though to their credit it must be admitted that a brief explanation made them unanimous in their action."

Again, in the same connection, Jedediah, speaking of a traverse jury, continues: "Several had got into the fog to suck and eat the filth of a Gentile Court, ostensibly a court in Utah."

This is the language of one of the First Presidency. Comment is unnecessary. Brigham Young tampered with the juries of his country, and violated the majesty of the laws, if he did this act. How dare he throw his uke into a jury box? This is "magnifying" the laws with a vengeance.

But some say, "Why recur to these things—let bygones be bygones." We reply that we want to know whether this authority is not now claimed by the President of the Church. We have an interest in knowing whether our lives and property are at the mercy of a trinity? who thus sap the foundations of civil government. Has any recantation been made? Where? When?

In super-addition to all this, Courts have been violently interrupted in the discharge of their duties, as the evidence in Ferguson's case clearly proved.

Whether Ferguson committed the offence or not, it was committed, and the fact is well known here. But Ferguson's case we will not discuss in this relation. He has been acquitted. Of that trial hereafter.

Finally all these acts and arrangements, converged to open undisguised treason against the United States, and the crime was committed. Near the banks of Green river, yet remain the sad and painful evidences of it. Time passed on. The people were pardoned. The pardon was accepted; and by that acceptance the guilt confessed.

It might have been reasonably supposed, that under such circumstances "this people" would have manifested a proper sense of their relations to the Government, and properly appreciated the act of grace which saved their necks from the halter.

Not so, however. They regarded it as simply an honorable adjustment of difficulties between them and the Government, and like the "swollen toad" thought the eyes of the universe were eagerly bent upon the observance of their diplomatic achievement. All we have to say is that they mistake their case; and they will find it out ere long.

In October last, for the first time since February, 1857, a United States District Court was opened in this city by Judge Sinclair. His action we stated succinctly in our last number. At the time of his adjourning the Court, he had not been notified of any remedial legislation, and did not consider it consistent with the dignity of his position, to prostrate himself at the doors of the Legislative Assembly, and pray that they would keep their plighted faith and comply with the provisions of the "organic act."

The Legislature, though, at the close of its session, did address Judge Sinclair a letter, which and the answer to it, we have given to our readers. What was this but form? In the name of common sense, what could they have done with the report they demanded at the time of the demand? Nothing. It was a trick—a sham.

However, the lawgivers, as the laws "published by authority" inform us, have legislated upon the subject of United States Courts. And such legislation!

We shall continue this subject and endeavor to dissect for our readers this extraordinary legislation.

ASSEMBLY SOIREE.—The next of this interesting series comes off next Thursday evening. They increase in interest every week, in spite of the ecclesiastical efforts made to put them down.

Tickets can be secured at the various stores in the city.

ROORBACK.—We noticed by our exchanges received by the last Eastern mail, several items in regard to affairs in this Territory, which are not true. Among others a silly report that our office was in danger of being mobbed, and that our "life was in imminent peril." We can assure our friends that bad as they think the Mormons, they are not so wicked yet as that. They have enough sins to answer for before the bar of public opinion, without being subjected to idle rumors and exaggerated accounts of matters in which there is no truth.

A short time since, a wagon belonging to Wm. H. Kimball, Esq., loaded with merchandise, and consigned to different firms in the Camp, was stopped a short distance this side of that locality by three or four men, who boarded the wagon with knives in their hands, and attempted to ransack it. The driver was fortunately armed with a revolver, upon presentation of which the ruffians fled. We would advise all teamsters between this and the Camp to go armed, as this is not the first instance of ruffianism that has come to our ears.

We annex below the following extract from a Sermon delivered by Brigham Young, and published in the Deseret News. It will be seen that he gives not the Gentiles alone, but the Saints, particular Jessie; and we should judge from its temper that the morals of "this people" at that time were not so immaculate as they have subsequently claimed. We give it as a literary specimen of prophetic thunder from the Mormon Vatican.

I have been preached to, pleaded with, and written to, to be careful how I speak about men's faults, more so than ever Joseph Smith was in his life-time: every week or two I receive a letter of instruction, warning me to be careful of this or that man's character. Did you ever have the Spirit of the Lord, so that you have felt full of joy, and like jumping up and shouting hallelujah?

I feel in that way when such epistles come to me; I feel like saying, "I ask no odds of you nor of all your clan this side of hell." I have wise brethren around me who will sometimes say, "Don't speak so and so, be very careful, now do be cautious;" and I have been written to from the East; I have package after package of letters, yes, a wheelbarrow load of them, saying, "O, br. Brigham, I would beseech and pray and plead with you, if I only dare, to be careful how you speak. Would not this or that course be better than for you to get up in the stand, and tell the Gentiles what they are? Would it not be better to keep this to yourself?"

Do you know how I feel when I get such communications? I will tell you, I feel just like rubbing their noses with them. If I am not to have the privilege of speaking of saint and sinner when I please, tie up my mouth and let me go to the grave, for my work would be done.

It was for this that they killed Joseph and Hyrum, it is for this that they want to kill me and my brethren; we know their iniquity, and we will tell of it when the Spirit dictates, or talk about this, that, or the other person and conduct at the proper time.

There are people in our midst who grant at this course, and at the same time have evils that I think are hardly worth notice, for I do not think that such persons will be good for anything even should they happen to get into the kingdom of heaven, though I suppose they are good in their place if we can find out where it is, but as yet I am ignorant of it; I presume that the Lord knows where it is, but I do not. I wish to say to the elders of Israel, to all people; I shall tell you of your iniquity and talk about you just as I please, and when you feel like killing me for so doing, as some of the people did who called themselves brethren in the days of Joseph Smith, look out for yourselves, for false brethren were the cause of Joseph's death, and I am not a very righteous man. I have told the Latter Day Saints from the beginning that I do not profess much righteousness, but I profess to know the will of God concerning you, and I have boldness enough to tell it to you fearless of your wrath, and I expect that it is on this account that the Lord has called me to occupy the place I do; I feel as independent as an angel.

Some of you have been brought before the High Council charged with this fault and with that, and you say it is too much for you, that you can not bear it. But you have got to bear it, and if you will not, make up your minds to go to hell at once, and have done with it. If you wish to be Saints you must have your evils taken away, and your iniquities exposed, this must be done if you remain in the kingdom of God. If you do wrong, and it is made manifest before the High Council don't grudge about it, nor whine about your loving precious character, but consider that you have none; that is the best way to get along with it. Myriads have scandalized me since I have been in this Church, and I have been asked, "Br. Brigham, are you a going to bear this? do you not know that such and such persons are scandalizing your character?" Said I, "I do not know that I have any character, I have never stopped to enquire whether I have one or not. It is for me to pursue a course that will build up the kingdom of God on the earth, and you may take my character to be as such."

what you please, I care not what you do with it, so you keep your hands off from me. If you are brought before the High Council or before a Bishop's Court, and it is proven before either of those tribunals that you are covetous, don't fly in a passion and become so excited that you are ready to burst. I may see fit to expose some men who have not paid their tithing. Now, if you are going to get nervous about it, and are afraid of bursting, let me know, and we will slip an egg shell over you and your precious characters. What precious characters some of you had in Wales, in England, in Scotland, and perhaps in Ireland.

Do not be scared if it is proven against some, before the Bishop's Court, that you did steal the poles from your neighbor's garden fence. If you did it would be far better for you to get right up, and own it, for you have in reality lost your character before God, angels and men; and then refrain from such evils and try to establish a good character. It would be better for you to do that, than to become angry when your faults are made manifest. If it is proven before the High Council that you did steal a beef creature, don't get angry, but rise up and acknowledge that you did steal it.

If it is proven that you have been to some person's wood pile, and stole wood, don't be frightened, for if you will steal it must be made manifest. Some one may say: "why, I did not think saints were guilty of such deeds?" Nor I either. Such crimes are committed by people who gather with the saints to try them, to afflict and annoy them, and drive them to their duty.

Do you not suppose that it is necessary to have devils mixed up with us to make saints of us? We are as yet obliged to have devils in our communities, we could not build up the Kingdom without them. Many of you know that you cannot get your endowment without the devils being present; indeed we cannot make rapid progress without the devils. I know that it frightens the righteous sectarian world to think that we have so many devils with us, so many poor miserable curses.

Bless your souls, we could not prosper in the Kingdom of God without them. We must have those among us who will steal our fence-poles; who will go and steal hay from their neighbors' hay-stack, or go into his corn field to steal corn, and leave the fence down; nearly every axe that is dropped in the canyon must be picked up by them, and the scores of lost watches, gold rings, breast pins, etc., must get into their hands, though they will not wear them in your sight. It is essentially necessary to have such characters here.

After we have given the brethren such a scouring two or three months ago, about returning lost property, when found, one or two men brought in two or three rusty nails of no value, which they had picked up; this was tantamount to saying to Br. Sprague, "If we had found your purse, or if we had found Brigham's purse, we would see you in hell before we would return it." We wish to impress upon you the necessity of your bringing the axe you find, the hay fork, or any other lost property which you find, to the person who is appointed to take charge of such property; that the owners may again possess it. But if you should pick up a piece of rotten wood and bring it to Br. Brigham, or Dr. Sprague, with a show of honesty, and in derision of the counsel you have received, it would be like saying, "If we could find or steal your purses; you shall never see them again. We are poor miserable devils and mean to live here by stealing from the saints, and you cannot help yourselves."

Live here then, you poor miserable curses, until the time of retribution, when your heads will have to be severed from your bodies. Just let the Lord Almighty say: "Lay judgment to the line and righteousness to the plummet," and the time of thieves is short in this community. What do you suppose they would say in old Massachusetts, should they hear that the Latter-day Saints had received a revelation or commandment to lay "judgment to the line and righteousness to the plummet?" What would they say in old Connecticut? They would raise a universal howl of: "How wicked the Mormons are! they are killing the evil doers who are among them; why I hear that they kill the wicked away yonder in Utah!" They do not kill any body down there, do they?

As for the inhabitants of the earth, who know anything about the Mormons having power to utter worse epithets against us than they do, they have to get more knowledge in order to do it; and as for those enemies who have been in our midst feeling any worse than they do, they have first to know more; they are as full of bad feeling now as they can hold without bursting. What do I care for the wrath of man? No more than I do for the chickens that run in my doorway. I am here to teach the ways of the Lord, and lead men to life everlasting, but if they have not a mind to go there, I wish them to keep out of my path.

We are glad to see that our friend and fellow voyager, Mr. F. Dodge, the Indian agent for Carson Valley, is duly appreciated as an energetic and faithful officer in the region to which he is assigned. We know him, and can endorse the man, one too, that will not shrink from any duty.

We take the following notice from the correspondence of the last Alt., dated Placerville, January 10th.

Affairs East of the Sierras.—Salt Lake Mail.—Dull Times.

PLACERVILLE, Jan. 10, 1859.

Mr. F. Dodge, the Carson Valley Indian Agent, has just arrived here from Genoa. As an evidence that this officer has not been idle since entering upon his duties, he has, during the winter, visited three distant quarters of the Territory, traced three important rivers from source to outlet, and distributed gifts to more than four thousand Indians. The Agent says that these Indians, especially the Shoshone, are very friendly to the whites.

ly, the Pintes, are by far the most tractable and peaceably inclined savages whom he has ever seen on the continent. They are, however, in a famishing condition, and almost totally destitute of anything which will keep life in their emaciated bodies. This state of affairs is mainly attributable to the failure of the pine-nut crop and the unusual severe winter. Mr. Dodge is highly delighted with the wagon-road across the mountains. To use his own expression—"The great granite barrier, the crossing of which once immortalized Kit Carson, is now so easily crossed that the traveler is scarcely conscious of its existence while passing over."

The Salt Lake Mail reached here to-day, with the mails and one passenger, from Genoa. These arrivals by the Central route have become so regular that they no longer excite our curiosity, but are as confidently expected at the usual time, as the stages are from Sacramento.

In this region the weather still continues provokingly pleasant, and as there is too much water in the rivers, and not enough in the dry diggings, for mining purposes, we are just now enduring a frightfully dull time. Since the holidays, not a circumstance has transpired in this City worth a paragraph. Business is unusually dull, money scarce, and we have no kind of amusement, except a horrible Chinese company of theatricals.

Telegraphic to the Valley Tan.

PER D. H. & S. L. LANE, VIA GENOA, CARSON VALLEY.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 22, 1859.

The Jury yesterday, in the Court of Sessions, in the case of Gilchrist, tried for playing "Rondo," returned a verdict of "not guilty," stating that "Rondo" was a game of skill only.

One hundred of the passengers by the Steamer Sonora, which sailed on the 20th, ult., intend crossing the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. She carries 275 Passengers and $1,700,000, in treasure.

The Military Convention adjourned on the 19th, inst. The Convention decided to hold a grand military encampment at Sacramento, during the State Fair next season.

A Mr. Bailey and others, have filed a libel against the Steamer Sonora, in which they claim $14,000. The libellants were passengers from Panama, and allege, she carried an excess of passengers, and that they suffered various inconveniences in consequence.

A Detachment of the 6th Infantry, under command of Major Johnson, stationed in Mendocino County, are now engaged in building their Winter Quarters, at Redwood Valley, under direction of Lieutenant W. P. Carlin.

In Senate on 21st, a resolution was introduced by Mr. Holden, of Amador County, requesting Mr. Broderick, to resign his seat in the U. S. Senate. It passed by a vote of 23 to 9.

The Assembly have been for some days engaged on a contested seat case. The right of Dunscomb, a member elect from Sacramento Co., to a seat, is denied on account of his having for several years resided in Canada, and whilst there took oath of allegiance to British Government.

Michael Murry, a native of Rinehall Parish, Ireland, was hung at Downville, on 21st inst., for the murder of Daniel Swemey, at Poker Flat, in December, 1857.

PLACERVILLE, Jan. 23, 1859.
10 o'clock, A. M.

William Taylor, formerly of Howard Co., Missouri, was shot in a Chinese affray, this morning, at Diamond Springs, about three miles from this City. He was one of a party that undertook to break up a Camp of Celestials, and drive them from their claims. He died almost instantly.

This morning about 5 o'clock, a serious cutting affair occurred at the Cary House, in this City. The parties were John Moore, a Gambler, and an Irishman, named Jake Minnis. The latter has some 28 cuts on different parts of his neck, head, body and clothing, none of the wounds are in themselves mortal; but his condition is considered very critical.

GENOA, Jan. 23, 1859.
To KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.
G. S. L. CITY.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of the 9th inst., came duly to hand, for which I accept my thanks. Herewith I send you a few items. Please give us something relative to the mails—condition of stock, roads, management, etc., on the Eastern end of the mail route, as much interest is felt on this side. Chorpennig & Co., are making excellent time, and getting their part of the route well controlled. Your last dispatch "took well." Send me a few copies of your paper, and I will try and get you some subscribers, it is much inquired for, here by the "Gentiles."

RAIN.—We have again been visited by another supply of rain, which commenced last Saturday night, and continued until yesterday afternoon, clearing off much of the snow in and around the city.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
January 28, 1859.

Editor Valley Tan:

The mail arrived on Monday night as usual, but brought no news of any consequence. The Court Martial in the case of Lieut. Jesse B. Whorton, 7th infantry, who was tried about the first of October last, and which was sent to the President for his approval came back. Lieut. Whorton was tried on three charges:—

1st.—Drunkenness on duty.
2nd.—Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline.

3d. Breach of arrest. For which charges he was found guilty, and sentenced by the Court to be cashiered. But the President, on account of his youth, so far modified his sentence as to make it only dismissal for one year, and to forfeit his pay and allowances for the same period.

Capt. Reno of the Ordnance Department, and Lieut. Browning of the Marine corps left for California on last Tuesday. I hear that Gen. Johnston leaves for the States soon.

The Utah Chief Arra-pen has been on a visit to our Camp; he visited the Theatre and dances, and will, I suppose, have a complete change when he returns to his tribe, as to the names of the whites. He was Gen. Johnston's guest.

There was quite an excitement gotten up in the forepart of the week, by the circulation of a report that a bill had passed the House to increase the pay and term of punishment. I have seen nothing of it yet, and am inclined to believe it only a camp rumour.

I attended the Theatre on Wednesday night, and was very much pleased. The piece presented was "The Maid of Croissy." Mrs. Whitlock as the Maid of Croissy, was very good; her appearance upon the stage was greeted with tremendous applause. Mr. Willis as the sergeant, sustained his part very well; and upon the close of the piece, both Mrs. Whitlock and himself were loudly applauded, when the audience again expressed their satisfaction by giving them three hearty cheers.

Mrs. Tucket and Mrs. Lougee who were dismissed sometime ago, because they refused to play on account of an anti-Mormon song having been proposed to be sung, have been taken back. We give these ladies credit for the independent manner in which they have acted, and for showing the want of the same in the majority of the Association.

Now, we are all anti-Mormons here, and are decidedly in favor of the song. It has been said that because it was "too vulgar" was the reason why it was objected to; but I am inclined to think it was more on account of a part of the chorus, viz:—

"Joe Smith Chief Devil And Brigham Mormon master."

This is the most objectionable part, and is decidedly vulgar.

COMEDY.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
February 3, 1859.

On Saturday evening there was no performance.

On Wednesday, the long looked-for play of "The Stranger," was performed for the first time at this theatre, with a very good cast, with one exception. Count Steinfort, (Mr. Smith,) this gentleman recited what he knew of his part in a very indifferent manner, his attitude was not graceful, his delivery bad, and he got stuck several times. Francis, (Mr. Baldwin,) did not know his part, he took great liberties, playing at his skip and jump with the text—however, what he did know, he rendered in a more subdued tone, and with greater propriety than any role we have yet seen him undertake.

The rest of the characters were so well sustained that on Saturday evening when the play is to be repeated, (with Mr. White, as Count Steinfort,) we expect the greatest dramatic treat we have had since the Theatre opened—for this reason we defer entering into detail until Saturday.

"A Kiss in the Dark," is the afterpiece. The Orchestra played the overture from "The Jewess," they have greatly improved since they made their debut.

Mr. White sang, "Hail Wood on Freeze," with good effect—it was loudly cheered. The afterpiece concluded the evenings entertainment; it is the second time that "Sketches in India," has been given—This was no improvement on the last representation, we are sure they can render it a great deal better, although the audience testified their approbation with continuous rounds of applause.

Mr. Myers, having recovered from his indisposition, played Count Glorioso, the action came natural to him, and he recited well; but in the acting he showed more of the phlegmatic Dutchman, than the lively Frenchman.

We understand "Love's Sacrifice," is in preparation, and is likely to be produced on Wednesday next.

We cannot conclude this notice without congratulating the play-going public, on the better maintenance of order which was observed on this occasion.

"DRAMA."

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Feb. 5, 1859.

Mr. Editor:—

For the first time in my military career, I have laid down the musket & Co., and taken up that mighty instrument of little men, the "Goose Quill," and should not on this occasion, but when I see gross injustice done by an anonymous writer, who would feign to aspire to the title of critic, I cannot resist my desire to see justice done to the individual referred to. I have witnessed nearly all of the efforts of the "Military Dramatic Association," since its organization; and have also read all of the communications of "Drama," and although he is sometimes right, he is more frequently wrong.

But to the point. In Drama's last communication, he speaks of the change of Cast in the "Lady of Lyons," but does not do Mr. Baldwin the justice to say that he committed the part assigned him in three hours, and by his indomitable perseverance in so doing, saved the entire play. This, "Drama," could not notice, for by so doing he would render a simple act of justice. Again in the "Weathercock," did not Mr. Baldwin both look and act the character of "Briefwat," to the satisfaction of the whole audience.

Furthermore, in "Sketches in India," so far from Mr. Baldwin's introducing the characteristics of "Aminadab Sleek," his words, actions, gestures, and voice, were such as to repeatedly receive a hearty "En-bore" from the audience.

In conclusion, I would ask, does it not seem strange that "Drama," in his communications, should be so severe upon this gentleman of the 7th, and so lenient in reference to others of the 5th. Or perhaps it can be accounted for in another way, which is simply this, Mr. Baldwin asks no puffs from the Critic, but relies upon his acting for success. In future, I hope "Drama," will exercise his functions as our Dramatic Critic, with less partiality.

Yours in haste,

"OLD MAN COMIC."

The Soldier's Pension Bill.

The following is the bill granting pensions to soldiers in the late war with Great Britain, and to other parties therein mentioned, which has passed the House of Representatives by a majority of 53 votes:

SECTION 1. That each of the surviving officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates who shall have served in the regular army, State troops, volunteers or militia, for a term of six days or more, or who have been engaged in actual battle with the enemy, in the war declared by the United States against Great Britain on the 18th of June, 1812, be authorized to receive a pension from the United States, to commence from the first day of the present Congress, and to continue during his natural life.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That each of the officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates who have served in the regular Army, State troops, volunteers or militia, of any State or Territory, for the space of six days or more against any of the Indian tribes during or preceding the war of 1812 with Great Britain, or who were engaged in any battle fought by the United States against any Indian tribe during the aforesaid war with Great Britain, shall be entitled to all the benefits of this act.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That if any of the officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians or privates, have died, or shall hereafter die, leaving a widow, such widow shall be entitled to receive the same pension to which her husband would have been entitled under this act, for and during her natural life.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the pay allowed by this act shall, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, be paid to such officer, non-commissioned officer, musician, private, or his widow or their authorized attorneys at such times or places as the Secretary of the Interior may direct; and that no officer, non-commissioned officer, musician, private, or his widow, shall receive the same until he furnish the said Secretary of the Interior with satisfactory evidence that he is entitled to the same, in accordance with the provisions of this act; and that the pay hereby allowed shall not be, in any way, transferable, or liable to attachments, levy, or seizure, by any legal process whatever, but shall go unencumbered to the possession of the officer, musician, private or his widow.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the officers, non-commissioned officers and marines, who served for the time of sixty days in the naval service, or engaged in battle with the enemy, during the war with Great Britain aforesaid, and their widows, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act, in the same manner as is provided for the officers and soldiers of the army of the war of 1812.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That the pension provided by this act shall in no case exceed the full amount of ninety-six dollars per year, and shall be graduated according to the length of service, as follows: For twelve months' service, or more, ninety-six dollars; for six months' service, but less than twelve months, seventy-five dollars; for sixty days' service, but less than six months, fifty dollars; provided that the survivor, or surviving widow of an officer, non-commissioned officer, musician, or private, who participated in actual battle, in said war, shall be entitled to the maximum pension given by this act.

The Bogus Cuban Revolution.

Specimens of the Brag Game—Eight thousand Fillibusters in Cuba—three regiments privately pronounced—who blew up the Powder Magazine at Havana—Cuba to be free in thirty days, &c.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE N. Y. HERALD.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29, 1858.

Providence permitting, and wind and wave favoring, the island of Cuba will declare her independence within thirty days from this date, the Spanish, French and English fleets to the contrary notwithstanding.

There are now on the island of Cuba a little upwards of eight thousand able bodied Americans, ready to aid the people of Cuba in their struggle to free themselves from the yoke of Spain.—These men are thoroughly organized, and know that their services will soon be required.

Their arms and ammunition are safely stored where they can be supplied to the men at a moment's warning.

Besides the eight thousand Americans already in the island there are twelve thousand natives, thoroughly organized and being organized, in the island, making a force of twenty thousand, which is considered amply sufficient to oppose any force that can be brought against them until their independence is established and recognized.

Under the more favorable regulations issued last June by the Spanish authorities in relation to emigration, a large number, in small parties, have emigrated from different points in the United States during the last six months, and more are ready to leave with the first favorable breeze, enough to swell the number of Americans to ten thousand men. These men go to Cuba, however, as emigrants, with regular passports, and without any law of nations. Their movements have been conducted by one of the ablest men in our country, and have been confined strictly within the limits of the law.

A spy of our government has been here for several days, watching the movements of emigrants to Cuba, but has been able to detect nothing illegal going on; in fact, he is satisfied that our government can interpose no obstacle to prevent the emigration to Cuba; and if he stays here much longer we will convert him into a Cuban republican. You will probably soon be favored with his views on the subject in the Washington Union.

The Cuban revolutionists have at their command some fifteen vessels, which are mostly owned by parties connected with the movement.

I am informed by General N. S. Renau, a gentleman of high standing, an old resident and a native of Cuba, who has just arrived from Havana by the steamer Philadelphia, the tone of feeling on the island is in the most favorable state for a revolt.

A wealthy and influential planter on the island, on getting some intimation of the contemplated movement, presented himself to one of the leaders and implored to be taken into the secret, offering the five hundred men, under his command to the revolutionists, and saying that he would fall on his knees and worship the man who would liberate the people of Cuba from the bondage under which they now lived.

This is but an illustration of thousands of cases that are daily occurring in all parts of the island; and when the question is put, "Do you favor the annexation of Cuba to the United States?" in nine cases out of ten the answer is, "Yes, most heartily, if it can be accomplished through our own voluntary act."

The troops in Cuba are coming over to the revolutionists. Three regiments of the line have recently declared privately in favor of the revolutionists, and will go over in a body the moment the revolutionary standard is raised. All the native troops will join the revolutionists as soon as they see a prospect of success.

The strictest watch is kept up by the Governor General for any indications of a revolt, and correspondence is violated to detect and discover the leaders, all, as yet, to no purpose. The revolutionists do not trust their communications to public posts, but have a perfect system of communication of their own.

Regular communication with the United States is kept up by special messengers and private vessels. An express is expected here to-morrow, and the purport of any news it communicates will be on its way to you soon after its arrival.

My information is from the most official sources, and is entirely reliable.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29, 1858.

The secret of the terrible explosion of the powder magazine at Havana a few weeks since, is perfectly understood by parties here who are in the confidence of the leading revolutionists.

A short time previous to the explosion a gentleman in this city received a communication stating that the magazine might be troublesome to the revolutionists, and very convenient for the Spanish in case it existed at the time of the breaking out of the revolution.

The next steamer brought the news of the terrible explosion, and relieved the apprehensions of the revolutionists on that subject.

Useless.

By reference to our Legislative proceedings it will be observed that Mr. Holden "gave notice that he would introduce a resolution requesting Mr. Broderick to resign his seat." Much as we regret that Broderick occupies a seat in the Senate, ungratefully and disgracefully as he has acted, carrying into that august body the manners of a ruffian and the language of an innate blackguard, heartily as we would rejoice were he to resign, pleasing as such resignation would be to the people of California, yet we are opposed to the resolution of Mr. Holden and doubt the propriety and policy of its introduction. If it be intended to rebuke the bully Senator, it will not have that effect on one who is impervious to shame. He has been rebuked and repudiated repeatedly by the people of California; he cared not. Pass the resolution—would he resign? Not he. He paid too dearly for his elevation—for it is a notorious and indisputable fact, that some of the representatives who formerly represented El Dorado county in the Legislature know full well and have the evidence of, that he purchased his position—to give it up at the "request" of any one. He will hold on to it with a death grip. Not until he has made up his losses, replenished his purse, will he dream of resigning. Were the entire people of the State to join in the "request," he would treat their request with indifference. Knowing the hopelessness of his ever again getting back, he will make the most out of his first and last Senatorial term.

Mr. Holden greatly mistakes the man if he thinks he is either verdant or has any delicacy of feeling. He knows that he is misrepresenting the people of California; he knows that they have a contemptible opinion of his abilities and he shrewdly suspects that that opinion is profoundly correct; he knows that he has rendered himself obnoxious to them; he feels his littleness, the embarrassment arising from being placed in a prominent position, for which education, association and talent have wholly unfitted him; knowing and feeling this, he is determined to punish his constituents by obstinately thwarting their wishes on every question and representing them in spite of their remonstrance. It is useless therefore for the Legislature to request him to resign. He won't do it. He can't have much respect for the wishes of those who have no respect—not a particle—for him and who differ from him politically. Reflect, Mr. Holden; withdraw your resolution. The whole Black Republican press of the State, the Bee, Union and Register taking the lead in the congenial work, are bursting with indignation at your attack on their Senator, and they will swear until they are as black in their face as they are in their politics, that it is "Administration persecution of a Douglas Democrat." False as it is, when once they assert it they'll swear to it. Don't introduce it, sir.—Mountain Democrat, Placerville, Cal.

Why Douglas was Removed—Broderick.

The idle rumor, out of which the opposition are seeking to make capital, that the President insisted upon the removal of Douglas from the Committee on Territories, is thus put to rest by the well informed and reliable Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer:

"The telegraph reported that President Buchanan insisted on Douglas being removed from the head of the Committee on Territories. This is not so. His two particular friends in the Senate, Bigler, of Pennsylvania, and Thompson, of New Jersey, voted against a change, and they are a pretty correct index to the President's feelings. The truth is the motive for the change was an understanding here, that Mr. Douglas will not be here to take his seat before the first or middle of February."

Had he been in Washington at the opening of the session, ready to attend to the important and pressing duties of the committee of which he was Chairman, he would not have been removed. That the President's "particular friends voted against a change," is sufficient evidence that the President desired him to be retained at the head of the committee. The same correspondent thus alludes to the "brave, young Senator" who misrepresents the people of California:

"Senator Broderick is regarded here as having gone over to the Republicans, body, soul and breeches. He is a man of great energy of character, but not with a corresponding amount of brains. He hates Buchanan with a Spaniard's hate, and takes every opportunity to show it. Were he now before the people of California he would be badly defeated."

The people of California, on three several occasions, repudiated him and his followers with the greatest unanimity. Had he ever come directly before them, he would have been shamefully defeated. Men who voted to place him where he is, disregarded the wishes of their constituents, violated their instructions, deliberately broke their solemn promises and insulted and brought disgrace, upon the Democratic party by their choice. Some of them were afraid to return to their constituents, so odious had they rendered themselves for voting for the man the Democracy had rebuked. Even last year, when he fused with the Republicans and dexterously used the popular name of Douglas, he was completely routed, almost annihilated. A few of his friends were elected to the Legislature, and they under false colors. Had they dared confess they were Broderick men, not one of them would have been elected. To save themselves they were forced to repudiate their master, and they did it without shame or reluctance, but only to deceive. Not one of his minions dare express an opinion without first getting his permission. That he has "gone over, body and soul to the Republicans," does not surprise any one acquainted with his political history. He always sympathized and worked with them secretly; and he and his friends and his organs took decided grounds against Douglas and the Kansas-Nebraska bill on its first introduction. The Democratic party has lost nothing by his apostasy.—Mountain Democrat.

U. S. TROOPS IN CALIFORNIA.—A correspondent of the Union, writing from New San Diego, December 24th, gives the following account of the present disposition of troops in the Department of California, some recent changes having taken place:

Company A, Sixth Infantry, Capt. Flint and Lieut. Harrison; Company D, Sixth Infantry, Bvt. Maj. Johnson, and Lieuts. Carlin and Dillon, instead of proceeding to Southern California, were assigned to duty at Benicia Barracks, and subsequently Company D was ordered to Round Valley.

Bvt. Lieut. Col. Hoffman and Company E, Sixth Infantry, Lieuts. Clarke and J. A. Smith, landed a few days since at San Pedro, en route to the Mohave Country. Companies C, J and K, Sixth Infantry, will follow Col. Hoffman soon. The Officers with those companies are Capt. Garpett, and Lieuts. Marshall, McCleary, McLemore, and Bryant. The Sulter, Mr. Bethel, accompanies Col. Hoffman's command.

Company G, Sixth Infantry, reached this place on the 6th of December; officers present, Capt. Kelchum, Lieut. Boots, and Dr. Milhan.

On the 22d of December Lieut. Tipton and 26 recruits landed at this place. The recruits remain, but Lieut. T. will proceed to Fort Yuma. Lieut. Elliot arrived at the same time for the purpose of fixing a tide gauge at the Playa, and as soon as he completes his business he will leave for Fort Point.

HAND-IN-HAND BAKERY

LOOK HERE EVERYBODY!
THE Subscriber has now in full operation a new Oven, and flatters himself that he can please the taste of the public generally with a good article of light bread, cakes, pies, and a variety of crackers, &c. &c., as can be produced in any establishment in this City, or elsewhere.
Give me a call, and be your own judge.
Terms moderate. Wedding cakes made to order.
Parties supplied on short notice.
DANIEL GRENO,
Next door south of the California Hotel, Main Street.
18-31

SALT LAKE HOUSE.

JAMES TOWNSEND, Proprietor.

Prices of Board.
Board and Lodging per week, $12 50
Board, (without Lodging,) 10 00
Board, per day, 5 50
Supper, Breakfast and Lodging, 2 00
Single meal, 1 00
Animals, per night, hay and grain, 12 00
Furniture to be made in advance.
18-31

U. S. DISTRICT COURT, SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

A TERM of the United States District Court, for the Second Judicial District, of the Territory of Utah, will be held at the City of Provo, in said District, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. on the 24th day of March, A. D. 1859.
JOHN CHAPMAN, Clerk of said District.
18-31

HUMOROUS

Good.—A wag asks, when did King David sympathize with the Yankees? When he was distressed for brother Jonathan.

An old maid speaking of marriage says it is like any other disease—while there is life there's hope.

Here is a piquant extract: "He kissed her, and promised. Such beautiful lips! Man's usual fate—he was lost upon the coral reefs."

Pray, my friend, are you the master of this house?" asked a traveller at an inn.

"Yes, sir," answered Boniface, "my wife has been dead these three weeks."

Why is it easier to be a clergyman than a physician? Because it is easier to preach than to practice.

"What queer things men will make for money!" as the old woman said when she saw a monkey.

Come, said a retired merchant to a poor author, "come to my country-house and stay a month." "I cannot leave the attractions of the city," said he. "But we will have four meals a-day." "Thank you, but I believe not; rather stay here and breakfast upon a perfume and dine upon a smile."—Boston Gazette.

Papa, said a little fellow, as he looked up in his father's face, "does the logwood they put in wine give it its red color?"

"Yes, certainly."

"Well, papa," is it the logwood in the wine that makes your nose so red?"

"Hush your nonsense, child; here Betty, get a candle and put this child to bed."

Where is your father, said an angry master to the son of his habitually tippling domestic.

"He is down stairs, sir."

"Getting drunk, I suppose?"

"No, sir, he ain't."

"What then?"

"Getting sober, sir."

Monsieur Foix, a Frenchman, who went to Jamaica to embark in business, had been badly abused there. He had been robbed, whipped, put in prison, his property confiscated, and every species of indignity and outrage offered him. On his return to New Orleans, he told the story most pitifully to Col. Pike of Arkansas.

"Why, Monsieur Foix," said the Col., "according to your story, Jamaica must be as bad a place as the infernal regions!"

"Ma foi—it is worse."

"Now, Monsieur, do you really mean that?"

"C'est vrai"—it is true.

"Well, now, Monsieur Foix," said Col. Pike, "suppose you were on your death-bed to night, and the Lord was to appear to you, and say you might go back to Jamaica or go to the infernal regions, what would you say?"

"I would say, Monsieur good Lord, if it beez all ze same to you: if it make no difference at all, I should very much choose to please, to prefer much razer go to h—ll."

An Englishman, speaking in favor of his own country, said to Dr. Thompson:

"You have no coal, and it is that which gives England its manufacturing importance."

The doctor replied:

"We are not altogether destitute of coal, we have one small bed in Illinois which is larger than the whole of England. If you wait till we scoop some of it out, and then bring your Island over, we will drop in and annex you."

"Ah! but you have no nobility," said John Bull.

The doctor replied:

"We are a nation of kings," then with all the pompousness he could assume, he made a low bow and said, "You are now in company with one of the royal family of the United States of America."

Sensible to the last.—Some musical teacher once wrote that the art of playing the violin requires the nicest perception and the most delicate sensibility of any art in the known world. Some country editor commenting on the same says:

"The art of publishing a country newspaper and making it pay, beats the art of fiddling higher than a kite."

The Schoolmaster at Home in Massachusetts.

The New York Evening Post understands that the subjoined circular, with the name of a well-known Massachusetts instructor attached, has been sent to the principals of the various schools in that City. The proposition for an exchange of pupils is about as unique as the phraseology in which it is couched:

SCHOOL FOR A BOY WANTED.—The Principal of a Seminary for Young Ladies in Massachusetts has a son, 13 years old, whom it is thought advisable to place in a boarding-school. There is one, and perhaps two who would accompany him. Has any Principal a daughter or ward to send in exchange. Or does he know of a young lady or miss instead, in whose family the boy would find a home, and attend his school? In no other way will he be trusted away."

HUNTING WITH ARTILLERY.—Albert Pike went out recently with Major Rector, Indian Superintendent, to assist in the payment of the Indian annuities among the tribes west of Arkansas. A correspondent of the Fort Smith Herald writing from the Creek agency, describes Col. Pike's method of hunting grouse or prairie hen: "Knowing how wild they are he came prepared to outwit them. He hunts with a piece of artillery, a six pounder. This he hauls out on the prairie, and when he discovers a flock he unlimbers, sights the gun and touches her off. He rarely misses. It is very exciting to see a dozen grouse fluttering with broken wings among twice as many dead ones, and the Colonel chasing them around and catching them. His usual charge is a pound of powder and a quarter of a bag of turkey or swan shot. He generally shoots at about two hundred yards. He killed in John Sell's field, below here, the other day, 38 grouse at a single fire. Major Rector, who accompanied, thinks he must have crippled 1,000 that got off among the cornstalks and cockle burrs."

"I don't care what the man professes—how does he live? There is a volume in the question. Profession is nothing. Men should be measured by their actions. Deeds are more eloquent than words. 'I feel five dollars for the man; how much do the rest feel?' was the practically expressed sympathy of the kind-hearted Frenchman, when a neighbor was in trouble. That's the test. How much we feel when we talk? Words cost nothing, and furnish the warp and woof of some most glorious friendship! Such friendships are like some men's libraries, beautiful in guilt, and to be admired, but not for use."

The Minie rifle has proven terribly destructive in the late fights with the Indians in Oregon and Texas. Our soldiers can fire at the Indians at such a distance as to be entirely safe. Unless the Indians learn the use of the Minie rifle, they will be exterminated by it. Col. Wright says in a late letter to the Secretary of War, giving an account of a recent engagement with the Oregon Indians:

"The men fired at the gallant red rascals as they would at targets, and the movements during the action were as orderly as on a field day. The enemy has lost courage, but he may change his tactics."

CURIOUS ADOPTION OF PIG ORPHANS.—A correspondent in New Kent county, Virginia, gives an account of the suckling of two pigs by a cat, in that county. The little porkers were taken from their "maternal parent," who had a large family to attend to, and placed in an outhouse, where a cat with one kitten—the rest having been drowned—sought shelter and lodging. The pigs became intimate with their feline neighbor, and the sequel was the curious fact stated by the correspondent.

A NEW WAY TO GET UP A SUBSCRIPTION.—The way in which a New England church raises a subscription, is thus related:

"One of the churches of New Bedford, Mass., wishes to raise the sum of $250, and, at the morning service, one Sunday, they appointed one of the influential brethren to fix upon a plan. In the intermission he took a pencil and marked against every member's name the sum which he thought he ought to give. At the close of the afternoon service, he read the list, stating that if any one had been assessed too much, or not enough, he must speak. Suffice it to say, silence prevailed in the assembly, and in fifteen minutes the sum was raised."

LOAFERS IN A PRINTING OFFICE.—The composing room of a printing office is not the place to tell long stories, or argue points of metaphysics. A printing office is like a school; it can have no interlopers, hangerson, or twaddlers, without a serious inconvenience, to say nothing of loss of time, which is just as good as gold to the printer. What would be thought of a man who would enter a school and twaddle with the teacher and then with the scholars—interrupting the discipline of one and the studies of the other? And yet this is the precise effect of the loafers with the course of business—distracts the great attention which is necessary to the good printer. No gentleman will ever enter it and presume to act the loafer. He will feel above it, for no real man sacrifices the interests or interferes with the duties of others. The loafer does both. Let him think, if he never has, that the last place he should ever insinuate his worthless and unwelcome presence is the printing office.

Will some our friends who call on us and make a practice of picking up the proof sheets and reading them make a note of this.

MOHAMMED.—Slightly above the middle size, his figure, though spare, was handsome and commanding, the chest broad and open, the bones and framework large, the joints well knit together. His neck was long and finely moulded. The head, unusually large, gave space for a broad and noble brow. The hair thick, jet black, and slightly curling, fell down over his ears. The eyebrows were arched and joined; the countenance thin, but ruddy. His large eyes, intensely black and piercing, received additional lustre from their long eyelashes. The nose was high and slightly aquiline, but fine, and at the end attenuated. The teeth were far apart. A long, black, bushy beard, reaching to the breast, added manliness and presence. His expression was pensive and contemplative. The face beamed with intelligence, though something of the sensuous might also be there discerned. His broad back leaned slightly forward as he walked, and his step was hasty, yet sharp and decided, like that of one rapidly descending a declivity. There was something unsettled in his blood shot eye, which refused to rest upon its object. When he turned toward you it was never partially, but with the whole body.—Muir's Life of Mohammed.

ANOTHER BRIGHAM.—The Mouth, (N. J.) Democrat says that a man calling himself Brigham Young, Jr., has established himself in Ocean county, and called his place "New Utah," or "Little Salt Lake." He has also induced three silly women to join him, as a starting point in his stock of wives.

Perhaps the neatest sort of epitaph that is made by Benjamin Franklin upon himself:

The body of
B. Franklin, Printer,
Like the cover of an old book,
His contents torn out,
And stripped of its lettering and gilding,
Lies here, food for worms,
But the work shall not be wholly lost;
For it will, as he believed, appear once more,
In a new and more perfect edition,
Corrected and amended
By the Author.
He was born Jan. 6, 1706;
died April 17, 1790.

A crust of bread, a pitcher of water, a thatched roof, and love—there is happiness for you, whether the day be rainy or shiny. It is the heart that makes the home, whether the eye rests on a potato patch or a flower garden. Heart makes home precious, and it is the only thing that can."

A fellow was brought to King James I, and it was said he could eat a whole sheep at a meal. "What else can he do," asked the king. "More than other men?" "Nothing," was the reply. "Hang him, then," said James, "for 'tis a pity a man should live who eats the share of twenty men and can do no more than one."

Married on Thursday last, by Rev. B. Hyde, Mr. James T. Wallach, to Mrs. Mary Davy.—Shreveport Journal.

This looks like a union of Wallachian and Moll-Davian Principalities.—Louisville Journal.

A single hour in the day given to the study of some interesting subject, brings unexpected accumulation of knowledge.

SEWARD AND MATTESON.—The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, in commenting on Seward's laudation of Matteson, the lobby corruptionist, says: Either Matteson, is a persecuted saint, or Mr. Seward has warm sympathies with rascality."

L. & A. CARR,
WHOLESALE
BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS

AND BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,
No. 49 Main Street,
ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetic, grammars, geographies, philosophies, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY, BLANK BOOKS, PRINTING AND WRITING PAPER,

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY,
Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice.

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,
AT
CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.
CHARLES HARRISON,
PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best market affords, and neat and comfortable apartments. P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS,
WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry committed to their care. Charles Stebbins, at the Store of Livingston, Kinkaid & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage.
G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS,

WINE, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.
THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:
Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco,
Powder, Shot, Playing Cards,
Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon,
Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do Bourbon do
New York do Rectified do
Gin, Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.
French Mustard, Mixed Pickles,
Durham do Assorted do
Assorted Jams, do Gherkins,
do Jellies, Pickled Onions, do Syrup, Tomato Catsup,
do Cordials, Walnut Catsup, Brandy Peaches, Mushroom Catsup,
do Cherries, Cayenne Pepper, do Pears, Assorted West India
Assorted West India Cellery Seed, Preserve, Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Pepper Sauce,
Peach do Assorted Sauce,
Apple do do Nat. Preserves,
Plumb do Capers Capotes,
Raspberry do Natural Pres'd Pines,
Gooseberry do Roast Turkey,
Blackberry Brandy, Roast Chicken,
Raspberry Brandy, String Beans,
Fresh Lobster, Green Peas,
Pickled do Corn,
Fresh Clams, Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat, do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved
Fresh Cauliflower, Peaches,
Pickled do Nat'l Preserved Strawberries,
Worcestershire Sauce, Natural Preserved
Stoughton Bitters, Damsons, Fresh Salmon, Mushrooms,
Fresh Tomatoes, Asparagus,
French Pickles, Tarragon Vinegar, Hostetter Bitters, Fields' Oysters,
Boker's do Cove do
Le Drard's do Pine Apple Cheese, Royal Windsor do Olive Oil,
Marachino, Curacao, Assorted Candies, Curaçao, Aabsynth, Raisins,
Scotch Ale, Almonds,
London Porter, English Walnuts,
Scheidam Schnapps, Brazil Nut,
Golden Grape Cognac, Figs,
Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy, Prunes,
Mountain Dew Whis- Pecans,
ky, Crackers,
Family Supplies, Cakes,
Morning Call, E. D. Cheese,
Indian Queen Maderia,

also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps,
Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware,
Ladies Shoes, Notions,
Woolen Gloves, Hosiery,
do Mitts, Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs, do Mitts,
Stationery, &c., do Gauntlets,
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.
G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858.

A CARD.
G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.
The undersigned would most respectfully inform citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same form rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKAID, & CO.
In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our train as long as expected.
L. K. & CO.

STO REWARD.
STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Lewis' Rancho) one strawberry roan horse, branded JH on the near shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return.
10—11
RADFORD CABOT, & CO.

FOR SALE,
LAGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Moe, Bar Co. RADFORD, CABOT & CO.
10—11

FOR SALE,
ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange wheat, oats, and barley.
10—11
CHARLES MOGO,
Hot Springs Brewery.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

S. M. BLAIR,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's.
2—11

LAW OFFICE.
W. J. McCORMICK. T. S. WILLIAMS.
MCCORMICK & WILLIAMS,
ATTORNEYS AT LAW.
Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.
OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store.
G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858.
Missouri Republican and N. Y. Herald will publish 3 months daily, and send bill to this office.

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC.
At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T.
1—6m

NEW GOODS.
JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market.
1—11
GILBERT & GERRISH.

A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by 1—11
GILBERT & GERRISH.

THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon.
J. M. WALLACE, (up stairs), between Post Office, and Gilbert & Gerrish's Store, is now open for visitors.
The tables are new and perfect, and no pains were spared to make it an agreeable resort for gentlemen—the exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation.
2—11

EMPIRE SALOON.
THE BAR is now furnished with large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., chased with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESOME refreshment is respectfully called.
2—11
JOHN M. WALLACE.

WANTED.
A FEW good Mules in exchange for a good Working Cattle. Apply to 2—11
GILBERT & GERRISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.
WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.
X. X. X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.
FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS.
We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.
We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals. OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:
Single meals, 50 cts.
Supper breakfast and lodging, 1.00
For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50 cts.
For hay and grain, 1.00
and double those prices for feed over night.
N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery.
Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of CV.

COW STRAYED.
ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick top, around her horns, horns small, was giving milk, and was branded ATWOOD on the horn, there no certain. Please bring her to Curtis E. Bolton, 123 ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded.

LOOK HERE.
A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI FORGE BOOK" has been borrowed from the office of J. Harnett, Secretary of State. He earnestly requests a person having it to return it without delay.

WORK CATTLE.
100 Yoke of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by 1—11
GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,
Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, BOOTS & SHOES, HATS & CAPS, HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS, and outfitting goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figure, for Cash or Country Produce.
1—11

NOTICE.
THE Fifty Dollar DRAFTS made by Russell, Miller & Waddell on Smoot, Russell & Co., Leavensworth City, are now being redeemed in coin or Treasury drafts at our counter.
MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.
G. S. L. City, Jan. 5, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TANNER

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1859.

NUMBER 16.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY

KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

WOMAN.

We can't disguise the glaring fact,
That woman is the spring
Which moves all men to good or ill,
And o'er their pathways fling
The mantle which, if thrown aright,
Would well defy a flood—
But if amiss, 'tis vain to strive,
We flounder through the mud.

The evil heart, the millionaire;
The beggar at our door;
The merchant, farmer, doctor, all
Bow lowly to her power;
The poet sings the pleasant theme,
The chit'er unites—
The happy, gifted, grave and gay
Submit to "woman's rights!"

Heroic daring, brilliant deeds
And blackest guilt occur;
From step to step, if followed up,
Can all be traced to her;
She is the warp of joy or woe—
How apt her aim to spin
The threads which mesh our weary souls
In misery and sin!

She holds the reins, submissive be,
The reins to kick and rear;
She guides us on to happiness,
Or drives us to despair;
We chafe and worry, when she tries
A snaffle bit, and curb;
But seldom falter, break or balk,
If cheered by soothing word.

A steady rein, and even whip,
If used with winning smile,
And wielded with the gentle hand
Which love could reconcile,
Will make us strike a constant gait
And keep the traces tight;
Will make us sober, staid, sedate,
And run us home at night.

The Protectorate for Mexico.

The fact that Mexico has been in a state of anarchy and revolution ever since it ceased to be a dependency of the crown of Spain, is well known throughout the United States, and to the whole civilized world. Yet few, except those who have paid special attention to the subject, are aware how ruinously the civil dissensions of that country have operated upon the interests of American citizens, and how flagrant and frequent have been the violations of all settled principles of international law, by the authoritas de facto of the Mexican Republic.

That a country should be almost always carrying on civil war—that military chiefs should be constantly usurping power over the people, and constantly snatching it from one another—setting up and putting down constitutions, like the players in a ten pin alley, and to almost as little purpose—that the governments, succeeding each other in such rapid succession, should all alike stand powerless before the arm of lawless violence—that armed bands of insurrectionists should be holding possession of different portions of the Republic, and subjecting it to the ever varying fortunes and calamities of war—and that rival parties should all alike depend upon extorting money from foreigners, for the means of carrying on these ruinous contests—this is indeed a state of things, which extinguishes the last hope of national regeneration. To what purpose is it that Heaven has blessed such a people with a benignant climate, with a productive soil, with mines of silver, with the resources and means of greatness? Can the gifts of nature atone for this hopeless imbecility of man? By no means. Mexico has lost her morale, and the history of nations show that this is an incurable loss. If she were only destitute of present pecuniary means, those could be supplied. But she has lost the moral force to regenerate herself, and that makes her condition hopeless. She owes American citizens ten millions of dollars, and her treasury is not only empty, but her resources are exhausted and she has no way to replenish it. What is worse, these debts are all the time increasing, simply because she is all the time repeating the very outrages which have caused it. To ask for payment in money is what we have been doing for years. To enforce it is impossible. Some of our citizens have been ruined utterly in fortune by these spoiliations. Others have been imprisoned. Others have been arrested—detained—annoyed—their business broken up. Mexico can not punish the authors of these outrages—she cannot prevent their recurrence, for the reason that murderers and plunderers take shelter under governments which exercise a local jurisdiction by setting the central government at defiance, and the central government itself promulgates its decrees of spoliation upon the property of American residents, because in its destitution it is driven like the famishing wolf, to seize upon the most accessible prey, and thus becomes a plunderer in its turn.

Would any of the powerful governments of Europe—would England, France, Russia—have submitted to outrages like these, from a weak neighbor? The government of the United States, though constantly accused of sinister designs upon Mexico, and of fomenting hostilities for the purpose of opening a door to their accomplishment, has in truth, exhibited a forbearance which may safely challenge the old world to furnish a parallel. All these injuries, be it remembered, are in direct contravention of treaty stipulations. The treaties have been carried out by us, but Mexico has failed on her part. She has pleaded inability—not always in good faith—but we have known her weakness—we have pitied and forbore. Our plundered merchants and ship owners have asked whether some pity was not due to them, and the blood of some murdered citizen has occasionally cried to us from the ground against the slowness of our deliberations.

Now, if we cast our eyes southward we see the territory of Arizona, which we acquired by purchase from Mexico, stretching far along the Mexican frontier. Through it runs one of the post routes communicating between California and the Atlantic States. In it dwell ten thousand American citizens, exposed to the depredations of Mexicans who are sheltered by the neighboring local jurisdiction, and to the incursions of hostile Indians, which those local authorities have not the will and the central government has not the ability, if it has the will, to repress. The southern post route from the States to California may be broken up at any moment.

"I can imagine," says the President, "no possible remedy for these evils, and no mode of restoring law and order on that remote and unsettled frontier, but for the government of the United States to assume a temporary protectorate over the northern portions of Chihuahua and Sonora, and to establish military posts within the same—and this, I earnestly wish recommended to Congress."

This is plain and emphatic, and there is no mistaking the import of this proposal. Mr. Forsyth has announced the suspension of the political relations of his legation with the Mexican Republic, "and it was deemed proper," says the President, "to sanction his withdrawal of the legation from the city of Mexico." Here again, there is no mistaking the position of Mr. Buchanan, and we await with interest the action of Congress upon these suggestions and recommendations; made by the executive.

Meanwhile, have any of the nations of Europe aught to say against the temporary protectorate? Has England, while the history of India is fresh in recollection? Has France, now perfecting the conquest of Algiers, anything to say, even if she has the right to speak? Or has Russia, moving down upon Circassia, and stretching out into Tartary? We ask these questions, not conceding the right of any European nation to interfere with the affairs of the American continent, for that subject is well settled in the minds of the American people, but simply to enquire what could be said, if anything, provided the right to speak were conceded.

In our treatment of Mexico we do not propose to move forward upon a career of conquest, as in the case of India, Circassia, or Algiers; but to act upon the ground enunciated in the President's message, that "we have already exhausted every milder means of obtaining justice; and in such a case, this remedy of reprisals is recognized by the laws of nations not only as just in itself, but as a means of preventing actual war."

In a future number we shall examine the condition and resources of Chihuahua and Sonora, with a view of estimating the probable results of the proposed protectorate, for good or for evil, which are likely to ensue.—National, San Francisco, Cal.

Fight with Mojaves and Pah Uthas.

We are indebted to Mr. William Goodyear, together with Mr. Joseph Walker, who accompanied Colonel Hoffman, as guides, during his late excursion into the Mojave country, for the following particulars of the fight between the U. S. Dragoons, under Colonel Hoffman, and a large combined force of Mojave and Pah Uthas Indians:

After a toilsome march of fifteen days, a detachment of the First Dragoons, consisting of fifty men, under the command of Colonel Hoffman, seconded by Lieutenant Chapman, arrived at the crossing of the Colorado, at a place called Beaver Lake, but more generally known as "Beale's crossing." This was as far as Colonel Hoffman intended to penetrate, having taken a limited supply of provisions, and consequently preparations were made for a return to the Mojave, distant about one hundred and twenty miles, where Colonel Hoffman had left two companies of the Sixth Infantry, to await his orders. Scarcely had the camp been pitched for the night, when large numbers of Mojave and Pah Uthas warriors, all in the full panoply of grease and war-paint, fully armed, and entirely unaccompanied by their women or children, made their appearance in camp. In a short time these savages commenced to be very saucy, and spoke in a very threatening manner about the presence of the troops in their country. Their conduct became so unbearable, that they were peremptorily ordered to leave the camp for the night, and not to return until morning.

This order they were compelled to reluctantly obey, but took occasion to express their hostility, about 11 o'clock that night (Saturday), by shooting their arrows at the sentinels on duty—a compliment which was acknowledged by the return shots of the sentries. The camp being aroused, and the men properly stationed, the Indians refrained from any further display of hostility that night.

On Sunday morning, from five hundred to six hundred Mojave and Pah Uthas warriors were seen in the immediate vicinity of the camp, and they appeared to be determined to attack the troops. Colonel Hoffman, however, determined to take the initiative in this sort of business, and give the savages a "taste of his quality" before prosecuting his return to the Mojave. He accordingly dispatched his baggage wagons and pack mules, and after they had gotten fairly under way, the dragoons were formed, and commenced to reciprocate compliment with the enemy, by treating them to a series of balls.

A spirited engagement ensued between fifty dragoons and from five to six hundred resolved Indian warriors, during which the enemy lost from fifteen to twenty killed and a large number wounded. The dragoons did not lose a man, nor was there one injured. The last Indian killed was shot at a distance of six hundred yards, and the moral effect was so great, that they dispersed in all directions, finding it useless to contend with men who could kill them off at their pleasure at eight or nine times the distance their own arms could be rendered effective. The march of Colonel Hoffman was uninterrupted from that moment.

It will be seen that the report that Col. Hoffman had fallen back from the conflict, was unwarranted, and that the Indians, and not the troops, were the first to cry "hold, enough." It can, however, scarcely be doubted, that a formidable combination of Indian tribes has been formed to oppose the passage of the whites through the Mojave country, or to the establishment of military posts in their midst, and we will probably have to go through another Indian war to accomplish these results.—San Francisco Herald, Jan. 28.

Our Military Strength.

Secretary Floyd hit the military necessity of the day, as well as the peculiar sentiment of our people, when he addressed himself with so much ardor to the improvement of the national arms. Other nations—even those in which human life is cheapest—are catching his idea, that it is a wise economy to make one thousand men, with revolvers and repeating rifles, worth more in the field, than six or eight thousand with the old style of pistols and muskets, and whatever he does in introducing breech-loaders and other military improvements is eagerly watched and followed up in European armories. The Indians are now learning the force of long range Minies and breech-loaders, with which each man can rain twenty well-directed shots in a horde of savages in a charge of ten minutes' duration. This lesson was taught in the late decisive Indian battles, and will bear its fruit.

Superior arms, good pay, and Christian treatment—manly efficiency in brief—must always stand in the place of numbers in our army calculations. There is a great but deep-rooted and unconquerable prejudice against an increase of the standing army in all free nations. The expense of maintaining it is not so objectionable to our popular sentiment, as the vague idea of a separate and powerful class which belongs to the Government and lives apart from the changeable sympathies of the masses.

Our system of military strength rests on the intelligence, organization, and martial aptitudes of the people; and hence their instinctive reliance on themselves to do their own fighting, whether it be in defence of their own soil, or in what the British Cabinet, in speaking of its pet piracies, terms "the spontaneous settlement," of foreign domain. Texas and California are living records of the peculiar and energetic way in which our people act out their instincts of progress. As the French journalists demurely say of their new national phase of the slave-trade, "These are interests in which the Government confines itself to guarding the honor of its flag from intrusion, and leaves the rest to the unrestrained enterprise of its citizens."

Large standing armies are essential components of those despotic governments whose whole machinery is contrived to render the producing millions the mere working cattle and burden-bearers of a limited class of privileged non-producers; but our proclivities are all the other way. Our aims and efforts are for the weal of the masses. We can neither give up the services of armies of workers who are needed to till the soil, drive our factories, and bind the States together with railroads, nor can we tax their labors for the support of one surplus regiment of drones. With our immense Indian infested frontier we require a respectable military force, for it is the needful police of our border and sea-board. It should be maintained as cheerfully as the civic police of town and city, and in both cases we must be governed by a wise consideration of the varying wants of time and place.

Under many despotisms a good rifle is worth more than a soldier, and is cared for accordingly; but, with us, a soldier counts for the whole value of a free-born man, and in this point of view Secretary Floyd is taking steps to arm him as benefits his worth. The inventive genius and mechanical skill of the country has been put in requisition to produce the strongest, simplest, and most efficient class of weapons that human ingenuity can devise for army use, and the result has already left everything hitherto known far in the rear. There are arms now in course of construction which, at a trifling advance of cost, will enable one soldier to do more in close action than has ever been expected of six, and the whole world will be compelled to adopt this class of guns. This revolution in the character of arms will demand a higher grade of intelligence in the rank and file: and, in this advantage, no country on earth can compete with the United States. Floyd's maxim, "that the best arms, carried by the best men, are the elementary parts of our national strength," is sound doctrine anywhere.—States, Wash. D. C.

What can be Done.

A correspondent of the Express, urges the Legislature to request Senator Broderick to resign, as he does not represent the sentiments of the people, to whom he appealed, and who repudiated him. He further suggests, that, if Broderick refuses to resign, (and he probably will refuse,) that the seat be declared vacant, and another Senator elected. While we doubt very much the propriety of such declaration and election, we think it would be very proper, considering the fraud practised by Mr. Broderick upon the majority of the people of this State and their Representatives, to obtain his position for the Legislature, when he declines resigning, to solemnly protest in behalf of the people against his occupancy of the seat, and warn the United States Senate not to accredit him as an exponent of California interests. A movement of this kind should be made at once as Congress adjourns in less than two months.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. I. CITY, FEBRUARY, 15, 1859.

The massacre at the Mountain Meadows is still fresh in the memory of many in this city, and an allusion to it will touch the hearts of many in the States. It was there that about one hundred and thirty nine emigrants were brutally murdered, and whose bones even to this day bleach the grounds of that dreadful spot.

Who did this damnable deed,—the Indians? A strong suspicion rests upon the popular mind that white men, or at least those who claim to be white, were interested in it, and if not actual participants, encouraged the massacre. This wholesale murder must come to light, and we are glad to see that the Federal officers are moving in the matter, and that there is at least some probability that the parties, whether Indians or their adjuncts, Mormons, will be brought to justice.

Santa Clara and the vicinity of the Mountain Meadows seems to be a favored spot for murder. Below we annex two letters, received some time since, which inform us of the murder of two or three others by the Indians. In view of the circumstances, Gov. Cumming has made a requisition upon Gen. Johnston for troops, and they will proceed to that locality about the first of next month. The Executive, with that energy of purpose that has ever characterized him, is determined to protect the emigration which necessarily passes through this region south, as the following letter will show:—

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, UTAH, Great Salt Lake City,
February 14, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.:

I have received reliable information that several acts of hostility have been committed recently by the Piute and Pi-ute Indians between the Mountain Meadows and Santa Clara, on the San Bernardino route to California.

The necessary requisition has been made upon the Officer in command of this Department, who will detach a suitable military force to be stationed at such points on the route as will secure the emigration and other travelers from Indian hostilities.

General Johnston has informed me that the troops assigned to this duty will move soon after the first of March, from Camp Floyd.

J. Forney, Superintendent Indian Affairs, will visit the tribes in advance of the troops.

Please publish the above note for the information of the public, and oblige
A. CUMMING,
Governor Utah Territory.

In relation to the children rescued from that terrible slaughter, we refer to the following letters, by which it will be seen 15 have been rescued from the savages:—

SANTA CLARA, Dec. 9, 1858.

DR. FORNEY, Esq.,

Superintendent of Indian Affairs, U. T.,
DEAR SIR:—I think I have discharged my duty faithfully as to gathering the unfortunate children; I have now fifteen of them in my possession. I am satisfied that there were seventeen of them saved from the massacre; I know there were two of them taken east by the Pi-utes. I have visited the Pi-ranigets, west of there; they said they let the Pi-utes have the two that they got, and all they ever had; that they wanted to take them to the Mopais or Navajos, and they would get two or three horses a-piece for them. I could not feel satisfied in my mind until I had visited these two tribes. I accordingly got twelve men, pack mules, and 30 days' provisions; traveled east to the Colorado; then up the river three days before we could cross. The third day, after we crossed the Colorado, four mule that was packed with flour and dried meat took fright and ran off, leaving us on a desert without food or water. I sent two men in pursuit of the animal. As there was no water, the company had to proceed.

After traveling and fasting five days, we came to the Oribies, a city of Indians belonging to the Moquis nation, where the Pi-utes children have been sold as slaves for some years past.

We visited all the towns belonging to this nation, five in number; found many of the Navajos in these towns; that had been driven back by the U. S. troops, save several of the chiefs who said they were going to try and make peace with the Government.

On our first appearance the Navajos all left the town, supposing the U. S. troops from the west to cut them off. We had a good Spanish interpreter with us, and found those of the Moquis and Navajos that spoke good Spanish. I told them the evils that would follow in case they did not make peace with the Government.

The Moquis advised us not to trust them, as they would kill us if they got the advantage, as they hated white faces.

We could hear of no white children among the Moquis, except one white child, a boy, three years old; they said they got him of the Pachas; he was sick and not able to leave the town comfortably. Knowing that if we tarried long, we would be shut out for the winter by snows on the high mountains we had to cross, we accordingly started for home, pushing our animals as fast as they would bear it.

I had engaged an Indian to hunt and furnish us meat on our way back near the Colorado. This supply of meat we did not get, and a heavy fall of snow set in upon us, having been rationed on less than a pint of beans a day to the man; for five days, our strength reduced for the want of food; snow knee deep and the storm increasing, and the knowing of bark, hunger induced us to kill a horse; we feasted on his flesh over night, and were enabled to pursue our journey. The storm having abated, so that we could see our course, we arrived home safe December 3, having been 37 days out.

The Pi-ute Indians of late have been difficult to manage; travelers have passed unmolested until of late.

Soldiers and discharged teamsters have flooded by there, many of whom pay no regard to counsel, or care for no one but themselves, trading guns and much ammunition; They are unmanageable to a certain extent. If I would stand back and let them steal, and perhaps kill, it would be all right. I have spent my time and means since I saw you to keep peace in this part of the Territory, which I could have done if there had been none but Indians to deal with.

As regards the children and our journey to California, I intend to go with you according to your request, I have engaged a nurse. You can travel in the winter season, after you pass the rim of the Basin, better than in summer.

I anticipate a pleasant trip with you; it will rest my mind from the cares and anxiety that has encumbered me of late. I would be much pleased to hear from you; let me know your mind when you will be here.

JACOB HAMBLIN.

P. S.—You can get all the teams you want for crossing the desert here, which will be less expense than to bring them from the city.

I have told the Indians that the Americans and Mormons were one and friends. This was according to your instructions. You can, of course, see what would naturally follow their ancient hatred and animosity; we have to shoulder together with all the mean tricks the travelers are guilty of. They stole horses, killed cattle, and shot some two or three men, while I was gone to the Moquis nation. We have stood guard of late for our own safety. I saved nearly one hundred cows from being killed and wasted last fall, that were taken from the emigrants on the Big Muddy. There were but few of them left; many of ours killed. J. H.

FORT CLARA, Dec. 11, 1858.

MR. JACOB FORNEY:

DEAR SIR:—By the request of Mr. Jacob Hamlin, I seat myself to answer your letter which came to hand last night. Mr. Hamlin, starting early this morning on a trip to the Big Muddy, could not attend to it himself. He requested me to say that he had written three letters to you, why you had not received them he could not tell.

The Indians in our absence in search of the lost children, have proved very troublesome about this place, as well as south of here, on the California road. They have killed some two or three travelers; also several head of cattle and horses. Mr. Hamlin has now gone to quiet the disturbance if possible, so that travelers can pass unmolested. Seventeen of the lost children are safe and well provided for. Mr. Hamlin is ready to take them through as soon as you arrive.

Yours with respect,

THALES H. HASKELL.

The Superintendent of Indian Affairs, Dr. Forney, will leave this city next week for the south, and it may prove that his visit and investigations will not prove very wholesome to even some of our white folk who live about here and are considered some-nous persons.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. Gebow, interpreter for Dr. Forney. Mr. G. has been in the mountains for fourteen years, and we believe him to be well qualified to get out such a book.

The Eastern mail arrived in this city on Sunday night, at 11 o'clock.

The news by the last mail from the States is rather meagre. Montgomery and his bandits have been committing depredations upon the frontiers of Missouri, and Gov. Stewart had sent in a special message to the Legislature upon the subject who promptly responded by appropriating $30,000 and authorizing the executive to call out the militia.

A fierce war is raging between Senators Douglas of Illinois, Jones of Iowa and Hon. J. Slidell. It smacks of pistols and coffee, if grave Senators are ever presumed to have a weakness for gunpowder.

Congress is still hammering away on the Pacific rail road bill.

The gold excitement about Pike's Peak and Arizona is increasing.

The two Congressmen, Mr. Montgomery, of Pa., and Mr. English of Indiana, who had a difficulty on Pennsylvania avenue which resulted in a correspondence, has ended on paper—of course. This is a part of the history of Congress.

We perceive by our late St. Louis and Missouri dates that the Pike's Peak gold fever still rages, and from the best information we can derive more than 15,000 people will leave the borders next spring for this new El Dorado. In view of the discovery of these rich mineral deposits both at Pike's Peak and Arizona, the Chamber of Commerce at St. Louis have acted officially in the matter, and passed resolutions recommending the establishment of a branch mint and assay office in St. Louis.

The Missouri legislature has never been within our recollection without its representative of the "cap and bells;" and we should judge from the reports that reach us through the papers, that Mr. Pitt was the clown of the present one.

A few nights since a clerk in one of our mercantile houses, while passing along the street, was suddenly assailed by a man who confronted him, and who struck at him with a knife, and then ran. Fortunately, it only passed through his garments and inflicted a slight wound in the breast.

BRODERICK.—We perceive that the Senate in California have, by a decided vote, 23 to 9, requested Broderick to resign.

This of course he will not do, as he has got a good place obtained by purchase. Broderick is essentially out of his place in the Senate of the United States, a cellar education and a shoulder-hitting talent will do very well for the ring, but is altogether out in the respectable body of which, if his own constituency are to be believed, he is a disgraceful member.

He is we apprehend a bad egg, and we do not wonder that he smells foul in the nostrils of our California neighbors.

UTAH PATRIARCH.—We yesterday had an interview with Samuel Merrill, a native of Massachusetts, and who came into this Territory 11 years ago. He is a veritable patriarch, 76 years of age, and by a recent occurrence which brought into existence an eleven pounder, makes him the grandfather of 66 children, the great-grandfather of 17, and the sire of 12 own children.

This is good even for Utah where many wives prevail, but Father Merrill, although a saint, has but one.

The following extracts we take from the Carriers' Address of the St. Louis Morning Herald, for the reason that they have a local application to this latitude. We think we see in them, the tracings of the pen of our old friend Ferguson, formerly connected with the Herald:

"In wild Utah a wail of woe is heard, And sympathetic erinoline is stirred: The scripture prophecy was there fulfilled, By saints accepted, and by Brigham filled That seven short petticoats should proudly float

As the appendage of one long-tailed coat! "What!" cried old Buck, "shall Brigham Young have seven, And I not one? It shall not be, by Heaven!" "Come on!" said Young, "my agents now are drumming

For new recruits!" Buck coolly answered "CUMMING!"

The nation's chivalry was all on fire, In woman's cause to battle and perspire; A gallant host rode gaily o'er the plains, But only got "their labor for their pains." For Brigham's men, in Echo Canyon rallied, Against the foe in crawfish fashion sallied. The Gentile band, with mule meat for their fare,

Called for the foe, but Echo answered "Where!"

Brigham surrendered—he could not afford To die, and leave his sixty beds and board,

War would be cruel in the Mormon land, For every saint that death snatched from the band,

A dozen weeping widows would be left, And fifty orphans of their sires bereft.

• • • • •

A railroad to this region we must build; It shall be done—the people have so willed. Whether it run by choke-a-topper pass, Or Albert Quick's—the line of early grass—

Through the wild region of eternal snow, Or TERRACE CALIENTE—down below;

A road to California must be built; Though life be lost, and precious blood be spilt.

Why on the hackneyed subject longer dwell? It must be built, although it pass through well

The lower regions, we might safely say, For surely there we have the right of way."

By Telegraph to the Valley Tan!

PER F. H. & S. L. LINE, VIA, GENOA, CARSON VALLEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29, 1859.

The most important news we have for the Central Overland Mail, is the fact of the putting on of a line of opposition steamships, via Nicaragua, by C. K. Garrison. The first ship leaves March 5th.

Our Legislature have not as yet got in working order.

The Steamer Columbia arrived to-day from Oregon. An angry debate was going on in regard to removing the Capitol, from Salem to Portland.

Captain Russell, who was accidentally shot by Gillman, died yesterday.

Walsh, Editor of the "Varieties," was adjudged guilty of an assault with a deadly weapon, and was remanded for sentence.

The Steamer Pacific returned to Port last night in distress; she was bound for Victoria; she struck on a rock coming out of Crescent City harbor.

Fears are entertained that the burning of "Tulles," will set fire to the City of Stockton.

Large quantities of goods have been purchased within a few days, for the Salt Lake trade. A train leaves via the Southern route next week and another by Carson Valley, owned by Leihy & Co.

The Steamer J. L. Stephens, is just coming up the harbor with dates from New York, to the 6th, and from New Orleans, to the 13th inst.

PLACERVILLE, Jan. 29, 1859.
8 o'clock, P. M.

Weather very cloudy and cold.

The Robinson Family are playing to a crowded house to-night.

Minnis, the man cut so severely by John Moore, last Sunday morning, at the "Cary House," in this City, is recovering. Moore still in jail.

The excitement between the whites, and Chinese miners, at Diamond Springs, in which one Taylor was killed, has subsided. The Chinese still remain in the Diggings.

COLUMBIA, Jan. 29, 1859.

The Brick Store occupied by E. S. Nassau, corner of Main and State streets, together with its contents, valued at six thousand dollars, was entirely consumed by fire this morning. Fully insured.

YREKA, Jan. 29, 1859.

The citizens of this place and vicinity, held a meeting on the 27th inst., for the purpose of taking steps to secure the completion of the wagon road, from Yreka to Red Bluffs, via the Soda Springs—Sacramento route.

WEAVERVILLE, Jan. 29, 1859.

Nothing new from the seat of Indian War.

GENOA, Jan. 30, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.

DEAR SIR:—Stage arrived in 12 days last trip.

Col. Booneville, U. S. A., and Col. Collins, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, left Santa Fe on the 14th December, for Fort Defiance, to enter into peace negotiations with the Navajos, but it was doubtful whether they would arrive before the expiration of the armistice.

The trial of Professor Mahan, of West Point though its result has not been officially declared, has ended in his acquittal of the charges preferred against him by Lieut. Morton, of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
February 10, 1859.

We must notice the remarks of "Old Man Comie" on our theatrical criticism. We were not present at the representation of the "Weathercock," consequently did not either notice Mr. Baldwin as "Briefwit," or any of the others. We are happy to hear that he made such a favorable impression on the audience. We were not aware that Mr. Baldwin had only three hours to study the part of Col. Dumas; however, we stated he did it respectably, which is the highest praise his most partial admirers could have given him.

As Sir Matthew Scraggs in "Sketches in India," although Mr. Baldwin may fancy it his best character, we adhere to our original opinion.

We leave the public to judge whether we have been lenient to the fifth; with regard to the seventh, we have to plead guilty of partiality, inasmuch that when Mr. Rice, 7th Infantry, appeared as Lord Rivers in "The Day after the Wedding." We were desirous to pass the performance over lightly, as he felt himself sufficiently humiliated by his failure; this prevented us from giving him the castigation he so richly deserved, but it was with the express understanding he would not be again allowed to make himself a laughing stock for the audience. We have to apologize for this remissness of our duty.

We are delighted that Mr. Baldwin relies on his acting for success; we are sure he will meet with his desert. So long as our remarks are indorsed by the thinking and intelligent portion of the community, we care little what the small fry may think, and shall pursue the course we have hitherto adopted to the best of our judgment.

On Saturday evening, Kotzebue's play of the "Stranger" was repeated; as we predicted, it proved the most successful of any of the efforts of the "Dramatic Association." The following was the cast:—

The Stranger..... Mr. Chas. Northrop, Baron Steinfort.... " White Count Wintensen.... " Thatcher, Mr. Solomon..... " Rutledge, Peter..... " Crawford, Francis..... " Baldwin, Tobias..... " Shaw,
Mrs. Haller..... Mrs. Tuckett, Countess Wintensen " Whitlock.

Mr. Northrop as the Stranger had a very correct conception of this painful and difficult character; his reading shewed careful study; his efforts to veil the grief (which rendered life laborious) from the scornful world, was well delineated. In the fourth act where he exclaims, "Kings, laws, tyranny, or guilt can but imprison me, or kill me; But, O God! O God! Oh! what are chains or death, compared to the tortures of a deceived, yet dotting husband," his voice was silenced by a burst of well merited applause from the delighted audience.

Mr. White, who had only a short time to prepare himself for Baron Steinfort, shewed us that he had diligently applied himself to the task, and performed it with great success.

Mr. Rutledge, as Mr. Solomon, was more than usually happy in his rendering of the pompous steward; there was some very excellent bye play between himself and Peter. We think Mr. Crawford rather over-acted his part, notwithstanding he would make a good low comedian, if he would appear more natural.

Francis was much better performed by Mr. Baldwin than on the previous occasion. Tobias was very well impersonated by Mr. Shaw; his acting displayed great ability, and shews that when he will take the trouble he has the material in him.

Mrs. Tuckett as Mrs. Haller in this character had a better opportunity of shewing her talent as an actress, than on any previous occasion; she fully justified her high reputation, and the expectations formed of her in this character by her numerous admirers.

The laughable farce of "A Kiss in the Dark" concluded the evening's entertainment; although none of the performers were perfect in their parts, the piece was very well received.

On Wednesday, the 9th inst., "The Serious Family" was again presented. Chas. Torrens (Mr. Thatcher): we ventured a remark in our first notice, that this gentleman, with care and study, would prove an excellent light comedian. Our expectations have been fully realized, as he improves steadily; his rendering of this part was of the first class.

Capt. Murphy Maguire (Mr. White) was a very good representation of the gallant captain.

Aminadab Sleek. Mr. Baldwin has thoroughly identified himself with the character, and is so would be Frank was all the Cream of the set. Mr. ably perf Tuckett, with more along; she lock enac perfection The pie great sat White, B ston, were tain. The far Munster, Lawrence a specime acting we Charles ation of claim to t of the We Crawford of his bes Kate O this lady the publi think sho tage than Susan taste. It "Kiss in a certainme The ov by the ba Mr. Poun of music.

Mr. Forney I am a week will ing at a flower, that some least, mig ticle from see what piping tir The M whatever been so v been too day, and very fond do not lik Infantry, within th that have past mo public an ing. A c command left for The Gov posts-in a cupied by deserters belong to On We sociation Mr. Nor Tuckett, full just may be whole pl Mr. Smi complete the Asso casting ti to much afraid to e have rece ma," the the Thea own. H am conce whole As is one bri Now, "Drama, speaking But I m Baldwin that gen Sir Math in which readers ma" at a pire to bi "A ma Critics usual, m ened by e and is so properly appreciated, that praise would be superfluous.

Frank Vincent in the hands of Mr. Lee was all that could be desired. Lady Sovereign Creamby (Mrs. Lougee) enacted the part of the serious mother-in-law with good effect. Mrs. Chas. Torrens was very respectably performed by Mrs. Westwood. Mrs. Tuckett, as Mrs. Ormsby Delmaine, acted with more spirit than even on the first occasion; she was loudly cheered. Mrs. Whitlock enacted the sprightly Emma Torrens to perfection.

The piece was very well got up, and gave great satisfaction. Mrs. Tuckett, Messrs. White, Baldwin and Thatcher, at its conclusion, were severally called before the curtain.

The farce of "Perfection, or the Maid of Munster," was the next on the list. Sir Lawrence Paragon (Mr. Rutledge) gave us a specimen of the most finished pieces of acting we have seen on these boards.

Charles (Mr. Thatcher), his able personation of this character has added another claim to the good opinion of the frequenters of the theatre.

We were very much pleased with Mr. Crawford's performance of Sam; it was one of his best efforts, and was well received.

Kate O'Brian (Mrs. Whitlock); much as this lady has deserved the good opinion of the public on former occasions, we do not think she ever appeared to greater advantage than in this character.

Susan (Miss Whitlock) was not to our taste. It was too cold to wait for another "Kiss in the dark," which concluded the entertainment.

The overture to "Rancred" was played by the band in good style; we are obliged to Mr. Pound for introducing a superior class of music.

"DRAMA."

CAMP FLOYD, U. T., Feb. 6, 1859.

Mr. Editor:

I am afraid my correspondence for this week will prove very uninteresting, as nothing at all has transpired since my last. However, as I have the conceit to believe that some of your readers in the "States" at least, might be curious enough to read an article from Camp Floyd, if it were only to see what the "soldiers" were at, "In these piping time of peace."

The Mail last Monday, brought no news whatever, and this is one reason why it has been so very dull, and another is that it has been too muddy to drill more than once a day, and every soldier in Camp Floyd is so very fond of it, that it is a pleasure that we do not like to be deprived of. "A" Co., 7th Infantry, and "H" Co., 5th, have left Camp within the last week, to relieve companies that have been on detached service for the past month. Their duty is to guard the public animals in the different valleys grazing. A detachment of thirty-two men under command of Lieut. Hancock, 7th Infantry, left for Rush Valley, on Wednesday last. The Government will I suppose, establish posts in all of these valleys, that are now occupied by troops. I understand that several deserters were brought in yesterday; they belong to the 5th and 7th.

On Wednesday evening, the Dramatic Association presented us with "The Stranger." Mr. Northrop, as the "Stranger,"—Mrs. Tuckett, as Mrs. Faller. Mr. Northrop did full justice to the character; and as far as I may be allowed to judge, I have seen the whole played worse in a States Theatre. Mr. Smith, as Baron Steinfort, made a complete failure in his part. We think that the Association might use more judgment in casting their pieces, and they would appear to much better advantage. I am almost afraid to express my humble opinion in regard to either the actors or actresses, as I have received a pretty good hint from "Drama," that my powers of discerning stars in the Theatrical heavens, are not equal to his own. However, allow me to say as far as I am concerned, I am ready to grant that the whole Association is a perfect galaxy; there is one brighter than the rest.

Now, as a general thing I agree with "Drama," and must say that generally speaking, he has hit in the proper place. But I must say that I think his hit at Mr. Baldwin was unjust to say the least of it, as that gentleman sustained the character of Sir Matthew Scragge, better than any other in which we have seen him. I hope your readers may excuse me for noticing "Drama" at all. I can assure them, I do not aspire to become a critic.

"A man must serve his time to every trade, Critics all are ready made."

"COMEDY."

"You seem to walk more erect than usual, my friend." "Yes, I have been straitened by circumstance."

"The Miss" and "My Dear."

BY G. L. BALDWIN.

The following is extracted from a letter to a friend who twitted me for using the phrase "My Dear," when addressing a young lady:—

I love 'my dear' and hate 'the miss,'
Who thinks it wondrous, mighty strange;
That I should dare to steal a kiss,
As we oft through love's fields do range.

I love 'my dear,' because I feel
Her heart is pure, and kind, and true;
I hate 'the miss' to whom you kneel,
For sure she'll prove a miss to you.

Your 'miss' is stern, and proud, and cold;
'My dear' is tender, mild, and fair;
The 'miss' is bought with miser's gold;
'My dear' rewards a lover's care.

And should the 'miss' your hand e'er take,
Pray don't let your nerves be shaken;
But quietly your plans all make
For the day you'll be miss-taken.

As for me, I'll wed my dear fair,
And spend my life in honest bliss;
Her smile shall chase away despair,
And dear to me shall be each kiss.

How dear to me her winsome smile!
How dear her sweet and witching voice!
How dear the bliss, when angel's smile
To watch and guard my own dear choice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Feb. 4, 1859.

THIRTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.
SECOND SESSION.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12, 1859.

THE IMPORTANT BILL OF MR. MASON.

The following are the details of the important bill introduced yesterday by Mr. Mason, (adm.) of Va., from the Committee on Foreign Relations, authorizing the President of the United States to use the public force of the United States in the cases therein provided:—

Whereas, the President of the United States, in the discharge of the duty imposed on him by the constitution, from time to time to give to Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient, has informed Congress that, by reason of the distracted and revolutionary condition of Mexico, of certain of the States of Central America, and occasionally of those in South America, as well the property as the lives and liberties of American citizens, peaceably and rightfully within their respective limits, are subjected to lawless violence, or otherwise placed in peril by those claiming to be in authority, and for redress thereof negotiation and remonstrance, in the forms of diplomatic intercourse, are attempted in vain; and it being manifest to Congress that such condition of things in the States aforesaid will continue so long as government is found there in the unsettled and irresponsible condition at present, and at times heretofore tolerated by their people; and it being the indispensable duty of the government of the United States to protect its citizens against lawless violence without the limits of the United States, wherever found on lawful errand; therefore,

Be it enacted, &c., That whenever it shall be made to appear to the President that any citizen or citizens of the United States have been subjected, within the limits of any of the States aforesaid, and without commensurate offence on their part, to any act of force on the part of those claiming to be in authority therein, affecting the life or liberty of such citizens, and the case in the opinion of the President demands on his part the interposition hereinafter provided, it shall be lawful for the President to use the land and naval forces of the United States, or such part of them as he may deem requisite, in such way as in his judgment may be most effectual, by force, within the country so offending, to give full and adequate relief and protection to any citizen or citizens of the United States so injured or imperilled, and at his discretion to obtain redress for any wrong so done: Provided, That the President shall report to Congress (if in session, forthwith, or if in recess, at its first meeting thereafter) whatever may be done by him at any time in the execution of this act: And provided further, That as soon as the object shall be obtained in any case where the provisions of this act shall be carried into execution, the land and naval forces so used shall be withdrawn.

Mr. Mason gave notice that he would ask the Senate at an early day to proceed to the consideration of the bill.—N. Y. Herald.

NEW STATES AND TERRITORIES.

It was announced in the House last week by the Chairman of the Committee on Territories that he was ready to report a bill for the admission of Oregon, and would avail himself of the first opportunity to do so. The people of Kansas have by a memorial, presented in the Senate by Mr. Seward, asked for admission under a constitution framed at Leavenworth, and said to have been ratified by the people. As the Committee on Territories in either body is certain not to report such a bill, there will be an effort to tack on Kansas to the Oregon bill, in which case both will stand a good chance of remaining sometime longer in their territorial condition. The Committee on Territories in the House has agreed to report bills for the organization of Dacotah and Arizona Territories, but have decided against a like bill for Colona, the Pike's Peak region, so to be called in honor of the great Genoese navigator. There is a bill pending since last session for the organization of Nevada.

The House Committee on Territories to-day ordered that the bill for the organization of Arizona be reported with the boundaries asked for by the people of the Territory, through their delegate, Lieutenant Mowry, namely, all the territory south of the parallel of latitude north thirty-three degrees forty minutes, from Texas to the Colorado of the West. The bill is exceedingly simple in its provisions, and is probably the shortest territorial bill ever framed. The new Territory will contain about 100,000 square miles, and, leaving in New Mexico about 130,000 population, Arizona will be represented by about 10,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.

The Postmaster General, in reply to a resolution passed by the Senate inquiring whether the Department can be self sustained, says that in no case has the existing service been raised to a higher grade, or more frequent mails been granted than the increasing growth and business of the citizens and settlements through Utah, which they pass seemed fairly entitled to. It is evident that by a diminution of the service, the self-sustaining of the Department can unquestionably be secured, but it is worthy of much consideration, whether that would not leave the mere skeleton of a postal service commensurate with neither the business nor the social wants of the country.

[Correspondence of the Boston Courier.]
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18, 1858.

The President's Household Expenses.

To a large majority of all the strangers to the federal metropolis who visit Washington there is no object which excites so much curiosity as the executive mansion. How often do we hear the inquiry, "How much does it cost the President a year to live?" More especially is the question asked by us of New England and the North, where a harsh climate and reluctant soil constrains us, early in life, to watch every item of expenditure. There is always a desire to inspect the apartments of the President's House, to see if domestic life in it can be, in fact, different from domestic life elsewhere. There is no doubt that publications by the democrats of statements in relation to Mr. Adams' billiard table in the East Room, and by the whigs of the gorgeous furniture, including gold spoons, of the White House during Mr. Van Buren's occupancy, has inspired and sustained most of this unbecoming desire to visit every portion of the executive mansion.

We have heard it said that the billiard table story about Mr. Adams lost Kentucky to the whigs, and there can be no doubt that the gold spoon speech of Mr. Ogle, in relation to Mr. Van Buren, damaged the democrats very seriously.

The truth is, that up to the time of Mr. Polk the White House was not decently furnished. Congress then made an appropriation, being judiciously expended, improved things somewhat. After that no considerable appropriation was made till the year 1853, when some fifty thousand dollars were appropriated for heating, ventilating, painting, enlarging, and refurbishing the house. The responsibility of applying this appropriation to the purpose intended by Congress was devolved on Captain Lee, then of the Topographical Corps of the army, and we think the money was expended to the satisfaction of everybody. For the first time, the house was made comfortable to live in. The appliances for warming the house by hot water, and which were furnished by Walworth & Nason of your city, cost, it is said, more than ten thousand dollars, including expense of putting up. The furniture of the house is substantially the same, carpets and all, as was purchased by Captain Lee in 1853.

The silver in the house, I am told, is most ly bought in Paris during the administration of Mr. Monroe. There are but two or three pictures in the house. One in the red room, a portrait of Washington, which was cut from the frame and secured by Mrs. Madison when Washington was occupied by the British during the war of 1812. Another, in the President's office, a portrait of Bolivar, the South American patriot. There was no household ornaments about the house, except vases scattered here and there on mantels, and articles brought from Japan by Commodore Perry. The White House, in a word, is furnished more like a first class hotel than a first class private residence. There are articles of use in abundance, rich and massive, but no articles of art or adornment.

But to return to our question. What does it cost the President each year to keep up the executive mansion?

First, the President receives twenty-five thousand dollars salary. Next, he receives a house, garden and stables free of expense. The house is furnished and the garden cultivated by the Government. Every article of furniture necessary is furnished by the United States. The Government also lights and heats the house. It pays for a steward to take care of the public property and a fireman, and for no other domestic servants. The executive office is in the executive mansion, and for the former the government provides a private secretary, clerks to the secretary, two messengers and a porter. For all domestic servants, however, except steward and fireman, the President must pay out of his own pocket. He must pay for his cooks, his butler, his table servants, his female servants, his coachman and grooms, &c., &c., as any other person does who employs such a retinue of servants. He supplies his table, with the exception of garden vegetables, as any other private citizen does, by his own purchase. So with his stables. In short, the only things furnished by the government are household furniture, fuel and lights, steward and fireman, garden vegetables and flowers. All else is matter of private expense.

With these items as basis of calculation, any gentleman who keeps eighteen or more servants of both sexes, who keeps a stable filled with horses, as does Mr. Buchanan, who dines persons besides his own family, every day, and once a week gives a dinner to forty invited guests; can form some notion how much, out of twenty-five thousand dollars, remains at the end of a year.

Letter from Pike's Peak.

Capt. Geo. J. King yesterday received a letter from Mr. John G. Harris, a well known Missouri river pilot, who was lately seized with the gold fever, and emigrated to Pike's Peak, from which we make the following extract:

AURORA, Nov. 19, 1858.

I have arrived at Cherry Valley, and find it situated on the South Platte, 350 miles from Fort Kearney. We have built a house, and expect to move into it to-morrow. Our trip out was pleasant. A word about the mines. A man can make from $3 to $10 per day. There is gold all over the country, and old miners say that if a man will work, he will do well at mining anywhere. I am well pleased with my trip, and am perfectly satisfied that I made it.

I think this will prove a good country for raising almost any kind of grain and garden products. We have plenty of game of almost every description, from the buffalo down to the squirrel, deer, turkey and antelope in abundance.

Yours, respectfully,
JOHN G. HARRIS.

Southern California Items.

We take the following from the Los Angeles Star, of the 18th:

MOVEMENT OF THE TROOPS.—We understand that a detachment of the First Dragoons, stationed at Fort Tejon, has been sent out to Beale's crossing of the Colorado river, where the force is to co-operate with a company of the Sixth Infantry, which is to be located there. The detachment of the Dragoons consists of twenty-five men each from companies B and K—to be under the command of Lieuts. Chapman and Davis.

ON LEAVE.—Lieut. T. M. Saunders, Third Artillery, U. S. A., lately stationed at Fort Yuma, is in town, on leave of absence, owing to protracted sickness. He will go to San Francisco on the steamer Senator, on his way to his home, at Leesburg, Va.

Lieut. Davidson has been appointed Regimental Quartermaster of the First Dragoons, vice Lieut. Th. Magruder ordered on the recruiting service. Lieut. Davis has been temporarily discharging the duties of the position.

Col. Hoffman Lieut. Col. commanding the Sixth Regiment, United States Infantry, will arrive here on the next trip of the Senator.

Mr. Bethel, clerk to the Quartermaster, Captain Hancock, Sixth Infantry, has been appointed to the sutlership of the new post to be established on the Colorado.

Col. Hoffman, to be accompanied by Capt. P. Running, of this city, intends to make an exploration of the country on the Mojave and Colorado rivers, for the purpose of locating the new post.

On the completion of his primary duties in this part of the State, Col. Hoffman will depart for the Atlantic States, on leave of absence; and his return will be accompanied by his family.

The Purchase of Cuba.

It will be seen by reference to our telegraphic intelligence that Mr. Slidell, as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, has presented a bill in the Senate to authorize the President to renew negotiations for the purchase of the island of Cuba, and placing in his hands the sum of thirty millions of dollars to be used for that purpose. This is one of the most important motions ever made in Congress; and if the bill should be passed, its ultimate beneficial effect upon the material interests of every section of the Union can be exceeded only by those of the purchase of Louisiana. The true exchanges of commerce result from differences of latitude, which cause differences of climate and production. No prejudiced theories of home protection ever interfere with it, and the greater the exchanges between countries differing in latitude, the greater is the advantages of both. A measure like the present, which throws down the existing barriers to our trade with Cuba, affects every interest in the country. The forest, fisheries, manufactures and shipping of New England; the farmers, diarmen, miners and hand-workers of the Middle States; the lumber, naval stores and rice of the South; and the meats and grains of the West, all find an appropriate exchange in the markets of Cuba.

In its political significance the measure is of equal importance. Cuba overrules the great routes between our Atlantic and Pacific empires, and commands the outlet of that vast valley, unequalled in the world for territorial extent, activity of its population, and mighty destiny, which is drained by the Mississippi and its branches, with their twenty thousand miles of river navigation. In acting upon this measure, Congress should consider, not the five hundred millions of dollars of our trade that now pass annually under the guns of Cuba; it should remember that in thirty years we shall have sixty millions of people in this union, and, according to the ratio of our past commercial increase, we shall then have five thousand millions of dollars in value flowing out of the Mississippi valley, and passing between our Atlantic and Pacific shores. The purchase of Cuba may be valuable now, but it has an incomparably greater value for the generation that is to come after us. Statesmen will look to our future exigencies, and legislate in view of their requirements as well as of present necessities.—N. Y. Herald.

U. S. Mail Line

From St. Joseph to Great Salt Lake City.

NOTICE is hereby given that passengers will not be carried by us on any section of this route until further notice, and the agents and conductors on the route are positively forbidden from taking on passengers on any conditions whatever.
J. M. HOCKADAY & CO.,
By P. K. Dotson, Agent.
Feb. 14, 1859.

SHOSHONE DIALECT.

MR. JOSEPH GEBOW, takes this method of informing the public, that a vocabulary of the Snake and Shoshone Dialect is being published, and will be ready for sale by the 15th inst. All orders addressed to George Hales, at the "Valley Tan" Office, will be promptly attended to.

LIQUORS!

BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell the best St. Louis Rectified Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors in proportion.
MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.
16-17

PROPOSALS FOR HAY.

SEALED proposals will be received at the office of the Depot Quartermaster at Camp Floyd, Utah, till 12 o'clock M., on the 20th day of February, 1859, for cutting and stacking hay for use of the U. S. Quartermaster's Department, as follows: viz.
For Three to six hundred tons in Rush Valley.
" Five to twelve hundred tons at Camp Floyd.
" Three to six hundred tons on Chicken Creek.
" Three to six hundred tons in Sanpete Valley.
In every case the Hay to be stacked in "ricks," of not more than one hundred, and less than fifty tons, each; and on each rick to be stacked, the Depot Quartermaster may direct. The ricks to be enclosed by a fence, so as to be secure from the depredations of stock. The work to be completed by the first of September, 1859. Proposals should be addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed.

"Proposals for furnishing Hay."

P. T. TURNLEY,

Captain Q. M.'s Department.

Depot Quartermaster's Office,

Camp Floyd, Utah,

February 4, 1859.

16-17.

N. B.—"Desert News," please carry three insertions, and present bill at "Valley Tan" Office for payment.

P. T. TURNLEY,

Captain Q. M.'s Department.

HUMOROUS!

Why is a pretty young woman like corn in a time of scarcity? Because she ought to be husbanded.

Riches are the beggars of virtue—they cannot be spared or left behind, but they hinder the march.

There is a dandy in Chicago of such nice tastes that he greases his boots with the oil of bergamot. He is first cousin to the youth, who sleeps on a bed made of sponge-cake.

Never lose an opportunity of seeing anything beautiful. Beauty is God's handwriting—a wayside sacrament; welcome it in every fair face, every fair sky, every fair flower, and for it thank Him, the fountain of all loveliness.

It has been said that many young ladies, for the first year after their marriage can never look at one of their own sex without a peculiar sort of expression on their countenance of a compassionate curiosity, arising out of a conscious superiority, as much as to say, are you a married woman?

DELICATE ALLUSION.—An exchange, commenting on the fact that a number of Cincinnati young ladies have lately been married away to other places, says no city has a better claim to supply spare ribs for the universe.

Under the head of "March Squall," an exchange says that a woman in Pulaski county, Virginia, has regularly presented her husband with an heir during the month of March, for sixteen successive years.

A PROTEST ON TICK.—One of our Louisville leading houses sold a bill of goods to an Indiana customer on credit. A settlement by note at four months was requested, to which the Hoosier debtor willingly assented. "But suppose I don't pay this note when it falls due?" inquired he. "Then," replied our merchant, "your note will be protested, and your credit destroyed!" "How much will that cost?" said Indiana. "Dollar and a half," tremulously answered our friend. "Then; look here, old fellow, just include that amount in the note and pay it for me when you get the note protested."—Louisville Courier.

A Printer has been arrested at Woodbury, Tennessee, for bigamy. He is no true professional, or he would not have a second "take" before he had "composed" the first.—Prentice.

The matter can be easily explained. The poor fellow had a "foul case," and the first "take" being "solid," he was not permitted to use "lead," and his "space-box" being nearly empty, he was excusable for taking another, for we have never known a printer who was true to his profession, that would not jump at a "fat take"—say $10,000.

IRISH COMPLIMENTS.—The following compliments were paid to Sheridan, in Norfolk, by an Irish servant belonging to Mr. Coke, who attended him on shooting excursions, and which Sheridan retold with great glee:

Shot the 1st (the birds all getting away)—"More power to your honor! Did you see one little fellow drop his leg as he went off? He'll never stand on his tin toes again." Shot 2d (ditto)—"Tare an' agers, there they go! But didn't yer honor hear the shot rattle among them like pasc agin a windy? They'll pray never to see your honor again on this side of the country." Shot 3d (birds all off again)—"Tunder an' ouns! but they've coitched it! After watching them awhile.) There's three wounded anyhow, for they had hardly stringth to fly over yon hedge; the devil a wink of sleep they'll get this blessed night." Shot 4th (a pheasant gets away)—"Well, I never seen a poor gentleman taken like him; he'll remember your honor many a long day for that. The spalpeen is carrying away more shot than would set up an iron monger at Skibbereen." Shot 5th (a snipe gets off)—"Brother, you may cry crake, my fine fellow—you may take your long bill to the other world. You'll wake to-morrow morning with a lumbago in your soft head." Poor Sheridan could stand this no longer, but gave his countryman a fee for his ingenuity, and proceeded on his beat alone.

A Thrilling Bear Story—Life Saved by a Dog.

A correspondent of the Lewisburg Era, writing from Nicholas county, Va., gives an incident of a most exciting nature, which occurred there on the 6th inst. Wm. C. Barnett went on a hunting expedition, taking a dog with him. After being out a short time, he shot a large bear; breaking his back and rendering his hinder limbs useless. He then advanced on the animal—knife in hand—to dispatch him. The letter says:

The spot where the bear was shot is on the mountain side, immediately above the decayed trunk of a fallen tree. No sooner had Mr. B. mounted the log in reach of the bear when he was tripped up, falling prostrate, his head down the hill, his legs resting on the log. The bear then drew him up and commenced gnawing and biting him at a rapid rate. Mr. B., knowing his dangerous situation, felt that something for the better must be did. Raising himself partially up, in a sitting posture, his right hand still grasping his knife, with which he aimed at the head of the bear several effective blows: one, however, missing his mark, inflicting a deep horizontal gash in his right leg, above the knee. So soon as the bear, eager for revenge, discovered this mistake, caught the wound in his jaws, tearing it horribly. Finally Mr. B. succeeded in disengaging himself, while the bear, very high exhausted, retreated several yards down the mountain steep, where, from the effect of the shot and cuts, he instantly expired. Mr. B., feeling his almost helpless condition, and fast growing weak from loss of blood, resolved, in his weak state, to prove more than conqueror, reloaded his gun the fourth time, dragged himself down the hill, and shot his antagonist again, the bear being some moments dead. No further danger being possible from this source, Mr. Barnett was made to reflect upon his situation—a distance of four miles from any neighboring house, almost dying—beyond the reach of human aid; reflecting thus, a happy thought occurred to his mind, which was, to rend from the bosom of his new linen, a strip containing the buttons, which he crimsoned in his own blood, bound it around the neck of the dog, and endeavored, through gentle means, to persuade him to leave him, and go home and give the alarm. The dog advanced a few paces, and returned to his master licking his wounds, and howling most piteously. Mr. B. then took a piece of his hunting-shirt, attached it to the neck of the dog also, and proceeded to strike him, which he had refrained from doing, until he found it strictly necessary to save his life. This, the second time he was successful. Mr. B., fearing his dog would not go directly home, dragged himself up the mountain, in order to gain the summit, where, should the dog fail, he might be heard halloo more plainly. The dog, however, was faithful, gave the alarm, but would not return; on account of the company going a contrary direction from his master. In the meantime, a Mr. John Buffman, traced the dog up a mountain stream, whence he had come. Arriving at the top, he distinctly heard Barnett halloo, procured the assistance of his friends, made haste to the spot, and conveyed Mr. B. to his home almost insensible. Last accounts he was very ill, and not expected to survive.

During the personal canvass of Mr. Garnett among the electors of Salford, England, he and his friends calling at a huckster's shop, found only a boy who having learnt their business, went to the foot of the stairs, and called, "Mother here's a mon as wants yo'r vote for him 't be a Parliament man." "Well," shouted the mother, "tell him thy feyther's not in, but if he'll chalk his name on th' counter, we'll inquire into his character."

ADVERTISING FOR A WIFE.—G. W. Lattie, writing from Stockton to an exchange in San Francisco, says: Girls, I want a wife; my age is between 25 and 26; height, 5 feet and 10 inches; weight, between 140 and 150 pounds; auburn hair; trade, that of a farmer; and capital $600. I want a respectable girl, between 14 and 25 years of age; weight between 110 and 150 pounds; auburn or black hair. One that was raised to labor and that is not feared to do the same. The reason that I thus address the girls, is, they are scarce in this vicinity, and I have neither time nor money to spend in buggie-riding around with and in search of them.

STEERING A WOMAN.—John Riley has been locked up in Marysville, for striking a woman named McCerron, in the face.

PROSPERITY is no just scale. Adversity is the only balance to weigh friends in.

A Retired List for Officers of the Army and of the Marine Corps.

The bill recently reported by Mr. Davis, of Mississippi, from the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, excites considerable interests among officers of the army and marine corps. This bill is in the form of a substitute for that introduced by Mr. Iverson on the 20th of January last, and is entitled, "A bill to promote the efficiency of the army and of the marine corps by retired disabled and infirm officers."

The first section provides that if any commissioned officer of the army shall have become, or shall hereafter become, incapable of performing the duties of his office, he shall, as provided in the second section of the act, be placed upon a retired list, with the pay proper for the highest rank held by him at the time of his retirement; whether by staff or regimental commission; and with the service rations to which he may then be entitled, including general officers who may be retired, and the regular allowance for one servant. If the officer's disability be proved to result from wounds received in action, his pay proper is to be that of his highest rank, by brevet or otherwise. The section also provides that not more than one-seventh per cent., of the whole number of officers in the army shall be on the retired list at any one time.

The second section provides for the appointment of a board, to be composed of not less than five nor more than nine commissioned officers, to examine any officer who, on the plea of incapacity, shall voluntarily apply to be retired, or, on being ordered to perform any duty appropriate to his commission, shall report himself unable to comply with such order; or, whatever officer, in the opinion of the President of the United States, is incapacitated from performing his duties. This board is to be composed of officers superior in rank to that of the officer examined.

If it appears from this examination that the officer's disability can be traced to vicious habits, he is then to be tried by a court-martial, on charges and specifications duly setting forth the offenses alleged, without limitation as to the date when committed.

The findings of all such boards must have the approval of the Executive. The third section provides that whenever the President shall deem it advisable to cause an officer who has been withdrawn from active service and retired from the line of promotion, to be placed on any duty not incompatible with his condition, such officer shall, for the time he may be so employed, be entitled to all the pay and allowances of the grade, with which he was retired from active service and promotion.

During the personal canvass of Mr. Garnett among the electors of Salford, England, he and his friends calling at a huckster's shop, found only a boy who having learnt their business, went to the foot of the stairs, and called, "Mother here's a mon as wants yo'r vote for him 't be a Parliament man." "Well," shouted the mother, "tell him thy feyther's not in, but if he'll chalk his name on th' counter, we'll inquire into his character."

ADVERTISING FOR A WIFE.—G. W. Lattie, writing from Stockton to an exchange in San Francisco, says: Girls, I want a wife; my age is between 25 and 26; height, 5 feet and 10 inches; weight, between 140 and 150 pounds; auburn hair; trade, that of a farmer; and capital $600. I want a respectable girl, between 14 and 25 years of age; weight between 110 and 150 pounds; auburn or black hair. One that was raised to labor and that is not feared to do the same. The reason that I thus address the girls, is, they are scarce in this vicinity, and I have neither time nor money to spend in buggie-riding around with and in search of them.

STEERING A WOMAN.—John Riley has been locked up in Marysville, for striking a woman named McCerron, in the face.

PROSPERITY is no just scale. Adversity is the only balance to weigh friends in.

PROSPERITY is no just scale. Adversity is the only balance to weigh friends in.

SALT LAKE HOUSE.

JAMES TOWNSEND, Proprietor.

Prices of Board.

Board and Lodging per week,	$10 00
Board, (without Lodging),	10 00
Board, per day,	1 50
Supper, Breakfast and Lodging,	2 00
Single meal,	1 00
Animals, per night, hay and grain,	2 00
Payments to be made in advance.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT, SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

TERM of the United States District Court, for the Second Judicial District, of the Territory of Utah, will be held at the City of Provo, in said District, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1858.

JOHN CRAPLEBAUGH, Justice 2nd Judicial District, U. T.

L. & A. CARR,

WHOLESALE BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS

AND

BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,

No. 49 Main Street,

ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetic, grammar, geography, philosophy, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of

FOREIGN AND

DOMESTIC

STATIONERY,

PRINTING

AND WRITING

PAPER,

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY,

Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books, to order, and at the shortest notice.

14-11

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,

AT

CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.

CHARLES HARRISON,

PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best the market affords, and neat and comfortable apartments.

P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.

12-11

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES,

HATS AND CAPS,

WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco,

Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco,

Powder, Shot, Playing Cards,

Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon,

Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.

Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky,

Dark do do Bourbon do

New York do Rectified do

Gin, Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard, Mixed Pickles,

Durham do Assorted do

Assorted Jams, do Gherkins,

do Jellies, Piccolilli,

do Syrups, Pickled Onions,

do Cordials, Tomato Catsup,

Brandy Peaches, Walnut Catsup,

do Cherries, Mushroom Catsup,

do Pears, Cayenne Pepper,

Assorted West India Cellery Seed,

Preserves, Spanish Olives,

Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Pepper Sauce,

Peach do Assorted Sauce,

Apple do do Nat. Preserves,

Flum do Capers Capoties,

Raspberry do Natural Pres'd Pines,

Gooseberry do Roast Turkey,

Blackberry Brandy, Roast Chicken,

Raspberry Brandy, String Beans,

Fresh Lobster, Green Peas,

Pickled do do Corn,

Fresh Clams, Assorted Herbs,

Mince Meat, do Sweetmeats,

Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved

Fresh Cauliflower, Peaches,

Pickled do Nat'l Preserved Straw-

Worcestershire Sauce, berries,

Stoughton Bitters, Natural Preserved

Fresh Salmon, Damsops,

Fresh Tomatoes, Mushrooms,

French Pickles, Asparagus,

Hostetter Bitters, Tarragon Vinegar,

Boker's do Fields Oysters,

Le Drard's do Cove do

Royal Windsor do Pine Apple Cheese,

Maraschino, Olive Oil,

Curacao, Assorted Candies,

Absynth, Raisins,

Scotch Ale, Almonds,

London Porter, English Walnuts,

Scheldam Schnapps, Brazil Nuts,

Golden Grape Cognac, Figs,

Old Virginia Peach Dates,

Brandy, Prunes,

Mountain Dew Whis-Peano,

ky, Crackers,

Family Supplies, Crackells,

Morning Call, E. D. Cheese,

Indian Queen Maderia,

also a large and well selected stock of

Clothing, Hats and Caps,

Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware,

Ladies Shoes, Notions,

Woolen Gloves, Hosiery,

do Mitts, Buck Gloves,

do Scarfs, do Gauntlets,

Stationery, &c., do

All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.

G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858.

14-11

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858.

The undersigned would most respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same uniform rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKEAD, & CO.

In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our trials so well expected.

L. K. & CO.

$10 REWARD.

STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Lewis' Ranch) one strawberry roan Horse, branded JH on the hind shoulder. To owner reward will be given for his return.

10-11

RADFORD, CABOT, & CO.

FOR SALE,

LAGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Moxo, Salt Co.

10-11

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

FOR SALE,

ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.

10-11

CHARLES MOGO.

Hot Spring Brewery.

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-

MAKERS,

WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of watch materials, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry committed to their care. Charles Baylies, at the Store at Livingston, Kinkead & Co., their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage.

10-11

G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1858.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR

AT LAW.

Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

2-11

S. M. BLAIR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR

AT LAW.

Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's store.

2-11

LAW OFFICE.

W. J. MCCORMICK. T. S. WILLIAMS.

MCCORMICK & WILLIAMS,

ATTORNEYS AT LAW.

Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.

OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858.

Missouri Republican and N. Y. Herald will please publish 3 months daily, and send bill to this office.

1-11

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN

GOODS, ETC.,

At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T.

1-6m

WAGONS.

A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale

by

1-11

GILBERT & GERRISH.

BILLIARDS.

THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon,

J. M. WALLACE, (up stairs,) between the Post Office, and Gilbert and Gerrish's Store, is now open for visitors.

The tables are new and perfect, and no pains will be spared to make it an agreeable resort for gentlemen, in the exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation.

2-11

JOHN M. WALLACE.

WANTED:

A FEW good Mules in exchange for

a good Working Cattle. Apply to

2-11

GILBERT & GERRISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Matt Liquors of the above established in quantities to suit purchasers.

X. X. ALE, PORTER, and our malted BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS,

We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals, $1 00

Supper breakfast and lodging, 2 00

For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50

do do do hay and grain, 1 00 and double the prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash price paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery.

MOGO, RUIR & CO.

Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

1-11

COW STRAYED.

ON the 23d October last, a small young

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TANNER

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1859.

NUMBER 17.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

For the Valley Tan.

My Happy Home.

Home of my youth and scenes of my childhood,
How oft to my fancy the vision does come
The bright sunny hours, the fields and the flowers,
And all the lov'd scenes of my own happy home.

In fancy again do I sport with my playmates,
Again through the fields do I idly roam;
Or at eve on the green do I play at the high-gates,
With the dear little friends of my childhood's home.

What joy we all felt when the school hour was over,
And the hour for play and pleasure did come;
To sport through the daisies and sweet smelling clover,
That spanned the fields of my own native home.

Though in a strange land and exiled from all pleasure,
I still fondly hope that again I shall come
To the scenes of my youth, and my heart's fondest treasure,
The home of my childhood my own happy home.

J. S.

More of the Mohave Indians.

Probable Massacre of the Stockton Mail Party.

An "extra" issued Sunday morning, the 23d of January, from the office of the Southern Vineyard, of Los Angeles, says:

Mr. Joseph Walker—one of the oldest mountaineers living, than whom no man is more capable of forming a correct conclusion from the conduct and appearance of Indians—informs us that he is apprehensive that a party of men, supposed to number about fifteen, belonging to the Stockton and Albuquerque mail transportation company, has been cut off by the Mohaves on the Colorado river. The circumstances, as related to us yesterday by Capt. Walker, who accompanied Col. Hoffman in his recent visit to the Colorado river, are that on the evening of the arrival of the party at the river, he was informed by a Pah-Utah that there was a party of Americans a short distance below, coming up the river. Upon being closely examined, he stated a few days previous the party of whites were traveling down William's Fork, which for some distance runs nearly parallel to the Colorado, that they were seen by the Pah-Utahs from the hills lying between the two rivers, and that time enough had elapsed for the party to have reached the crossing of the Colorado, which is about 50 miles up the river from the mouth of William's Fork. Subsequently, Capt. Walker questioned a Mohave Indian, who came into camp, respecting a party of whites reported as coming up the river, but he seemed to be profoundly ignorant of any such party. Captain Walker then informed him what the Pah-Utah had said, when he replied that the Pah-Utah was a liar. Captain Walker thinks from the manner and action of the Mohave that he was dissembling, and that the party seen by the Pah-Utahs had been cut off by the Mohaves who reside along the Colorado, between the mouth of William's Fork and the crossing.

As Col. Hoffman's party were returning from the river, Mr. Craig, the agent of the Mail Company on this end of the route, was met on his way out to the river, and he stated that he was going to the river, where he expected to meet a party of some fifteen men from Albuquerque. As the party reported to have been traveling down William's Fork were on the mail route road, Capt. Walker thinks there is great reason that the Mohaves have cut off, and murdered this party. It has been known here since the arrival of Mr. Heintzleman, Indian agent on the Colorado river, that the Mohaves had declared that they would not permit a military post to be established in the country, nor would they suffer the mail to be transported over that route. This declaration was made to Mr. Heintzleman, by a Mohave chief who visited him at Fort Yuma. From our own knowledge of the treacherous and insolent character of the Indians, and the unlimited confidence which we have in the knowledge, judgment and capacity of Capt. Walker, from his long and successful experience with Indians, to arrive at correct conclusions from the slightest indications given by them, we are forced to believe that another party of our fellow countrymen have been sacrificed by these treacherous and brutal savages, who perhaps of all the Indians in our territory have never received any ill treatment from the whites on any occasion.

The Indian War in the North.

More Fighting—Twenty Warriors killed, Two Volunteers Seriously Wounded.

WEAVERVILLE, Jan. 26, }
10 o'clock, P. M. }

From the Northern Californian Extra, of January 23rd, published at Uniontown, Humboldt County, we take the following:

Gen. Kibbe has just returned from Capt. Messick's camp, and informs us that Capt. Messick, with fourteen men, was attacked by the Indians, one hundred to one hundred and fifty in number, in the Redwoods, about seventeen miles east of Dows' Prairie, at nine o'clock yesterday morning, and the Indians were repulsed after a hard fight, which lasted one hour.

About twenty warriors were killed, and two of the volunteers wounded in the engagement. Thirteen squaws and children were made prisoners. Among the Indians killed it is said that the noted warrior Chief Chu-Pen-Tony was one.

On their return from the field with the wounded and prisoners, two shots were fired upon them by the Indians, one of which severely wounded Work, one of the volunteers, in the elbow. The names of the two wounded in the engagement are John Houck, wounded in the right hand and body, and Samuel Overlander, on both thighs. It is hoped that none of the wounds will prove fatal. Preparations are now being made by three different parties to surround these Indians.

STILL LATER.

A messenger to Gen. Kibbe has just arrived from Redwood Creek with the news that an engagement was had between a small scouting party of the volunteers and the Indians, on Redwood Creek, near Albee's Rancho. One Indian was killed and one badly wounded, and as the party was returning, near Albee's house, one of the volunteers, Calvin Gunn, was shot through the body, and it is feared dangerously wounded.

The General Commanding the California Department of the Pacific Division, has engaged the fine steamer Uncle Sam to transport troops destined for the Mojave country, direct to the mouth of the Colorado, instead of subjecting them to the long and harassing march overland. From seven to eight companies will be dispatched, composed of Artillery, Cavalry and Infantry, and it is thought that this force will be quite sufficient to subvert all the purposes that may be required. It is the General's intention to establish a strong post on the Colorado, at Beale's crossing, in the 35th parallel of latitude, the object of which will be to give the required protection to the projected Overland route via Albuquerque. We understand that no hostilities will be prosecuted against the Indian tribes, unless they commence the attack, the troops being only required to establish the posts alluded to, and give protection to the mails; but in the event of attack, will be sufficiently strong to at once give the savages a lesson from which they will not quickly recover. The troops will be transported from the mouth of the Colorado to Fort Yuma, in the small steamers now plying on that river; but will make the remainder of the journey north by land, taking the western track of the river to Beale's crossing. A squadron of Dragoons will march immediately from the Tejon and on arriving at the crossing, will await the arrival of Col. Hoffman, with the rest of his command.

It is as well to remark, while on this subject, that the route recommended by Colonel Beale, has been found deficient in water, between the crossing and the Cajon Pass, for the distance of one hundred and twenty-eight miles, so much so as to be incapable of supplying any considerable body of troops with their sumpter animals. Colonel Beale passed over the route with but few men, and with camels, capable of going three or four days without water, and probably did not make sufficient allowance for large trains with horses and mules. In other places the water has been found to be very alkaline, for four or five miles in succession, which cannot but prove very deleterious to man and animal. General Clarke has exhibited a great degree of energy and promptitude in this matter; but it must be admitted, that if the Mohaves and Pah-Utahs have determined on a war, they are likely to give us greater trouble than even the Oregon Indians, as their country is unknown to the whites, and inaccessible by means of steamer or other water craft, involving the necessity of conveying the troops with their stores, arms and ammunition, by long and tedious marches.

IMMENSE SHEEP MOVEMENT.—The Santa Fe (N. M.) Gazette, states that 105,000 sheep are about to be taken from Bernalillo and Valencia counties, in that Territory, overland to California. There is also a drove of 10,000 from Ohio, now at Santa Fe, bound for the same destination.

"I am afraid," said a person of questionable or unquestionable habits, "that I am likely to have water upon the brain." "You will never have it upon the stomach," was his companion's consolatory reply.

[From the Sacramento Union.] Salt Lake Mail Route.

Under this head the San Francisco National publishes a statement—professing to come from one Flenner, who says he came passenger from Salt Lake—which reads like a malicious misrepresentation. It was published, too, just in time—as if by accident—to be sent to Washington by the last steamer. This man Flenner has made a statement which is totally inconsistent with the truth. He says to the National that—

There were five through passengers. They were compelled to pack the whole distance from Salt Lake City to the sink of the Humboldt, which is about 115 miles distant from Genoa. The snow was from six inches to five feet in depth along the entire route, and in crossing the valleys the mules could not find bottom. They were in deep snow for a distance of 600 miles. Flenner says he has lived a good deal in severe climates, but he never suffered so much from the cold as during this trip. All the passengers were more or less frost bitten. Flenner being used to cold weather did not suffer so much as the others.

From Salt Lake City to Placerville the distance, by the old emigrant route, by the Goose Creek mountains, is put down at 736 miles. On the line which the mail has taken, a few weeks past been carried, which leaves the Goose Creek Mountains to the north, the distance is reduced over 100 miles; which would bring it down to about 600 miles from Salt Lake to Placerville.

Of that distance, 350 miles is traveled in the valley of the Humboldt, where snow rarely falls, and never lies on the ground for any length of time. This proves that the statement of Mr. Flenner that he traveled in snow for 600 miles cannot be true. He says, too, that they had to pack to the sink of the Humboldt. They may have traveled on mules; but it was not because the road was bad, for thousands of wagons have traveled the Humboldt Valley road, during the past ten years. This story is of a piece with his declaration that he traveled 600 miles in the snow. The contractors may have neglected to provide for passengers as they ought, but this is not chargeable to the route.

As an offset to this Flenner snow storm, we republish the following statement of the snow difficulties and suffering experienced on the Southern route. Upon the arrival of one of the mails at St. Louis, the Republican said:

Twenty-five hours were consumed in coming the first seventy-five miles from Tucson. Through Apache Canyon the snow was fifteen inches in depth. At Apache they were forced to leave the coach, and walk a distance of twelve miles in the night, through snow two and a half feet in depth. By this operation, Beardsley had his feet badly frozen. He says he never before experienced such a night of suffering. Along this portion of the route it required twenty-four hours to travel a distance of fifty-eight miles. A severe storm was encountered on the Colorado river, which, however, did not materially impede progress, as it came from the west, otherwise it would have been the occasion of much lost time.

A company of United States troops were quartered at Tucson, which had lately left Fort Buchanan. Another, a relief company, was met at Apache Pass, on the way to the latter Fort. The condition of the soldiers was truly pitiable; many of them having their hands and feet badly frozen, and all undergoing the greatest hardships.

Utah a Great Grazing Country.

A correspondent of the Christian Advocate, giving some notes of a trip to Salt Lake, writes as follows:

The want of rain has caused the desert, which extends along the eastern base of the Nevada from Oregon to Sonora from 50 to 100 miles in width. In this desert there are considerable tracts of meadows at the sinks of the streams from the mountains. East of this desert, the rain seems to gradually increase to the Rocky Mountains. In 1850 I passed through the Great Basin, to the south of Salt Lake. The country was traversed by low mountain ranges, from ten to twenty miles apart all (like the Nevada) running north and south. There were many valleys between them clothed with high grass. We passed a valley about 200 miles due west of Salt Lake City, some 60 miles in length by 20 in breadth, which, I should think, contained as much good land as Salt Lake Valley itself. Winter grazing is little interrupted in the Great Basin by snow. Wherever you see sage, you find bunch grass. It is well adapted to sheep, and there is arable land enough for a pastoral population. I believe the deserts of Utah and the adjoining Territories afford as much feed as the deserts between Palestine and the Red Sea, on which the vast flocks and herds of the Israelites grazed for forty years. The eastern border of the Rocky Mountains, with New Mexico, Utah, East Oregon, and Washington Territories, are destined to become the great grazing field of the nation. While the Mississippi Valley will grow the grain for stall feeding, much of the wool may yet find its nearest market in the manufacturing of California. A vast field for the consumption of woollen fabrics must yet open in South America, Japan, Northern China and the eastern portion of the Russian Empire.

General Scott had arrived in New Orleans, and was received in the most magnificent manner by the citizens and military. General Scott delivered an address, from which the following is an extract:

Behold all this vast array of happy soldiers, whose rich uniforms and glittering muskets, with drum and fife, and clarion, remind them of the roar of war. Still they think not of it. What makes them so gay and cheerful? To-morrow they must be led to the charge. They know it, but are confident of victory. They have heard the proud city must fall. The words are, "booty and beauty," this is their motto. They came, and how were they met? Would you know it? Ask that gallant band of veteran soldiers whose muskets did the work. (Great applause.) Would you know it? Ask those grave men—young sons then—sons of Louisiana. Would you take a lesson in valor, patriotism and glory? Ask these Veterans of 1814; they will give it to you. (Applause.) This is their day. It was their day on the 8th of January, 1815. It was their day then in the midst of the battle—let it be their day now. Well, then, let the free sons of Louisiana give them the honor that is their due. (Applause.) Gentlemen, it is useless for me to exhort you to-day as to the proper celebration of this anniversary. It was one so deeply implanted in the hearts of Louisianians—one so deeply cherished by Americans at large—that it is not necessary to allude to the circumstances of that battle; nor to the details of that glorious engagement. All we can do is to return our thanks and bless the Almighty Providence for the blessings fought for then, and which we are now enjoying.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. B. L. CITY, FEBRUARY, 22, 1855.

Owing to the late arrival of the last Eastern mail and severe indisposition, we did not issue our paper on the regular publication day. As we have several times heretofore been several days in advance, we will be readily excused under the circumstances for being behind once.

The last number of the Church Organ is almost entirely filled with a lot of characters that look like Egyptian hieroglyphics, and is baptized by the name of the Deseret Alphabet. This idea to get up a peculiar vocabulary is about as ridiculous as Mormonism itself; but it is a significant sign or emblem of the Utah theocracy, who reign supreme, while the great masses of the people are oppressed by taxation.

Mormonism, even with all the mysteries of its disgusting endowments, cannot be concealed by the invention of new characters to represent their conduct; and if they would be wise, they would educate the children in the rudiments of the English language—for they are sadly deficient in it—before introducing a babbled system. It comes to be heralded and authenticated by the supervision of the "chancellor and regents of the University," an institution that exists only on paper, and is as hollow and as great a sham as the Church itself. Education is much needed here, and we would do everything to advance it; but what does their record prove men and women growing up, in many instances, that we know are unable to read or write.

Intelligence, however, is not wanted; the whole thing is based upon a different system. Let the rising generation be educated in a language that embodies the literature of the age, and its lights they know would explode and expel Mormonism. We again repeat, educate the children of Utah not in Dutch or Deseret dialect, but in one that will enable them to read and understand other matters beside the precepts and dictates of the Church—but this would prove fatal in the end to the Hierarchy.

The last California mail arrived three days inside of schedule time, and the trip before it was here about four days inside of its time, making the trip inside of eleven days.

The Eastern mail came in on Monday night, having been detained by severe snow storms. We learn that on the trip that Major Chorpenn went down, the mail went through from this city to St. Joseph in fourteen days.

The mails bring us no matters of any particular interest from the Federal city. Mr. Morris' territorial squatter sovereignty bill to make the Governors, Judges, etc., of the territories elective, seems to have squatted. If it ever does raise its head, it will receive a blow across it more effective than a Tipperary stroke, at all events Utah will be exempted from its provisions.

RECOVERED.—Governor Cumming's mules were stolen last week from his corral some time after midnight. He immediately secured the services of Messrs. E. K. Hanks and J. R. Clawson, who mounted their horses and rode all night, distributing hand-bills, and rode night and day until they got to Ogden, where, in the neighborhood, through their efforts in the premises the mules were found in a herd and brought back to this city. This is pretty tall riding and good police work.

The mules had, we understand, their tails shaved and their manes roached, and the brands changed, showing an evident intention to run them off.

TURBULENCE.—This city and vicinity is infested with a set of horse thieves which are supposed to be regularly organized. Let every one look to their stables and corrals. The spring is now approaching, and there are those who are here and there will be plenty more of them, probably coming, who will not respect the sanctity of a corral.

It has been storming in this vicinity for three weeks, and is now blowing and snowing. It is pronounced by that veritable individual, the "oldest inhabitant," to be the severest ever experienced in Utah.

MONKON EXPOS.—From the best information we can gather, there will be between four and five thousand persons leave this Territory for the States and California, apostates from the Church.

Late arrivals represent the snow storms in the neighborhood of the South Pass as still being terrific.

Pacific Railroad.

This gigantic scheme, like a "wounded snake, still drags its slow length along" in Congress. The Southern Central and Northern sections are all at loggerheads, and the result will be that prejudices cannot be conserved, and the result will be that nothing will be done this session. We notice that Mr. Iverson is very strong against the Central or Salt Lake route, and produced a paper from Lieut. Maury and some Canadian gentleman to substantiate it. We admire Prof. Maury's scientific attainments, and he has been and will be a useful man in the Observatory at Washington; but there are many men in the Rocky Mountains who know more about this matter than he will ever have the patience to learn.

Assembly Soirees.

Last Tuesday evening, the Anniversary of the birthday of Washington, excelled all others that we have had in numbers and brilliancy, it "ran all night" and was really a most interesting affair. We think we can say hoorah, notwithstanding the efforts of secret spies, clothed by authority of the Church, to peep into windows, lecture households, and try to frighten woman and children against them.

Mr. Waters, one of the agents on the route, and Mr. A. C. Ayer, better known as Texas (and who does not know Texas that ever passed over the mail trail?) arrived in this city last evening.

They brought along with them a large amount of public documents, franked by Mr. Bernhisel, but which they had to "cache" at or near the top of the big mountain—their mules having given out, and the snow being almost impassable. A relief will be sent out to-day of fresh mules to bring it in.

The Indians, from all the information we can gather, encouraged and assisted by white men, are committing depredations North and West of this vicinity, by stealing cattle from the herd grounds. The Government a short time since, had to send out a scout of Dragoons to protect the Government property in the neighborhood of Grantsville, Tooele Valley.

Since then many thieving depredations have been committed in various sections, and as the Spring approaches, when access to the mountains is convenient, it will be more so.

A man was knocked down on the street on Wednesday night, and would probably have perished had not some kindly hands found him on the street, and give him proper attention and shelter.

CATTLE.—We have been furnished by a gentleman who is well posted, of the number of cattle now in this Territory destined for California. He estimates the whole amount at about 3000, as follows:

Hickman and Burnham,	900 head.
Guthrie & Mitchell,	1100 "
Sundry lots,	1000 "

These cattle are all represented as being in fine condition, notwithstanding the severity of the winter. Great care has been taken with them.

A party recently left this city for at least as far south as Camp Floyd, an inventory of whose effects we noted down. The party too, we should state, were to lay over at the "gold mines," where, if there is no "dust" there is at least beer. The stock consisted of six bottles of Whisky, one of Brandy, one of Champagne, a box of Cigars, two boxes of Matches and three decks of Cards. A pretty good lay-out for three, for a forty mile drive—Vous gaze.

The Eastern mail brought us the intelligence of the death of Mr. Charles H. Miller, who was killed at the South Pass by a man named Charles E. Blakesley. From all the information we can gather a difficulty had previously existed between them, and which led subsequently to Miller's death. All the letters that have come in from that quarter pronounce it a deliberate murder. Blakesley was secured, put in irons and sent to Platte Bridge. Miller was in the employ of the South Pass Wagon Road Company, and was well known on the Missouri river, where he steamboated in the capacity of Stewart, and was a native of Union, Lincoln county, Maine.

The following gentlemen have left for the States within the last week:—Messrs. S. L. Hubbell, of New Mexico; George Dyer, Jackson co., Mo.; James Findlay, do.; J. D. Walterhouse, Iowa, and several others whose names we do not now recollect. They pack through, and are well equipped.

We understand that quite a number of deserters are infesting some of the northern and western settlements.

We heard last evening, but do not know how true it is, that a man was found dead in the vicinity of Grantsville, and it is supposed that the Indians killed him.

The Mail that leaves this City to-morrow (Saturday,) will go through Weber Valley, as the Big Mountain is considered almost impracticable—at least at present to make time. It is much worse than the Sierras, and we expect the route will ultimately have to be changed entirely, either through Provo Canyon, or Weber Valley.

We present below an extract from a discourse delivered by Jedediah M. Grant, delivered March 12th, 1854, and published in the Deseret News of July 27th, 1855.

If it does not justify murder for the salvation of a man's soul, then we have a poor perception of the force of the English language.

In the days of Moses, for certain crimes they were to bring the guilty persons before the congregation, and each man and woman were required to bring a stone to throw at the person worthy of death.

Then there was another odd commandment. The Lord God commanded them not to pity the person whom they killed, but to execute the law of God upon persons worthy of death. This should be done by the entire congregation, showing no pity. I have thought there would have to be quite a revolution among the Mormons, before such a commandment could be obeyed completely by them. The Mormons have a great deal of sympathy. For instance, if they can get a man before the tribunal administering the law of the land, and succeed in getting a rope round his neck, and having him hung up like a dead dog, it is all right; but if the Church and Kingdom of God should step forth and execute the law of God, O what a burst of Mormon sympathy it would cause. I wish we were in a situation favorable to our doing that which is justifiable before God without any contaminating influences of Gentile amalgamation, laws and traditions, that the people of God might lay the axe to the root of the tree, and every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit might be hewn down.

"What do you believe that people would do right, and keep the law of God, by actually putting to death the transgressor?" Putting to death transgressors would exhibit the law of God, no difference by whom it was done; that is my opinion.

You talk of the different governments, the United States if you please. What do they do with traitors?—what mode do they adopt to punish traitors? Do traitors to that Government forfeit their lives? Examine also the doings of other earthly governments upon this point, and you find the same practice universal. I am not aware that there are any exceptions. But people will look into books of theology, and argue that the people of God have a right to try people for fellowship, but they have no right to try them on property or life. That makes the devil laugh, saying, I have got them on a hook now; they can cut them off, and I will put eight or ten spirits, worse than they are, into their tabernacles, and send them back to mob them. What a fine thing it was that I got Oliver Cowdery to write that piece on law, and introduce it into the Book of Doctrine and Covenants!

But if the Government of God on earth, and Eternal Priesthood, with the sanction of High Heaven, in the midst of all this people, has passed sentence on certain sins when they appear in a person, has not the people of God a right to carry out that part of his law as well as any other portion of it? It is their right to baptize a sinner to save him, and it is also their right to kill a sinner to save him, when he commits those crimes that can only be atoned for by shedding his blood. If the Lord God forgives sin by baptism, and there is another law that certain sins cannot be atoned for by baptism, but by the shedding of the blood of the sinner, query, whether the people of God be overreaching the mark, if they should execute the law to save such? They used to do it anciently. We would not kill a man, of course, unless we killed him to save him. We would not baptize a man unless we baptized him to save him. We would not lay hands upon a man that he might receive the Holy Spirit, only for the salvation of the man. And every act of men having the priesthood upon the earth, should be for the salvation of the people.

Do you think it would be any sin to kill me if I were to break my covenants? Let every man preach for himself: I am preaching my own faith to-day. Do you believe you would kill me if I broke the covenants of God, and you had the Spirit of God? Yes; and the more Spirit of God I had, the more I should strive to save your soul by spilling your blood, when you had committed sin that could not be remitted by baptism.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Feb. 13, 1855.

MR. EDITOR:

The best news of this week, is that the Paymaster has left for California, and I hope, as does every one else, that the purpose of this trip is to obtain the means to pay-off; he left on the 11th, taking with him a detachment from the different corps; the detachment commanded by Lieut. Marmaduke, 7th Infantry. They Major may rest assured that his return will be very welcome to us all.

Several of the officers have applied for furloughs, and will I suppose leave for the "States" very soon now, provided they get them. The passage of the retired list for the Army, is about the only news brought by the mail for this week. I had not the pleasure of seeing the bill yet, but I have no doubt but that it will be one of the best things that could be done for the Army, as from what I have heard of the bill, it will get the Army rid of those officers who are no longer fit for the field, and also gives younger officers a chance to rise to something before he is too old to be of any use. As it is, an officer is, I may say, an old man before he becomes a Captain; of course there are a few exceptions; but most of these were caused by the raising of the four new regiments. The commanding officer has been notified that the Indians have been committing a good many depredations in the vicinity of Fillmore City. He intends sending out a company of Dragoons, about the first of March, as it is impossible to do so before, on account of the bad condition of the horses, and Infantry would be of little use after Indians at such a distance. Although "H" and "I" companies 7th Infantry, under command of Major G. R. Paul, did some pretty responsible marching last fall; and succeeded in capturing the offenders, and can do it again if required.

On Wednesday night the "Dramatic Association presented the 'Serious Family' this is the third time the piece has been played, yet it was very well received, as was testified by the audience. On Saturday night they played 'Love's Sacrifice.' The characters were generally very well sustained. In this piece we had the pleasure of seeing more of the members of the Association on the stage and in better characters than in any piece which they have presented before; and cannot help giving Mrs. Whitlock and Messrs. White and Thatcher credit for the ease and grace of their performances; they being entirely free from affectation which is carried by some of the Stars to a ridiculous extent.

COMEDY.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,
Feb. 18th, 1855.

On Saturday evening, the Military Dramatic Association performed; Lovell's Five act play, entitled "Love's Sacrifice, or the Rival Merchants," with the following very strong cast:

Matthew Elmore.....	Mr. F. Lee,
Paul Lafont.....	J. Rutledge,
Eugene de Lorme.....	R. C. White,
St. Lo.....	Thatcher,
Morluc.....	Delano,
Du Viray.....	Doyle,
Friar Benedict.....	Baldwin,
Jean Ruse.....	J. Shaw,
Margaret.....	Mrs. Tuckett,
Hermine de Vermont.....	Whitlock,
Jenny.....	Lougee,
Manou.....	Westwood.

Matthew Elmore was very efficiently delineated by Mr. Lee, he showed a thorough knowledge of stage business, and great tact in his interview with Lafont in endeavoring to hide his supposed connection with the murder of Du Barre, the thought of which gnawed his brain; he displayed true feeling while disclosing his guilt to Margaret, he was frequently cheered. The part of Paul Lafont, by Mr. Rutledge, (who was suffering from severe hoarseness,) we thought the aside's were rather too loud, and that he evinced more passion than was called for, after St. Lo's description of his character.

His silky smoothness is not of this world: His sugared smiles hath nothing earthly in it.

None of the spice and pepper of a man! He's never in a passion—that's no human.

With these exceptions the character was well sustained.

Messrs. White and Thatcher, performed their respective roles, with their accustomed ability.

Messrs. Delano and Doyle were very creditable, as Morluc and Du Viray.

Mr. Baldwin performed the part of the Friar, with that quiet subdued tone in keeping with the character.

Jean Ruse, (Mr. Shaw,) was gone through in a quiet, unassuming manner, it was very well acted, particularly in the scene with Manou. We thought we noticed a slight touch of the brogue, we only mention this that it may be avoided in the future.

Margaret was as well enacted by Mrs. Tuckett, as anything she has undertaken, and was received as it ought to be. In crossing the stage, in her interview with Lafont, her walk lacked the grace which is expected in a well born lady.

Hermine, was better rendered by Mrs. Whitlock, than any other character in which she has yet appeared. Her scene with St. Lo, where she orders him to become Lafont's clerk, as the conditions of his wedding her, was delivered with the highest degree of archness and vivacity, and was very well received by the audience.

Mrs. Lougee performed the curious house-keeper very satisfactorily.

Mrs. Westwood, was very good as Ma-

The house was full, notwithstanding the scarcity of money, this is a sufficient proof that when good plays are produced the public will attend.

They could not have selected any three farces, which would have drawn such a house, which justifies our opinion that the public are satiated with farces alone, however good they may be.

The management deserve the greatest credit, for the way this play was put upon the stage, the costumes were very good, and appropriate, there was a completeness about the whole, which could not fail to give satisfaction.

The entertainment concluded with a ballet, Les Morissey and Hecan.

On Wednesday, "Love's Sacrifice," was repeated.

Mr. Rutledge decidedly improved on his first appearance; the play went very smoothly throughout.

The Farce, of "The Boots at the Swan," was the afterpiece.

DRAMA.

The Paraguay Expedition.

OUR EXPEDITIONARY CORRESPONDENT.
Arrival of the United States Steamer Metacomet, at Key West, from Pensacola.

Key West, Florida, Dec. 27, 1854.

The arrival of the celebrated steamer Metacomet, from Pensacola, produced an intense degree of excitement in this place. Even the sanctity of the Sabbath did not prevent the inhabitants from thronging down the Government wharf. Wreckers and wreckers' wives and daughters, Collector of the Port, Marshal of the district, United States Clerk, Lighthouse Inspector, ship chandlers, and "niggers" in countless numbers, all animated by a desire to know who we could be.

Some of the knowing ones thought that General Walker, with his army of filibusters, was coming to levy a contribution upon the town, with the view of raising funds in order "to spread the area of liberty elsewhere;" others predicted that it was the Pensacola steamer returning on account of a break down. The landing of the pilot soon quieted their fears, for he assured them that it was the Metacomet, bound to Paraguay, which had come here to take in coal and water, when the crowd silently dispersed—some to their homes, and many, I fear, to the drinking saloons with which this place is blessed. The Metacomet left Pensacola on the 21st, with one hundred tons of coal on board—a supply of ten days—which brought her guards within thirty-three inches of the water, and immersed her wheels five and a half feet.

The Metacomet can only steam at the rate of six knots per hour, and always enjoyed a bad reputation; and this, with her top-lamper, made her a very bad sea boat, inasmuch that any slight sea strikes her under the guards with fearful violence. The noise produced by this is awful, making it difficult to sleep at night. This vessel was declared unworthy by Commander Semmes, U. S. N., in a report to the Secretary of the Navy, he recommended "that her owners should carry her to Montevideo, and there, transfer her to the squadron, her light draft of water—six feet—would make her useful as a dispatch boat." A subsequent survey, by two officers from the Pensacola Navy Yard, reported differently, though had there been a naval engineer on the survey, he would have condemned her on account of the boiler, the bottom of which is only half the thickness required by law; at all events, it is a very poor one indeed, having many suspicious looking patches upon it and a wooden sheathing. Uncle Sam, I am afraid, has been sadly taken in; however, no effort will remain untaken to carry her to the "scene of war." The Metacomet will leave in a few days, and will pass through the old Bahama channel, and her next stopping place will be Barbadoes.

The following is a list of her officers:—Lieutenant commanding, W. H. Macomb; Lieutenants, C. H. Wells, Greenleaf Cilley, J. G. Maxwell; Engineers, (acting) S. Montgomery, N. C. Selden, Geo. F. Farron; Captain's clerk, N. L. Keifer; Purser's clerk, M. T. Dooley.

Funeral of Col. Francis Lee.

The honors of a military burial were yesterday paid the remains of Col. Francis Lee, of the 2nd Regiment of Infantry, who died in St. Louis, on the evening of the 19th inst. The funeral services were performed at the Second Presbyterian church, corner of Walnut and Fifth streets, commencing at 9 o'clock, where an impressive and appropriate sermon was delivered. At about 10 o'clock, the remains, escorted by the 1st Regiment of Infantry of this district, accompanied by the General Regiment and Battalion staffs, together with a large concourse of citizens, were removed to the Iron Mountain Railroad depot, where a special train was in waiting to proceed to Jefferson Barracks. The bleakness of the weather served to deter numbers from participating in the obsequies, but, notwithstanding the bitter cold, several commodious cars were required for the cortege. The different companies of soldiers turned out about three hundred men.

The ceremonies at the grave were in accordance with the military formalities customary on such an occasion. After the Episcopal burial service had been read, and the body deposited in its silent resting place, the various companies were arranged in line, and fired the usual number of volleys. These solemn duties to the dead having been performed, the return march was begun and the procession moved homeward.

The distinguished deceased was born in Pennsylvania, April 13th, 1802; and was consequently in his fifty-seventh year when he died. At the age of sixteen he entered the Military Academy, and was commissioned a 1st Lieutenant in the 1st Infantry. In 1824 he was promoted to a 2nd Lieutenant, and in 1825 to a 1st Lieutenant. He was promoted to a Major in 1837, and to a Colonel in 1847. He was promoted to a Major General in 1854, and to a Lieutenant General in 1855. He was killed in action at the battle of Fort Fisher, on January 15th, 1865. He was buried in the National Cemetery at Arlington, Virginia, on January 17th, 1865. He was a member of the Society of the Friends of the South, and of the Society of the Friends of the North.

We find in Major Lee's C. N. D. Under the "manches," "A large was engaged was enlisted county, and Mississippi and I find it a part of it five men for "A" now but from the thereby to serve to years, and and arms trusted will If you long to pu will, I know short one bitter pill-ern youth hardships, care of fro in their joy to their by ornaments cept two d and rapies sippl and They are First se on serge ph P. F. W. Giddi Josephus Lundy, A rill, Robt James H. W. Norfo Brey, A Twenty equipped, patched to the se Utah and at presen which 28 (which is 401 to th musician and Super Albermar Capt. De Surgeon C. Cole, artilleer, Second J. James J. Bryant seven la year, war eral regt First l ing offe been pr deceased Six co atations at Fort under the detachm pistols a besides In ac War De third re from hi Vancou ing the establish Order six con tioned a as follo two co panies Majd been ed and dep Leaven eighty with th and 30) The at For Lieut. journe Lieut. him.

ling the
at proof the pub-y three such a that the o, how-lest cre-upon the and ap-about re satis-a burwas re-on his smooth-Swan
MA
lon.
ence.
er Me-
colp.

1858. mer Mean in-
place.
not pre-down on ers and lector of United
or, ship-ess num-
now who ght that ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which d water,
some to he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in vay, but rs should transfer of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

1858.
mer Me-
an in-
place.
not pre-
down on ers and
lector of United
or, ship-
ess num-
now who ght that
ubsters,
upon the
in order
where?
onsaple
a break
n quieted
it was which
d water,
some to
he drinks blessed,
the 21st
board—
aught her e and a
the rate
enjoyed a plumper
uch that ie guards
produced
to sleep
d unsea-
s N., in
vay, but
rs should transfer
of water
as a dis-
y, by ten
Yard, re-
been a uld have oiler, the thickness
is a very uspicious
n sleazheadly main-
un-
ar." The
and will nel, and
r blades.
ers—
Macomb,
n Cilley,
S. Mount-
son; Cap-
clerk, M.

The Military Academy at West Point as a cadet, and four years afterwards received his commission as 2d Lieutenant of the Seventh Infantry. Two years later he was promoted a grade higher and became First Lieutenant. In February, 1847, he attained the rank of Major of the Fourth Infantry, in which regiment he was in command during the entire war with Mexico. For gallant and meritorious conduct in the engagements at Churubusco and Contreras, August 20th, 1847, he received the brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel, and an additional grade, by brevet, of Colonel. A month later at the battle of El Molino del Rey, in which conflict he was wounded. He had previously distinguished himself at the siege of Fort Brown, and his conduct on the occasion of the taking of the city of Mexico won marked distinction. He succeeded to the Colonelcy of the Second Regiment, October 18th, 1855, which rank he held at the time of his death. He was commander of the Department of the West, stationed in St. Louis, until last fall, when he was relieved by Col. F. V. Summer. His services in the last war, where he earned such deserved renown, were not without their sacrifices. Like many others, he contracted a disease, the chronic diarrhoea, which undermined his constitution, and eventually brought him to his death.

Col. Lee, besides being a gallant officer, was in all respects an upright and honorable man. His many amiable traits, his sociable disposition and his frank, penetrating integrity, won the regard of all with whom he was brought in contact.

Army Intelligence.

We find in the Mobile Tribune a letter from Major Van Dorn, dated Camp Rodeminski, C. S., December 11, 1858, in which he says: Under the head of "Fight with the Camanches," one of the Mobile papers says: "A large company of the 2d Cavalry, which was engaged under Major Van Dorn, in it was enlisted here from our own city and county, and the surrounding counties of Mississippi and Alabama."

I find it impossible to let this statement, or a part of it, go uncorrected. Of the eighty-five men who were enlisted by me at Mobile, for "A" company, 2d Cavalry, there remains now but fifteen; the balance having departed from the service and rendered themselves thereby thieves and perjurers—having sworn to serve the government faithfully for five years, and when they left stole the horses and arms of the government they were entrusted with.

If you find the list of these gentlemen too long to publish in your valuable paper, you will, I know, find it a pleasure to publish the shorter one of those who, notwithstanding the bitter pill of army discipline, (which Southern youths find so difficult to swallow,) the hardships, deprivations, and constant exposure of frontier service, have stood unshaken in their loyalty to the government, constant to their own honor and reputation, and the ornaments of the service. These men, except two or three of them, were in the fight, and represented well the counties of Mississippi and Alabama, from which they came.

First sergeant, Robert H. Chapman; second sergeant, Henry Williams; corporal, Joseph R. Taylor, (wounded); corporal, George W. Giddins. Privates: H. Q. C. Aldrich, Josephus Byars, James W. Dance, Geo. W. Lawley, Anselm Lonsmann, Samuel A. Turner, Robert J. Boone, John O. Chambers, James H. Gibbons, Wm. H. Hamilton, John W. Norton.

E. VAN DORN,

Brev. Maj., Capt. 2d Cav., Comd'g Exp'n. Twenty-one hundred recruits were drilled, equipped, organized into companies, and despatched from Governor's Island, during 1858, to the several army stations, principally to Utah and the Pacific. The number of troops at present located on the Island is 638, of which 237 belong to the permanent party, (which includes clerks, bounties, &c.) and 401 to the disposable recruits and young musicians. The post is commanded by Maj. and Superintendent of the recruiting service, Albenmarle Clyde. The other officers are Capt. De Lancey, Floyd Jones, 4th Infantry; Surgeon C. H. Laub, First Lieutenant Robt. C. Cole, 8th Infantry; Louis C. Morris, 1st artillery, and Julius de Lagnet, 2d artillery; Second Lieutenants Charles H. Ingraham, James J. Van Horn, Sardinio J. Redd; (by brevet) Oliver P. Gooding, Asa B. Carey, Bryan M. Thomas, and A. Bescom. The seven last named are graduates of the last year, waiting opportunities to join their several regiments.

First Lieutenant Henry B. Clitz, Recruiting officer in Cedar street, New York, has been promoted to a Captaincy, vice Ward, deceased.

Six companies of the 1st Cavalry will be stationed along the route to California, viz.: at Fort Smith, Fort Riley, and Fort Washita, under the command of Major Sedgwick. This detachment will take with them 30,000 navy pistols and 15,000 Sharp's carbine cartridges, besides provisions for 80 days.

In accordance with instructions from the War Department, Captain Edward O. C. Ord, third regiment artillery, with a detachment from his company, has arrived from Fort Vancouver, Oregon, for the purpose of forming the artillery school of practice, recently established at Fort Monroe, Virginia.

Orders have been issued directing that the six companies of the first cavalry, now stationed at Fort Leavenworth, shall be located as follows: Two companies at Fort Smith, two companies at Fort Riley, and two companies at Ft. Washita.

Major John Sedgwick, first cavalry, has been selected to superintend the preparation and departure of those companies from Fort Leavenworth. They will be provided with eighty days' provisions, and will also take with them 15,000 Sharp's carbine cartridges, and 30,000 navy pistol cartridges.

A general court martial has been convened at Fort Ridgely, Minnesota, for the trial of Lieut. Hunter, 2d Infantry. Major Sherman, 3d artillery is appointed president of the court, and Asst. Surg. Crowell as judge-advocate.

By the last mail from California, Gen. Mansfield, Inspector General of the army, has furnished the War Department with a very interesting and important report of his inspections in Oregon and California. The General suggests many important reforms in the way of transportation, &c., at present carried on by our government in those regions, which will no doubt meet with the approval of the Secretary of War. The Indians are reported to be quiet, and seem very friendly disposed to the whites. They seem to concur the whites in urging them to commit the recent depredations.

Flare-up in the Senate.

New York, Jan. 22. The Herald's Washington correspondence says, in the Executive session of the Senate to-day, an angry discussion arose between Judge Douglas and Senator Fitch, when words were used which, it is thought, must lead to a duel. The debate occurred on the question of confirming Potter, of Ohio, as Collector of Toledo.

Mr. Pugh opposed Potter's nomination, as the man displaced was his friend. He said if the President desired an issue with him, (Pugh) he was ready for it. He denounced the appointment, and called on every Senator who was his, (Pugh's) friend, to vote against it.

Mr. Douglas responded, saying that he would vote with the Senator from Ohio. He then branched off on to the Illinois appointments, and said that they were dishonest, corrupt and incompetent.

Senator Fitch interrogated Douglas and said it was untrue.

Douglas again reiterated what he had said.

Fitch again said it was untrue. (Cries of order were then made.)

Douglas continued the debate. Fitch replied to Douglas with great bitterness, and said that Senators knew how to prize anything coming from that quarter. (Cries of order.)

Mr. Douglas then replied, and was called to order.

Motions were then made that Douglas be allowed to go on in order.

Jeff. Davis opposed it, and said, turning to Douglas, that he had listened with indignation to the language used, and it was that of a highwayman and bravo. The debate was continued some time, when a motion was made and the Senate adjourned. It was said that the lie was given, and most severe personal remarks made.

WASHINGTON, January 19, 1859.

Through the courtesy of the Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, Chairman of the Committee on Territories, in the House of Representatives, I am enabled to lay before the readers of the Republican the following highly interesting letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in advance of its publication elsewhere.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Jan. 11, 1859.

DEAR SIR: Will you be pleased to give me all the information in your possession in relation to the Territory now proposed, to be organized out of the western parts of Kansas and Nebraska, on the Platte river. I wish particularly to be informed as to the number of the inhabitants—the character of the productions or suitability for agricultural purposes, as well as mineral resources. Also, the tribes of Indians occupying it, their names and numbers, as far as you are informed, and all other information you may have pertinent to the object of my inquiry.

Yours truly,

ALEX. H. STEPHENS,

To Gov. J. W. DENVER, &c., &c.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Office Indian Affairs,

January 18, 1859.

SIR: In reply to your note of 11th instant, asking for information in relation to the Territory now proposed to be organized out of the Western parts of Kansas and Nebraska, I beg leave to state that, not having seen a copy of the bill, and, therefore, being uninformed as to the extent of the proposed new Territory, I will assume that the Eastern boundary is to be the 108 deg; of longitude West from Greenwich; and the Southern line to be the Northern line of New Mexico. This will include a part of Utah, as well as parts of Kansas and Nebraska.

Nearly the whole of this country, extending six degrees from North to South, and eight from East to West, may properly be termed mountainous. The Rocky Mountain chain, passing through its entire length from North to South, forming a curve to the East, from which branch out numerous spurs, which, in themselves, form a considerable chain. The most important of these are the Black Hills, there being several ranges so called. Some of the highest peaks within the United States, are formed in these ranges, among which are Pike's, Long's, Laramie and Fremont's. Amid these mountain ranges are some fine valleys, among which the most remarkable, perhaps, are the "three parks," which are in fact three extensive valleys, surrounded by the very crests of the Rocky Mountains, where abound some of the sources of some of our most noted rivers. The north fork of the Platte has its source in the north park; the Grand river of the West in the middle park, and the south fork of the Platte and Arkansas rivers rise in the south park. The Green river has its source in the Wind River mountains, flows south, and forming a junction with Grand river, is afterwards called Rio Colorado, which empties into the Pacific ocean, through the Gulf of California. The Sweet Water, one of the principal tributaries of the North Fork of the Platte, also rises in the Wind River mountains, but flows east.

Until within the year just past, there were no white inhabitants in this country, except a few traders and trappers. The principal trading posts were Bent's Fort, on the Arkansas; St. Vrain's Fort, on the waters of the South Fork of the Platte; and Bridgewater's Fort, on the west of Green river; Laramie, once a trading post, was some years since converted into a military establishment, and the same has recently been done with Fort Bridger. Within five or six years, quite a settlement was made in the vicinity of Fort Bridger by the Mormons, but not long since they abandoned it.

Last year the discovery of gold mines on the head-waters of the South Platte induced quite a large number of persons to go out there, a good many of whom remained during the winter, while probably the larger number returned to their homes, intending to go back again in the spring. The number wintering there has been variously estimated at from 500 to 1,000, and those who intend going out in the spring will number many thousands.

As I have before stated, the general character of the country is mountainous, to which the Spanish word Montana would apply very appropriately. It is not and never can be an agricultural country. The fertile land comprises a very small portion of the whole, and even when that is found, it can be made productive only to a limited extent. While at Fort Laramie, in 1850, I was informed by officers of the army, who had been stationed there, that nearly all their crops had been destroyed by hail storms, which visited the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains every year with terrific violence. Aside from this, however, the great altitude of the country would prevent the cultivation of products other than such as are common to high latitudes. Herds of buffaloes frequent the plains along the eastern sides of the Rocky Mountains, but none have ever been found farther to the westward. Indeed, there is scarcely any evidence that buffaloes ever crossed that rocky barrier. Their range seems to have been confined almost exclusively to the great valley of the Mississippi.

The mineral resources have been but very partially developed, but there is no doubt of the existence of gold in considerable quantities over a large extent of country. As far as my knowledge extends, the discoveries of gold have thus far been confined to the eastern slope of the mountains, the principle working of the mines having been on the head waters of the South Platte. It has been found, also, as I have been informed, on the North Platte, and on the Arkansas above Bent's Fort. There can be put little doubt, however, from the geological structure of the country, that the Western slope of the mountains will be found richer than the Eastern, and such will be found to be the character of the mineral deposits Southward for some distance into New Mexico, to where the silver and copper mines take the place of the gold.

In this connection it may be well to direct your attention to the importance of providing rules and regulations for the Government of the mines. At this time there is scarcely any nations on the globe with mines of precious metals so extensive as ours, and yet, strange to say, Congress has passed no laws in relation to them, nor has it yet been decided whether Congress has the right to sell or otherwise dispose of the mines. The laws of Spain and Mexico recognize the mines of precious metals as a part of the eminent domain which belongs to the sovereignty and cannot be alienated. The common law of England agrees with this rule in every partical. In the celebrated case of Pollards lessee vs. Hagan et al.; 8 Howard, Supreme Court Reports, the Court decided that Congress could not interfere with the eminent domain even in a Territory, but could hold in trust only for the future State. If this be so with regard to the Territories, the argument would seem to apply with much greater force to the States of the Union. The sovereignty of the State governments, within their respective States is undoubted, and the right of eminent domain can belong only to the sovereign power. In several of the States and all of the Territories the Federal Government is a great land owner—her lands are exempt from taxation by agreement with the State, but in nothing else does she occupy a different position with regard to the rights of ownership, or with regard to the rights of eminent domain, from that of any other land proprietor. She may exercise acts of ownership over her property, but can not interfere with the eminent domain—with the sovereignty.

Thus far Congress has in no instance acted in contravention of the principle, nor have many of the States asserted their right to the mines of precious metals found within their borders, though some of them have done so; as, for instance, New York and Pennsylvania. The settlement of these questions is of the greatest importance to the mining interests of the country, and no correct settlement is likely to be had unless they are thoroughly understood.

However this question may be decided with regard to the States, there can be no doubt but Congress may, even as trustee of the future States, adopt such rules and regulations for the management of the mines in the Territories, as may be deemed necessary, and the sooner this is done the better. One thing, and only one, seems to have been determined on, and that is, that the mines shall be left free for all to work without paying a rental to the government. This was certainly a wise and liberal policy, and one that should not be departed from. The laws of Spain, which were adopted entire by Mexico, constitute the most complete mining code in the world, but they provide that a portion of the proceeds of the mine shall be paid over to the Government. After changing them in that particular, they might then be adopted, with advantage for the government of our own mines. They are equitable and just, and while they fully protect the mining interests, none of the other great interests of the country are neglected. The lands may be sold, but the minerals are reserved by operation of law, as a part of the eminent domain. Any one may enter the land of another and work a mine, but before doing so he must pay the owner the agricultural or grazing value for so much of the land as may be necessary for carrying on the business. Thus it will be seen that the rights of all are protected.

Of the Indians found within the proposed Territory, I believe none of them have settled or permanent habitations, but are purely nomadic in their habits. Their numbers are not known with any degree of certainty, but they consist of numerous tribes, known as the Camanches, Kioways, Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Crows, Sioux, Shoshones or Spakes, and Utahs.

My opinion is that a proper course for the Government to take towards these Indians would be to assign them a small reservation, furnish them with an instructor and the means of cultivating the soil, and then require them to support themselves. If they have settlements, give them the lands they occupy, but in no case give them money annuities or other presents, except such as may be necessary to carry on their farming or agricultural operations. Every one must admit that the system heretofore pursued towards the Indians has proved to be a most lamentable failure. Taking them as a mass, they are not as well off to-day as they were half a century ago, notwithstanding more than fifty millions of dollars have been expended by the Government in efforts to civilize, to say nothing about the expenditures and exertions of other parties. Instead of civilizing, it has converted the larger portion of them into paupers, who rely on the small sum of money paid to each once or twice a year for subsistence, and which generally draws around them some of the very worst of the whites.

Naturally disinclined to labor, they rely on the Government for support, and thus we have gone on year after year building up a vast pauper establishment, without conferring any corresponding benefit.

Our presents attract the cupidity of the whites, and the Indian, having gotten rid of his share, sits down listlessly and ekes out a miserable existence until the next payment is made, when the same thing is done over again. Thus there seems to be no likelihood of a termination of this pauper system, but with the extinction of the whole race. Some change is necessary in order to stay their downward course; and in my opinion, the first step to be taken is to teach them to labor. This can only be done by making their subsistence depend on their own exertions. I know of no reason why the government should be required to support the Indians in idleness, while the whites are compelled to labor for a livelihood. At all events, our present system can hardly be changed for the worse, unless it should be determined to increase the money annuities.

In my judgment, the proposed Territory ought to be organized with about the boundaries I have indicated. Although, as stated, its agricultural resources must always be limited, yet the mines will attract a great number of people, and their remoteness from any organized government will force them to adopt an organization for themselves, as was once done in Oregon. This should not be. The benefits of government ought to be brought within the reach of all.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Mormon Extracts.

Published in the Deseret News, Nov. 1853.

Brigham Young said:—"I have a few remarks to make to the missionaries.—I consider all the elders of this Church, missionaries, and I will here say that every man who is clothed with the Priesthood can magnify it while cultivating the earth, or following any other useful occupation, as well as in preaching the gospel to the nations; for while an elder is diligent, and by his labor produces wheat, corn, and other articles for the sustenance of man and beast, he is administering life and salvation. An elder who magnifies his calling, has a right to bless his land, his fields, his crops, his flocks and herds, his wives and children; he has a right to heal the sick, and cast evil spirits out of man or beast. If any of his family or animals are sick, he has a right to lay hands upon them, and heal them, and to do all things which are right and lawful; but a man without the Priesthood has not the legal right to do these things.

Now, how is it with you, ye elders of Israel? Do you magnify your calling in all these things; or do you take the name of God in vain, and curse, lie, and steal a little? And when the devil gets into your animals, do you partake of the same spirit, and go to fighting them, or do you cast the devil out of them? I leave you to judge."

Jedediah M. Grant said:—"You need not wonder that we raise stout boys in the mountains, for we want children of the right build; we do not want a scrubby breed here. Men of Mormon blood are not afraid to die. The men that tremble, and whose hearts go pitty patty because they have got to die, are not worth a picanone. A man that refuses to walk up in the track, no matter what comes, and steadily press forward, though there should be a lion in the way, he is not of Mormon grit. That was the grit Joseph Smith had; and when he spoke, he spoke by the power of an endless priesthood, which was upon him; and that is the power by which Brigham speaks. When he stood up in the majesty of his priesthood, and rebuked the judges here, I know some of our milk and water folks thought all the fat was in the fire. 'Br. Brigham has gone rather too far; he might have spoken a little milder than he did; I think it would have been much better,' etc. This was the language of some hearts; and I feel to say, damn all such poor pussyism. When a man of God speaks, let him speak what he pleases, and let all Israel say amen."

George A. Smith, said:—"I presume I have talked to you long enough. It is a matter I feel considerable about. I know men are careless, women are careless; and if there is not greater care taken, women will be carried away prisoners, and their children will be murdered if they wander off carelessly and unprotected. I tell you, in a country like this, where women are scarce and hard to get, we have great need to take care of them, and not let the Indians have them.

Walker, himself has teased me, for a white wife; and if any of the sisters will volunteer to marry him, I believe I can close the war forthwith. I am certain, unless men take care of their women, Walker may supply himself on a liberal scale, and without closing the war either.

In conclusion I will say, if any lady wishes to be Mrs. Walker, if she will report herself to me, I will agree to negotiate the match."

HAPPINESS OF CHILDREN.—Children may teach us one blessed, one enviable art—the art of being easily happy.—Kind nature has given to them the useful power of accommodation to circumstances which compensates for many external disadvantages, and it is only by injudicious management that it is lost. Give him but a moderate portion of food and kindness, and the peasant's child is happier than the duke's; free from artificial wants, unassociated by indulgence, all nature ministers to his pleasure; he can carve out felicity from a bit of hazel twig, or fish for it successfully in a puddle. I love to hear the boisterous joy of a troop of ragged urchins, whose cheap playthings are nothing more than mud, snow, sticks or oyster-shells; or to watch the quiet enjoyment of a half-washed fellow of four or five years old, who sits with a large rusty knife and a lump of bread and bacon at his father's door, and might move the enemy of an alderman.

Ugliness.

Ordinary persons, peradventure, may not have remarked (what may prove a comfort to them) that true ugliness is almost as rare a gift as true beauty; for how very few ill-favored visages do we encounter that possess not some redeeming feature or expression! I have known many an ugly face improve, nay, almost grow handsome, upon acquaintance; and indeed, although beauty may boast of the lavish bounty of nature, ugliness may honestly vaunt of her plain dealing. I am far from regarding ugliness in a woman as unfortunate; I rather consider it as an antidote to vanity, and a prompter to the emulation of goodness. And beauty, after all (as wrinkled old maids and "have-beens" sagely declare), is but skin deep. In my boyhood, I well remember a young man (whom I have often had the pleasure of meeting) whose physiognomical possessions might certainly be classed under the title of ugliness; in sooth, he was an extra-ordinary young man, both as respects his lineaments and his learning. He was deeply read—pale—pitted by the small-pox, and pitted by every female who beheld him. But he had a mind that minded not their impertinent commiseration; and when his conversational talents began gradually to be developed by the genial influence of social converse, his apposite remarks, his critical reading, and his sound arguments, won all the listening senses of his auditors; while insipid beauty was lost in the fluent language of eloquent ugliness. The "pretty men" of the party felt the unintelligible desertion of the fair ones, and glanced cautiously round at their sweet persons, reflected in the mirrors, as they lounged listlessly about, imagining that some alarming revolution had taken place in their collars or cravats, or some rebellious lock had stretched itself ungracefully forth from their close-curl'd Roman crops or poodles—then finding all in statu quo, wildly wondered "what the girls could possibly see in the fellow to pay him so much attention!" while others, lipped forth in a voice half strangled by their stocks, "I s'pose the belles are quizzing the Gorgon!" Ugliness hath charms that pass not away like the bloom of a summer flower; therefore, let not ugliness be put of conceit. If there be but wit and good sense behind the repulsive mask, ugliness may even win the favor and countenance of beauty.

A Pen Portrait.

Cincinnati seems to be rivaling some of the New England cities in the way of clerical politicians.—Gurley, one of the candidates for Congress, on the Black Republican and Know Nothings fusion ticket, is a preacher.—Another chap by the name of Walden, who alternately figures in theology and politics, has his full length portrait drawn by the Cincinnati Enquirer as follows:

"The other night he made a flaming political harangue at the fusion meeting in fifth street Market space, and 'out-heroded Herod' in the volume and coarseness of his slander, and the size and weight of his lies against the Democracy. Last Sunday, out in Green township, he mounted the pulpit before a moderately sized congregation, and gave them a preach on religion. With mock mien and in 'holy phrases,' he exhorted in favor of the precepts of the Bible; inveighed against sin; gave the Devil one or two pokes in the ribs; threw one or two holy boulders at the Democratic party; gave the Black Republicans an exalted puff, then reverently dismissed the crowd with a benediction, and stalked out of the house, with one of Camp's best beavers, which he had won of a Democrat in a bet on the last election! He can take the socks off of Parson Brownlow any time as a blackguard, or eclipse Kallach himself as a hypocrite."

The following is the police drill of Philadelphia, as given by the Transcript of that City. Would it not do for some other longitudes?

A Police Formula.

Attention, Police!
Eyes right!
Handle billies!
Flourish billies!
Crack crowns!
Return billies!
Forward to curbstone!
Stand at ease, against tree box!
Draw segar!
Produce match!
Mouth your segar!
Elevate match!
Puff segar!
Loaf away!
Dismiss for drinks!

REVERSE OF FORTUNE—A SALT LAKE TALE.—Many visitors to New York will probably remember a fashionable and handsome widow, Mrs. Selina Stinson, who kept a boarding house in Chambers street. A day or two ago she died, in an unoccupied house in Watts street, a victim to intemperance and destitution.

The Herald says:—"The history of deceased's latter life is replete with interesting details, showing, as it does, a singular case of reverse of fortune rarely to be met with. At one time Mrs. Stinson's establishment was the most fashionable of the kind in the lower part of the city. Her house was patronized by some of our wealthiest merchants and most distinguished statesmen. Reverse of fortune fell thick and heavily upon the fashionable widow, and in a few years she found herself homeless and penniless. The wine cup had effected her ruin, and caused her to be abandoned by her most intimate friends. Her relatives were applied to for aid, but even they shunned the thing of adversity, and left her to rot and die in obscure misery. Lately Mrs. Stinson had no permanent place of residence. She wandered about the city, seeking food and shelter from those who were utter strangers. Disease followed quickly in the wake of destitution, and a few days ago the unfortunate creature was found dead in the basement of the unoccupied house No. 17, Watts street."

HOW SPIRITS GET THEIR CREATURE COMFORTS.—The spiritual intercourse is certainly enlarging. A spirit not long since waited on Judge Edmonds, and wanted him to take a drink through an earthly medium. The Pawtucket Gazette relates the following incident of spiritual communication, which quite exceeds the Judge's story:

"An enthusiastic believer was relating to a skeptic the spiritual performances to which he could testify, and among other things said that on a certain occasion the spirit of his wife, who had been dead several years, returned to him, and seated herself upon her knee, put her arm around him, and kissed him as much to his gratification as she used to when living.

"You do not mean to say," remarked the skeptic, "that the spirit of your wife really embraced and kissed you?"
"No, not exactly that," replied the believer, "but her spirit took possession of the body of a female medium, and through her embraced and kissed me."

A young carpenter having been told that "the course of true love never did run smooth," took his plane under his arm when he went courting.

PROPOSALS FOR HAY.

SEALED proposals will be received at the office of the Depot Quartermaster at Camp Floyd, Utah, till 12 o'clock M., on the 20th day of February, 1859, for cutting and stacking hay for use of the U. S. Quartermaster's Department, as follows: viz:
For Three to six hundred tons in Rush Valley.
"Five to twelve hundred tons at Camp Floyd.
"Three to six hundred tons on Chicken Creek.
"Three to six hundred tons in Sanpete Valley.
In every case the hay to be stacked in "ricks," of not more than one hundred, nor less than fifty tons, and on such grounds as the Depot Quartermaster may direct. The bids to be enclosed by a true and valid receipt from the depositories of stock. The work to be completed by the first of September, 1859. Proposals should be addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed.

"Proposals for furnishing Hay."
P. T. TURNLEY,
Captain Q. M.'s Department.
Depot Quartermaster's Office,
Camp Floyd, Utah,
February 4, 1859.

N. B.—"Deseret News," please copy three insertions, and present bill at "Valley Tan" Office for payment.
P. T. TURNLEY,
Captain Q. M.'s Department.

U. S. Mail Line.

From St. Joseph to Great Salt Lake City.

NOTICE is hereby given that passengers will not be carried by us on any section of this mail route until further notice, and that the agents and conductors on the route are positively forbidden from taking passengers on any conditions whatever.
J. M. HICKS & CO.,
By F. E. Dotson, Agent.
Feb. 14, 1859.

LIQUORS!

BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell the best St. Louis Rectified Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors in proportion.
MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

HAND-IN-HAND BAKERY
LOOK HERE EVERYBODY!

THE Subscriber has now in full operation a new Oven, and offers himself that he can please the taste of the public generally with a good article of light bread, cakes, pies, and variety of crackers, &c. &c., as can be produced in any establishment in this City, or elsewhere. Give me a call, and be your own judge. Terms moderate. Wedding cakes made to order. Parties supplied on short notice, by DANIEL GREENIG,
15-31

NEW GOODS.

JUST received a full stock of Staple Goods, selected expressly for this market.
GILBERT & GERRISH.

SALT LAKE HOUSE.

JAMES TOWNSEND, Proprietor.

Prices of Board.
Board and Lodging per week, $12 00
Board (without Lodging), 10 00
Board, per day, 2 00
Supper, Breakfast and Lodging, 2 00
Single meal, 1 00
Animals, per night, hay and grain, 2 00
Payments to be made in advance.
15-31

U. S. DISTRICT COURT, SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

A TERM of the United States District Court, for the Second Judicial District, of the Territory of Utah, will be held at the City of Salt Lake, in said District, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1859.
JOHN CRADLEBAUGH,
Judge of said District Court, U. T.

L. & A. CARR,

WHOLESALE BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS

AND BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,

No. 49 Main Street, ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetics, grammars, geographies, philosophies, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY,

BLANK BOOKS,

PRINTING AND WRITING PAPER,

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an EXTENSIVE BINDERY, Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice.

14-15

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL, AT CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.

CHARLES HARRISON, PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best market affords, and neat and comfortable apartments.

P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce.
12-15

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS,

WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

Their stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco,
Powder, Shot, Playing Cards,
Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon,
Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.

Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do Bourbon do
New York do Rectified do
Gin, do Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.
French Mustard, Mixed Pickles,
Durham do Assorted do
Assorted Jams, do Gherkins,
do Jellies, Piccolilli,
do Syrups, Pickled Onions,
do Cordials, Tomato Catsup,
Brandy Peaches, Walnut Catsup,
do Cherries, Mushroom Catsup,
do Pears, Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India Cellery Seed,
Preserves, Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Pepper Sauce,
Peach do Assorted Sauce,
Apple do do Nat. Preserves,
Flum do Capers Capoties,
Raspberry do Natural Preserved Pines,
Gooseberry do Roast Turkey,
Blackberry Brandy, Roast Chicken,
Raspberry Brandy, String Beans,
Fresh Lobster, Green Peas,
Picked do do Cots,
Fresh Clams, Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat, do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved Peaches,
Fresh Cauliflower, Nat. Preserved Strawberries, Picked do do Damsons,
Worcestershire Sauce, Natural Preserved Mushrooms, Stoughton Bitters, Natural Preserved Asparagus, Fresh Salmon, Fields Vinegar,
Fresh Tomatoes, Boker's do
French Pickles, do Oysters, Hostetter Bitters, do Cove do
Boker's do Pine Apple Cheese,
Le Drard's do Olive Oil,
Royal Windsor do Assorted Candies, Maraschino, Curraco, Raisins,
Curaco, Scotch Ale, Almonds, Bunsynth, London Porter, English Walnuts,
Scheidam Schnapps, Brazil Nuts,
Golden Grape Cognac, Figs,
Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy, Prunes,
Mountain Dew Whisky, Pecans, Family Supplies, Crackers, Morning Call, Crackhells,
Indian Queen Maderia, E. D. Cheese,
also a large and well selected stock of

Clothing, Hats and Caps,
Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware,
Ladies Shoes, Notions,
Woolen Gloves, Hosiery,
do Mitts, Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs, do Gauntlets,
Stationery, &c., do
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.
G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.
The undersigned would most respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same uniform rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKADE, & CO.
In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our train as yet expected.
L. K. & CO.

SIO REWARD.
STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Lewis' Ranch) one strawberry roan horse, branded "R" on the right shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return.
RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

FOR SALE,
LAGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Moxo, Dura & Co.
RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

FOR SALE,
ONE Thousand head of Sheep in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley.
CHARLES MOGO,
Hot Spring Brewery.

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS,
Would respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Stephens, at the Store of Livingston, Kinkade & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge for freight.
G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859.

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR, AT LAW.
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-15.

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office—Council House at opposite Miller & Russell's store. 2-15.

LAW OFFICE.
W. J. McCORMICK, T. S. WILLIAMS,
McCORMICK & WILLIAMS, ATTORNEYS AT LAW.

Practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts and Supreme Court. They will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.
OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store.
G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858.

1-14
Missouri Republican and N. Y. Herald will please publish 3 months daily, and send bill to this office.

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC.,
At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T. 1-6.

WAGONS.
A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by
1-15 GILBERT & GERRISH.

BILLIARDS.
THE EMPIRE, Billiard Saloon.
J. M. WALLACE, (up stairs) between Post Office, and Gilbert and Gerrish's Store, is now open for visitors.

The tables are new and perfect, and no pains will be spared to make it an agreeable resort for gentlemen. The exercise of this healthy and agreeable recreation.
2-17

EMPIRE SALOON.
THE BAR is now furnished with a large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., placed with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WINELESS refreshment is respectfully called.
2-17 JOHN M. WALLACE.

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to
2-17 GILBERT & GERRISH.

HOT SPRING BREWERY.
WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment to quantities to suit purchasers.
X. X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Bar Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS.
We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be secured at low rates. On the premises, we have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.
OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meal, 12 00
Supper breakfast and lodging, 2 00
For animals, for a single day, hay, or head, 1 00
For animals, for a single day, hay and grain, 1 00
and double those prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery.
M. G. B. H. & CO.
Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

COW STRAYED.
ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick spotted around her horns. Some small white giving milk. Think she was branded "A" on the horn, does not gait. Please bring her to Carls K. Bolton, 12th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded.

LOOK HERE!
A BOOK entitled "THE MISSOURI FURY BOOK" has been borrowed from the office of J. Hartine, Secretary of State. He earnestly requests anyone having it to return it without delay.

WORK CATTLE.
100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by
1-17 GILBERT & GERRISH.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.,
Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS & CAPS, HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS and CIGARS and outitting goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figures, for Cash or Country Produce.

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

1-15

KIRK ANDERSON'S VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MARCH 1, 1859.

NUMBER 18.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Pike's Peak Poetry.

Hurrah for Pike's Peak! Where the breezes
Of Heaven
Waft the glittering dust on their far-sweeping wings;
Where Bank is unknown, and no station is given To men in whose veins flows the life-tide of Kings.
Who cares for the bliss which society gives,
Or the love which we find at our hearth-stones alone?
Society spurns him who moneyless lives,
And bears in his pockets no "rocks of his own!"

Then farewell for a while to our altars and fires,
And away to the land where are treasures untold;
We are filled with a passion which Mammon inspires,
That nothing can tame except genuine
gold!
And should comrades betray in whose friendship we trust,
And shorten our days with some treacherous knife,
We shall die rich, no doubt, and send home
our dust,
To gladden the hearts of our children and wife!

THE COLORADO EXPEDITION.

FORCE DISPATCHED AND OBJECTS CON-TEMPLATED.

The Sixth Infantry.

Some days ago, we announced that General Clarke, as soon as the intelligence reached him of the affair between the United States Dragoons under Col. Hoffman, and the Mojave and Pah-Utah Indians, had issued the necessary orders to effectively carry out the views of the Government. The steamer, Uncle Sam was chartered, and all the preparations made to establish the required posts in the Mojave country.
In accordance with the orders issued by General Clarke, the following troops have been put in motion, viz:

Co. F, 6th Infantry, Brevet-Major	Armstrong, commanding, 82 men
Co. I, 6th Infantry, 1st Lieut. Smith	80 men
Co. H, 6th Infantry, 1st Lieut. Mar-	shall 80 men
Co. C, 6th Infantry, 1st Lieut. Hig-	80 men
Co. G, 6th Infantry, Capt. Ketchum,	to join at San Diego 80 men
Co. K, 6th Infantry, Capt. Garnett,	to join at Fort Yuma 84 men
Co. E, 6th Infantry, 1st Lieut.	Clark, to join at Fort Yuma 84 men
Two companies 1st Dragoons, to	March from Fort Tejon, 130 men
One company Artillery, with two	mountain howitzers 60 men
Total	760 men

Col. E. K. Mansfield, Inspector-General, will accompany the expedition as far as Fort Yuma, on a tour of inspection. The expedition will be intrusted to the command of Lieut. Colonel Wm.
Hoffman, 6th Infantry, with the following officers on his staff:

1st Lieut. James L. Corley, Adjutant, and A. A. Adjutant-General; 2d Lieut.
Charles G. Sawtelle, Acting Quartermaster; Assistant Surgeon Milhan, and Assistant Surgeon Edgar.

The troops from this place and Benicia, viz: Companies F and H, I and C, will sail on the steamer Uncle Sam, at 10 o'clock this morning, for the mouth of the Colorado, stopping at San Diego for Company G, which will be placed on board at that point. On reaching the mouth of the Colorado river, the small steamers employed on that stream will convey the troops to Fort Yuma, where they will be joined by companies K and E, which have been ordered to march from San Bernardino, so as to reach Fort Yuma about the same time, as well as by two companies of the 1st Dragoons, numbering one hundred and thirty men, which have received orders to march from the Tejon, and by the Artillery company now at Fort Yuma. The remainder of the journey into the Mojave country will be made by marching, and the troops will be accompanied by pack mules. The march will probably be conducted on the western bank of the river, until the command arrives at Beale's crossing, when they will be disposed of as circumstances may require.

It is not designed to wage war against the Indians, but to establish certain posts, now become necessary to the safety of the Overland Mail route, which passes through the Mojave country, and to chastise the Indians in case they prove refractory and hostile. The operations will be defensive rather than offensive, and no assault will be made upon the Indians unless courted by themselves.

Companies F and H, of the 6th Infantry, passed through our city yesterday, to go on board the steamer; and their fine military appearance was a subject of general remark and eulogy. They had the air of active service—soldiers in every sense of the word. These men had already exhibited their zeal and devotion by their exposures and sufferings during the Mormon campaign; they had already marched across the continent, a distance of several thousand miles; they had given every evidence of their loyalty and courage, and were then commencing another tedious travel of over two thousand miles, preparatory to commencing another fatiguing and active campaign, in which there was no little of danger and privation, and a mere modicum of military glory as a recompense.

The brave fellows will leave us with the heart felt wishes of our community for their welfare and safety, and the earnest conviction that, at all times and under all circumstances, the noble Sixth will gallantly maintain the high name and position that regiment has honorably won on many blood-stained fields. St. Louis Herald.

Shocking Murder.

Two Men taken from Jail and Hung by a Mob.

[From the Omaha Nebraska Extra, Jan 10.]

About eight o'clock last Saturday evening, the jail in this city was entered by a party of fifteen or twenty men—the precise number not ascertained—and two prisoners named Braden and Daly —whose arrest and imprisonment for horse stealing we noticed last week—were forcibly taken therefrom. The keys to the cell where the prisoners were confined were first obtained by some person walking boldly into a room occupied by Mr. Reeves, the jailor—in his absence—and taking them from the nail on which they were hanging, and retreating before his exit could be prevented by the females who were present. There were three ladies in the room—which is immediately over the jail—at the time, and on going to the door they beheld a number of men descending to the basement where the prisoners were confined. None of the persons were disguised, and all were unknown to the women. On being asked what they wanted, one of the persons advised the ladies to be quiet and they should not be hurt; and in a few minutes the whole number reappeared with the prisoners, threw the keys into the door and departed. A messenger was immediately dispatched to another part of the city for Mr. Reeves and an alarm given, but too late to avert the evil already accomplished.

Nothing further was heard or known of the affair until near ten o'clock yesterday, (Sunday) when our people were startled by a rumor that the prisoners were seen hanging by the neck to a tree, some two miles above Florence, and about eight miles north of this city.—
This rumor proved alas! too true. On visiting the spot indicated both bodies were found as described, where they must have been suspended at least twelve hours.—
The prisoners were shackled at the time they were taken from the jail, and the irons were still on when the bodies were discovered. The corps of Braden presented the most frightful spectacle of which it is possible to conceive—the rope, either by accident or design, having been placed in his mouth instead of under his chin, by his inhuman murderers.

The bodies were brought to this city last evening, and a Coroner's Inquest called, which is still in session. The Inquest is held with closed doors, and the evidence adduced will not transpire until its close.

Suspicion points strongly towards several persons residing at or near Rockport, Washington county, as the perpetrators of this horrid crime, and a posse of men from this city, under Deputy-Sheriff Page, started this morning to make arrests.

Of the persons murdered we know but little. Braden was an American by birth, apparently about thirty years of age. He was a man of powerful frame, and bore the reputation of being a very dangerous and desperate character. He lived in Harrison county, Iowa, and leaves a wife. Daly was about twenty-five years old, and so far as we can learn, had always been regarded as a quiet and inoffensive, but rather weak young man. He also lived in Harrison county and was unmarried.

A deep feeling of regret and just indignation pervades this community, and a settled determination to bring to justice all who were concerned in so revolting an outrage.

The Slander of Gov. Cumming.

It is boldly charged in Washington by gentlemen who profess to know what they are talking about, that Gov. Cumming, of Utah, has become a Mormon.
The above report, from an Atlantic paper, has finally got into circulation in California. A more baseless slander was never perpetrated upon a worthy and conscientious public officer. The "gentlemen who profess to know," in the matter referred to, are aware that in asserting such an infamous scandal, they are striking at the character of an honorable man, whose distance from the originators of the libel renders it difficult for him to refute, even were he disposed to take notice of it. The statement is one of those stories made up out of whole cloth, for political capital and for base purposes, to further which no means are considered as too contemptible.

Gov. Alfred Cumming is a native of Georgia, and married a daughter of one of the most distinguished physicians of Boston, a lady possessing the most elegant accomplishments, and who has accompanied him to Utah Territory. His whole career, from his earliest entrance into public life, has been that of an honorable man and a gentleman, incapable of the disgrace attributed to him. During the dreadful reign of the cholera in 1836, Governor—then Colonel—Cumming was Mayor of Augusta, Ga. His conduct throughout that trying epoch was heroic and self-sacrificing. Night and day he devoted his time and services to alleviating the cause of his suffering fellow citizens. Many yet survive to bless the hand that ministered to their wants and saved their lives. The people, on his retirement, presented him with a splendid service of plate in testimony of his generous conduct.

For some years he was stationed at Jefferson Barracks in St. Louis. At the commencement of the Mexican war he was at Point Isabel, and afterwards on the southern line, attached to Gen. Scott's staff. Subsequently he was detailed by Government to visit several tribes of Indians in the far West, and won the fullest approbation of the Administration by his conciliatory and resolute management. His harmonizing influence extended far and wide, and probably did much toward preventing war in the sections which he visited, and his skill thus saved the Government the expenses of a savage war. His services to the country have been eminent, and in not one of the important duties committed to his judgment has he failed to manifest wisdom and ability.

In selecting a guiding spirit for the trying emergency arising out of the Mormon rebellion in 1857, the Government saw in Col. Cumming, the man for the time and the place. The duties of the position were responsible and delicate.
There was no precedent by which to be guided. The majesty of the law was to be asserted if necessary, by force, but bloodshed was to be avoided if possible.
This thrown upon his own resources, and far removed from the countenance of the Government, placed among a hostile, fanatical and lawless people, the qualities of prudence, forbearance, firmness, and no small degree of administrative talent were demanded. These he has shown himself to possess. His mission has thus far been entirely successful. It is this man whom hired detractors assail for partisan purposes.
The falsehood can only eventually recoil upon the heads of its originators. S. F. Times.

"LET ME KISS HIM FOR HIS MOTH-ER."—The editor of the New Orleans Advocate has this incident about the ravages of the yellow fever in that city, related to him by one of the Methodist pastors:

"The preacher was called a few days since to attend the funeral of a young man. Before his sickness he was a stout, buoyant, manly youth. He was from the State of Maine, and had been here but a short time. He was attacked by yellow fever, and soon died, with no mother or relative to watch by his bedside, or to soothe him, with that sympathy which none but those of our own
'dear kindred blood,' can feel or manifest. He died among strangers, and was buried by them. When the funeral service was over, and the strange friends who had ministered to him were about to finally close the coffin, an old lady who stood by stopped them, and said: 'Let me kiss him for his mother.'
We have yet to find the first man or woman to whose eye this simple recital has not brought tears."

A few days since, workmen removing goods from the basement of a grocery store in Cincinnati, disturbed a barrel containing squarrot, which had fermented, and when shaken exploded with a loud noise, blowing the staves in all directions, but fortunately injured no person.

Death of a Distinguished Beauty.

[London Correspondence of the New York Times.]

One of the most distinguished beauties of English society has been prematurely snatched away by death within the last few days. Lady Clementina Villiers, the second daughter of the Earl of Jersey, has been for several years the most admired and sought after of the daughters of the aristocracy. The greatest fortunes and some of the greatest titles, in the United Kingdom, have been at her feet; but, as is well known, she retained her inflexible resolution not to accept any of them. Her affections were said to have been early won by a clergyman possessing but an inconsiderable benefice, and not likely by his talents to obtain a more prominent position in the Church. Her worldly and fashionable parents refused their assent to such a match, and unlike her sister, Lady Adela, who ten years ago eloped with Captain Ibbotson, she continued to reside with her parents, and to accompany her mother in the incessant round of society in which the old lady lives. Nor was her amiability limited to the too faithful performance of filial obligations. When her brother, the late member for Rochester, became so embarrassed as to be obliged to leave the country, many of his outstanding engagements were brought up by his mother, who as the heiress of Mr. Child, the banker, still possessed a remnant of her once splendid fortune. The liabilities soon exhausted Lady Jersey's personal resources, and Lady Clementina spontaneously resolved to devote many thousands of that which had been settled on herself, to liquidate her brother's debts. Those who observed her gradually attenuated form and slowly fading beauty, as year after year she returned to the joyless haunts of aristocratic frivolity and fashion, could not but perceive that, however care might succeed in preserving the lineaments of loveliness, the spirit within was perishing of "Love's sweet want." The last time I stood near her was at a densely thronged assembly at one of those mansions in Piccadilly famed for the brilliancy of its receptions. She was dressed en suite in bright blue, and wore upon her head, which was of exquisitely moulded form, a wreath of roses of the same color placed perfectly horizontally, as you may sometimes see them worn by the Tyrolean peasants at their village festivals. The grace and geniality of her demeanor as she swam lightly on from room to room, with the passing recognition of a little word for those she knew, was as exquisite and apparently effortless as in the sunniest morning of her life. But the gaiety of girlhood had passed away, and the ambition of womanhood had not come; and it seemed to me often as she paused, awaiting an opening in the sometimes almost impenetrable crowd, her eye acquired the abstracted look, and her statue-like form the air of immobility which belongs rather to a state of trance than to that of active life. Her eldest sister was married some years ago to Prince Nicholas Esterhazy; she lived not very happily, it is said, for about two years, and then died after a short illness. And now another is added to the series of blighted hopes with which the haughty, selfish and worthless house of Jersey has been visited.

Across the face of Prussian bank notes is printed some fifty times in very small type, the penalty for counterfeiting, which is from five to fifteen years imprisonment, so that convicted counterfeiters cannot plead ignorance of the law.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, MARCH 1, 1859.

The Eastern Mail due last Sunday, had not arrived up to the present writing (Tuesday 10 o'clock,) and we shall go to Press without it.

The snow-storms in the mountains and passes must have been terrible.

Federal Courts in Utah.

After nine years' experience of the working of their code of laws, and after its being over and often "magnified" as a great monument of Mormon wisdom, it was deemed necessary at the late session of the Legislature to alter very essentially its provisions as to juries.

Over this contrivance has been thrown a very thin veil, and the trick is transparent.

As this legislation runs, the "county court" is to select fifty men, eligible to serve as jurors, whose names are to be placed in the custody of the clerk, who, upon venire issued is to draw therefrom twenty-four names respectively for grand and petit jurors.

A year's constant residence, ownership of taxable property and payment of taxes, is made a necessary qualification for any juror.

Our readers remember what Jedediah M. Grant said about the effect of the "brief explanations" of Brigham Young in producing unanimity in the jury box; and will readily perceive what a steady eye this little arrangement has to the preservation of ecclesiastical influence, by giving the power to exclude from jury service every body who is not subject to those "explanations" which have such talismanic effect in producing unanimity in the panel.

What an easy method this alteration of the law presents, of giving before-hand such explanations as will effectually prevent the faithful from "sucking in the dirt and filth of Gentile courts, ostensibly courts in Utah."

If Brigham, by virtue of the secret oath, bound league and mysteries of Mormonism, claims and exercises the right to instruct jurors what to do, surely this "county court" is equally pliant to his purposes.

But we would like to know where this "county court" sprang from. A court is defined to be "a place where justice is judicially administered;" and upon examining the act creating this court, we find an attempt to invest it with considerable judicial power. It adjudicates on roads, controls timber and water privileges, grants mill sites, &c., &c.

Now, the organic act, which is the supreme law here, provides that the judicial power of said Territory shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, probate courts and in justices of the peace. The establishment of this court, therefore, is a plain violation of that organic act and a gross assumption of power derogatory to the dignity and authority of Congress.

It has been suddenly discovered too that a departure from the laws of all the States, with whose codes we are familiar, was necessary in Utah, and a year's previous uninterrupted residence, &c., is now required to make a competent juror. Nine years' experience has just shed this light on the legislative mind.

This is a part also of the scheme to open up a ready way for those "explanations" upon which Jeddy placed such reliance.

All these laws, however, will come up for the consideration of the Federal judges, for decision upon their effect and validity—for, happily, they hold check upon legislation based upon a usurpation of legislative power. It may turn out that the laws of the United States have been extended over this Territory wherever applicable, and that the Legislature may be confined to authorized legislation supplemental to, instead of in derogation of them.

The time has passed, and will never return, when the United States Courts can be broken up, and "the boys let loose" on them, because the Judges may feel it their duty to decide against the validity of a territorial law. Thoughtless and superficial men there doubtless are, who laugh and snigger over these embarrassments which have been thrown in the way of federal authority in this Territory; but the time may come when they will laugh out of the other corner of the mouth.

Are the laws of the United States and its officers respected here as good royal people ought to respect their authority? Was the decision of the Judges and of Governor Cumming respected in relation to the lawful seat of government? Did not the Legislature meet in the Social Hall, in this city, contemporaneously with the meeting at Fillmore? Did they not adjourn to meet in this city at the next session—thus doggedly and pertinaciously insisting upon their views and construction of the law of the case, as though they came by the inspiration of God himself.

But still more under counsel the Mormon portion of the Grand Jury, met last night we understand, in the Social Hall, to reverse Judge Sinclair's order, respecting the pay of the Jurors, for attendance on the late District Court, and thus to impeach his record books. Could impudence go further?

We understand also that a learned Judge, lately from Australia, has offered to rip the thing up for twenty-five dollars a head. Admirable Judge! Great fountain of legal light! try it at Washington, if you dare!

We need not go on with instances, of the want of respect, which seems to pervade the acts of the leaders here, to the United States Officers. They disregard their acts, indulge in foul-mouthed abuse of them, in the Legislature, and secretly hate and despise the commissions they bear.

Now this whole Utah affair must have an end. A day of reckoning will come. When all pacific measures shall have been exhausted, and "omissions, errors, and evident imperfections in the law," aided by low cunning and intrigue, shall demonstrate the low-heartedness of the recipients of a Territorial Government. Congress will deal out stern justice, and cut out the "loathsome ulcer."

Legislative usurpation will then be powerless—Judges will no longer be insulted and annoyed; but the rattle of the drum may be heard instead of Legislative abuse; and bayonets be more potent than those "explanations" which ignore bills of indictment, for a cold blooded murder, committed on soul-saving principles.

Assembly Soirees.

These delightful reunions, seem to grow in popular favor, and the Hall is crowded every night. The next one will come off on Thursday night.

Stealing animals seems to be on the increase. We have heard of five instances within a week, where mules and horses have been stolen in the neighborhood of this City.

We understand that there is a duel on the tapis—We are not permitted to say farther.

We understand that the Indians South, in the neighborhood of Santa Clara, under the lead of Kanosh, are creating another disturbance, and ordering settlers from their lands. Nothing short of a good Dragooning will ever do these fellows any good.

Our last advices from the Camp inform us that all was quiet. Several deserters who had been captured; have been punished, and the usual order reigned. There is no money there, and will not be until Major Prince, returns from California; the fact is, there is precious little money in this City; our "beloved brethren," especially the rulers, we presume have Cached it with some ulterior object doubtless in view. The Sutter's stores are as popular as ever, and we are glad to record that credit is good, and that all hands live in the hopes that there is a "good time coming."

The darkies seem to be getting opstrepous; we have heard of two fights between "cullod pussons" within the last two days, in both instances pistols were used, but unfortunately no one was hurt.

We think it is time the City Council was taking prompt measures and pass some stringent laws in relation to negroes carrying fire arms. It is bad enough to see every white man and even child you meet with their side batteries, let alone seeing a revolver swung to the side of every negro in the streets. It is a subject that demands legislation and it should be acted upon.

It has been snowing for a week, and from present indications it would seem that winter never would "bust." We have almost abandoned hopes of ever seeing spring come, and were it not for the scriptural assurance in relation to the seasons we should entirely give it up.

Below we give some extracts from a discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, April 17, 1853, of the Prophet's opinion of what he called the Gladdenites, a sect in this country who had the intelligence and courage to leave Mormonism, and we will venture the opinion farther from what we see, hear and know in this community that, to use the language of the razor strop man, "there are a few more left"—nay, a great many.

It will also be observed that the professed prophet of the Lord speaks very humiliatingly about riches, and gives a dash of his own personal experience.

What are the facts? that while the poor and laboring Mormons are compelled to pay tithings, he luxuriates like a Sultan in his palace. The great majority of the people, we have reason to believe, know this fact. It was only a few weeks since that a Tennessee bank went down with $10,000 of Brigham Young's money; and the probability is, that if the "corral" which he inhabits were to be exposed, there would be enough gold found to create a small Pike's Peak excitement.

"I wish to say a few words about some men and families in this city," called Gladdenites. We have been pretty severe upon them, but nowhere, except in the pulpit, to my knowledge. I counsel my brethren to keep away from their houses; let them alone, and treat them as courteously as you would any other person. Do you inquire whether I have any grounds for giving this advice? I answer, I have. For there are few men in this congregation who know when to stop, should they find themselves engaged in a contest with one of that class of people, therefore let them alone entirely. Those individuals are disagreeable to me, and so are their doctrines. The man they hold up is low and degraded in his spirit; feelings, and life; I have not patience to hear anything said about him. I have known him too long, and too well, not to be satisfied of the wickedness of his heart.

You say you wish to do right, and please the Lord in all your actions; but were I to adopt an evil practice, the greater portion of this community would follow it. Why not follow me then in doing right? Righteousness, in whomsoever found, will never lead you astray; while wickedness will lead you to ruin. No man, possessing the Spirit of the Lord, can for a moment believe Gladden Bishop's writings. If it were possible, his system is more foolish than the exhibition of Free Masonry I have referred to.

I wish this community to understand, that what has been said here touching those men, and their views, has been with no other design than to cause them to use their tongues as they ought, and cease abusing me and this people. Some of them visited me yesterday, and wished to know if it was safe for them to stay here. I told them they were as safe as I was, if they did not undertake to make us swallow, whether or not, something we are not willing to take. We have been driven, and re-driven, said I, and if corrupt people stay in our midst, they have got to use their tongues properly. They promised they would, if they might stay.

If they wish to live here in peace, I am willing they should, but I do not wish them to stir up strife. I never expected that this community would be composed entirely of Latter Day Saints, but I expected there would be goats mixed among the sheep, until they are separated; I do not look for anything else, but I wish them to behave themselves in their sphere, also the sheep; and let the goats associate with their goatish companions, and not endeavor to disturb the equanimity of the sheep in their pasture.

This comparison will apply to this people, and those men. If they wish to labor, and obtain a living, they are welcome to do so; but they are not at liberty to disturb the peace of their neighbors in any way; neither let this people disturb them; but grant them every privilege claimed by, and belonging to American citizens. Let them meet together and pray, if they please; this is their own business. Let them do as some did in a camp-meeting in York State—one man met another and said, "How do you do?" "How are they getting along on the camp-ground?" "Why they are serving God like the very devil," was the reply. And the Gladdenites may serve God like the devil, if they will keep out of my way, and out of the way of this people.

The men who visited me yesterday, stated that they believed Joseph was a true prophet, and that they were full blooded Mormons; indeed they seemed to have in them an extra charge of Mormon blood. I asked one of them if he had any confidence in the endowment. He confessed he had no faith in it. I then asked him if he did not believe that Joseph Smith was a fallen prophet. His reply was, "I rather think he is."

When a man throws a stone at me, and with it dashes his own brains out, I have nothing to say. He called himself a full blooded Mormon, and almost in the same breath declared Joseph was a fallen prophet, and that he had no confidence in the endowment. How is it in reality with those men? Why they have not a particle of faith either in Joseph Smith, or the Book of Mormon. I told one of them, who professed to be so honest that he wanted the Lord to come down from heaven that moment and judge him, that five years would not pass away before he would be cursing, and swearing, and proclaiming blasphemously against every good principle in heaven and on earth.

They do not know what they believe; neither do they know what they have received; they think they know that you are out of the right way, and that they are walking in it. When they say this people are going to be destroyed by the judgment of God, it is to me like the cracking of thorns under the pot. Pass along, and mind your own business, is a fit reply to their declarations.

How many times has he made us poor? Thousands of dollars worth of property in houses and land, which the Lord gave me, are now in the East, in the hands of our enemies. I never said they were mine, they were the Lord's, and I was one of his stewards.

When I went to Kirtland, I had not a coat in the world, for previous to this, I had given away everything I possessed, that I might be free to go forth and proclaim the plan of salvation to the inhabitants of the earth. Neither had I a shoe on my feet, and I had to borrow a pair of pants; and a pair of boots. I stayed there five years, and accumulated five thousand dollars. How do you think I accomplished this? Why the Lord Almighty gave me those means. I have often had that done for me that has caused me to marvel. I know, as well as I know I am standing before you to-day, that I have had money put into my trunk, and into my pocket without the instrumentality of any man. This I know to a certainty, ask an apostate, if they can, in truth bear testimony to such a thing. They cannot do it. Enough about that.

Again, I say if Mormonism is not all I anticipated it to be, it is nothing, if it is not in me, and I in it, if it is not at all, and in all to me, I am deceived in myself, it is every thing in heaven, and on earth to those who possess it truly; but lose this, and as I told you the other day what remains will dwindle, perish, decay, decompose, and be reduced to its native element, or in other words be thrown into the mill to be ground over.

We take the following extract from a letter written in April last, and which was picked up on the road. It was written in this City, in French, and directed to a lady in St. Louis.

It shows the fanaticism of Mormonism, and the ridiculous pretensions of that Saint Brigham Young, who, ensconced in his Corral, has so often misled and deceived "this people," by his so called revelations and prophecies.

We have every reason to believe that the eyes of the people are being opened, and that they are beginning to look with contempt upon their spiritual rulers, who fatten upon their muscle, and grow rich from the honest sweat that drips from their brows. It is the masses who suffer, whose earnings, under a Church discipline, is wrung from them to enrich the coffers of an ecclesiastical hierarchy.

"You believed doubtless, that the American Government by sending 3000 soldiers of the regular army, with 16 pieces of cannon, would easily bring to their senses the poor Mormons, hang Brigham Young, the Twelve Apostles, the Bishops—in fact our principal chiefs. Well I now teach you, if you know it not already, that having reached Fort Bridger, the Prophet of the Lord in a loud voice cried out: Stop, halt there! you shall come no farther, and immediately the American army, paralyzed by an invisible hand in all its movements, could not take a single step in advance; and after passing five months buried in the snows, it will now retreat back and return to the States, without having been able to enter our valleys and fulfil its abominable mission. As for me having kept my faith and wishing to remain faithful to the end, I consider this check of the army of our enemy a very great miracle, and one of the most striking proofs that our church is truly the only church of Jesus Christ on the earth.

From what you tell me in your letter, it is apparent that you will return to Jersey with your two boys. As to this, I have nothing to say; you will do as you see fit.

Permit me merely to make you recollect never to lose sight of the fact that after your death you will reap nothing but what you have sown—be it in Jersey or anywhere else. You had the reputation of being a very sensible and intelligent woman, but nevertheless you have lost all that you had. Try at least not to lose your soul.

You can understand very well that a church which can, without firing a single gun, put to flight the American army, and which laughs and holds in derision the whole power of the United States, possesses strength enough to disdain all that Mr. and Mrs. Vicg, Mr. and Mrs. Benham and yourself could say or do in Jersey.

Farewell then, dear lady. I expect to leave here shortly to go and regulate my family affairs in France; and to preach the gospel in my native land and in Jersey."

KIRK ANDERSON, ESQ.

SIR:—Allow me to call the attention of your patrons, to the subject of Christian piety, which, in view of the multiplicity of human institutions and events; the changes of time and fluctuation of fortune, is certainly not unworthy of serious reflection.

I am induced to allude to this subject from the evident signs of decline in many of the external indications of this virtue (as it is here understood,) among the saints of these latter days, and confess myself at a loss to account for the lukewarmness that has prevailed during the present winter.

It was not so formerly, as may be perceived by the contrast between the cold, apathetic, and insipid discourses, delivered recently by Professor Pratt, and those spirited extracts which have appeared from time to time in the "Valley Tan," and mark the enthusiasm of former times.

You have doubtless read many of the discourses from which you have quoted, and felt somewhat amused at their intrepidity; but if you could only have been present, to behold the orators, writhing under the influence of the most violent emotions; to hear those heated sentences ringing in your ears, with all those embellishments of music which Br. Carrington so wantonly clips out, the effect upon your mind must certainly have been greatly heightened. Perhaps you would have imagined yourself in the presence of the Athenian Orator, hurling philippics at the King of Macedon, (and perhaps you would not.)

When the mind reverts back, it seems, but a day since Mormonism was a blaze of enthusiasm. Every other consideration gave place to the excitement of the reformation.

The arch fiend was to be chained for a thousand years, and the advent of the Millennium, confidently expected. The voice of the home missionaries and teachers were heard alike upon the streets, the thresh-hold and the hearthstone, encouraging the timid, and threatening the wayward with the anathemas of their master—catechising one upon habits of cleanliness, another upon celibacy, and the exercise of certain instincts and functions of nature, pertaining to procreation, regulating every indulgence by the Celestial Standard, till every man, woman and child, became as Br. Heber, expresses it, "like a tallowed rag," in the hands of the Priesthood.

But where now are those intrepid defenders of the Mormon faith? Has this Church and Kingdom, no more interest to subscribe? Has the late reformation perfected the holiness of the saints, and exempted them from future temptation and sin? Then why this lack of enthusiasm—this relaxation of discipline? Why should the boasted "Lion of the Lord," shrink back in his lair, and cease to animate and encourage the hearts of the faithful, or to terrify the wayward and faltering with the sound of his mighty roar?

E. D.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.

Feb. 24, 1859.

MR. EDITOR.

Our mail for the week arrived late last night, we had almost given it up. On the 22d our Camp was pretty lively; all duties were suspended for the day, and at mid-day a National Salute was fired by Company C, 3rd artillery, commanded by Bvt. Major Reynolds. During the firing the several bands played the National Airs.

A difficulty occurred across the creek from the Post, in what is known as Adobe town, between a citizen by the name of O'Neill and a Mexican, which resulted in the death of the latter. O'Neill is still at large, though a party of citizens started in pursuit; had he been taken in the morning there is no doubt but that he would have been lynched upon the spot. This town is a complete collection of grog shops and gambling houses, and not a day passes without several rows, but up to the present time none of a very serious nature.

The commanding officer, to prevent difficulties between soldiers and citizens, in the first place appointed several non-commissioned officers as Provost Sergeants, and afterwards issued an order that no enlisted man should cross the creek without a written pass; thus making it a part of the duty of a Provost to enquire of every one that they may see if they have a pass; and this they do, but too often in an insulting manner.

We have had no performances in the Theatre since my last, owing I believe to the illness of one of the principal actresses. I hope she may be able to appear on Saturday evening, as we miss them very much.

"COMEDY."

The Right of Search.

THE EFFECT OF MR. BUCHANAN'S POSITION ON THE SUBJECT.

(From the London Times, Jan. 4.)

General Cass, it appears, considers the orders issued by the British government for the protection of the Plenipotentiary as a violation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. These orders were, that if the State of Nicaragua required for its defence from filibusters the active intervention of military power, a British armed force was to land, seize them, and hand them over, if Americans, to their own government, and, having done this, retire immediately. This intervention was only to be exercised during the time the diplomatic representative of the British government was in the country. Mr. Dallas seems to fear that the English naval officers might, under such circumstances, become more tools of the dominant party in Nicaragua, and seize as filibusters whomsoever they chose to designate by that name. He maintains also that, although the British government has no right to use force for the purpose of defending its diplomatic representative, because such force would be an "occupation" within the meaning of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, no such difficulty would accrue from an armed intervention by the United States, in accordance with the President's Message, for the purpose of opening the route across the Isthmus—that is, of placing it in the permanent "occupation" of the United States, Lord Malmesbury thinks both proceedings would be right—our protection of our diplomatist, and the American protection of the route. Mr. Dallas thinks the American intervention would be right, but ours wrong.

The objection comes with an ill grace at the time when we are actually engaged in an attempt to get rid of that Mosquito protectorate which the United States contend is an "occupation" within the meaning of the treaty. It is not reasonable to construe instructions to naval officers with the same strictness as if they were treaty stipulations, or to suppose that our officers will find any difficulty or require any assistance from the State of Nicaragua in discovering who are the filibusters whom they are required to seize; and more especially ungracious is this cavil when it is remembered that the object of the orders is to protect a British diplomatist engaged in negotiating a treaty, in a a thou-millenium, the home and aliko and the aid, and anathe-one upon celebracy, nets and procraby the woman resses it, is of the deanders much and wey Has holiness from fuwhy this of dis-nd cease ts of the and falroar?

E. D. ate last

On the 11 duties mid-day pay C, Major several ek from is town, Neil and h of the rough a

; had no no doubt ed upon dlection and not but up serious

nt diffis, in the missional affird man writter uty of a ut they is they ner.
he The-
to the sses. I aturday osition

lers the nent for ry as a treaty.
f Nicar-ibusters ower, a ze them, to their this, re-on was e the di-ish gov-Dallas officers become Nicaramsoever
ne. He British for the presenan "oc-s Clay-r would by the he Pre-opening t is," of tion," of thinks protecmerican a thinks a right, grace at aged in to pro-tend is g of the true ine same lations, find any rom the who are ured to e is this e object planaty, in a agreeable to the United States, from the violence of American citizens let upon the State with whom he is negating by the default of their own government.

If the President really wishes to get credit for a desire to put down that filibuster spirit to which he gave too much countenance at the Conference of Ostend, he should, at any rate, abstain from throwing difficulties in the way of a friendly government which, in discharging the duty of protecting its Minister, is driven to do for humanity and civilization that which the government of the United States ought itself to have done.

Passing over matters of less consequence, we come to a correspondence carried on at San Juan del Norte between Commander Mc-Intosh, of the United States ship Roanoke, and Captain Sir William Aldham, of her Majesty's steamer Valorous. The American officer complains that the American steamer Washington was visited by two officers of the Valorous at San Juan del Norte, and that the American steamer Catharine Maria was visited in the Colorado river by Captain Wainwright, of her Majesty's ship Leopard.
Captain Wainwright's offence seems to have been that he went on board the vessel, asked whether they had seen any filibusters, and, having answered in the negative, immediately withdrew.

This statement Commander McIntosh considered satisfactory. Sir William Aldham's offence was of a deeper dye. Fifteen minutes after the Washington entered the harbor of San Juan two officers from the Valorous boarded her, and asked the following questions:

"Where from?" "How many passengers have you?" "How many days out from New York?" "Did you stop at any port on your way out?" "Are all your passengers Americans?" "Are they armed?" "Has your hold been examined by the American officers?" On this Commander McIntosh responds that his instructions are most rigid in regard to the boarding, delaying or examining of American merchant vessels, and that he sees no distinction between filibusters and Africans. Sir William Aldham replies that the vessel was in a port under the protection of Great Britain, that the visit was in accordance with established usage, and that the vessel, being at anchor, was put to no inconvenience by the inquiries. Commander McIntosh denies that, under the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, San Juan del Norte is under the protection of the British crown, but expresses a belief that no offence was meant,
and so the correspondence ends.

We confess it appears to us that the American government and its officers are pushing matters very far indeed, and by no means responding to the frank and friendly manner in which the practice of visitation and search in time of peace has been by our government entirely surrendered. The whole gravamen of visitation and search lay in the compulsory nature of the proceeding. To stop a vessel on the high seas, to compel her to produce her papers, and to submit to an examination of her cargo is prima facie an invasion by one person of the rights of another, which nothing but the result—that is, proof of the guilt of the person thus detained—can justify. But to go on board a ship without an armed force, on her arrival in a harbor, when, being at anchor, she undergoes no detention nor suffers any compulsion whatever, and then to ask a number of questions, whatever they be, and with whatever object they be put, with no attempt and no intention to compel an answer, cannot, we apprehend, be considered as a visitation or search within the meaning affixed by the law of nations to those terms. It really seems to come to this, that no English naval officer can go on board an American ship, however conciliatory his conduct, however unassuming his demeanor, however unwilling or unable he may be to apply compulsion, without giving to the United States a casus belli against this country.

Gold Mines on the Gila River.

ARIZONA, OR GADSDEN PURCHASE, TERRITORY OF
NEW MEXICO, Dec. 20, 1858.
A Real Gold Discoverer on the Gila—Prospect of the Miners—Scarcity of Provisions—Climate, &c., &c.

As I know that you are always anxious to know before your readers every interesting fact concerning the development of the resources of our country, I hasten to inform you of the late discoveries of gold in this section of the country.

For many years past it was reported that gold could be found all along the Gila river —indeed, I have frequently read of it in the columns of your paper; but the hostility of the Indians was such as to prevent parties who passed through the country from fully exploring it. It was not, however, considered that gold could be found so near the mouth of the river until about the middle of last August, when a Mr. Birch, an old California miner, who was passing through here on his way back to Texas, determined to stop and prospect the hills for a few days, as his cattle were tired after crossing the desert. He had not been an hour at work before he found several small pieces of gold merely by scratching with his knife. He then set to work and made himself a rocker, and commenced in earnest; and as there were at that time many emigrants on their way from Texas to California, they all stopped as they came along, and went to work also, until in about six or eight weeks there were about fifty men, most of them having families, encamped and at work here.

About the first of November I and several others determined to go down from San Francisco and try our fortunes. We accordingly arrived here about the 20th of last November, and found some seventy men, mostly all Texans, at work. They have built themselves houses made of brush and mud, and called the place Gila City. It is situated about eight miles above the junction of the Gila with the Colorado river, at which point Fort Yuma is located. There is a city laid out right opposite Fort Yuma, in the Gadsden purchase, called Arizona City, which contains but two mud houses, one of which is the Post Office for a large tract of country on both sides of the river. When we arrived at the mines we found that they were not doing so well as we had been informed; only four or five parties could be said to be making high wages—the others were only doing tolerably well. Taking all on an average, they were only making about four or five dollars a day to the man. I have seen some claims yield as high as fifty dollars per day to the man; and again, I have seen others that would not pay more than fifty cents per day.

The mines in this section of the country will never pay well, as a general thing, as the river is nearly half a mile distant from the nearest place where gold is found, and they have to haul the dirt in wagons to the river to wash it, for which they have to pay two dollars per load. Some loads yield as high as twenty dollars; others do not yield enough to pay for hauling. But should capitalists bring engines here and force the waters up to the hills, as in the California mines, then, indeed, they will pay handsomely. The mines here extend about five miles on each side of the river. There are three mining camps here at present. There are numbers of men coming here daily from California.
Many of them stay here for a few days, and prospect a little, and not finding it as rich as they would wish, curse the country and go home again. But I have never seen any one who would go directly to work and keep at it steady who could not make it pay well.
There are a few companies who have made well of it. One company, I know, have taken out three thousand dollars in two months. The gold is found in the deep rav-ines, and in some places on the tops of the hills. There are scarcely any deep diggings.
It is found mostly near the surface and on the bed rock in the gulches and ravines, where it was washed down the hills from decomposed quartz rock.

But this is merely a beginning, and no doubt when the adventurous pioneer Californians come down they will make their way up to the head waters of the Gila, where gold is said to be found in large quantities. Indeed, they are already beginning to organize a large body of men to proceed up, but they must be well armed and vigilant, as they will have to advance into the very heart of the Apache country. Should they organize an effective body of men I will go along with them and keep you informed of all that transpires. There are here, at present, some two hundred men, the majority of whom have no fixed claims, but are prospecting the country all around. I myself did the same for nearly three weeks, and not finding anything good, bought one-third of a claim, which is paying well.

The climate of this country is delightful at this season of the year. We have now such weather as you have in New York, in October. It scarcely ever rains here except a few showers in August. The entire country for hundreds of miles is one vast region of barren hills and valleys. It never can be made much of as an agricultural country, as there are no means of irrigation, and the ground is highly impregnated with alkali.
There is no timber except in some places, where there are a few mesquit or cottonwood trees to be found. Its only redeeming character is that it is extremely rich in minerals.
Provisions are very high here, as everything has to be brought from California—chiefly from San Francisco, up the Gulf of California to the mouth of the Colorado, thence to Fort Yuma by steamer. The stages of the Overland Mail Company from St. Louis pass through here twice a week; so we have ample means for correspondence. I will now close this letter. In my next I will give you all the items of interest that may transpire here.

A San Francisco letter says: "Frazer river is almost unheard of. Every steamer brings down as many as can get away, and nearly all the adventurers thitherward have got back, looking considerably the worse for wear. It is only necessary to appear in a shocking bad hat, and dilapidated and well ventilated garments, to be hailed with a 'Hello! how's Frazer?'" Every shabby, woe-begone looking chap is supposed to be one of 'em.

AN EX-CLERGYMAN IN A VERY BAD WAY.—The harbor police on Saturday evening arrested one Jacob B. Jones, until recently a preacher of the Methodist persuasion in the state of Maine, for carrying on a rig which nearly out-herds Herod. It is said that not finding preaching very profitable, he left the connection and came to this city, where he commenced the business of keeping a bowling alley and a rat pit, and soon after added to his business that of keeping a house for lady boarders. At the time of his arrest he was the conductor of two houses of ill-fame in Clark street, besides his other business. Jones is about thirty-five years of age, of good address, and when a preacher had a reputation for piety and eloquence.—Boston Bee,
Jan. 17.

CHALLENGE OF THE WORLD.—An Ohio fellow, who is recommended as a respectable citizen, has accepted Tom Hyer's challenge to fight for $10,000 a side, and the "championship." An Indiana big-eater has challenged the world to eat mush and milk with him for $10 a side, and the "championship." The editor of the Butte Record challenges the world to lie with him on politics, for a clean shirt; and the "championship."—Sierra Citizen.

Interesting from Washington.

THE PURCHASE OF CUBA.

DOUGLAS IS CAVING IN TO SLIDELL AND
THE ADMINISTRATION, &C., &C.

[Special Despatch to the New York Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16, 1859.

The boundaries of Arizona as agreed upon by the House Territorial Committee, make the Territory nearly seven times as long as it is broad. It was lengthened so that it might touch Texas, in order to facilitate the introduction of slavery.

On Tuesday next, Mr. Schuyler Colfax, with Mr. Graham, the Delegate elect from Colona, will appear before the committee on Territories to advocate the organization of the Territory of Colona.

Mr. Douglas attended the Administration caucus on Friday, much to the surprise and disgust of other anti-Le-compton members of Congress.

PURCHASE OF CUBA.

[Special Washington despatches to the Herald.]

The Democratic Senatorial caucus yesterday, for the purpose of ascertaining the views of Senators in regard to Mr. Slidell's proposition placing in the hands of the President thirty millions of dollars as an installment for the purchase of Cuba, is looked upon as a matter of great importance.

Mr. Hunter made a speech against the proposition, and was followed by Messrs. Mason, Clay and Shields.

Mr. Douglas took strong grounds in favor of giving the money to the President. He thought the prospect of purchasing gloomy, but was willing to give the President money to make the attempt.

Mr. Douglas said there was but one way to get Cuba, and that was on the occurrence of another Black Warrior case, to siege the Island by way of retaliation, and negotiate afterwards, on the basis of Uti Posseditis.

Jefferson Davis was opposed to the idea of forcible seizure, and favored the proposition to purchase.

Messrs. Gwin, Slidell, Bigler and others, sustained the purchase policy.

On the vote being taken, there were only five votes against Mr. Slidell's proposition.

Mr. Branch, of North Carolina, will, on Tuesday present the report from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, for the purchase of Cuba.

It is said that the Douglas and Slidell affair is settled, and that these gentlemen are fast becoming friends. Hope is expressed generally that the individual assumption of Judge Douglas has been chastened, and he will hereafter act with the Democratic party. From present appearance, notwithstanding the vituperation of his indiscreet friends, such might be the inference.

Affairs at the National Capitol.

The Acquisition of Cuba—What the Prospect is.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DESPATCH.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19, 1859.

The fact that the readiness of the two committees on Foreign Relations to report bills, similar in form to the Slidell proposition, to give the President thirty millions towards the purchase of Cuba, was produced by the revelation on the part of the President of secret information received by him that a negotiation was feasible and might be successful, if properly initiated, has caused a great sensation here in the diplomatic and political circles.

Diplomatists begin to see that the purchase of Cuba would completely change the aspect of many of their pending questions with our government, and of the schemes regarding this country.—
Some of them, who have a personal knowledge of the Spanish Court, admit that in Madrid almost anything is possible. They do not doubt the fact that the President has such information, and are most anxious to learn the particulars of it. Further revelations, however, would only lead to a defeat of the negotiations, and they will not be made.

Senor Tassara, the Spanish Minister here, is in a constant state of perplexity and anxiety. When he first came he announced that if any one spoke to him on the subject of selling Cuba, he would take it as an insult, and if the Secretary of State adverted to the subject he would at once ask for his passports. Now he is of thorns to know who is the Spanish statesman that is to be approached with the thirty millions.

In political circles the sensation is even greater than in the diplomatic ones. It is now evident that on the Cuba question the democrats will present an unbroken front, and the feeling is spreading that it will break up and annihilate the opo-sition in the North, if it is permitted to become a party question. A suggestion has been started among the republicans that they shall all vote for the Slidell proposition, and thus throw it out of the political and get it into the diplomatic field, where it will certainly take two if not three years to work it out to any conclusion. This will throw it over until after 1860, when it is not much matter what happens.

Seward is known to have stated that he would vote for the admission of Cuba;
so has Giddings, of Ohio. Mr. Doolittle, of Wisconsin, is in favor of the acquisition. I am informed that Governor Chase, of Ohio, has written to Senator Wade that if the Cuba question is a part of the political canvass in 1860 the republicans will loose that State. Hale laughs at the idea of his fighting Cuba.

The plan of action proposed for the republicans on the thirty millions question is to follow the same course that they did on the British outrages question last summer, and go in for it even stronger than the democrats. Its advocates say that such a proceeding only commits them to a peaceable acquisition, which may be impossible, while it will divide the South, as the northern line of slave States fear that a large Cuba migration would carry off their slaves. There will yet be some curious jumps on this question.—N. Y. Times.

ASSAY OF PIKE'S PEAK GOLD.—The St. Louis News, Jan. 12th, says:

"Messrs. Clark, Bros. & Co., of this city have just received a report from the U. S. Assay Office, New York, of a lot of Pike's Peak gold, forwarded by them and at their request separately assayed.
The quality of this gold is 968 1000+ fine. California gold is about 880 1000 fine. This fact alone is proof that Pike's Peak is no humbug; for the fineness of gold is a matter beyond the control of speculators. The value of this lot is $19 21 per ounce, as it came from the mines; and $20 02 per ounce after melting and cleaning.

WHY DOUGLAS WENT TO HAVANA.

The Frie Trader, a paper away off in Natchez, Miss., has discovered the cause of Senator Douglas' recent visit to the Island of Cuba. It says:

His visit to Cuba was solely to establish an intente cordate with the Havana-se that they might come into the Union after 1860, as they must, if the annexation is not sooner accomplished, in a quiet or friendly way, or, from personal observation, become acquainted with their strength and condition, their means of defence and the extent of their bellicosity, in order that when the power becomes his, and events tend to shape the end, he may, by bold, prompt and efficient measures, accomplish by a coup de main what the idle diplomacy of the present and past puts at a greater distance from us, and renders us almost, if not quite, contemptible, as a nation, in the eyes of the world.

Elopement of a Rich Heiress with a Negro.

Practical fruits of Abolitionism.—The Happy Pair Married in Canada—
The Girl Contented with her African Spouse.

We find the following in the *Detroit
Free Press* of the 4th ult.:

An elopement and marriage took place on Saturday which was a little out of the usual line sufficiently so, we imagine, to satisfy the most craving appetite for the novel and disgusting, both of which we have—the latter in sufficient quantity to turn any white stomach in existence. A young girl, named Sarah Judson, whose family lives on a fine property a mile or two from Pontiac; eloped on Saturday and came to Detroit. The partner of her flight was a black man, who has been in the employment of her father for some time in the capacity of farm hand. The first intimation that the father had of the parties was conveyed by the fact of their flight. They immediately crossed over to Windsor, upon reaching this city, fully sensible that they could never accomplish their unnatural designs on this side, as no official or clergyman could have been found who would have so far transgressed the bounds of decency as to unite the couple, the appearance of the girl being such as would forbid the union in the mind of any sensible man, to say nothing in the law of the case.
Some individual was found in Canada who performed the ceremony, however, and the two were made one. They are now in Wisconsin, enjoying the sweets of the honeymoon.

The father of the girl is a red hot abolitionist, of the whole hog or nothing, nigger as good as anybody's style. For a long series of years he has disgusted his neighbors with his ranting on abolition and amalgamation, of which he was disposed to abate not a jot or a tittle from its utmost limit. In order that he might not be said to preach what he did not practice, he made it a point to treat the numerous colored individuals whom he from time to time employed, as on a par with his own family. These doctrines he inculcated upon the understandings of his children, and he has the supreme satisfaction of witnessing, as the practical result of his teachings, his own daughter clasped in the embrace of a greasy nigger, willing and ready, and even enthusiastically reciprocal, in the sweet game of dalliance with which lovers delight to celebrate their unions.
The brother of the girl came on the next day, arriving here on Sunday, and ascertaining their whereabouts, went to her and implored her to return. She was contented, however, loved her ebony half, was happy in his arms, and could not think of going back. The emotions of a brother at such a sight can better be imagined than described. Some men would have blotted out their disgrace with a single blow, but he had been taught that it was no sin against God or man that his young sister should repose in the embrace of a negro, and at the same time calmly look him in the face and say that she was contented. He went home as he had come, alone.

The girl is about eighteen years old.
The family are said to have occupied a position in society which was first class, and the blow is consequently a terrible
one. The father is rich, and the girl an heiress, which makes it very nice for the African of her choice. The matter has caused an intense excitement in the neighborhood where the parties are well known, the girl having been born and brought up where her parents reside. It is difficult to imagine any train of circumstances by which a young and intelligent girl could be brought to form a connection so repugnant to all the senses; yet the fact exists. A more complete retribution for the crime of fanaticism we never heard of. Tho least we can wish is that the father, undoubtedly well cured of his beliefs by this time, may be able to save his young daughter from the terrible future which now opens to her.

A husband and wife, while traveling through the woods in haste, met with a melancholy accident, which is recorded in the following felicitous strain:

"And while retreating through the woods,
And through the tangled fern,
He tore his muslin! mention em's,
And had to put on hern!"

Now the thing that puzzles us is, how she managed to navigate after being des-poiled of her crinolines? She may have progressed, possibly, somewhat after the manner of the frog, of whom the poet says:

"The frog is the scientifickest
Of nature's handi-work—
She neither hops, nor steps, nor jumps,
But goes it with a jerk."

The following letter has been addressed to a gentleman of our town, by way of advertisement for its authoress, hoping since the gentleman to whom it is addressed is not able to accept the position tendered, that some lady or gentleman in this community of the requisite qualifications, will find it to her or his interest to accept the position, which the character of the communication induces us to believe must be a very agreeable and edifying one to a person of literary taste.

Here is the letter, read it:

IACX CREEK BOTTOM.

Mr. — I are about too opin A scool in this hear plaice for the purpes of learnin these pore benited peepil gramer I tell you moast respected sur My har-bleedes for these pepil, they no so lit-tel of there oan language, having heerd tell on you so often and of yore qualeitys in that branch I thought I would imploy you in my scool as I are a goin too leve home for a short time I wood like for you to come and to take peer of the scolirs until I came back remember mee to yore most good and rine nobil wife

Yores with all dew respectt

MISS JEMIMA JONES.

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS,

ATTORNEY AT LAW.

Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court.—
He will give efficient attention to all professional en-trustments.
OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store.
G. S. L. CIV. Nov. 6, 1858.

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T. TUESDAY, MARCH 8, 1859.

NUMBER 19.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY

KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Let us make a River to the Mountains.

There is great waste of waters in the Valley of the Mississippi. Probably no where else on the face of the earth, is such a vast shed of arable soil alternately parched and flooded from want of an economic distribution of its moisture, and no where else such immense motive and transit power left unused for want of gathering together the affluents that are scattered in a thousand rills. It has long been demonstrable that the Ohio, by the construction of proper reservoirs near its source, could be made navigable the year round for boats of the largest tonnage. The constant decrease of that stream in depth and flow as its banks are cleared, will probably necessitate such work at no distant day, provided rivers be not superseeded altogether as channels of commerce by more expeditious and direct resorts.

The same thing may be said of the Ohio, may be seen in other western streams. In the Mississippi itself, the natural process has been reversed, and cultivation has begun leveeing it from the mouth upwards, instead of adjusting it from the source downwards. The result is that the planters have now got a body of water on "the coast," that in times of confluent risings threatens to overwhelm everything with its volume. Of the other great arteries of present spasmodic marine intercourse it is sufficient to say that only for a few short months do any of them afford safe and profitable access for freight, and that, too, whilst machinery and invention are taxed to the uttermost to lessen their perils and losses. We have not, however, space to dwell upon a theme so fruitful in suggestion and so attractive in the results attainable as that of the economy of the waters of this continent.

What we aim at now, is to point out a new application in this line for the enterprise of our people—a single, striking, brilliant development that may add immensely to existing facilities of transit, and assure us the control of a new empire gleaming with treasure, the trade of which every city of any magnitude is now struggling to master.

The proposition we would advance, is to make a river to the mountains, and to make it on the direct line of central travel up to the very gold fields that are waiting to be rocked and cradled, and crushed into circulating wealth. The Kansas [Kaw] is a stream at present navigable to boats of light draught for a short distance once or twice a year. Its sources however reach the high table land at the base of the mountains, and two long arms, the Smoky Hill and Republican forks thread their way through an almost unbroken descending plain until they unite at Fort Riley.

Those who will glance at a map of that section of our country will notice that almost parallel with the Smoky Hill Fork of this river runs for several hundred miles the Upper Arkansas, and that almost parallel with the Republican fork of this river, runs for a like distance the South Platte. Let us treat of these one at a time. The divide which separates the waters of the Arkansas from those of the Kansas is a mountain spur, that soon subsides and is lost in the plain. The distance across from one stream to the other—as far down as Bent's Fort, is not more than forty miles—and the distance from the Arkansas to the point where drainage into the Smoky Hill Fork begins, is not more than fifteen miles. Again, the strip of table land, that separates the South Platte from the Republican fork, is not more than thirty miles wide, and from the former to the point of divide, is not more in some places than eight miles.

Now, it is evident that were the Upper Arkansas turned into the Smoky Hill fork, and the South Platte turned into the Republican fork, and did both pour their mountain floods down the Kansas, we should have there a river second to but one on the continent; and navigable far up each branch for a large class of steamers. The Arkansas is, after fairly issuing forth into the great plain a stream some four feet in depth and three hundred yards in width, with a current so rapid that a man can scarcely stem its force. The South Platte is of about half of that size and volume, with an equal rapidity of flow. The discharge of water from each is immense, and greater than ordinary rivers of twice their apparent magnitude. There could be no difficulty therefore in that source of water made, when combined in the valley of the Kansas, another Missouri.

The question then is—can it be done? Can those divides be perforated? Can those currents that now are lost in their own sands be wedded into new life, and made a mother stream? We believe it to be entirely practicable—nay, one of the easiest of great undertakings. As we have said, the divides are narrow, of a light and easily worked formation, and in no part of any great elevation. Moreover the gradual slope of that whole expanse of table land would render this diversion of extreme feasibility. Thus the Arkansas at the mouth of the Huernfero falls at the rate of twenty feet a mile, and the South Platte, opposite the sources of the Republican fork, thirty-two feet a mile.

It is apparent then that a channel preserving a true level and running diagonally from the Arkansas to the Smoky Hill fork, would overcome almost twenty feet a mile of the divide by the general slant of the plains, and thus although the cutting might be deep at the start, it would soon become insignificant. It might even be so directed as to avoid all heavy cutting at the outset by adding a few miles to its length. The distance to the divide being twenty or even thirty miles in a diagonal line, would overcome six hundred feet, which we believe is more than the height in many places of the divide above either of the river levels. Nor need this channel, so to speak, be any elaborate work. A small cutting a few feet deep and sufficient to start a drain from one river to the other, would be all sufficient. The wear of the light soil, and the cutting of the rapid current, would soon do the rest, and one of the greatest works of the moderns would be accomplished.

What we have said of the Arkansas would apply with still greater force and facility to the South Platte, where the diversion of channel is easy to be effected, the distance short, and the divide simply a line of low sand-hills. Shall we add, that there is an additional motive to this enterprise, other and perhaps greater in the present than even in the demands of commerce? Both the Arkansas and Platte are gold-bearing rivers, that have been washing down the glittering particles and depositing them amid their sands for thousands of years. Their bottoms are placers. Turn them aside, and you lay bare to the energy of the multitudes who are already flocking in that direction, the richest diggings perchance the world has ever known. As far down as the crossing auriferous indications are detected in the Arkansas, and why may we not presume the same of the Platte, almost a twin river, born in the same mountain range, and leaping down its sides, bearing the same metaliferous particles along with it. To a race of men who have seen hundreds of millions in gold exhumed from the valleys of California it will be no marvel if untold treasure shall yet be gathered in the dry beds of the Arkansas and the Platte, and to that great nation which springing from a once feeble confederacy, a fractional part of whose people projected and carried through the work of connecting the lakes and the ocean by a line of navigable water, who shall say that it is at this day and in this manner impossible to make a river to the mountains!—Missouri Democrat.

The Cuba Question in the House.

Shall Political Tricksters Obstruct our National Progress?

[From the N. Y. Herald.]

The question of the acquisition of Cuba, now before both houses of Congress, is the great question of the day in every circle—political, financial, commercial and agricultural—because its solution, either favorably or adversely, directly affects every interest in the country.

We give to-day the report of Mr. Branch, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to the House of Representatives, on the subject, and his bill to give to the President thirty millions of dollars, with authority to open negotiations with Spain for the cession of the island to us. Mr. Branch's report is an able review of the question in its material and practical form, making a complement, as it were, to Mr. Slidell's excellent argument of the political and ethical phase of the subject. After reviewing in a concise manner the steps on our part which led to the acquisition of Florida, Mr. Branch takes up, one after another, the relations which Cuba now bears to our agricultural, manufacturing and shipping interests, showing from official sources their present connection with our trade, and the numerous obstacles of a political and economical character which now obstruct its development. They can only be wholly and conclusively swept away by Cuba becoming a member of the Union. For the attainment of this point Mr. Branch goes to work in a practical way, on the path pointed out by Mr. Buchanan in his last annual message.

The question is now fairly and squarely before Congress, and upon that body rests the vast responsibility of giving to it such life and action as become a question vital to the interests of a mighty people. We believe that there is a large portion of the members of both houses who fully comprehend the greatness of the issue, and who will meet it, in all places and at all times, in a way that will merit and receive the hearty approval of the whole country. But there is a set of miserable, low, dirty, pettyfogging politicians in each of the great parties that divide Congress, who will neither look at the issue like men nor meet it as becomes the representatives of a free and American constituency. They have come into an ephemeral public life on the foolish quarrel of the nigger question, and they wish to bring that question into every issue that is presented to the people. Having no higher ground to claim a continuance in their present posts than the fact that they are fanatics for slavery, or fanatics for abolition, they are ready to forego for awhile their bitter hostility to each other, and to strike hands in friendship for the purpose of keeping life in the nigger.

In order to cover up their schemes with a thin pretence to virtue, they feign that it is the man and not the measure they mistrust. Measuring the sagacious and far seeing views of the President by their own petty, selfish and shortsighted purposes, they cry out that it is dangerous to trust the President with so large a sum, forgetting that its expenditure is strictly guarded and limited by the law, that there is no precedent for conferring so great a trust upon the executive—forgetting some of the most brilliant pages of our country's annals; that the time is not opportune for the step—forgetting that their view, bounded by the limits of the county of Buncombe, would never let them know whether the opportunity was at hand or not; that it is a deep and devilish design to secure a re-nomination—forgetting the pledges of a statesman filled with honors, and who has had enough of setting and keeping the country right after the disasters caused by their miserable quarrels; that it is a partisan scheme for party aggrandizement—forgetting that every fibre of the body politic and the common weal thrusts out its filaments towards the island of Cuba.

But the question is a national one in the highest sense, as these petty bunglers in politics will find out to their sorrow before its discussion by the people of this country is closed by the admission of Cuba into the Union, and we have entered upon the great era of material development and prosperity which its coming in will inaugurate. And not only is it a national question, that will be appreciated by the American people, but it is an international question of the highest character and moment. It is a mighty step in the path of our national destiny. The fact that we do not fear to contemplate it will give us a higher position and a greater moral influence among the nations of the earth than have hitherto been accorded to us. The President's message caused a great commotion in Europe, because he did not hesitate in it to call upon Congress to take the giant stride that lay before us; but when Europe learns that the statesmen in the American Congress have not hesitated to take up the labor which Mr. Buchanan told them was theirs to perform; her slavish press and selfish kingcraft will howl in their despair at the daring of a free people. Before the discussion which Congress has yet to go through is finished, the echo will come back from Europe, and the grandeur of the policy suggested will be known by the dismay it spreads among the minions of despotism. But when Europe shall see that we dare to take the step that lies before us, and to which our national advance, the interests of ourselves and of the whole civilized world, and the increase of wealth and consequent development of human knowledge, are impelling us, then will her statesmen and her princes turn to us with smiles, and hail our progress and success in the mighty scheme of world development.

Should these miserable tricksters in politics, in pursuit of their own selfish purposes and ambitious aims, succeed in defeating for a little while the national progress, the indignation of an outraged people will soon overtake and overwhelm them. The question of the acquisition of Cuba, with all its vast issues and bearings, has now come up for discussion and to triumph. If it is defeated in Congress, it must and will go before the people; and no man who can put two and two together logically can doubt the result in that sovereign tribunal. Its discussion cannot be delayed, its elucidation cannot be stopped, its early triumph cannot be cut off to enable political tricksters and fanatics to divide the country in discord on the nigger, that they may enjoy a little while longer the spoils of place and the sweets of power. Let them beware how they dare to trifle with the nation's progress, and to carp and cavil at its grandeur, because their petty souls have not been able to conceive its mighty proportions, or their shrunken hearts, to experience its heroic emotions. When the nation was still weak, their fathers dared to look its future in the face, fearless of consequences. Let not degenerate sons dare to brave a people's indignation because they shrink from following the path their fathers laid out for their country.

An Ancient Ohio Fight.

Upward of a quarter of a century ago, a little affair occurred in high life, in the town of Columbus, which ought to be suffered to pass into oblivion. The scene was in the front of the venerable hotel kept by "Bob Russell," who, with his well known colored servant "Dick," (thoroughly marked with the small-pox,) will not soon pass out of the mind of the surviving settlers of the State.

Mr. F. was Attorney General of Ohio, and Mr. L. was chief clerk in the office of the Auditor of State. The United States Court was in session, and Mr. F. improved the opportunity to explain to a company of constituents in front of the hotel the circumstances of a claim which had accrued to the "Sullivan heirs" in consequence of the removal of the Capitol of Ohio from Franklin to Columbus. In the course of his remarks, he questioned the statements in the Auditor's books. Mr. L. at once pronounced his statement a lie.

"I can not waive rank," said Mr. F., "and fight this man!"

As he proceeded to reiterate his charges, Mr. L. pronounced him a second and a third time a liar, when Mr. F., becoming much excited, shouted:

"My fellow citizens, I have concluded to waive the question of rank and settle the matter at once."

So, taking off his coat, he descended from the stand, and immediately received a tremendous "right-hander," which lodged him in a neighboring mud-hole. Getting up, he received a "settler," which brought him to on the same spot. A third time he came to the "scratch," when a well directed "eye blinder" from the sub auditor caused him to turn a complete summersett, and lodge him once more upon his mother earth.

Turning his eyes round, under the evident impression that he had fulfilled the utmost requirements of the "code," and not desirous of performing any purely "meritorious" labors, addressed himself to his physical superior, as follows:

"Before rising from this position, sir, I desire to ask you a question: Do you intend to strike me if I get up?"

"Of course I do, d—n, you," ejaculated his excited adversary.

"Then sir, I shall not get off my back!"

The spectators—among them, if we mistake not, Hon. T. C.—and Judge S., now interfered, and the belligerents were separated. —[Cin. Engineer.]

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. & L. CITY, MARCH 8, 1859.

The Eastern mail had not arrived up to this hour. We have held on "until patience ceases to be a virtue," in the hope that it would come in, and having been suckled in once, we will not be any more. From all accounts the snow storms have been terrible, still we think that the contractors have not paid that attention to it that the nature of the service requires.

Adulterers Beware.

We are glad to perceive, by the following, from the Sacramento Union, that our California neighbors are becoming awakened to a sense of the awful moral depravity, sensuality and corruption prevailing in the world, and practiced even by men in high standing.

A few illustrations of "Mormon" justice, in cases of seduction and adultery would, perhaps prove beneficial.

Such is the heading and editorial comments to a paragraph that appeared in the last number of the church Organ. Such preaching comes from a pretty source, when under the "peculiar institution" of Utah this Territory is full of a crime equally as enormous as the one alleged. If morality in the abstract is to be the rule then let the censors at home—here on the ground—examine into the condition of their own affairs and be arraigned before the bar, not only of public opinion, but the courts of every State in the Union, and what would be the result? It would not require "Mormon justice"—throat cutting—but the Government would have to build a National Penitentiary to incorporate the transgressors in.

We do not defend sensuality, and that is the reason we condemn it here, and in plain words, the whole Mormon system is based upon this principle. Woman, the very name of which should call up every feeling and respect, is degraded, her affections bartered, and her person sold or dealt out by those who in authority hold the Church cards. We are tired of this prating about morality of these low flung slings at what they call "Civilization," as if they deemed that all the plety of the world was concentrated here in these valleys. Glad are we to know that the people are finding them out, and that the rulers who wrench from them their hard earnings, in the way of tithings, to enrich their coffers, if they do not know it now, will sooner or later find it out.

In connection with this we perceive that the Legislature have memorialized Congress for admission into the Union as a State. This in our estimation is a mere sham, as hollow as a pipe stem. Utah cannot go in, or Congress will insult the intelligence of the Republic by accepting her with the institution of Polygamy, which is revolting to the sense of the whole nation, territorial or any other kind of a juster sovereignty bills to the contrary notwithstanding. What claim the ability to exercise the functions of State sovereignty, when they are not able even to pay their territorial officers, and recently a general jail delivery was the result? The idea is ridiculous, and its mere brutum fulmen. This territory, if over it is a State at all, has to be nationalized, for the reason that it is as foreign to the sentiments of the American people as the Ottoman empire.

INDIAN DEPREDACTIONS.—The last California mail, although inside of time as usual, was molested by the Indians, in the neighborhood of Santa Clara, who stole eight of their cattle and two mules, which they ate. Our informant says that they are in a deplorable condition and entirely destitute of food. Dr. Forney will shortly leave, and it is to be hoped something will be done for them.

Last week, a man by the name of Hughes, who had stolen a mule from Mr. Staunton, was killed at Weber. A party of gentlemen who were going to Fort Bridger and who recognized the animal, gave the hint, when he undertook to run and was shot.

Judge Cradlebaugh, we understand, opened his Court at Provo on last Tuesday. We have not yet received his charge to the Grand Jury, but doubt not it will be worthy of his reputation which he has long sustained as a jurist and a fearless man.

Notwithstanding the Mail has not arrived on time, we reiterate our challenge, and are authorized to increase it ten thousand dollars more, that the Central, or Salt Lake route is the quickest to the Pacific. As Dean Swift said, upon his memorable Charity Sermon, when brevity was required:

"If you like the security, down with the dust."

Second Judicial District Court.

Provo, Tuesday, March 8, 1859.

Court convened at 11 a.m., Judge Cradlebaugh presiding.

Grand Jury impaneled and sworn, and after being charged, the Court took a recess.

In his charge to the Jury, the Court indulged in some very plain hints at the existence of crimes in the Territory, the perpetrators of which were still at large without any efforts having been made to bring them to justice and punishment.

3 p.m., Court met pursuant to adjournment, and after some further preliminary instructions to the Grand Jury relative to the discharge of their duties adjourned to meet at 9 a.m. on the 9th.

U. T.

Fancy Dress Ball.

We are requested to say that on next Thursday night, there will be a Grand Fancy Dress Ball.

We have received a list of the management which we have mislaid, but we can assure our friends that it comprises names that will insure it be a recherché affair.

Horse and mule stealing is still the rage. One day last week, a lot of horses, belonging to Mr. Wm. H. Kimball, were taken from Stansbury Island, in Salt Lake, by the Indians; but were discovered while crossing the slough and retaken again.

We are a law and order man, and would not like to give bad advice; but we do think that, independent of this instance, that in this Territory, where the people depend so much upon their stock, that a little hemp would be beneficial: let it be around the necks of either Mormon, Gentile or Indian.

For the benefit of our friends in America we will merely remark that snow, for the last week, has been the prevailing characteristic of this latitude, and even now another storm is brewing.

A Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says that the reason the opposition in Congress are opposed to the admission of Oregon is because by her State Constitution free negroes and mulattoes are not allowed to settle there. If they consider that a reason why Oregon should not come into the Union, they ought to go for turning Louisiana and Illinois out, because their laws sanction the very same principles. Has got Oregon the right to adopt the laws of Indiana and Illinois? This reason is, however, all false. If Oregon had elected two Republican United States Senators, instead of two Democrats, they would vote to admit her quick enough.

Bridal Inventory of Charms.

There is a prospect of this being required, on oath, to make a marriage legal. The female falsifications are said to have become so numerous that there may be a revival of the law mentioned in the following bit of history: "An act was introduced into the English Parliament in 1770, 'that all women, of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether they be maids or widows, that shall, from and after such act, impose upon and betray into matrimony, any of his Majesty's male subjects, by accents, painted cosmetics, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, hoops, high-heeled shoes, bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft and like misdemeanors, and that the marriage, upon conviction, shall stand null and void.'"

We perceive by the last mail that the California legislature has flattened out Broderick, and condemned him in the most expressive manner. This we think was due to their dignity as a State, and vindicates California. It may not be our "put," and we may be thought to be wringing in, but we must say that this action of the California legislature suits us to a dot. The following extract we copy from a late California exchange:

It will be seen by our Legislative proceedings, that the resolutions introduced by Mr. Holden in the Senate, in regard to the conduct of Mr. Broderick, passed the Assembly, by a vote of 53 yeas to 19 noes. They were first passed by the Senate by a vote of 23 yeas to 9 noes. The Legislature has acted in this matter in a proper and dignified manner, and has taken the horrible din raised by the black republican press very coolly. That array of dictators must feel very much flattered at the result of their racket. This action of the members was necessary to place the State in a proper position.

The Pacific Railroad Bill, at the last dates, had got through the Senate, in some shape or form.

The fact is, that to us folks in the Rocky Mountains, it is hard to keep up with "Congressional items," although we profess to have some intelligence, yet, with back Mails, and all the amendments we hardly know what is going on. We hope that great Congressional Cow Congress, will lick the calf into some shape or other.

The following is the substance of the bill, which is the same as that recently proposed by Mr. Bell, viz:—

That advertisements be inserted in two papers of each State and the District of Columbia, inviting estimates for the three routes, and that $3,000 be appropriated to pay the expenses.

Mysterious Death in Sutter County.

By the California Bulletin we received the sad news of the death of Sylvanus Sanborn, who, for a long time, had been a resident of St. Louis, and well and favorably known there. He was for a long time a partner of Mr. John Hartnett, the present Secretary of this Territory, and was highly esteemed by the merchants of the place in which they transacted business. This will be sad news to his friends in the States. We subjoin the following from the Bulletin:

On 25th January, Sylvanus Sanborn and his partner, M. E. P. Wilson, stock-farmers, near the Buttes, Sutter County, went out to look at some land they owned on Butte creek, where they intended to spend the night. In the evening says the Marysville Express, Mr. Sanborn took his gun, and remarked that he would go down the creek and shoot some ducks. That was the last seen of him alive. As night came on and he did not return, Mr. Wilson became uneasy, and instituted search, a number of neighbors joined him. Next morning, when the search was renewed, Sanborn's body was found in an open space in the underbrush on the bank of the creek. He was lying on his back, with his hands crossed over his breast, as if he had placed them so deliberately. His gun was lying by him, and partially under him—the breach being under the right shoulder, and the muzzle pointing towards his feet. One barrel was discharged, and the other cocked. The charge of the empty barrel had struck the deceased in the right side of the head and back of the ear. The muzzle of the gun, when the shot was fired, was so close that the powder burned the hair, hat and clothing.

From the position of the body and gun, and the location of the fatal wound, it was impossible to determine whether the shot was accidental or intentional on the part of the deceased. Either hypothesis appears to be inconsistent, as it is a usually difficult to perceive how the shot could have been fired either purposely or by accident. Yet, there seems no possibility of the shot having been fired by another, as there was no mark of another having been present or in the vicinity. Mr. Sanborn had forced his way through the tangled vegetation to the open space, and it was by means of the displaced brushwood and weeds that these preachers were led to the dead body. Had there been another person with him, it seems there would have been abundant evidence of it. Sanborn was in easy circumstances, happy in his domestic relations, blessed with a wife and two children, a d, so far as his family and most intimate friends knew, had no earthly cause to lay violent hands upon himself; there was nothing in his temperament of habits tending to alienation of mind or attacks of melancholy. These are arguments against the supposition of suicide. Besides, it is as difficult to understand how the shot could have been fired by his own hand, as by accident. The Coroner's inquest may solve the mystery at present surrounding the matter.

LYNCH LAW IN ARKANSAS—FIVE MEN HUNG.—The Memphis Eagle learns the following from a friend recently returned from Arkansas:

A man by the name of Rogers stole a horse from an honest old farmer of Arkansas, and wended his way up into Washington county, where he said he sold it to a farmer there. But upon his not being able to give the name of the man, nor make a satisfactory explanation, a company who had been in pursuit of the horse thief, took him to the woods, and tied him to a log, and gave him between two and three hundred lashes, well laid on. This had the effect of bringing him to terms. He then confessed where the horse was, and who were his accessories. The company then proceeded to Red River Bottom, where they found the missing horse, and five fellows whose business it was to steal all the horses, and whatever else "would pay," that they could, whom they hung to limbs of trees, until they were dead, dead, dead. Upon consideration of Rogers having "turned," he was spared.

From Pigeon Sound.

By the steamer Northerner we have files of the Olympia Pioneer and Democrat, and the Steiellcom Herald, to the 31st inst. The Washington Territorial Legislature adjourned on the 3d inst.

The Democratic members of the Legislature nominated the following candidates to fill the several Territorial offices: Public Printer, Edward Furate; Librarian, A. J. Moses; Treasurer, Rutledge; Brigadier General, Maxon; Capitol Commissioners, Jas. Biles, Benjamin Harned, R. W. Walker.

Two persons confined in the Steiellcom jail effected their escape on the 29th ult. Their names are Barrow and Kennedy.

The Victoria Gazette says that there was a story current on the street, February 3d, to the effect that a party of miners—numbering upwards of twenty—in three canoes, had been attacked in the Straits, on the night of Feb. 1st, and all murdered by a party of Northern Indians. But little reliance was placed in the story, as it could not be traced to any creditable source, and the supposition was that it originated out of anticipated retaliation for the recent shooting of the Indian chief near Rocky Bay.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD,
31 March, 1859.

We are sorry to state that, in consequence of the severe indisposition of Mrs. Tuckett, the theatre has been closed for a week, it was re-opened on Saturday, the 26th February with a comic drama, "The Pride of the Market."

According to the placard the curtain should rise at half-past 7 o'clock, but the audience, wearied and impatient, were kept in suspense until nearly 8 o'clock, and then only to witness an exhibition which it is painful to us to record.

With one or two exceptions the performers seemed equally oblivious of their parts; and a climax was put to the whole by the conduct of Mr. Lee. We should be sorry to do injustice to parties who usually perform well; they may have had their spirit damped by the above circumstances, which renders their omission excusable. But the audience testified their estimation of the performance by an almost unanimous groan. This is the first time this has occurred, and we hope it may be the last.

The farce of "Boots at the Swan" was the afterpiece. Mr. Warren as Boots was very good; this character is quite in his line. Messrs. White and Thatcher contributed greatly to the success of the piece.

On Wednesday evening, "The Pride of the Market" was repeated: several alterations took place in the cast, which were as follows:—

Marquis de Volange.... Mr. H. R. Thatcher
Baron Troptard " O. L. Baldwin.
Chevalier de Belleville .. " Warren Dubois " Deland
Isidore Farine " R. C. White
Mademoiselle de Volange Miss Whitlock
Marton Mrs. Tuckett Javotte Lougee.

Mr. Thatcher, as the Marquis, looked and acted the character well. Mr. Baldwin was a good representative of Baron Troptard. Mr. Warren performed the Chevalier de Belleville much better than we anticipated; it is not quite in his line.

Isidore by Mr. White, who was very well received; he acted with great spirit and discrimination, and was repeatedly called for at the conclusion.

Mademoiselle de Volange (Miss Whitlock) performed this character better than any in which we have yet seen her.

Mrs. Tuckett, as Marton, displayed great vivacity and a thorough appreciation of the part.

Javotte (Mrs. Lougee); this is exactly the style of character which suits her. It was very well acted.

After which Mr. Baldwin gave us a stump speech: it created no excitement.

The performance concluded with the farce of "The Irish Attorney." Pierce O'Hara, in the hands of Mr. Shaw, was every thing that could be desired; it was the life of the piece. The other characters did not seem well up in their parts, which made it go off rather flat. We are happy to learn it is to be repeated with a very strong cast.

We have the same fault to find on this occasion in the curtain not rising until after 8 o'clock. We think it bad policy on the part of the management to trespass on the indulgence of the audience. People now do not think it worth while to come at the time appointed, as they feel certain from experience they will have to wait. Punctuality would soon set this right.

The house was very thinly attended.

"DRAMA."

GENERAL HARNEY.—We are pleased to learn, from a reliable source, that Brigadier-General Harney, of the U. S. Army, now commanding the Department of Oregon, is about to establish a direct line of communication between some point on Columbia river and the Valley of the Great Salt Lake. The General has endeavored himself to the people, since his arrival on our coast; and the far-sightedness of the great enterprize noticed above, will prove to the mercantile community, that he is endowed with other than fighting ability. In all that promotes the welfare of the people, as well as the interests and discipline of the service, the General stands pre-eminent. We hear with regret, that there is a probability of his recall—if to other scenes of usefulness, we yield him to the best interests of his country.—Herald, San Francisco.

Sojourning in the elegant and most hospitable mansion of Dr. H—s, last week, I was auditor of the following dialogue between the Doctor and his youngest daughter, a beautiful child of six or seven years. The father was winding his watch, when he said, playfully, to the girl: "Let me wind your nose up!" "No," said the child, "I don't want my nose wound up, for I don't want it to run all day!" There was some merriment for a few moments in that circle, albeit it was Sunday.

Even a casual observer cannot fail to have been convinced that the deplorable paucity of our land forces is the cause of a serious drain upon the national treasury. But to illustrate this fact beyond cavil, we will cite a single instance in proof of our position. When the Mormon imbroglio had reached its culminating point, and Brigham Young had insolently thrown defiance in the face of the Government, it was found necessary to order such a force to Utah as would summarily, and forever, dispel the hallucination of the Saints; tear them from the clouds, and bring them down to the realities of every day existence. To accomplish this purpose, troops had to be collected from nearly all sections of the Union, and even the Everglades of Florida were put in requisition, to supply its quota. Thousands of miles were traversed by these troops before they arrived at St. Louis, and even then their march had but commenced. It required no small outlay of funds for their transportation to that point, but, on arriving, additional expense had to be incurred for draft animals, camp and garrison equipment, stores, commissary and ordnance supplies, etc., etc. The Utah campaign was then commenced in earnest, and at a heavy cost to the country. The city of the Saints was occupied, and the Mormon rebels reduced to a sense of their unworthiness. It became evident that the rest of the Union had been depleted of the military force absolutely required to preserve order, and guard the lives and properties of our citizens.

The Oregon Indian war broke out in Washington Territory; Indian massacres had been perpetrated on the Plains; the Sioux and Cheyennes were in open hostility; the Navajos were robbing, burning and murdering, in New Mexico; the Comanches were on the war path, and the presence of considerable bodies of troops was required at nearly every point of our eleven thousand miles of frontier.

Government immediately adopted the only measure at its disposal, and a considerable force was withdrawn from Utah, and marched over to California and Oregon, while others were detached for other points. The march of the Sixth Infantry alone could not have cost the Government less than $200,000, up to the time of reaching Salt Lake. From Salt Lake to Benicia it cost $67,000 to transport the same regiment, and now that the Mojave expedition has become a matter of paramount necessity, it will require at least $100,000 more before the troops detailed for it shall have arrived at Beale's crossing, and get ready to take the field. It requires no extraordinary skill in arithmetic to show that the cost of transportation for one regiment within the past year will amount to much more than the expense of maintaining a regiment of infantry permanently stationed.

The report of the Secretary of War shows that we have a frontier constantly requiring the presence of troops, of eleven thousand miles, while we have only a force of eleven thousand men to guard it, being a man a mile; and the army cannot be posted as government mile-stones, and be expected to perform the arduous and important duties it is required to fulfill; and, to make it available, it is kept constantly on the move at an expense nearly one-half greater than would be demanded for the maintenance of eight additional regiments. Instead of diminishing, these difficulties are steadily on the increase, and the urgent necessity for a greater land force is becoming daily more apparent. But this is not the only evil engendered by the smallness of our army; for, in addition to the fact that it does more severe and trying duty than any other army in the world, its morale and efficiency in the event of a war with any other power is seriously crippled. At long intervals alone, such as the war with Mexico gave rise to, or the Mormon difficulty brought about, is it possible to exercise the troops in anything like division, brigade, or even regimental movements. It is a most rare occurrence that more than three or four companies—a major's command—are ever united at any one point, and their manoeuvres are by necessity limited to mere company drill. The posts are isolated and far apart, and no one can be reinforced without great expense and the exposure of that from which the reinforcement may be drawn. The result is that the Territories are frequently the scenes of Indian wars, costing millions of dollars, which would never have occurred were the army numerous enough to establish such garri-sions as will compel the provoking relative of Government are named one exists entitled to

Governor

We have Governor elected to the December

In this clearly extensions the Iment when His expla-

one. He leading M-

lion, and, tame, "un-price of a says, they loved. E their futusubmission reminds th

there unde the M-sense of this (the I

He adds great pain

Governme ted States; entertain-labors to u somewhat lation that army's sta-expected the growth are loyal, pendent of letters from with the I whole, Co it will be troops will by saying:

now station mountain to perfect corps, it is Perhaps t convey to army will Marmon's

ing more t festivities

Gov. Cu communica

War on th the Yellow

ary, the would affo

water to a miles from

The Go Utah Indi

attempt to ting them thinks the their own

the United would rem

the Califor elsewhere,

plan has v tion has b and intelli the secret

has not bee of the Ind

more or les as the in of the Gov seem to be governmen ten is file

Cummings The Gov

of common of the Asse

ing of a p acquies or attention to has never

(For the Valley Tan.)

Getting Aboard in a Hurry.

A laughable incident occurred yesterday morning, at the Lincoln Square station of the Worcester and Nashua Railroad. A traveler, bound to Burlington, Vermont, where he had business of importance to transact, had rested overnight with his wife, at Nashua Hotel, immediately opposite the station, in order to be sure to hit the morning train, which leaves at an early hour.

Yesterday morning the traveler was sleepy. His lady had arisen, awakened him, dressed herself and gone down to breakfast, expecting her lord to follow her without delay. While eating hastily, and scolding mentally, in view of the husband's tardiness, she heard the ringing of the bell. Rushing frantically up stairs, her horror may be imagined, when, on opening the bedroom door, a snore from the conjugal sluggard saluted her ear.

A slight scream and a rough shake awoke him. He heard the bell! Pulling on his boots he hastily gathered in his arms the rest of his attire, and pushing the lady before him down stairs, put for the train at a two-foxy gait, dressed only in boots and a flannel shirt! The train reached the platform. Throwing all but his shirt upon the platform, the lady hurriedly sought to obtain the tickets at the office, while the husband struggled to endue himself with his No. 1 garment. While it was yet fluttering over his head, the bell again rang maliciously, and off started the train. The unfortunate entered the car, his flesh having a pimpled, goose-like appearance, while his blushing lady, spreading out her crinoline like the sacred veil of charity, converted herself into a screen, that his nakedness might be hidden from his fellow travelers.

The only other female passenger, putting her hand over her eyes, with the fingers spread wide apart, declared, before she turned her head in another direction, that "was shocking!" And so, we suppose, it must have been to the unlucky wight who had to make such a spectacle of himself.—Worcester (Mass.) Spy.

The Montgomery Mail says: When we heard of Albert Pike's (supposed) decease, we could but regret that old Ned, or some other expert was not old, to try on him what proved so successful in the case of the "Old Arkansas Gentleman" in his own song: They laid him out, and spread him out, and fixed him for the tomb, And then, on account of their sorrow for his decease, opened the biggest kind of a game of faro, right there in his own room; But when he heard the rattling of the checks, he tore the linen from his face, And bounced up and sung out, "Hold on, Prindle; don't turn; I'll go twenty on the king and copper on the ace," Like a fine Arkansas gentleman, close to the Choctaw line.

Dennis O'Shoughnessy, six weeks in "Amiriky," thus writes to his sweetheart in Ireland: "Bridgit, darling, come across to me; it's myself is doing a nabo business here with a son of Father Malone's—sure it's with his brother I mane. He keeps a whisky store and I does the waiten. He told me the other morning that he had no money, and I told him that I would take part of the shock every Saturday as wages; but says he, shure, Pat, if I pay you that way I will soon have no stock at all left, and you will have it all. Says I to him, says I, shure you can work for me then, alanna, and earn it back again, and so we can keep it up, and be mashers month in and month out, and wages will come aisy to both of us."

QUAINT MARRIAGE NOTICE.—The following quaint and curious announcement we clip from the Gallipolis (Ohio) Journal:

In Huntington, Gallia County, on the 5th inst., by the Rev. H. Wilcox, Mr. William S. Mapes, of Meigs County, and Mrs. Margaret Tennihill, of the former place.

TIME OF BIRTH.

GROOM.

In 1793
The first that e'er was known of me,
With a wailing tone I then began,
But now I have the voice of man.

BRIDE.

Your time of birth, dear William S.,
You've told so plain, that none need guess.
Add 1 to 7, round off your 9,
Take 1 from 3 and you have mine.

Although one swallow will not make one summer, still a pint maliciously inserted in a chair will make one spring.

Never Despair.

Never despair, but try again,
Though fortune on thee frown;
Hope whispers, friend 'tis not in vain,
Try, and be not cast down.

Never despair, in the mariners cry,
When lost on the foaming sea;
One reigns above whose all-seeing eye,
Watches and cares for me.

Never despair, through guilty fear
Of the wrath pronounced on sin;
In penitence utter thy humble prayer,
And a holy life begin.

Press boldly on and never fear,
Though clouds thy path o'ercast;
Look forward cheerfully—leave despair,
Defy it to the last.

OBSERVER.

A PRETTY GOOD GHOST STORY.—The Calaveras Chronicle relates the following:

The good people of Vallecito have been much excited for the past two weeks by the visitation of a spirit or something else, to the house of a family in town. Every night loud knockings have been heard in the house, sometimes in the garret, at others against the partitions, and again upon the tables—sometimes upsetting tables, chairs, &c., and raising a general row throughout the house. The neighbors have watched night after night, with double-barreled guns, revolvers, &c., without being able to get sight of the midnight intruder. Latterly they have come to the conclusion that it is a spirit from the other world, who is desirous of communicating with the occupants of the house. A medium was sent for, but the spirit refuses to communicate with any but the gentleman of the house; and he refuses to communicate with the spirit. How they will settle matters remains to be seen. The spirit informs the medium that he will not leave them in peace until he obtains an interview with the person desired.

SINGULAR FREAK OF A LUNATIC.—The Placer Herald relates the following: On Friday night of last week, a man named James Bellows became deranged and left his house, compelling his wife and child to accompany him, but they giving out with fatigue and fright, after going a mile or more, Bellows left them and went off alone in the dark, since which time nothing has been heard of him. An ineffectual search was made for him on the following day, and the citizens of the town subsequently prepared for a general turn out, but a heavy fall of snow has prevented the measure being carried out at present. It is feared that Bellows has committed suicide.

The wonderful vitality which the English soldiery carried from that cool country to the burning region of Hindoostan is a subject of much interest to both physiologists and political economists. In the hottest and most sickly season the European troops have in this, as in former wars, performed some of their most successful campaigns. It is stated that in the recent campaigns Infantry have marched thirty-two miles in a single day, under a scorching sun—no trifling feat for unincumbered pedestrians in pleasant weather—and a detachment of the force employed at Judgspore completed their two hundred miles in five days only.

HOW TO KEEP BABIES QUIET.—An old bachelor having been seduced against his will into the commitment of matrimony, and being troubled after a certain length of time with a posterity of young bachelors, contrived the following plan to keep them quiet:

"As soon as the sweet little creature awakes and begins to squall, set it up in bed, propped up by a pillow, if it can't sit alone, and smear its fingers with thick molasses; then get half a dozen feathers into its hands, and it will at once commence picking the feathers from one hand to the other until it drops asleep. As soon as it wakes again, more molasses and feathers should be applied immediately, and in place of the nerve-astounding yells of the little dear, there will be a sweet and calm silence, producing the most profound enjoyment and rapturous domestic felicity. A teacup with molasses can be kept at the head of the bed, in a stand-drawer, ready for use. Syrup is said to be preferable to common molasses."

remote, when these mines will be extensively worked. They have recently fallen into hands of parties who are making efforts to have their resources developed.

FROM LOS ANGELES.—By the overland mail from Los Angeles, we have the Vineyard of Friday the 11th inst. It rained very hard at Los Angeles, on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. The Vineyard says: The mail of January 18th from the East was delayed nearly twenty-four hours in consequence of the loss of stock on Glover's division of the route.

A party of Comanche Indians, of some 60 or 80, came to two of the stations, about 280 miles east of the Rio Grande, and told the station keepers that they wanted the horses, and took 35 head of animals. The Indians said that if the mail company had greater need of the horses than themselves, they could come or send for them.

Owing to this loss of stock one team had to travel 65 miles.

A SIGHT NEVER BEFORE SEEN.—An old veteran sea captain made the statement, that on last Sabbath he saw such a sight as was never before seen, as he supposed, in this or any other country.—The Communion Service administered on board a ship of the United States Navy—the receiving ship North Carolina. He said that, in connection with Rev. Mr. Jones and others, from the Mariner's Church of this city, he went on board this old ship at the Navy Yard, and there, in connection with the religious services, the pastor and delegation from the Mariner's Church received into the same twenty-three sailors in full membership, after which the holy sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered. It was a precious season. Five of the twenty-three were baptized—eighteen had been baptized in their infancy, showing that they were the children of pious parents. A finer set of good, intelligent looking men he never saw. Some of them could speak several different languages, and five or six different nationalities were represented.—New York Com.

PUT BACK.—The steamer Uncle Sam, chartered by the Government at (it is said) $1000 per day, to carry United States troops, pack mules, baggage, ammunition, provisions, &c., to the Colorado River, and which sailed on the 11th inst, was suddenly caught, (about 11 o'clock the same night, when nearly forty miles from the Heads) in a severe south easterly gale or, perhaps more properly, hurricane. As it was found almost impossible to keep her head to wind, it was deemed expedient to throw overboard some forty tons of barley, over 100 half barrels of pork, about forty bales of hay, and some 1000 sacks of coal; also spars, valuable trunks belonging to the officers, and almost everything that would in the least degree lighten the vessel. About midnight the violence of the hurricane abated, and the steamer steered for this port, where she arrived last Saturday morning. The scene on board with some 500 souls was frightful. We are pleased to hear that our friends, Lieut. James H. Merriam, of the Revenue Cutter Wm. L. Murray, and Mr. Tilghman, (both guests) rendered most distinguished service throughout this battle with the wild waves. The Capt., officers and crew of the steamship acted with cool intrepidity, and Col. Hoffman, his Officers, and command, did brave service. The amount of property sacrificed is stated at about $15,000. The Uncle Sam, upon returning, transferred her troops to the Cortez. Both vessels are lying alongside Mission st. wharf. The former is very little damaged by the terrific force of the waves, and this speaks well for her build.—San Francisco National.

STRANGE CONVENTION.—The Gamblers of the United States have recently held a convention at Chicago. Every State was represented. Although this is a gathering of "hard cases," morally, the Democrat describes the appearance of the delegates as highly respectable. "A finer looking set of men we have never seen than they are, taken upon the average. They are all fat and are well, very well dressed, with jewelry in abundance; and some of them are said to be, what their looks indicate, men of talents."

There will be two important matters to come up before the convention. One will be the revision of the old rules, and the adoption of new ones for the various games. The rules are construed differently in different States. Several lives have been lost in broils, arising from this difference in their interpretation. Uniformity of construction is demanded by all the delegates. The other will be the non-interference of professional gamblers in politics. There will be a very warm debate upon this subject.

Army Officers ordered to Duty.

The following assignments to duty have been ordered by the Secretary of War:

Major David Hunter, now at St. Louis, to return to Fort Leavenworth, on being relieved from his present duties.

Major L. J. Beale, now at San Antonio, Texas, to proceed, via Washington, D. C., to St. Louis, to assume the duties of his department at that point.

Major James Longstreet to take post temporarily at Fort Leavenworth.

Major C. Graham, Topographical Engineers, is assigned to duty in the Department of Texas, to report to the Commandant of that Department with as little delay as possible.

Instead of proceeding to the headquarters of the Department of Oregon, as directed by special order No. 143, of October 8, 1853, Brevet Second Lieutenant W. H. Echols, Topographical Engineers, will report for duty to the Commandant of the Department of Texas, on or before the 15th of proximo.

SECRETARY FLOYD'S REPLY TO MILITARY COMMITTEE.

The newspaper press of the country has circulated the report (by authority) that Secretary Floyd, in his reply to the Military Committee of the House of Representatives, stated that no addition to the present force of the army would be necessary to carry out the recommendations of the President, relative to a military occupation of Chihuahua and Sonora. Governor Floyd said nothing of the kind, though the singular phraseology used by him was well calculated to leave such an impression. He said, in his reply, that there would be "no addition to the present necessity for an increase of the army." What that present necessity is he does not tell us. Swell the present army to the magnitude he would desire, and he might well say there would be no addition to this increase necessary.

The Iron Mountain in Oregon.

We announced yesterday that an extensive iron mine, of exceeding richness, had been discovered in Oregon, about 13 miles from the city of Portland. A correspondent writing on the subject to the Portland Times, says:

The Pacific slope, though regarded as highly favored with auriferous placers of the precious metals, has been regarded by many as seriously deficient in the more useful, but baser ores. Recent discoveries, however, have dispelled this delusion, and have brought to light, in the midst of our settlements in the Willamette valley, and within less than four miles from the noble Willamette river, and thirteen miles of the city of Portland, a mountain of iron ore, supposed to be inexhaustible in quantity, and very similar, in every respect, to that in the celebrated Iron Mountains near St. Louis, Mo. The mountain appears to be well filled with boulders of what is termed the hydrate of iron, imbedded in red and yellow ochre, and clay filled with iron particles. It was first discovered in excavations for a grave on its summit, by Mr. Clark Rogers, upon whose claim it was found. Since then, various parts of the mountain have been prospected, and more than fifty feet lower down than where it was first discovered, by sinking holes eight or ten feet in the bed of ore; and in every instance proved the existence of large quantities of this invaluable article.

Mr. Aaron Olds, of Yamhill Co., O. T., an experienced iron manufacturer, or bloomer, of more than twenty years' experience, has recently examined these mines and tested the ore by manufacturing, at a common blacksmith's furnace, about twenty-five pounds of a very superior quality of iron. He pronounces the ore very rich and easily worked.

The writer has now before him a horse shoe and nails, made of this iron, of superior texture and fineness; the nails being easily bent with the fingers, and the iron very malleable, and pronounced by experienced blacksmiths, to be quite as good, if not superior, to the celebrated Swedish iron. These mountains are not only covered, but surrounded with red fir and other valuable timbers, for the manufactory of coals, that can only be equalled by the dense forests of Washington Territory, and different portions of Oregon. The millions of dollars' worth of iron, in its various forms, generally consumed on the Pacific coast, all finding its way around Cape Horn at a heavy cost, must point to a period not as would overawe the Indians and compel vicious white men to refrain from provoking them into hostilities for speculative purposes. The reasons why Government should increase the army are numerous and forcible, while not one exists why it should not, that is at all entitled to notice.—San Francisco Herald.

Governor Cumming's Message.

We have received, in the Valley Tan, Governor Cumming's message, delivered to the Legislative Assembly of Utah, December 13th.

In this message, Gov. Cumming very clearly explains his views of the relations the Mormons held to the Government when he arrived among them. His explanation is a frank and fearless one. He tells the Legislature that leading Mormons were in open rebellion, and that he demanded, when he came, "unconditional submission" as the price of their pardon. This price, he says, they paid; and then pardon followed. He now says that he hopes their future conduct will show their submission to have been sincere. He reminds them that the army in Utah is there under orders to remain there until the Mormons "manifest a proper sense of the duty which they owe to this (the United States) Government." He adds that they will have to take great pains to convince, not merely the Government, but the people of the United States, that they truly and sincerely entertain this sense of duty. Their labors to this end will, he intimates, be somewhat thwarted by a transient population that are making money out of the army's stay in Utah, and which may be expected rather to hinder than to help the growth of a belief that the Mormons are loyal. The Mormons will be dependent on the public press and private letters from Utah for being set right with the American people. Upon the whole, Gov. Cumming is of opinion that it will be some time yet before the troops will be withdrawn, as he evinces by saying: "The detachment of the army now stationed here will enjoy your fine mountain climate, and have ample time to perfect that discipline for which, as a corps, it is now greatly distinguished." Perhaps these words are intended to convey to the Mormon mind, that the army will be a long time among the Mormons, and will be every day growing more formidable against any manifestations of disloyalty.

Gov. Cumming mentions his having communicated with the Secretary of War on the practicability of navigating the Yellow Stone river, with its tributary, the Big Horn. These rivers would afford, he thinks, conveyance by water to a point not over four hundred miles from Salt Lake City.

The Governor thinks, so far as the Utah Indians are concerned, that the attempt to better their condition by putting them on farms is a failure. He thinks they cannot be made to make their own bread, and that the people of the United States must feed them. We would remark here, that with some of the California Indians and with tribes elsewhere, the reservation and farming plan has worked well, where the execution has been trusted to honest, discreet and intelligent agents. We fear that the secret of failure in many other cases has not been so much the intractability of the Indians—though all Indians are more or less averse to regular industry—as the incompetency and faithlessness of the Government agents. It would seem to be the plague of all political governments that scarcely one office in ten is filled by a man who, like Gov. Cumming, fills it.

The Governor commends the interests of common schools to the fostering care of the Assembly; recommends the building of a jail, and of bridges over the acequias or irrigating ditches, and calls attention to the fact that the Legislature has never made provision for defraying the expenses of the Courts, when sitting in territorial cases, nor for the maintenance and custody of prisoners.

The message is a plain, sensible, and, no doubt, highly appropriate document.—Mo. Republican.

At the last sitting of the Conundrum Club, the prize of a revolver cup was unanimously awarded to the member O. P. L. C.

What is the difference between a sober medical student and one that is dissipated? Answer: One takes anatomical studies; the other takes any stomachal studies.

not fail to deplorable a the cause tional treat beyond instance in the Mor. a culminat g had insof the necessary to would sume hallucin from the to the re. To ac. Had to be ions of the des of Flo supply its were trat they arriv hen their It requir for their on arriv be incur and garris issary and The Utah d in earn e country, upied, and to a sense came evi had been absolutely and guard r citizens broke our curred in inasas he Pains; re in opn rotting, v Mexico; war path, ble bodies rly every miles of lopted the and a con- wa from California e detach- ch of the Lave cost 0,000, up take— cost $67, ment, and n has be- necessity, 000 more or it shall sing, and requires histic to ation for year will expense intantry of War ons anly roops, of we have d men io ant the vernment perform ues it is it avail the move greater he main- giments, ilticulties and the and force nt. But dered by in addi e secret army in jency in- ber pow- ng inter i Mexico difficulty exercise on, brig- ents— ut more a major's any one by neces- ll. The , and no great extat from a drawn ries are an wars, ch would army up- a garri-

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MARCH 15, 1859.

NUMBER 29.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS.

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Answer to the Governor of Washington Territory.

On a Communication transmitting a copy of the Resolution of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Washington.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

OLYMPIA, Jan. 13, 1859.

Hon. GRIMLACE LA DU,

President of the Council.

Sir:—Herewith transmitted is a communication from Brigadier-General W. S. Harney, commanding department of Oregon, acknowledging the receipt of certain resolutions passed by the Legislative Assembly, relative to the establishment of military posts along the emigrant road from the Missouri river to Fort Walla-walla.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

C. H. MASON,

Secretary and Acting Gov'r, W. T.

HEADQUARTERS, DEPT. OF OREGON,

Fort Vancouver, W. T.,

Jan. 4, 1859.

Sir:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 27th of December last, transmitting a copy of the Resolutions of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Washington, relative to the establishment of military posts along the emigrant road from the Missouri river to Fort Walla-walla, in compliance with the request of the Assembly.

For this act of courtesy and consideration on the part of the Assembly, and for the confidence extended to myself, expressed in its Resolutions, I tender my warmest thanks.

This generous welcome which has greeted me on my arrival in this distant portion of our great republic, arouses feelings and thoughts that are well shadowed forth in the object for which the Resolutions were framed, viz: the difficulties existing in communicating with the States of the East.

I concur with the Assembly as to the urgent necessity of opening a practical and easy route from the Missouri river to Fort Walla-walla. Not only should this be done, but a road from Fort Walla-walla or the Dalles should be opened and established to Great Salt Lake City, connecting at the same time with the road to Fort Laramie and Missouri. This suggestion has already been submitted to the consideration of the Government, and I am satisfied its construction will be directed.

It has been my fortune, at different periods of my life, to pass over the greater part of the country through which these routes should be established, and I do not believe that in any other portions of our country such good natural roads for the same distance could be laid.

The establishment of every facility of communication between the different sections of our country is essentially a military question, apart from the vital social interests depending upon it. I therefore do not hesitate to present my views at this time on the subject of connecting our Pacific slope with that of the Atlantic, by a net work of roads.

As the social and political interests of a State increase, the necessity for the defense and protection of those interests becomes more imperative. I may say with propriety that no portion of our citizens are more deeply interested in a safe, rapid and certain communication with the East and West, than those of the army; they will not only be obliged to use it, but to protect and secure it, and they will always be found, as the pioneers of civilization, grateful for every suggestion tending to shorten and improve the distance.

The vast and multiplying interests of commerce, demanding a direct and certain communication, are becoming familiar to the public mind, but none can realize them to their fullest extent who have never visited our Pacific coast.

Ten years ago when California sprang into existence among nations, like a Phoenix from the ashes of decay, the world marveled and wondered. The mind of man, prone to judge of consequences by their immediate action on himself, concluded the cause to be the gold in the soil, forgetting for the moment that countries in which only the precious metals abound, have ever been noted by decay and degradation.

Let us suppose for a moment that the same amount of gold had been discovered at the North Pole ten years ago, would the country at the North Pole present now the appearance, energy and enterprise of California—of Oregon and Washington Territories? This question is easily answered and clearly indicated, it is not the gold which has caused the United States to be so proud of her Pacific possessions, it was the unrivaled advantages of soil and climate—the unbounded resources in the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms; and still above these, that talisman of earthly greatness, —the first geographical position in the world for commerce.

These were the causes which excited in the public mind that eager desire to grapple the Pacific States with links of steel, and which is soon to become a national passion.

These States, resting on that ocean which connects the two grandest Continents of the Universe—Asia and America—must receive tribute from the west by every breeze that blows—from Japan, from Russia, from China, and from all parts of Asia.

The present commerce of the world will sink into insignificance in comparison with that traffic which is to be inaugurated by the labors of five hundred millions of the most industrious people of the earth, who are hereafter to be known among men. The very winds of Heaven, on the Pacific ocean, mark out the course which this trade must take in its movement through the world; and the natural harbors and magnificent forests tell us that this coast must be, in future times, the Queen of Commerce.

When such facts as these present themselves to the mind of the American people, let me ask, is there any element of that restless determined energy which characterizes their nature to deter them from making the great preparations necessary for such events?

Did they hesitate to establish a national road between the eastern and western States, when the interests of the country required it? and were not the difficulties of accomplishment at that time as great, in connection with that road, as any of the difficulties now existing on any of the proposed Pacific routes?

Have they ever permitted the most trying circumstances, or the most adverse difficulties to weigh a moment in the scale, when the honor, interest, and reputation of our common country was concerned?

It is this faith in the desire of our countrymen to see our national greatness increase, that convinces me the brilliant prospects of California, Oregon and Washington Territories, will be fully realized—that the time is not far distant when the crowning work of steam will be victoriously accomplished: when engines of such size and power will be so constructed as to condense days into hours, miles into inches; and when the passage from one ocean to the other, on our own soil, will only occupy from one day of rest to another.

I am in favor of multiplying the number of roads between the Mississippi river and the Pacific States, and of opening railroads on each and all, when the location and interests warrants so doing.

In connection with this subject, an important question must be answered: Who are to people the immense plains and arid wastes between the confines of Missouri and the Sierra Nevada mountains of California? Who are to build up the system of roads and railroads through that country we require?

The American and the European leave behind them those wastes, and hurries to the fertile and well-watered shores of the Pacific. The destiny of the Indian is written in the setting sun. From whence then, are the people to come who will be willing and who can make a garden of a desert?

In the dispensation of Divine Providence, does it not appear that the great and powerful nation now being established on this continent, was not to receive its origin or its destiny from any one of the races of men? But that each and all contributing their intellect, their energy, and their labor, to the stupendous work of omnipotent design, would unconsciously create a fabric of such glorious and transcendent structure, as to become a monument of His power and goodness.

As Europe and Africa have built the railroads, dug the canals, and planted the fields to the east of the Mississippi, does it not seem but natural that Asia, with her surplus population, should do the same for the country west of that river? Does it not appear that there exists but one people whose history and whose labors show that they are qualified for the duty of regenerating the Rocky mountains—a people who remained a mystery for thousands of years—whose number, patience, industry and economy, have achieved the most remarkable deeds—where labor and privation were required—and where quiet, inoffensive and peaceful habits became a necessity?—a people who, to secure themselves from a warlike neighbor, built a wall, to intervene between them, of such dimensions, of such length, and over such mountains, plains and rivers, in one unbroken chain, as to claim for it a place among the wonders of the world?—a people whose products and manufactures are already domesticated with us? I refer to the people of China.

Let us commence then the railroads; let us encourage the Chinese to emigrate and build them; let them be organized in the interior, which assimilates to many parts of their own country; let steam and lightning perform their proper labors, by removing mountains and dispensing with time, and we shall give a stimulus to commerce, energy and enterprise, which the most enthusiastic mind cannot now picture.

With sentiments of high consideration,

I remain Sir, very respectfully,
Your Obedient Servant,

WILLIAM S. HARNEY.
Brigadier-General U. S. A., Commanding.

To his Excellency, C. H. Mason,
Acting Governor of Washington Territory, Olympia, Puget Sound.

The Salt Lake Expedition.

Mr. Charles Jenkins, who accompanied the wagon expedition which started from this city in September last, for Salt Lake City, arrived in town from that country on Saturday evening. He was accompanied by Messrs. John Evans, James White, and Allen Clifford. From Mr. Jenkins we learn some particulars in regard to the expedition. Nothing of moment seems to have occurred until the train started from Murphy's, toward the summit of the Sierra Nevada. After leaving the first named place, the road gradually became bad, and though it is susceptible of being made by far the best crossing of the mountains, and was originally the best natural crossing, it is far from being equal to the present Placerville route. Our informant states that it would be difficult to say where any expense had been incurred upon this route, except, perhaps, in Carson Canyon.

The trees were so close together, at some portions of the road, that it was very difficult to get along, especially at the side hills, where the wagons slid. The real and principal difficulty seems to have been the great size of the wagons, this being the first attempt that was ever made to cross the Sierra Nevada, with the great, heavy Stockton wagons, carrying 10,000 pounds each. Wagons carrying 3,000 pounds each are quite a different affair, and this expedition was therefore of the nature of an entirely new experiment. The drivers were warned, all along the route, that it was quite impossible to accomplish what they had undertaken, and much astonishment was expressed at their persisting in attempting it. The train, however, reached Carson Valley in thirty days. There was not a man in the train but would have sunk his whole team, rather than have turned about. Much of the road from Murphy's to the Valley was new, and owing to the quantity of roots and trees, and the little travel, it was not "packed," and the wheels in places sank to the hubs. After stopping at Genoa a few days, and recruiting the animals, the train started on again. The mules were found too large for this species of traveling, and smaller ones would have answered the purpose better. The big mules had been in the habit of being well fed on grain, and when it came to grass, it required too long a time to fill them up with enough food to stand by them. This would not have been the case with smaller animals, and the train was compelled to halt much longer, in consequence, at the resting places.

After following along the river Humboldt, over a soil partially sandy and partially clay, for a distance of some four hundred miles, they came to the Goose Creek Mountains, which they crossed without much difficulty. From the summit of these mountains they obtained their first view of the Great Salt Lake. There was no snow on the mountains, nor did they meet with any until within seventy miles of the city. The city is some three or four hundred miles from the Goose Creek Mountains. There is a creek called the Malad, which is within about ten miles from the first settlement. As it was known that the teams could not be got across the creek, a bridge was built for the purpose, over which they passed. The name of the settlement is Fort Call. At this place they had the first application for trade, an elderly Mormon lady proposing to purchase three eggs' worth of dried apples.

The expedition arrived in the city about the first of December, and the goods carried by them, sold at enormous prices. A portion of the mules were turned out upon some government lands, and were left in charge of Mr. Hunter, who will return with them and the wagons in the spring. Mr. Jenkins started for Stockton on the first of January, by the southern route, coming by the way of Santa Clara, Muddy Creek, the Mojave and Fort Tejon. Mr. Clifford had three mules stolen by the Indians, at Muddy Creek, and Mr. Greer, who was in his company at that place, three mules and a horse; each mule was valued at $250. —San Joaquin Republican.

A CHARNED LIFE.—It was the sincere belief of many sharp-shooters, among the enemy, that Washington bore a charmed life; that Providence constantly shrouded him in an impenetrable halo of protection. There was a report that an Indian once said he would never fire at the General again; he had three fair shots at him, when he could have killed a turkey every time, and hadn't touched him;—he knew it was never meant that he should be killed.

A few years ago the remains of General Washington were disinterred, for the purpose of placing them in a new coffin. Even these were found in a remarkable state of preservation; so much so that one who knew him in life, would at once have recognized his features. His fame is immortal. Nothing pertaining to him, goes to decay, but his tomb and the beautiful home to which he was so much attached. How long shall this exception last?

Opposition to Young Men.—Everybody knows how common it is for old and middle aged men to try to keep young men from rising in the world by sneers at the youthfulness of the aspirants—as even in the case of Walpole, whose taunts against Pitt so signally failed to depress the latter, and served but to "damn their author to everlasting shame." No young man of talents but has had such enemies to encounter—men who seem to take a fiendish delight in seeking to depress everything like genuine enthusiasm and the buoyant ambition of the bright or brilliant young man.

This arises half from their malice, and as much from utter ignorance of the nature and temperament of genius. When the climber upward has gained a place among his peers, then it is that these miserable flatterers dringe and fawn as basely as they formerly maligned and ridiculed him, and would fain crowd out his old friends and staunch adherents. In his green age and building season, the youth of genius craves and requires sympathy. It is with him especially, (and in a measure with all men,) an intellectual want, as evident as the clearest, necessary elements of existence.

Poor "MARTYR."—A letter to the Territorial Enterprise, Carson Valley, from Salt Lake, says:

"The Saints have had public service in the Tabernacle for the last three Sabbaths. Elder Orson Pratt, brother of Parley Pratt, who died a martyr to his religion, in Arkansas, held forth each of the above mentioned days. His subject was the divine authenticity of the 'Book of Mormon.'"

"Apostle" Parley Pratt seduced the wife of Hector McLean, a book-keeper in the office of the Nicaragua Steamship Company, at San Francisco. She was sent with her children to her father in New Orleans, and the scoundrel Pratt was eloping from that city with her, when he was killed by Mr. McLean. —San Joaquin Republican.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

O. S. L. CITY, MARCH 15, 1859.

A rumor has been quite prevalent that a soldier was threatened between the troops stationed at Provo by order of Judge Cradlebaugh during his court, and the citizens, and that a place. This we are assured is incorrect; a few soldiers may have taken place, the result of whiskey; but we apprehend that the citizens of Provo, although they are very indignant at the presence of the soldiers, would scarcely risk an engagement with them.

A few days since the petitioned Governor Cummings upon the subject, and on last Sunday went down. The Court will probably adjourn to-day; nothing will be done, unless perhaps the two Indians, Mose and Looking-glass, be convicted; but the murder will stalk abroad with the "damned" upon their hands, which, like the "evil" upon the hand of Lady Macbeth, it appears, cannot be wiped out by any judicial authority in this Territory.

The fact is, and it can be stated in a few words, that the church hierarchy that controls "this people" overreaches the jurisdiction of the U. S. Courts; and yet the political authority that forms the laws of this Territory have had the audacity to apply for admission as a State in the Union. And what a Union it would be like a dirty and degenerate star in the constellation of States. Oh no, Messrs. Legislators Utah must mend her manners before she gets into such genteel company. She is "not good looking, and can't come in." The truth is, they really do not desire it; but shallow pretences and deceit is so characteristic of Mormon authority, that they make an overture which is really a sham.

In another column will be found the charge of Judge Cradlebaugh to the Grand Jury at Provo, which we take from the Deseret News; and if it is reported correctly, it is the most scorching, document perhaps that ever emanated from the bench,—one that calls up the ghosts of murdered men, women and children. It is in vain, however, to appeal to the deadened ear of Mormonism; justice which is said to be blind got lost on the plains and never entered this valley. We admire Judge Cradlebaugh for his fearless exposition to the Grand Jury. The church organ don't like it, nor do the Mormons like it, for it calls up some incidents of blood which they would like to hide forever.

The last California Mail arrived more than twelve hours inside of Schedule time; this however, is no common thing for them.

The mail was detained by the Indians south, who interrupted them in their progress, shooting arrows at them, stealing stock, &c., otherwise they would have arrived much sooner.

This company has failed to come to time but once this winter, although it has been the hardest one ever experienced, either in the Rocky or the Sierra Nevada Mountains. They certainly deserve great credit.

The Eastern mail has not arrived up to date, (Thursday) and there are now two of them due. Whether the Cheyennes or some other Indians have corralled them is a question here. Our own opinion is that the Platte and other streams are breaking up, and that the mail parties have been unable to cross the streams. In all probability the next news we have from the States will be by way of the Pacific seaboard.

There will be a large amount of goods thrown into this market this spring. The shelves of the merchants present a beggarly account of emptiness, all having sold out.

Messrs. Gilbert & Gerrish and Radford, Cabot & Co., have taken time by the forelock, and their trains of merchandise from California will be here in a few days.

While upon this subject, we would remind our friends in St. Louis that they had better look out, or San Francisco will steal a march upon them, or at least come in for a full share of the trade of this valley which St. Louis has so long held.

We only received three papers by the last California Mail, and considering the detention of the Eastern Mail, it is rather oppressive upon a "Country Press," situated in the Rocky Mountains, and that too, when the Editor is sick and has no assistance.

We present in another column an interesting letter from Mr. S. L. Hubbell, who recently left for the States. It will be seen that they experienced great hardships.

We understand that a party of herdsmen corralled and killed a big grizzly in Malad valley a few days since.

Band of Thieves Discovered.

A number of this organized band was suspected some way, by Mr. S. S. Stanton, chief wagon master, and one of them was arrested on suspicion. After being kept in secret confinement for three days, the scoundrel came to a solemn conclusion to confess, or to turn States evidence against the remainder of the party.

After this confession, a party, or detachment, commanded by Lieut. Livingston, of 2nd Dragoons, left Camp Floyd, by order of Col. C. J. Smith, Commander Camp Floyd, to proceed North as far as Ogden City, to assist the Deputy Marshal, appointed to arrest the thieves.

The Party proceeded according to order, and arrived at Ogden City, making no discoveries on the route. About 7 o'clock on the evening of arrival, a party, with a Corporal and his guard, accompanied by the Deputy Marshal, proceeded to Kingston's Fort, a distance of six miles; a supposed harbor, but on their arrival found the easy gentlemen of leisure, had important business in another part of the country.

On their return they ascertained that two of the band followed a day behind them, and on the evening after their arrival stole two mules and a horse, and came back to the City, the same night. The Deputy Marshal followed immediately after them, and on his arrival in the City ascertained that some of the party were there.

About 10 o'clock the same night, a small party surprised a Boarding House in the Sixth Ward, and after exchanging a few shots with them, succeeded in arresting two of the party. They were placed under guard, and on Sunday escorted to Camp Floyd.

PERSONAL.—Major Dodge, the popular Indian agent at Carson Valley, arrived here by the last California mail, on business connected with the department, and from this city proceeded to Provo. We are glad to see that Major Dodge is properly appreciated in Carson Valley, and is recognized as an efficient officer. He has visited every part of his agency; and for the benefit of his numerous friends in Missouri, although he has had hard trips he is in the enjoyment of first rate health, and we will add as handsome as ever. Dr. Chorpennig came up as far as Ruby Valley, and is now there regulating stations and attending to other business connected with the interest of the company.

The party that went out with the last mail for the States, suffered great inconvenience. When they had got through Echo Canyon they were struck with snow-blindness, near Cache Cave, and had to return to Weber, one of the party not so much afflicted as the others conducted them. The mail however, was sent on by a fresh hand.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, left last Sunday for the south, where, in the neighborhood of Santa Clara some recent Indian depredations have been committed.

Mr. Jarvis, Indian agent, left on Monday for Ruby Valley, with an agricultural equipment, to open a farm that the "untutored savage" may learn to hoe and plow, an accomplishment we think that the "Diggers" will be slow to learn.

The grand Fancy Dress Ball comes off to-night. This we expect will be the last of the season, and we doubt not will be numerously attended.

In this connection we would remark, that the management of the "Assembly Soirees" have reason to congratulate themselves upon their success, notwithstanding the eyes and influence of the church was upon them all the time.

From one of the parties that went out in the last mail we understand that the snow in Echo Canyon, is about three feet deep.

We understand that the Indians north are disposed to be hostile, and that the herdsmen and settlers are apprehensive of their stock.

As considerable talk has been made by the presence of the troops at Provo during the session of the U. S. District Court, we give the following extract in Judge Cradlebaugh's Charge in explanation of it:

"Some United States troops are here. Perhaps it is an unusual thing for them to be here. I knew that there were those who were guilty, out by the camp, and also that there were many guilty around here, of numerous offences. I was informed that there was no prison here, and those troops were sent by the commanding General, at my request, to take care of the prisoners now in custody, and not to interfere with any one. They are here to take care of and preserve the peace. If prisoners are brought they will be taken care of, and the whole authority of the troops is to detain those persons in custody that may be taken prisoners, until they are called for by the court, and they have no power beyond that."

A party went out with the last Eastern mail, and upon their return, while crossing Weber, broke through the ice, and the mules came near being drowned; they plunged out however, with great difficulty.

This is St. Patrick's day, and the few Irishmen in this Territory will celebrate, not in a public, but a private manner.

We have been shown a letter addressed to Mr. Frank D. Gilbert from Major Chorpennig, who recently left for the States, from which we make the following extract:—

"St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 31, 1859.

I have only a moment to inform you that I had a very pleasant trip, and reached Atchinson in fifteen days.

I met John Hockaday, Esq., at Devil's Gate, and he came with me down. If he had not been along, I would have made it in less than fourteen days, but he had business at every station, which detained him from two to three hours in every instance.

This is the shortest trip that has ever been made. We had several light snow storms, and very cold weather all the way, but nobody froze.

I leave on the first train for Washington City, which point I will reach in about nineteen days from Salt Lake.

There is great excitement in this country about the Cherry Creek Gold Mines, and there is going to be a '49 stampede from the Western States.

Pike county will be on hand 'in course.'"

WEBER STATION, Feb. 23, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.:

The mail left Great Salt Lake City on Saturday, Agent Slade and ex-agent Ashton in company with it. I left the city some hours after, and expected that Mr. Finley and Dyer to follow on Sunday; but they have not overtaken us, and suppose that they did not, for from the city to the mouth of Emigration Canyon the snow was about 12 or 15 inches deep; from there to Killon's House, at the head of the canyon, two feet of snow. There I came in sight of the mail party, and stopped two hours to rest.

The mail continued to travel, and I did not expect to see them any more. I started from Killon's at five o'clock, and traveled over the little mountain, the snow four to five feet deep; arrived at E. Hanks' ranch at nine o'clock at night, and found the mail party eating their supper. They started at ten o'clock, bidding me a final good bye.

I remained all night, and started at six in the morning. At nine o'clock I overtook the mail party at the spring on the Big Mountain; they had traveled all night without sleeping any, and had made two miles in eleven hours' travel.

At nine o'clock in the morning, we started again, the mail and my own party, which made seven men. The snow was from six to eight feet deep, and at the spring we could not tell the depth.

We held a consultation about the propriety of turning back; I gave my counsel to turn back, but Agent Slade said, "Go ahead," and we started; and after working from nine in the morning to five in the afternoon, unpacking, dragging and repacking mules, we made in eight hours' travel one half of a mile; and thought that we had done wonders in getting to the top of the Big Mountain, the mail conductor, Mr. Hardin, kept telling us that the worst was to come in going down the Big Mountain.

We started down. I thought that down hill through the snow would be easier, but the snow was at least 15 or 20 feet deep. We had to drag the mules through the snow, where they sank in deeper than their backs for some four hundred yards, where the mules all gave out; and had to lay by to feed and rest.

This was on Sunday. All this time Mr. Slade, Mr. Ashton and Conductor Hardin had not any sleep; all three were snow blind, and did not think it possible to proceed.

Here three discharged teamsters (Mexicans) from Camp Floyd overtook us, and Agent Slade hired them to assist us; and we proceeded to advance slowly, making one mile in about two hours.

At nine in the morning, we came to a camp of the Eastern mail that they made Thursday, the 17th. The mail conductor, A. C. Ains (better known as Texas), had cached the mail and turned back, unable to proceed. He was four days getting back to the Weber station, and two days he was without anything to eat.

We traveled all day Monday, the 21st, and made East Canyon Creek at dark, all hands snow-blind except one Mexican and myself, (Slade, Ashton, Hardin and one mail boy so badly that they could not keep the path without holding on to a mule); the snow was from six to ten feet deep, and not a sign of a trail; and it took two men a-head all the time from the top of the Little Mountain to feel for the trail, which was buried in the snow two or three feet. It was like prospecting for gold very hard to find.

Tuesday, the 22nd, we traveled down East Canyon, working as hard as ever. Made the Hog's Back, between East Canyon and Weber. No feed for the mules, the poor brutes would chew bridle, ropes, saddles, &c., &c.

Here we discovered the trail that conductor Ains had made. Had it not been that we had found this trail, I do not think that we would have got to the Weber station with more than half of the mules, if any at all.

On Wednesday, the 23rd, we arrived at the Weber station at ten o'clock; and the mail left at 11 o'clock with fresh mules.

Now I am at the hospitable Governor, Briggs, who has charge of the Weber station where I would recommend all travelers to call and see the Governor especially. He has all the staffs of life.

I shall leave here for Bridger in the morning.

S. L. HUBBELL.

Second Judicial District Court.

Provo, March 9, 1859.

Court met at 9 A. M. pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present, Hon. Alexander Wilson, Attorney; P. K. Dotson, Esq., Marshal; A. V. Brookie, Deputy; L. M. Scovill, Clerk; Alexander Williams, Crier, and J. F. Stone, Bailiff.

Clerk read the records of the proceedings of yesterday.

After a call for motions, and there being none, the Court adjourned to meet again at 9 A. M. to-morrow.

March 10.

Court met at 9 A. M. pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present, as on yesterday.

Clerk read the proceedings of last meeting.

By request the names of the Attorneys present were enrolled and read.

Mr. Blair, presented his commission as Attorney elect by the Legislature, for the Territory, and asked the opinion of the Court, as to the extent of his duties, if any, before the Grand Jury, claiming the power to summon a new Grand Jury, to present crimes arising under the laws of the Territory. The Court was of the opinion that the power to summon one of the Grand Jury, implied the power to summon all, even to the Clerk; he would therefore take upon himself the responsibility of coinciding in his opinion from one of his associates; (Judge Sinclair,) who had already decided the question after a full and free description of its merits.

Clerk called the names of the Traverse Jury, who were dismissed till half past 2 o'clock, P. M.

Thomas Clarkson, William Holliday, and William Marsden, applied for naturalization papers, which were granted, and the oath of allegiance administered to them by the Court.

Court then took a recess till 2 o'clock P. M.

The Court resumed its session. Mr. Wilson, reported that no bills of indictment had as yet been found by the Grand Jury.

Henry Nelson, and Henry Roper, applied for naturalization papers, which were granted; and the oath administered to them.

Court then adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock A. M., to-morrow.

March 11.

Court met at 10 A. M. pursuant to adjournment. Officers present as before.

Clerk read the records of the proceedings of yesterday.

Mr. Stout presented the commission of John Kay, the newly elected Marshal of the Territory, and asked that the same should be made a matter of record.

The Court could see no law requiring such a proceeding, yet he had no objections to its being recorded.

George Carlisle applied for naturalization papers, which were granted, and the oath of allegiance administered to him.

Court then took a recess.

2 p.m.

Court resumed its session.

Several bills of indictment were found by the Grand Jury.

The Court excused Wilber J. Earl from further services on the Grand Jury.

The case of Mose and Looking-glass was called up, and set for trial on Monday next.

Court then adjourned till 10 A. M. to-morrow.

March 12.

Court met at 10 A. M. pursuant to adjournment. Officers present as before.

Clerk read record of proceedings of yesterday.

Andrew J. Steward presented his bill as a practicing lawyer, and asked to be rolled with the list of attorneys.

Frederick Giles and Thomas Farrer applied for naturalization papers, which were granted; and the oath of allegiance administered to them.

Court then took a recess.

2 p.m.

Court resumed its session.

Mr. Mackintire and Henry Malben applied for naturalization papers, which were granted, and the oath of allegiance administered to them.

Court then adjourned to meet again Monday next.

U. T.

P. S.—Quite an interesting correspondence occurred this morning between the Mayor, Provo, and Judge Cradlebaugh, a copy of which will be furnished the Valley Tan.

U. T.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD,

March 10, 1859.

On Wednesday, the 9th ultimo, Richard Prinsley Sheridan's comedy of "The Rivals" was produced with the following cast:—

Sir Anthony Absolute	Mr. J. Rutledge
Captain Absolute	" H. K. Thatcher
Faulkland	" W. Warren
Acres	" R. C. White
Sir Lucius O. Trigger	" J. Shaw
Fag	" W. Crawford
David	" O. L. Baldwin
Thomas	" J. Delano
Mrs. Malaprop	" Mrs. Tuckett
Lydia Languish	" Whitlock
Julia	" Westwood
Lucy	" Miss Whitlock

The character of Sir Anthony Absolute was very well sustained by Mr. Rutledge. His acting was finished and gentlemanly.

Mr. Thatcher, as Capt. Absolute, rendered his part with great buoyancy and spirit, and was very good throughout.

Mr. White, as Acres, was very successful.

Mr. Shaw, as Sir Lucius O. Trigger, fully maintained his high reputation in this class of characters by his excellent performance on this occasion.

Fag, by Mr. Crawford, who was not only very appropriately dressed, but had a proper appreciation of the part.

Mr. Tuckett's representation of "Mrs. Malaprop" was of the first class; her application of words was extremely ludicrous, and excited the risibility of the audience.

This comedy is very difficult for amateurs to succeed in, and requires acting of a very superior order to make the numerous whimsicalisms tell; and, although some of the characters were rather indifferently sustained, we consider the association has lost none of its hardly-earned prestige by it.

After, which the farce of "The Irish Attorney," in which Mr. Shaw played Pierce O'Hara with his accustomed ability.

The house was very thinly attended, and must have proved a loss to the management. Indeed, money is now so scarce that the best plays cannot fill the theatre.

The orchestra played Cata Diva, from the Opera of Norma, very well.

We understand that "Venice Preserved" will be the next performance.

"DRAMA."

We take the following extract from an old mutilated pamphlet, and delivered either by the Prophet or some of the elders at a Conference held in the Tabernacle in 1832:—

"Why not look upon Abraham's blessings as your own, for the Lord blessed him with a promise of seed as numerous as the sand upon the sea-shore; so will you be blessed, on else you will not inherit the promises of Abraham."

How did Abraham manage to get a foundation laid for his mighty kingdom? Was he to accomplish it all through his wife? No. Sarah gave a certain woman to him whose name was Hagar, and by her a seed was to be raised up unto him. Is this all? No. We read of his wife Keturah, and also of a plurality of wives and concubines, which he had, from whom he raised up many sons. Here, then, was a foundation laid for the fulfillment of the great and grand promise, concerning the multiplicity of his seed. It would have been rather a slow process, if Abraham had been confined to one wife, like some of those narrow, contracted nations of modern Christianity.

I think there is only about one-fifth of the population of the globe, that believe in the one-wife system; the other four-fifths believe in the doctrine of a plurality of wives. They have had it handed down from time immemorial, and are not half so narrow and contracted in their minds, as some of the nations of Europe and America, who have done away with the promises, and deprived themselves of the blessings of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The nations do not know anything about the blessings of Abraham; and even those who have only one wife, cannot get rid of their covetousness, and get their little hearts full of envy with a generous, and feelings, that not to have to know what things they are cause of the ti do not know eternal world his kingdom. Here, then, principle, read Abraham alone partake of the and Jacob, that will not walk in his foot blessings.

Again, let's edition in register stood the less seed was would come a derailed the for Abraham saw that she should not have seed, she gave fertile, christ days? O no; to send a man brimstone. Installed this awful things.

It matters are in female lawfully mar would be cons to raise up a wife; this was go into a brot selves in the all the days of a trilling thin, such institut all passes off.

That is trac been fostered steps of wicl stalks abroad cities of Euro Do you find degradation a the mountains our midst, ve to see such of existence. of this commu Look upon quity in Isra and woman i put to death. are going to d we believe.

Whorelora cursed the u generations, upon the con tively done av selves the p woot wool be with the Lor of Mormon, winelons; hel? There Such things w munity; and the time will eyes are upon who discern secret, will b will be made and shame a posterity after generation of.

How is this got a fallen n be prevented i ancient times; ful servants a numerous and up, and taul ness and truth derstand thos the ancient p law of God, a gressions of, blotted out f may have n God.

But again, this plurality Day Saints, reason, and the blessing ham, Isaac, a tination of, become as m sea shore. 2 Good one, too I will tell you to every man mind. Do w have told us, earth are do here it.

Phetis have as you said u prevail upon upon the min this, but that upon the fac nations, apcal corrupted the God, by their aties, abom other kinds of more believe, prophets, as and modern of Doctrine of the vengea unheated, more be put falls upon the are destroyed

I can bear with me. W done just as I it was my d desire to do t had a little to undertook to said, when I he was glad little hearts large enough to share their property with a numerous family; they are so penurious, and so narrow contracted, in their feelings, that they take every possible care not to have their families large; they do not know what is in the future; nor what blessings they are depriving themselves of, because of the traditions of their fathers they do not know that a man's posterity, in the eternal worlds, are to constitute his glory, his kingdom and dominion.

Here, then, we perceive, just from this one principle, reasoning from the blessings of Abraham alone, the necessity, if we would partake of the blessings of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,—of doing their works; and he that will not do the works of Abraham, and walk in his footsteps, will be deprived of his blessings.

Again, let us look at Sarah's peculiar position in regard to Abraham. She understood the whole matter; she knew that unless seed was raised up to Abraham, that he would come short of his glory; and she understood the promise of the Lord, and longed for Abraham to have seed. And when she saw that she was old, and fearing that she should not have the privilege of raising up seed, she gave to Abraham, Hagar. Would Gentile Christendom do such things now-a-days? O no; they would consider it enough to send a man to an endless hell of fire and brimstone. Why? Because tradition has instilled this in their minds as a dreadful, awful thing.

It matters not to them how corrupt they are in female prostitution; if they are not lawfully married to only one wife; but it would be considered an awful thing by them to raise up a posterity from more than one wife; this would be wrong indeed,—but to go into a brothel, and there debauch themselves in the lowest haunts of degradation all the days of their lives, they consider only a trifling thing; nay, they can even license such institutions in Christian nations, and it all passes off very well.

That is tradition; and their posterity have been fostered, and brought up in the footsteps of wickedness. This is death, as it stalks abroad among the great and popular cities of Europe and America.

Do you find such haunts of prostitution, degradation and misery here, in the cities of the mountains. No. Were such things in our midst, we should feel indignant enough to see such persons blotted out of the page of existence. These would be the feelings of this community.

Look upon those who committed such iniquity in Israel, in ancient days; every man and woman who committed adultery were put to death. I do not say that this people are going to do this; but I will tell you what we believe—we believe it ought to be done.

Whoredom, adultery, and fornication, have cursed the nations of the earth for many generations, and are increasing fearfully upon the community; but they must be entirely done away from those who call themselves the people of God; if they are not, woe will be unto them, also; for "thus saith the Lord God Almighty," in the Book of Mormon, "woe unto them that commit whoredoms; for they shall be thrust down to hell." There is no getting away from it. Such things will not be allowed in this community; and such characters will find, that the time will come, that that God whose eyes are upon all the children of men, and who discerneth the things that are done in secret, will bring their acts to light, and they will be made an example before the people; and shame and infamy will cleave to their posterity after them, unto the third and fourth generation of them that repeat it.

How is this to be prevented?—for we have got a fallen nature to grapple with. It is to be prevented in the way the Lord devised in ancient times; that is, by giving to his faithful servants a plurality of wives, by which a numerous and faithful posterity can be raised up, and taught in the principles of righteousness and truth; and then, after they fully understand those principles that were given to the ancient patriarchs, if they keep not the law of God, and commit adultery, and transgressions of this kind, let their names be blotted out from under heaven, that they may have no place among the people of God.

But again, there is another reason why this plurality should exist among the Latter Day Saints. I have already given you one reason, and that is, that you might inherit the blessings and promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and receive a continuation of your posterity, that they may become as numerous as the sand upon the sea shore. There is another reason, and a good one, too.—What do you suppose it is? I will tell you; and it will appear reasonable to every man and woman of a reflecting mind. Do we not believe, as the scriptures have told us, that the wicked nations of the earth are doomed to destruction? Yes; we believe it. We also believe, as the prophets have foretold, concerning the last days, that as what the new revelations have said on the subject, that darkness prevails upon the earth, and gross darkness upon the minds of the people; and not only this, but that all flesh has corrupted its way upon the face of the earth; that is, that all nations, speaking of them as nations, have corrupted themselves before the Most High God, by their wickedness, whoredoms, idolatries, abominations, adulteries, and all other kinds of wickedness? And we further believe, that according to the Jewish prophets, as well as the Book of Mormon, and modern revelations, given in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, that the sword of the vengeance of the Almighty is already unsheathed, and stretched out, and will no more be put back into the scabbard, until it falls upon the head of the nations, until they are destroyed, except they repent.

I can bear testimony that God has been with me. Why? Because I have gone and done just as I have been told. It is because I was a determination, my will, and my desire to do the things I was sent to do. We had a little to do with mobs; it is true. They undertook to mob me a little; and Mr. Grant said, when he heard of it in Washington, he was glad of it. [A voice in the stand,

"and so was I."] I was too, because I felt when they were trying to mob me, and seek my life, I was better than they were; if I had not been, they would not have tried to destroy me from the earth. They ran me into Mr. Farnsworth's potato hole; to be sure, I ran in there, and thought it was a first rate place to hide; I staid there a couple of hours, and reflected upon mobs, upon the things of the Kingdom, and called upon my Father in Heaven, by the authority of the Holy Priesthood, and I felt as though I could whip all the mobs in Missouri, if it had been wisdom to do so, and the best course for me to take. I would have gone out and whipped the whole posse of them. [A voice from the stand, "Yes, after they had all gone away."] Many in Kanesville wanted me to wrestle with them. I said, I don't wrestle with any except from Salt Lake, but I can tap you on the head, as I would a little boy, if that will do you any good; but when I see a man from Salt Lake full of good works, I consider it an honor to wrestle with a man of that class; but I don't have anything to do with the low, degenerated characters who do nothing else but wrestle and gamble; but I said if you don't believe I can wrestle, try me, and I will end you up a few times. They thought I was a very stout man, and it passed off just as well as though I had tried my dexterity upon them.

CHARGE

Orally delivered by Hon. John Cradlebaugh to the Grand Jury, Provo, Tuesday, March 8, 1859, 11 a.m.

[REPORTER.]

I will say to you, Gentlemen of the Grand Jury, that, from what I learn, it has been some time since a court, having judicial cognizance in your district, was held. No person has been brought to punishment for some time; and from what I have learned I am satisfied that crime after crime has been committed.

There is no such effectual way of stopping crime, no means has been found so effectual and sure as the speedy punishment of the offender; therefore, so far as you are concerned, and your community, it is a very important matter, if you desire innocent and unoffending persons to be protected, that you vigilantly and diligently prosecute all persons who are violators of the law.

I will, before I close the remarks that I intend to make, make mention of certain crimes that have committed. I will make mention of certain offences that I am certain have been committed; vigilance is therefore necessary.

In consequence of the Legislature not having provided proper means, there is not that aid given that is desired to enable the judiciary to prosecute its duties, but I will say that the Legislature, in my opinion, have legislated to prevent the judiciary from bringing such offenders to justice.

I believe that outside of this Territory, where they have a Legislature at all, there is no place but what has a provision in its laws that persons found committing crimes can be arrested, brought before tribunals, committed to prison and detained until the court having jurisdiction can try them. Such provision does not seem to be made here. There is no legislative enactment that seems to authorize a justice of the peace to commit a person accused of crime to prison. I find that a party may be arrested, brought before a justice of the peace and tried, if it is a case that he has jurisdiction over, but if it is a crime or case that he cannot try, there is a provision that he can be taken to the court having jurisdiction, and be tried immediately.

From the nature of the District Courts, and they are the only courts having criminal jurisdiction, they are designed to investigate and try all criminal cases, but the officer has no authority to detain a person in his custody, but he is immediately to take him before a court and try him. But a District Court cannot always be in session. This legislation was perhaps to take away their criminal jurisdiction; to prevent those cases getting into that court, which is the only court that has jurisdiction.

They have provided the Probate Courts with criminal jurisdiction, and it would seem that the whole machinery was made so that they should be brought before that court and tried, and the fact that there is no additional legislation to provide for bringing them before this court proves that it was done to prevent.

I will say that the Probate Court can have no criminal jurisdiction. Under the Organic Act that court is confined. That Organic Act provides for Supreme, District and Probate Courts, and for justices of the peace. The Organic Act operates upon the legislation of the Territory. The Legislature are bound by that Organic Act, in their legislation. That Organic Act also says that these courts shall be as limited by law; but it is not to be presumed, because it says that the jurisdiction of these courts shall be as limited by law, that the Legislature shall extend it. When the Organic Act says there shall be a Probate Court with certain powers, it is not reasonable to suppose that the Legislature shall go and extend those powers; they might as well give Probate jurisdiction to the District Courts as to give criminal jurisdiction to the Probate Courts.

When the Organic Act says the jurisdiction of the Probate Court shall be as limited by law, it means that they shall be, as it is understood, as limited by the laws of the United States. It seems that the Legislature has vested them with criminal jurisdiction to prevent the District Court from having anything of this kind to do. The reasons for this legislation it is not my object to speak of at present. We say they have no power to do so.

The fact of a person having been before that court is no bar to his coming before this; it is no more bar than it would be if he had been brought before a vigilance committee in California. Any person suing in that court, would be liable in a civil action for damages.

I do this to impress upon you the necessity of the District Court carrying out its jurisdiction and punishing criminals. At the last session of the Legislature I understand that a code commission was appointed to revise the laws, and I hope that they will take this subject into consideration, and make such provision as will enable the court to do its duty.

There is another general matter to which I wish to call your attention. There has been another attempt to destroy this court, to destroy its usefulness, to bring the judge and the business of the court into disrepute before the people, even to bring the jurors into disrepute. There is no question about this; I read it in the Deseret News, the organ of the church. In that the judges and the members of the bar are abused in all kinds of language, in a manner that is calculated to injure them before the people. And in that organ also the jurors are abused and spoken of in language that is calculated to influence their minds. I say these things are in that paper, the only one published at the time in the Territory, and I say it is proper for me to mention these things.

These things were enforced by one who was at that time the Governor, the Executive of the Territory. When you see a person of that kind who is bound to enforce law, using language of that abusive character, the court thinks it is within its province to repeat such insinuations as are there cast upon it. So far as the attorneys are concerned I feel compelled to say that such assertions as are there made are not true.

With regard to the jurors who are selected from the community for their good moral character, I say it is proper for you to disregard all outside influences. I understand that the person who was then the Executive had a suit in the court, and because he could not get the control of the minds of the jurors he made those remarks. I speak of it because it was an effort which was made to bring an influence to destroy the independence of the jurors, and to destroy the efficiency of the court. These having been made to destroy your efficiency, you should manifest that you are not to be governed by these outside influences that are brought to bear and operate upon the minds of the community.

I said to you in the outset that a great number of cases had come to my knowledge of crimes having been committed through the country, and I shall take the liberty of naming a few of them. The persons committing those offences have not been prosecuted, the reasons why I cannot tell, but it strikes me that those outside influences have prevented it. If you do your duty you will not neglect to inquire into those matters, or allow the offenders to go unpunished. I may mention the Mountain Meadow murder, where a whole train was cut off, except a few children who were too young to give evidence in court. It has been claimed that this offence was committed by Indians, but there is evidence that there were others who were engaged in it besides.

When the Indians commit crimes they are not so discriminate as to save children; they would not be so particular as to save the children and kill the rest. I say you may look at all the crimes that have been committed in the Western country by the Indians, and there is no case where they have been so careful as to save the innocent children. But if this be not enough, we have evidence to prove that there were others there engaged in it.

A large body of persons leaving Cedar City, armed, and after getting away were organized, and went and returned with the spoil. Now there are persons who know that there were others engaged in the crime; I brought a young man with me who saw persons go out in wagons with arms, others on horseback, were away a day or two and came back with the spoil. The Indians complain that in the distribution of the property they did not get their share; they seem to think that the parties engaged with them kept the best and gave them the worst. The chief there (Kanosah) is equally amenable to law, and liable to be punished, and I suppose it is well known that he was engaged in assisting to exterminate the hundred persons that were in that train. I might name to you persons that were there; a great number of them I have had named to me. And yet notwithstanding this crime has been committed, there has been no effort made to punish those individuals. I say then, gentlemen, it is your duty to look after that, and if it is a fact that they have been guilty of that offence, indict them, send for them and have them brought before this court.

I might bring your attention to another case, near here, at Springville; that is the case of the Parrishes and Potter. Springville is a village of several hundred inhabitants. There is one young man whom it was intended to kill. He ran to his uncle's, and was followed to his uncle's house. Here are three persons killed, and the criminal goes unpunished.

There can be no doubt but by the testimony of young Parrish that you will be able to identify those persons who were connected with it. He can tell you who was engaged in it, and who followed him to the house of his uncle. Here are three persons that were butchered in a most inhuman manner, and the offenders have not been brought to justice. This is sufficient to show that there has been an effort to cover up instead of to bring to light and punish.

At the same place there was another person killed, Henry Fobbs, who came in from California and was going to the States, but got in here when the difficulties arose between this community and the General Government, and was detained. When Henry Fobbs was here, he made his home at Partial Terry's, staid there a few weeks; during that time his horse and revolver were stolen; he made his escape, tried to get to Bridger, was caught, brought back and murdered; and that is the last of Henry Fobbs. No investigation has been made; his body has been removed several times, so that now, perhaps, it could not be found. Shortly afterwards his horse was trailed off by Terry. Here is a man said to be killed by the Indians, and then his horse is taken by Mr. Terry and traded for sheep. It seems to me that these are matters that you ought to investigate. Fobbs, I believe, lived in the State of Illinois; he had a wife and children and was very anxious to get back; and I suppose his wife is still anxious about him; but as to what has become of him she cannot tell. I say this case ought to come under your notice and be investigated, and the offenders punished; don't let them go unpunished.

Then there was Henry Jones that was murdered up here; I believe he was first castrated up in the city, then went to Payson, was chased to Pond Town and was shot there. It is said that he committed some offence. But if persons do commit offences, the public have no right to take the law into their own hands; they have no right to take persons and punish them. I understand that he was castrated; that he came down here, that he was killed, and the house in which he and his mother had lived was pulled down.

There is another matter to which I wish to call your attention. A few days before the matter of the murder of the Parrishes and Potter, the stable of Parrish was broken into and his carriage and horses were taken out; this was done in the night. These horses have never been returned. That woman, the wife of Mr. Parrish, told me that, since then, at times, she had lived on bread and water, and still there are persons in this community riding about with those horses. Mr. Lysander Gee has those horses; he says that a few days after they were stolen they were given to him, and that he was directed to give them to no person whatever.

Now it is a strange kind of matter that persons should go to Parrish's, break open his stable and rob him, and then take the horses to Mr. Lysander Gee and tell him to keep them. It does not look reasonable. It would look more reasonable to suppose that Mr. Lysander Gee was engaged in it himself, and it is an outrageous thing that this woman, one of whose children was killed with her husband, has been obliged to live in the very dregs of poverty. I say bring that man up and compel him to restore those horses, and give the property back to her, and do not allow her to live in poverty while others are riding about the country here with her husband's property.

Young Mr. Parrish is here, if the grand jury desire to have him; they can use him as a witness.

It is not pleasant to talk about these things, but the crimes have been committed, and if you desire you can investigate them. My desire is that the responsibility shall be with the grand jury and not with the court; and the question is with you whether you will bring those persons to trial.

I have hereby named those few things; there has been a great deal of crime committed, and there is a way to punish those who have committed them.

I hear every day of cases of larceny, and an officer is now after a number who are engaged in committing depredations. A great many cases have been committed near Camp Floyd, such as I shall call the attention of the Territorial Attorney to, such as buying soldiers' clothes. Unless you faithfully discharge your duty I cannot see how you are to escape from the influence of those cases of larceny that have been committed. I therefore present these for the purpose of having you promptly discharge your duty.

When you retire you will elect your clerk; and it is the desire of the court to expedite business, you will therefore be permitted to meet upon your own adjournment. If time is required, the court will adjourn from time to time to give it to you.

To allow these things to pass over gives a color as if they were done by authority. The very fact of such a case as that of the Mountain Meadows shows that there was some person high in the estimation of the people, and it was done by that authority; and this case of the Parrishes shows the same, and unless you do your duty, such will be the view that will be taken of it.

You can know no law but the laws of the United States and the laws you have here. No person can commit crimes and say they are authorized by higher authorities, and if they have any such notions they will have to despel them.

I saw something said in that paper of some higher law. It is, perhaps, not proper to mention that, but such teachings will have their influence upon the public mind. Gentlemen, I have nothing further to say to you. The Marshal will find you a room, and the court will afford you every facility in its power. The District Attorney will be with you, and the court will not object to his being present at the examination of witnesses, but it will afford you all the aid that may be required by you.

THE APACHES.—We learn from private advices, says the Bulletin, that the Apaches have been troublesome about Tucson lately, although they have as yet done no harm to the overland mail line. They killed two United States soldiers a short time since in that quarter. A day or two afterwards they killed John Capron's teamster, on the Forty-Mile Desert, and drove off his team.

A Good Description.—The best description of weakness that we ever heard is contained in the wag's query to his wife, when she gave him some chicken broth, if she would not try to coax that chicken just to wade through the soup once more.

A SOLDIER OUT OF LUCK.—On Friday last, Martin Holman, formerly one of Gen. Johnson's Utah soldiers, was brought from White Oak to this city and lodged in the County Hospital. Some days since, the wheels of a heavy wagon passed over one of his legs, producing a severe compound fracture. — Observer, (Placerville.)

U. S. TROOPS AND THE MOJAVE INDIANS.—A correspondent of the Union, writing from New San Diego, January 26th, gives the following intelligence:

On the 21st inst. the mail steamer Senator arrived, bringing some invalid soldiers from Fort Tejon, and a detachment of recruits for this post; also the report that Brev. Lt. Col. Hoffman, Sixth Infantry, had been driven back by the Mojave Indians, who told him that he could not occupy their country. This report no doubt will appear as a fact in the Los Angeles Star, in order to induce the Government to send more troops into that section of country, and in order that money may be abundant. It appears that the stage driver started the report, but Major Blake, of Fort Tejon, and Capt. Burton, of Fort Yuma, state that the report ought not to be credited. These gentlemen have been stationed in Southern California for several years, and ought to be pretty good judges of the Indians occupying the country in the vicinity of their posts.

Lt. Drysdale and a detachment of recruits (38) left this place on the 24th inst. for Fort Yuma.

This place has been changed from a deserted, filthy place, to one of life and cleanliness, since the arrival of the troops, last month, who now occupy it.

MORE INDIANS KILLED.—On the 25th January, Lieut. Winslett, of the volunteers, surprised an Indian camp in the Redwoods, in Humboldt county, killed several, caught one prisoner, and routed them completely from all their positions. On the 26th, the Indians fired on his men, and were immediately run off. A wounded Indian was found, who was being carried on a litter. This wounded Indian was not disturbed, for they deemed it good policy to leave him, as they always pack their wounded with them, and necessarily move slowly. Lieut. W.'s party burnt thousands of pounds of provisions, which they found scattered through the woods. The volunteers have done good service in the north, and it is a great pity that Gov. Weller did not call out volunteers to chastise the Mojaves. It would be a more summary way of punishing them, than waiting for the slow movements of the heavy regiments of regulars.

FIRE WATER.—A man recently bought a barrel of whisky at the Bay, and when he tried its guage with the handle of a broom, the article took off all the paint from it.

DEER SNOW.—The snow is now deeper upon the mountains than at any time during the winter. It is said to be three feet deep within ten mile's distance from this city. — Observer, (Placerville.)

How the universal heart of men blesses flowers! They are wreathed round the cradle, the marriage-altar and the tomb. The Cupid of the ancient Hindoos tipped his arrows with flowers, and orange flowers are a bridal crown with us—a nation of yesterday. Flowers garlanded the Grecian altar, and hung in votive wreaths before the Christian shrine. — Mrs. Child.

LAGER BEER!

HOT SPRING BREWERY.

We will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquor of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers. X.X.X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Wood. FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours. We have secured a good supply of hay and oats; and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals. OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows: Single meals, $1.00. Supper, breakfast and lodging, 2.00. For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 1.00. For animals, for a single feed of hay and grain, 1.00. And double those prices for feed over night. N.B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery. MOGO, BURN & CO. Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

HUMOROUS!

Why is an address pronounced on board a ship like a finger-ring? It's a deck-oration!

Why is an overloaded gun like an office holder? Because it kicks mightily when discharged.

"Sir," said a young wife to her husband a few days after marriage, "you were honest enough to tell me that your chimney smoked, but why didn't you tell me that you smoked your self?"

An English judge being asked what contributed most to success at the bar, replied: "Some succeed by great talent, some by the influence of friends, some by a miracle, but the majority by commencing without a shilling."

An Ohio editor says: "What can be more captivating than to see a beautiful woman, say about four feet eleven inches high, and eleven feet four inches in circumference, passing along the aisle just as divine worship commences?"

"Dan," said a little four years old, "give me ten cents to buy a monkey." "We've got one monkey in the house now," said the elder brother. "Who is it, Dan?" said the little fellow. "You," was the reply. "Then give me ten cents to buy the monkey some candy." His brother "shelled" immediately.

"Can you tell me," said A to B, the foreman of a grand jury, "what, was done with the bill against Snuggles, for horse stealing?"

"Yes sir, we have ignored it."

"And what did you do with the one against Mellowskull, for arson?"

"We ignored that too."

"Well, how about that against Blazaway, for murder?"

"Well, that we had to ignore."

"Well, Mr. B, you will allow me to say, that I have never heard of so much ignorance in one grand jury in all my life."

How John Swore for Betty.

"Allow me," said Brown, the clerk, "to ask you a few questions. You are twenty-nine years of age, I suppose, Mr. N—?"

"Yes," said John.

"Do you solemnly swear that Betty Jones, spinster, is of lawful age (made and enacted by the Legislature of Virginia) to take the marriage vow?"

"What's that?" said John.

Mr. B. repeated.

"Well," said John, "Mr. Clerk, I want to get married, and must get married, but I joined the church at the last revival, and I wouldn't swear for a hundred dollars."

"Then, sir, you can not get married."

"Can't get married! Good gracious, Mr. Clerk, they'll turn me out of church if I swear! Don't refuse, Mr. Clerk, for Heaven's sake. I'll give you ten dollars if you let me off from swearing."

"Can't do it, Mr. N—."

"Hold on, Mr. Clerk, I'll swear. I couldn't give up Betty for ten churches. I'll be damned if she ain't eighteen years old—give me the license."

After the clerk burst a few of the buttons off of his vest he granted the license.

THE BLUENOSE QUADRILLES.—The following are the figures of the only quadrille danced at the delightful ball given by a serious family;

1—Ladies advance and leave the room. Opposite gentlemen advance, groan and retire. Sides same. Set to partners, and turn up eyes to the ceiling. All jump as high as possible till tired.

2—Gentlemen rise and leave the room. Ladies enter and to places. Dance al libitum, and that only waltz, polka, or mazourka be permitted.

3—Ladies leave the room. First gentleman advance, sing a hymn, and run round the room as hard as he can go. Second and others follow, and all run together, and finally out at the door.

4—Ladies enter, and to places. Stand still, beating time with one foot whilst first lady recites hymn. All round. Opposite lady the same, and then sides. Walk slowly from the room.

5—All go home, but separately, mind, and a deacon is to take care that the ladies shawl each other and that there is no nonsense about being "seen home," and the like.

ARISTOCRACY IN RAGS.—There is probably an aristocracy in every rank of life, if we would only know it; but, says the Boston Courier, we hardly looked for anything of this sort where, nevertheless, we accidentally discovered it this morning. Coming along through the street called Beacon, just in front of one of its sedate residences, we came upon a small crowd of Irish girls, clad in those ludicrous bonnets and shawls they always wear, which, poor creatures, they are only too glad to wear. Each carried the unwholesome looking basket peculiar to their calling—the collection of food—and they were, evidently, just commencing their work of the day.

Three or four of the older ones were taunting another, who seemed not of their guild, a poor, lean little thing, an old woman in dress, a child in feature. "We don't go beggin', for cole vittles," said the most brassy of the crew, with a strong, woman-like accent on the we and the beggin'; said, too, with actually a toss of the head!

The singularity of the expression compelled us to inquire, a little bashfully, it is true, into its meaning; we found that this small spoken-woman, in common with her immediate companions, had the right of forage in certain back yards, a right acquired by prescription rather than by a positive charter; and, by virtue of this conceded privilege, whenever they presented themselves within the sight of their clients, their customers, then the lady's accumulation of refuse food was at once delivered, and received as a tribute; while the wretched little object of their scorn wanting the self-confidence so necessary to advancement in all walks of life, would slide her poor form through the gate, and linger bashfully on the kitchen steps, till potato peelings or a shrill command to leave was thrust at her. She was compelled to beg for cold victuals. It was a dreadful parody on the pride which may find a more decorous but not less emphatic expression in some dwelling whose windows overlooked the sordid squabble.

THE MAIL CONTRACT.—When the Overland Mail contract was let, we took the ground that the intention of the law had been defeated by the action of the Postmaster General. The law provided that the bidders should name the point from which they proposed to start on the Mississippi, but was silent as to the route to be traveled. When bids were advertised for, the Postmaster General required that the route over which it was proposed to convey the mail should be stated in each bid. This the law did not require. The bids were so submitted, and not one of the bidders proposed to carry the mail over the route which was finally adopted. Butterfield & Co. bid to carry it from St. Louis, via Albuquerque and the Mojave river country, and accompanied their bid with a letter, in which they argued the superiority of that route over the one further south, quite eloquently. But the Postmaster General rejected all the routes named in the various bids—the lowest of which was by Salt Lake—and marked one out for himself, to which Butterfield & Co. transferred their bid, as the contract could not be obtained for any other. This was clearly understood at the time, and hence the reason of our protesting against the action of the Post Office Department. For so doing we were quite fiercely assailed by certain Administration papers in the State, and accused of being factious and sectional in our views. But we are quite gratified to find the same views expressed by Administration Senators on the floor of the United States Senate.

In the debate on the Pacific Railroad bill, Senator Pugh, of Ohio, a leading Administration Senator, made the following remarks. We commend them to the attention of the San Francisco National:

Mr. PUGH.—Will the Senator allow me to make him a suggestion? We did that with the Overland Mail route precisely. We left every one of the contractors to bid; they all did bid; the Postmaster General rejected all their bids, and instead of that made a new route for himself that Congress never intended to make. I voted for the Overland Mail, expecting it to commence at St. Louis and go to San Francisco. I never intended this horse-shoe, running down for the benefit of Memphis, and all that, and therefore I will not trust any contractors when they are at the mercy of the Postmaster General.—Sacramento Union.

The lady who knit her brow has commenced a pair of socks.

What One Man Did.

Under this head the Baltimore Sun has an article on the heroic act of a man named Haslem, who, with one small boat, saved twenty-two children, who were going out to sea with the tide, on a cake of ice, near Boston. The Sun says:

The children, upon a large cake of ice, were floating out upon the ebb tide, unobserved, and in all human probability would have soon been washed from their unstable raft, or in their terror have precipitated their own destruction. They were happily seen by a man named Wm. Haslem—and honored be his name—who was out in a small boat, and whose attention was attracted to the little adventurers by their screams. He pulled to their assistance, and at once perceived the difficulty and danger of removing them from the ice to his boat. It will easily be realized by any one who has ever had but small experience seaward. With all his caution he could not keep the little feet from hurrying toward him, and the danger must have been imminent in the extreme, and the importance of immediate and uninterrupted action, as the account intimates, was forced upon him, and breathlessly he hurried them from the treacherous floor to his own frail boat, now loaded to the water's edge. And what had he accomplished? Possibly he has not measured the deed since. Yet how deeply he must have been for the moment interested in the young lives given in his charge; how cheerfully he must have talked to and encouraged them. And how thoroughly they must have trusted him, loved him—aye, in their simple way, adored him. And what had he done?

Measure it by the threatening catastrophe. The sheet of ice hastening out to sea with the ebb tide, bearing away helplessly its living freight to the cold, terrible agony of a watery death, preceded by all the horrors accumulating there. On the other hand, the desolate place in many a household, the wailing anguish, mothers refusing to be comforted, because their children were not. Literally so; the catastrophe threatened to bear them away to death, and give them to the unrelenting deep.

One man—fortunately, says the writer, surely, we may say providentially, in behalf of the children—was honored with an opportunity to rescue all these little; to snatch them from the impending calamity, and to restore them to safety and to home, and to the joy of parental love. His unaided efforts, his single hand, had warded off and stayed all the great agony of death to the children, and anguish to the survivors. Presence of mind, care, energy, perseverance, had been rewarded with a great success, and in a few minutes a deed had been quietly achieved more graceful and self-satisfying than a victory won upon the battle field. Such opportunities rarely occur in the life-time of any man; but when they do, and are so well improved, they are worthy to receive the seal of public recognition and approval.

IDLENESS—ITS DANGEROUS.—There is an old proverb that tells us, "Idleness is the devil's pillow;" and well may it be so esteemed, for no head ever rested upon it but the lips of the evil spirit were ever at his ear, breathing falsehood and temptation. The industrious man is seldom found guilty of a crime, for he has no time to listen to the enticings of the evil one, and he is content with the enjoyments his honesty affords. It is the vicious idler, vexed to see the fortunes of his industrious neighbor growing, while he is lounging and murmuring, who robs and plunders, that he may get unlawful gain. It is the merry, thoughtless idler who, to relieve the nothingness of his days, seeks the wine cup and the gaming table. It is the sensual idler, whose licentious ear is opened to the voice of the tempter as often as his track crosses the path of youth and innocence.

A SPIRITUAL INFANT.—John M. Spear, the apostle of "Self Development," has been living in a small shanty at Kiantone, New York, for some time, with his spiritual bride, Miss Hinkley. Recently, between the two, in some mysterious way, "a son of man has been made manifest in the flesh," as Spear says, and they both declare that it is wholly a spiritual development, with nothing natural or material about it. It is noticed, however, that the thing cries and nurses, and does other things peculiar to natural babies, and some go as far as to say that it looks like its father.

A GOLD COUNTRY.—We were shown this morning, says the San Francisco Bulletin, two small pieces of gold, the size of cucumber seeds, which were found, as is said, in the craw of a wild duck, shot last Friday, by Captain Lentz, near the Presidio.

TALKING ENGLISH.—Young lady: "La, ma, here's a heagle." Mamma (reproachfully): "A heagle! Oh! you ignorant hani-mal. Vy, it's a howl!" Keeper of the menagerie (respectfully): "Hax parding, mum, 'tis an awk!"

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS, ATTORNEY AT LAW.

Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Court, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional engagements. Office—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store. G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858. 1-11

LAW NOTICE.

ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney, for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business entrusted to him. Office with Dr. Barney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, G. S. L. City. 12-11

L. & A. CARR, WHOLESALE BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS AND

BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS.

No. 49 Main Street, ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetic, grammars, geographies, philosophies, reading books, dictionaries, etc., at low rates, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY, BLANK BOOKS, PRINTING AND WRITING PAPER.

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY,

Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice.

14-11

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS, WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

Their stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco, Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco, Powder, Shot, Playing Cards, Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.

Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky, Dark do do Bourbon do do New York do do Rectified do do Gin, do do Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.

French Mustard, Mixed Pickles, Durham do Assorted do Assorted Jams, do Gherkins, do Jellies, do Piccolilli, do Syrops, do Pickled Onions, do Cordials, do Tomato Catsup, do Brandy Peaches, do Walnut Catsup, do do Cherries, do Mushroom Catsup, do Pears, do Cayenne Pepper, Assorted West India Cellery Seed, Preserves, Spanish Olives, Rhubarb Pie Fruit, do Nat. Preserves, Peach do do Capers Capoties, Apple do do Natural Pres'd Pines, Plum do do Roast Turkey, Raspberry do do Roast Chicken, Gooseberry do do String Beans, Fresh Lobster Brandy, Green Peas, Pickled do do do Corn, Fresh Clams, do Assorted Herbs, Mince Meat, do do Sweetmeats, Sausage Meat, do Natural Preserved Peaches, Fresh Cauliflower, do Nat'l Preserved Strawberries, Pickled do do berries, Worcestershire Sauce, Natural Preserved Stoughton Butters, Damsons, Fresh Salmon, Mushrooms, French Pickles, Asparagus, Hostetter Bitters, Tarragon Vinegar, Boker's do do Fields' Oysters, La Drard's do do Coye do do Pine Apple Cheese, Royal Windsor do do Olive Oil, Maraschino, Curacao, Assorted Candies, Absynth, Raisins, Scotch Ale, Almonds, London Porter, English Walnuts, Scheidam Schnapps, Brazil Nuts, Old Grapd Cognac, Figs, Golden Peach Dates, Old Virginia Peach Dates, Prunes, Mountain Dew Whisky, Pecans, Family Supplies, Crackers, Morning Calf, Cracknels, Indian Queen Maderia, E. D. Cheese, also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps, Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware, Ladies Shoes, Notions, Woollen Gloves, Hosiery, do Mitts, Buck Gloves, do Scarfs, do Gauntlets, Stationery, &c., All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce. G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858. 8-11

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.

The undersigned would most respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found; They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same uniform rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKAD, & CO.

In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends, with certainty, concerning our train to Long Street. 1-11

U. S. Mail Line

From St. Joseph to Great Salt Lake City.

NOTICE is hereby given that passengers will not be carried by us on any mail of this mail route until further notice, and that the agents and conductors on the route are positively forbidden from taking passengers, on any conditions whatever. (G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858.) By F. K. Kinkad, Agent. Feb. 16, 1858.

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,

CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.

CHARLES HARRISON, PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best of the market, and at neat and comfortable prices.

P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce. 14-11

NEW GOODS.

JUST received a full stock of Staple

GOODS, selected expressly for this market. GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

$10 REWARD.

STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Lewis' Ranch) one strawberry run horse, branded "H" on the neck shoulder. The above reward will be given on his return. RADFORD CABOT & CO. 10-11

FOR SALE,

LAGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Messrs. Burt & Co. RADFORD, CABOT & CO. 10-11

FOR SALE,

ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley. CHARLES MOGO. Hot Spring Brewery. 10-11

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-

MAKERS,

WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large and valuable stock of watches, and will promptly repair any watch or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Baylies, at the Store by Livingston, Kinkad & Co.,

their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge for carriage. G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859. 10-11

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR,

AT LAW.

Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-11

S. M. BLAIR,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR

AT LAW.

Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's Store. 2-11

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN

GOODS, ETC.,

At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T. 1-6-11

WAGONS.

A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale

by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

EMPIRE SALOON.

THE BAR is now furnished with large and choice lot of liquors, wine, &c., chased with great care, and to which the attention

those desiring WHOLESOME refreshment is respectfully called. 7-2-11 JOHN H. WALLACE.

WANTED:

A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 2-11

LIQUORS!

BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell best St. Louis Rectified Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors in proportion.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co. 16-11

SALT LAKE HOUSE.

JAMES TOWNSEND, Proprietor.

Prices of Board.

Board and Lodging per week, $12.50

Board (without Lodging), 10.00

Room, per day, 2.50

Supper, Breakfast and Lodging, 2.00

Single meal, 25c

Animals, per night, hay and grain, 25c

Payments to be made in advance. 16-3m

COW STRAYED.

ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick rope around her horns, horned with a white mark like the letter "H" on the forehead, and not certain. Please bring her to Curtis E. Bolton, Esq., ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded. 1-11

WORK CATTLE.

100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.,

Wholesale and retail dealers in

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES,

Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps,

HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS and

and offering goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in which they offer at the low figures, for Cash or Country Produce. 1-11

THE VALLEY TAN.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MARCH 22, 1859.

NUMBER 21.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY

KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

THE PRAYERLESS ONE.

He never prays! The God of heaven has watched Over all his steps, and with that careful eye
Which never sleeps, has guarded him from death,
And shielded him from danger. Through the hours,
The thoughtless hours of youth, a hand unseen
Has guarded all his footsteps o'er the wild
And thorny paths of life, and led him on
In safety through them all. In latter days,
Still the same hand has ever been his guard
From dangers seen and unseen. Clouds have lowered,
And tempests oft have burst above his head,
But that protecting hand has warded off
The thunder strokes of death; and still he stands
A monument of mercy. Years have passed,
Of varied dangers and of varied guilt,
But still the sheltering wings of love have been Outspread in mercy o'er him. He hath walked Upon the benighted earth for many years,
And shies, and starts, and the warning voice
Of mighty waters, and the warning voice
That speaks amid the tempest, and the notes
Of softer tones that float on evening winds—
All these have told him of a God who claims
The homage of the soul. And he has lived,
And viewed them in their glory as they stood
The workmanship of God; and there has breathed
A sigh from his breast, a sigh that said:
"Thou art a God, and I am but a man."
With looks of angel sweetness, and of power Unfading in its gleams forth—but wily
By that graphic mercy still he stands,
Cold and unfeeling as the rock that braves
The ocean billows; still he never prays!

He never prays! A lonely wanderer cast
On life's wild thorny desert, wringing
His heedless steps through many a secret snare,
And many a danger. Darkness closes round
His dubious path, save here and there a ray
That glimmers through the gloom; but still he seems
From some bewilder'd meteor of the night
To seek for guidance and direction still.

He never prays—
Earth's many voices send their songs
Of grateful praise up to the throne,
At the Eternal—morning, noon, and night,
On every side around him, swell the notes
Of adoration, gratitude, and joy!
The lake, the grove, the valley, and the hill,
Swell the loud chorus—and some happy hearts,
Redeemed from error and restored to peace,
Ambient communion with the Holy One,
Join in the glad, the humble, blissful strains;
But still—he never prays!

When evening spreads
Her solemn shades around him, and the world
Grows dim upon his eye, and many stars
Scattered in glory o'er the vault of heaven,
Call on the spirit to retire a while
From earth and its low vanities, and seek
The high and holy and intercourse with God
Vouchsafed to mortals here—he never prays!

When morning kindles to the eastern sky,
With all its radiant glory, and the sun
Comes up in majesty, and o'er the earth
Wakes all her active tribes to busy life,
And breaks the death-like solitude that reigned Erewhile o'er Nature's face; when on his eye
Earth smiles in beauty, health, the lucid ray,
And feathered songsters pour their strains of joy
Upon his ear; still not a note of praise
Or humble prayer arises from his lips.
More after morn returns in all its sweet
And peaceful loveliness, and oft invites His spirit to commune with God; but still
He prays not—the prayer—he never prays.

Short is the dream of life! Its days of care,
Its hours of pleasure, soon will pass away;
And on the wondering eye shall pour the broad Vociferous splendor of Eternity.
Oh, when the scenes of life have faded all Like morning visions, and my spirit stands
Before the Judgment Throne, and finds its deeds
And words and thoughts all registered in heaven,
Then may it not be found recorded there
Of one who never prays.

POPULATION.—New York State contains over 3,000,000 inhabitants. Pennsylvania comes next in point of population, containing 2,300,000.

From the N. Y. Herald.
Will the Cuba Question get through this Session?

Fallacy of the Debt Argument against its Purchase.

We learn from Washington that the Committee on Foreign Affairs intend to bring the subject of Cuba before the House early next week.

This may be the honest desire of the committee, and we have no doubt it is; but, from the turn things are taking in Congress, we suspect that the question whether this country desires to acquire Cuba will not be decided during the present session. The democrats are, no doubt, willing to let the subject slip by, and go into the next Presidential canvass; and the opposition, with that blind fatuity which has always led them to defeat, and always will, seem perfectly resigned to do all they can to assist their antagonists in this purpose. If this were not the case they would not waste their time in building up futile arguments to be overturned by themselves, as did Seward, and then putting the question off to discuss other subjects, all the while announcing that they are ready to meet it. Until the representative voice of the nation has spoken on this subject, the President will not be in a position to take any steps in a peaceable negotiation with Spain, and a dozen junctures might and may occur during the coming year, when, if Mr. Buchanan had the means at hand, he could carry the question to a successful issue.

Among the arguments brought forward against the proposed measure, none is so futile as the one that has been most frequently resorted to, which is that the purchase of Cuba will create an immense national debt. In the first place, this argument cannot be logically directed against the Thirty Millions bill, for that bill merely proposes the purchase of the island, and does not consummate it, and thus incur the debt. It is, therefore, nothing but a masked argument against the acquisition, and as such, we have no doubt Seward meant it, notwithstanding his self asserted belief that Cuba gravitates to the continent. In the second place, if the Spanish government will not sell Cuba, as is so loudly asserted by Spanish hidalgos and American black republicans, the passage of the Thirty Millions bill will not bring us into any debt at all. Then the mighty scheme of public debt which Seward so artfully built up in his speech on the Slidell report, and so cunningly knocked down by quoting and pretending to credit the speech of Calderon Collantes, vanishes into thin air. We have a shrewd suspicion that when Seward quoted against his own fabric of debt, the words of the hidalgo, he had a pretty vivid recollection of the heroics that were got off by some of his democratic compeers during the famous "fifty-four forty or fight" era. He had a twitching fear that the coon in the Spanish chestnut tree might come down if the thirty millions were brought to bear upon him. Having some such an idea ourselves, the debt question becomes worth examining. Let us see what it amounts to. We will take Seward's argument, for that piles on the agony highest. He tells us that the bill proposes to appropriate "now, at this time," thirty millions out of the treasury. It does no such thing. Whatever sum the bill may place at the disposition of the President when it is passed, it takes not one dime out of the treasury until the acquisition of the island is consummated. He then assumes that we buy the island at a cost perhaps of five hundred millions, which, with an exorbitant stretch of generosity, he is willing to cut down one half, and let us have the island for two hundred and fifty millions; and on this basis he builds up his calculation of an overwhelming national debt. We are not disposed to quarrel with Mr. Seward about the price of Cuba, provided we get it. But we may mention here that the highest equivalent the American government has ever contemplated, giving for Cuba is one hundred and thirty millions. The Havana Prensa, a journal, once high in the confidence of Gen. Concha, recently spoke of the island as being worth two hundred millions; and in the way of trade, taking Spanish debt in barter at its face, perhaps it is; but then we could buy the Spanish bonds, for the transaction, considerably under their nominal value. So we will even look at the debt argument at Seward's figure—say two hundred and fifty millions.

It is a curious fact in the study of the human mind, that we often find men reputed to have knowledge, talents, skill in their use, and all that, who, when blinded by passion, or wishing to blind others, will assert as truths statements which practice and experience have repeatedly proven to be fallacies. This is precisely the case with the argument against the purchase of territory because it will run us in debt. It was used by the federalists against the purchase of Louisiana and Florida. Yet it was the acquisition of those territories which gave to the industry and trade of this Union the great impulse that not only enabled it to pay off the cost of their purchase but the entire debt of the country besides. The very same thing occurred with California. The whigs, who had opposed the war with Mexico, because it created a debt, tried hard to strike California, and the fifteen millions paid for it, out of the treaty of peace. Yet it was the stimulus that California gave to every productive and speculative interest in the country that paid off the whole debt of the Mexican war long before its payment fell due. Seward knows these facts as well as any other man; and yet he can get up in his place in the Senate, and, ignoring them completely, bring forward against the acquisition of Cuba the old, worn out and refuted argument that it will plunge us irretrievably into debt.

We will look only at one other aspect of the argument. Let us suppose that we do not purchase the island. The first thing we have to do is to follow out the plan that we are now pursuing, and spend many millions in making Key West and the Tortugas first class naval stations and ports of refuge, as a counterpoise against Cuba. The next step is to bring forward and keep up a navy sufficient to maintain in our hands the control of the Gulf of Mexico and the Straits of Florida against Powers holding better strategic positions in those waters than we do; for a ninety days' blockade of the Gulf of Florida would break every bank, merchant and trader from the Alleghenys to the Rocky Mountains. This would cost us many more millions; and yet the amount would go on annually increasing with the increase of the danger. On the other hand, suppose we buy Cuba for two hundred and fifty millions of five per cent debt. The interest on that amount would be twelve and half millions of dollars; which does not exceed what will very soon be our annual outlay in building up Key West and the Tortugas, and maintaining our naval supremacy in the Gulf of Mexico. But if we incur this expenditure for the purchase of Cuba, we not only receive for our money the perpetuity of those highways of our commerce, in the strategic positions that command them, but we receive a tangible and productive value that will of itself soon pay off the debt incurred in its acquisition, just as Louisiana, Florida and California paid off theirs. More than this. We shall acquire a territory whose accession to the Union will revolutionize every branch of industry and trade in this country. A new and vast market will be opened for the meats and breadstuffs of our farmers, which does not now exist. A new impetus will be given to every branch of manufacturing. Natural commerce—a commerce of exchanges between different climates, soils and labor—a commerce that calls for no protective tariffs or barriers to guard the revenue, will spring up and give a new value to man's labor, and a cheaper supply to his wants, in every section of the Union. The stimulus this will give to trade and production everywhere will soon pay off the original cost of purchase, and leave us in a far more prosperous and stronger condition than we have ever before been.

A Modern Romance.

Not a thousand miles from the village of San Andres, there lived a young and beautiful widow upon whose classic features, peace, happiness and contentment were strikingly visible. Living comfortably in a snug little cottage, the proceeds of her honest toil, for the last two years with her two boys, bright, intelligent lads, one of five, the other of seven summers. She was just beginning to enjoy the fruits of her labor, when lo! the cup of bliss is suddenly dashed from her lips, her glorious anticipations of future happiness disappear like chaff before the wind, and she is driven from her once happy home almost a beggar.

Among the many who had paid homage at her shrine, was one, a native of Germany, who had the outside semblance of a man, but who in reality was nothing more nor less than a confused and tangled mass of flesh and blood thrown loosely together seemingly for no earthly purpose imaginable, unless it be for the express one of creating discords and taking undue advantages of the unprotected in a small way. Failing to make an impression upon the heart of the young widow even after having brought into requisition the following very persuasive sentences:—

"Mine dear!—You know I vos made for you, and you vos made for me. I cannot lives mitout you; Mine dear—I loves you so very much, dree time as more as mine own sister, and most so much as lager beer," our German friend procured the services of a lady acquaintance as intercessor. This female advocate by a combination of promises and threats succeeded but too well in producing the desired effect upon the susceptible heart of the young widow, who, by so doing, thinking perhaps to further the interests of her children, reluctantly consented so become the German's wife. The female advocate hastened to her employer to apprise him of her success and gloat over the ruin she was about to bring upon the head of the unsuspecting widow and her family.

Things being arranged to suit our German friend, that very evening was named as the one upon which the bridal ceremonies should be performed. Procuring a carriage about noon he proceeded to Mokelumne Hill with his intended bride, where they were soon joined in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The sequel is easily told: They returned the same evening from the Hill, and with the widow's hard earned cash

our liberal hearted German gave a champagne supper to all his friends. The honeymoon was of short duration for the third day after marriage this low-lived, grasping, avaricious wretch in sheep's clothing, on some pretext or other commenced a violent assault upon his new wife with his tongue, and she fearing worse was obliged to flee from the house with her children and seek refuge under a neighboring roof. Things passed on smoothly enough for the next three days during which time the German left nothing untried to come in possession of the widow's property which he would doubtless have done, had it not been for the providential interference of a third person, who learning the true state of affairs, immediately took steps to frustrate the deeply laid plan of this wily schemer.

Yesterday they separated, she to resume her needle and perhaps ere long to see herself in as good circumstances as ever, he to his seat in the "loafer's corner," a position he has held with great destruction to himself for many years. He takes with him a new suit of clothes and twenty-five dollars in cash, which the widow was obliged to give him before he would consent to make himself scarce.

The female advocate has not been seen in these parts, since the marriage; perhaps she may be on a professional visit to some other camp or perhaps she may have smelt a rat and left; who knows?—California paper.

AN ALLEGED VALUABLE DISCOVERY.—The San Francisco Herald gives the following description of what it terms a valuable discovery:

We were shown by Mons. Charles Thiery, a practical jeweler of this city, a discovery of his, which promises to become of very considerable importance. By a process known only to himself, Mons. Thiery is enabled to keep gold suspended in a natural state in quartz liquified by the action of heat, so that when it solidifies again from being exposed to cold, it presents a fac simile appearance with the natural gold bearing quartz. By this process, Mons. Thiery is enabled to manufacture vases, drinking vessels, snuff boxes, or any other article that may be desired, or that can be manufactured from glass, each article being as perfect a representation of the natural gold, bearing quartz as can be. The manufactured quartz is superior to the natural in a variety of ways. First, it can be infiltrated with as much or as little gold as may be desired. Second, it can be invested with any colors that may be needed. Third, it is harder, more perfect and susceptible of a greater polish than the natural gold bearing quartz. Fourth, it is free from checks or fractures, which abound in the natural quartz, and are carefully pasted up by the lapidary. Fifth, it is capable of being manufactured into a thousand articles of use and ornament that the natural quartz can never be. And sixth, its cost is only one-half that of the natural quartz, while its beauty excellence and applicability are far greater. The discovery of Mons. Thiery will undoubtedly become a great feature in California manufactures, and entirely gives us the control of other markets in the way of gold bearing quartz jewelry and articles of use and ornament.

The Senate Military Committee have under consideration the subject of the loss of the supply trains of Russell & Co., which were destroyed in Oct. 1857, by Mormons. They claim damages from the government. The committee are averse to the claim and will report against it.—N. Y. Herald.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, MARCH 22, 1859.

There is a rumor prevailing to a very large extent, that the regiment of 5th Infantry would be ordered to this city, and it has given rise to some excitement and much alarm among the women and children. Such we are authorized to say is not the fact, and no such thing is contemplated. In this connection we will add that we understand that agents were sent around to most all the houses in the city last night, advising them to prepare their arms for resistance. Now this is all nonsense and a false alarm. If the 5th Infantry were ordered to come into this city, they would come sure; and if anything of a hostile character should be forced upon them, the women and children would be timely warned, so that they could be removed, and then they would come in, u-bet. But the whole thing is simply ridiculous, and by this paragraph we have given more importance to it than it deserves.

A rumor predicated upon a paragraph in some of the California papers, that the President was going to remove Judge Sinclair, is going the rounds of this City, and the Saints are greatly elated thereat. They might as well save their joy, for we apprehend this "rumor" is only the silly conceit of some correspondent. It is true they would like very much to see both Judges, Sinclair and Cradlebaugh, removed, for they have been fearless in the discharge of their duty, and done all in their power to expose and bring to light the many dark and damning deeds that have been committed in this Territory, the perpetrators of which have gone unwhipped of justice. True, they have to a great extent failed, but the reason is well known. Sainly Grand Juries have ignored bills, and Juries composed of Saints, have refused to find verdicts. It is true, the United States courts are powerless, but that is no reason why the courts should not be here, their presence is required, if for no other reason than to assert the authority of the Government, as flags indicate the character of the Ship, that this Territory does not belong to "this people," but to the Republic, even though its laws cannot be executed.

We farther apprehend that Mr. Buchanan, and his cabinet, are not prepared to take any such step, for they have too much good sense and discretion, and know well that the consequences would be too unpopular a principle, that all Governments desire to avoid. It is not persons of the Judges in this Territory, that are involved, they represent a principle, and one of great importance, and peculiar interest to the people of the whole nation, and which if invaded, would soon be made manifest in every town and village in the Union, without destruction of party. We can assure our "brethren," that the Administration are not going to incorporate Mormonism into their policy, nor will the Democrat party endorse it, and if over they should become so crazy, we want to be counted out; why, even the Black Republicans, whose "plebeian, black, green, speckled and yellow" platform, takes in all the isms, wouldn't touch it with a forty-foot pole, so we would advise our dear "brethren," "not to hollow before they are out of the woods."

THE EASTERN MAIL—UNPRECEDENTED WEATHER.—The Eastern mail, due three weeks ago, came in on Sunday; there are two others of a later date, still due. They encountered a succession of storms and hard weather, unparalleled in the history of the plains and mountains. Most all the men became snow-blind, and had to lay down frequently in the snow for whole days, with nothing to eat but crackers.

We are informed by Mr. A. C. Ayers, the indefatigable Texas, that the trail which they would break with great difficulty only a few yards at a time would, if it did not fill up, freeze, forming a rough, icy edge, which would scratch and penetrate the legs of the mules, and make them bleed profusely. The poor animals would stagger on, and finally fall from exhaustion. Eight perished between Needle Rock and Bear River; and the men, those who could see, had to pack the mail on their backs. Some idea may be formed of the severity of the storm and the depth of the snow, when, as we are informed, they were two days in going two miles. Those who were blind were brought along by holding on to the tail of the mules, and most all the party were severely frost-bitten. At Weber they had to plunge into that raging stream; while in the valley they encountered that heavy snow-storm that swept over this city on Saturday. There is no doubt of it, that this has been the hardest winter ever experienced in the mountains.

Important Military Movement.

From a private letter from Camp Floyd, we learn that on yesterday, nine companies of Infantry, one of Dragoons, and two Sections of Artillery, left the Camp for Provo, where the U. S. Court is in Session.

We are not advised yet of any particular trouble, we know however, that considerable excitement has existed there, and that there was a great deal of feeling upon the part of the citizens, and Municipal authorities against the Military who were there, and rumor says that Judge Cradlebaugh had occasion to take the Mayor to task.

Its no use of talking, neither the Peace Commissioners, whose report has never yet been made public, nor that splendid Mormon, Col. Kane, who came in for a small share of Executive congratulation, to flatter themselves that this imbroglio is settled, in the language of Patrick Henry, they "may cry peace, peace, but there is no peace."

PERSONAL.—Major F. Dodge, the popular Indian agent in Carson Valley, who recently made this city a brief visit on official business, took his departure on Monday, in the California stage, for Carson Valley. Independent of our partiality for him as a gentleman, we are glad to learn that as an officer he is most efficient, and the press in the vicinity of his district are unanimous in his praise.

CALIFORNIA MAIL.—The California mail, with a regularity that is almost astonishing, considering the severity of the winter, came in, "as its custom," inside of time.

Dr. Chorpensing, who stopped off at Ruby Valley the previous mail, came through with it. The Doctor contemplates making some important improvements on the line, in fixing stations, &c., by which the time will be much shortened. We hope the Dr. will not undertake to compete with telegraph time, for in that case he will be beaten.

On Thursday night there was a Ball at the Hall over Hockaday's Store, the place where the Assembly Soirees have been held during the winter. Early in the evening an attempt was made on the part of a lot of men to break in and "break up the ball," and two of them were promptly expelled from the door. They rallied, however, again, and the information was soon received up stairs, where, singular to relate, there was not half a dozen men armed, when we take into consideration that in this country everybody goes belted, even to the children, who swagger their daggers. Messengers however were soon dispatched, men ran to their rooms for their "artillery," and in less than ten minutes every man was a walking battery. The dance went on, every man having a "navy" or a "dragoon" swung to his side; and had a second attempt have been made there would have been a second Thermopylae defeat, and the assailing party would have "gone under" sure.

The Police deserve great credit for the promptness and efficiency with which they acted. Captains Cunningham and Sharp, with a posse were soon on the spot and they pitched right in and arrested several of the ringleaders and took them to the lock up, although they resisted to the very last, and drew their pistols in one instance upon both these officers. The next day several others were arrested and taken before the Mayor's Court, all of whom were fined in heavy sums.

MAD BULL.—One of these animals yesterday got loose in the streets, and wanted to kick up a muss generally; it attacked several men who had to run for their lives. A little girl, the daughter of Mr. James Wells, was also assailed, the animal pitching her clean over his head; we are glad to learn however, that she sustained no serious injury. The infuriated brute was finally corralled.

A strong North wind bringing with it a rain, prevailed all last night, carrying off with it most all the snow, but this afternoon it commenced sleeting, and another snow storm is now prevailing. In the language of Shakespeare, or the little "rum uns" that hollow at hats, we exclaim, what a climate.

The mail for the East left on Saturday, in the midst of a severe snow-storm. How they will get along remains to be seen. The mail that went out previous was eleven days going to Fort Bridger.

We acknowledge the receipt of valuable public documents from his excellency Governor Briggs, whose palatial residence is at Weber station, and who presides over the destinies of the province of Moroni.

We notice by the last Eastern Mail, that Gen. Burr and Tom Pitt had arrived at St. Joseph, in good health and condition.

HIGH WATER.—We would advise our friends on the Missouri river, and the merchants on the levee at St. Louis, to look out next spring for a big freshet, as the snow in the mountains is heavier than it was ever known before; and should there be a sudden break up, the tributaries on the Eastern slope of the mountains will be running out full, and there will be a big run on the banks of the Missouri, which will overrun the bottoms, should it thaw gradually. The Missouri river will be in good navigable condition throughout the entire season.

The Eastern mail that came in on Sunday was three days crossing the Rocky Ridge, and six days crossing the South Pass.

We understand that our old and respected friend, Abel Gilbert, Esq., has received quite an important commission, the nature of which has not yet been fully developed. His numerous friends will be gratified to learn that this sudden honor did not shock him in the least; that the ancient title of the G. R. I. O., so distinguished in the order of the sons of Malta, was received as complacently as if he never had any ambition.

George Merrick, a well known mail conductor, on the Eastern mail line, left yesterday with a relief party to meet and assist the back mails in.

HOMESTEAD BILL.—We are gratified to see that the lower House of Congress has finally passed a Homestead Bill. We are in favor of the principle of such bills to the extent of wishing that there might never again be offered for sale an acre of the public domain. The industrious farmer who will clear and cultivate a piece of wild land and raise on it a family of good citizens, as such a man will be sure to do, is not the party favored, when he has 100 acres of land given him in consideration of such services. It is the country which gains by it. That class of men should not be sacrificed to speculators, who monopolize the land at public sales, or when open to private entry, and then holds it up for an excessive profit to be made out of the toil of the actual settler, who is often ruined by the necessity of buying at second hand.

We hope the Senate will concur with the House, and thus put a stop to the further spread of an enormous evil.

It is asserted that President Buchanan has the names of a number of influential members of the Spanish Cortez who favor the sale of Cuba. It is also said that the Pope of Rome favors the sale of Cuba; for the reason that the Church among us has a life and active vitality unknown in Spain or her colonies, which he believes would be infused into the Church in Cuba if that Island became an American State.

Major L. J. Beale, U. S. A., says the New York Tribune, who was lately on duty at San Antonio, Texas, has returned from that place, and will forthwith repair to St. Louis, in compliance with orders from the War Department.

Major Longstreet has reported for duty at Fort Leavenworth, where he will remain till further orders.

Below will be found a letter from Judge Cradlebaugh, in reference to his recent charge to the Grand Jury at Provo, by which it will be seen that he repudiates the report made of it in the Church Organ, and from which we copied it, being doubtful at the time of its correctness. The same organ, after obtaining Judge Sinclair's charge, which was in writing, they published it in a false form, and Judge Sinclair had occasion to denounce it from the bench.

We shall publish it as soon as it is written out in a correct form.

PROVO CITY, 17th March, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.,
Editor Valley Tan:

Sir:—I desire to state to the public through your columns, that something published in the "Deseret News" of the 16th inst., purporting to be a report of my Charge to the Grand Jury of this district, delivered here on the 8th inst., is incorrect.

At my earliest convenience I will furnish you, for publication in your paper, the substance of the charge. Upon that the public may rely, as embracing truthfully what I did say.

Very respectfully,
JOHN CRADLEBAUGH.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—In the House, February 3rd, on motion of Mr. Reagan, (adm.) of Texas, it was resolved that the Committee on the Judiciary be instructed to inquire into the expediency of reporting a bill to define and provide for the punishment of polygamy in the Territories of the United States, and restrain the people and authorities therein from interference with the Federal judiciary.

Second Judicial District Court.

Provo, March 14, 1859.

Court met at 10 o'clock a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present as before.
Clerk read the record of the proceedings on Saturday.

L. J. Nutal applied for naturalization papers, which were granted, and the oath of allegiance administered to him.

The case of Mose and Looking Glass, was called and postponed till to-morrow.

Quite a number of witnesses were called and sworn, to testify before the Grand Jury.

Court then took a recess.

4 p. m.

Session resumed, to receive the report of the Grand Jury, and then adjourned to 10 a. m., to-morrow.

March 15.

Court met at 10 a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present as before.

Clerk read records of proceedings yesterday.

Court relieved the Traverse Jury, from further attendance on the Court, till Monday the 21st.

A large number of persons applied, and received their naturalization papers.

Court then took a recess.

2 p. m.

Court resumed its Session, and after naturalizing a number of persons, adjourned to meet at 10 a. m., to-morrow.

March 16.

Court met at 10 a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present as before.

Clerk read the proceedings of yesterday.

After a call for motions, and there being none, the Court took a recess.

3 p. m.

Court resumed its session.

A number of persons applied for naturalization papers.

Court adjourned to meet at 10 a. m., to-morrow.

March 17.

Court met at 10 a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present as before.

Clerk read records of proceedings yesterday.

Mr. Minor, filed a petition to enjoin an execution against E. D. Jones, on a judgment rendered in the 3rd Judicial District.

Court over-ruled the petition.

Mr. Minor, presented the application of several persons for naturalization.

By permission of the Court, T. S. Williams, has been engaged for the last three days, interrogating such applicants, and their witnesses, touching their conduct towards the United States troops, and other citizens during the rebellion, but thus far no facts calculated to criminate any one, have been elicited.

It is truly astonishing to witness with what facility any admissions on this point are evaded.

No indictments for the murder of the Parishes, Forbes, Jones, or the Mountain Meadow affair, have as yet been reported by the Grand Jury, and what that tribunal is driving at, is of course unknown.

It is rumored about this morning, that Mrs. Parish, has been bought off.

A second memorial by the Mayor and Common Council, has been presented to the Court, asking the removal of the troops, from the City; alleging their improper conduct, and the necessity of having to double the Police force, to prevent indignant citizens from destroying them, as a reason for this request.

Court took a recess.

3 p. m.

Court resumed its Session, but there being no business on the Docket, Court adjourned to meet at 10 a. m., to-morrow.

March 18.

Court met at 10 a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present as before.

Clerk read the record of proceedings yesterday.

Court, after requesting the Grand Jury to be brought into his presence, gave them further instructions as to the discharge of their duties, and then took a recess.

Three men, viz: B. K. Bullock, A. F. McDonald, and ———— Carnes, were arrested this evening, and placed under guard on the complaint of Mrs. E. L. Parish, for the murder of her husband and son. Mr. Bullock, however is at large on the responsibility of the Marshal. The circumstance of the arrest created some excitement, but all became quiet in a little time.

The Grand Jury have had the testimony of Mrs. Parish, her son, and several other persons before them for the last three days, but have been unable to make a presentment. The cause of this tedious delay is not yet understood, when even outside testimony is strong enough to force conviction upon the mind of almost any one.

The Court has placed writs in the hands of the Marshal, for the arrest of others who are implicated in this atrocious crime. But as yet they have not been found.

The Court has no doubt become impatient with the dilatory action of the Grand Jury, and has resolved to take these initiatory steps, hoping that it may arouse them to a sense of their duties.

This will no doubt form a pretext for charging the Court with an inordinate desire to inflict punishment; they have already admonished him in one of their petitions for the removal of the troops, that Caesar became a tyrant, and perhaps he may reasonable expect to be next informed that, this same Caesar had his Brutus. But what does this signify? neither the blood of Caesar, nor the life of Brutus, could restore the virtue of the Republic.

U. T.

In a pamphlet we have before us, some writer illustrates the "domestic" system of this Territory, and quotes from a sermon delivered by Brigham Young, reported in the Deseret News of October 1, 1856. By a perusal of it, it will be seen that it is particularly directed to the sisters:—

He states, in effect, that his ears have grown weary with the continued complaints and lamentations of the women of the Territory, as well as of the complaints of their husbands, at the outrage of feeling indicted and endured by this very peculiar institution, polygamy, that we are informed, brings such contentment; and by way of freeing himself from these importunities, he proposes to release all such as may desire it, on the 8th day of October, next ensuing, his own wives included. I will, however, read you the extract:—

"Now for my proposition; it is more particularly for my sisters, as it is frequently happening that women say that they are unhappy. Men will say, 'My wife, though a most excellent woman, has not seen a happy day since I took my second wife.' 'No, not a happy day for a year,' says one; and another has not seen a happy day for five years. It is said that women are tied down and abused: that they are misused and have not the liberty they ought to have; that many of them are wading through a perfect flood of tears, because of the conduct of some men, together with their own folly.

"I wish my own women to understand that what I am going to say is for them as well as others, and I want those who are here to tell their sisters; yes, all the women of this community, and write it back to the States, and do as you please with it. I am going to give you from this time to the 8th day of October next, for reflection, that you may determine whether you wish to stay with your husbands or not, and then I am going to set every woman at liberty and say to them, 'Now go your way, my women with the rest, go your way. And my wives have got to do one of two things; either round up their shoulders to endure the afflictions of this world and live their religion, or they may leave, for I will not have them about me. I will go into heaven alone, rather than have scratching and fighting around me. I will set all at liberty.' 'What, first wife too?' Yes, I will liberate you all.

"I know what my women will say; they will say, 'You can have as many women as you please, Brigham.' But I want to go somewhere and do something to get rid of the whiners; I do not want them to receive a part of the truth and spurn the rest out of doors.

"I wish my women, and br. Kimball's and br. Grant's to leave, and every woman in this Territory, or say in their hearts that they will embrace the gospel—the whole of it. Tell the Gentiles that I will free every woman in this Territory at our next conference. 'What, the first wife, too?' Yes, there shall be not one held in bondage, all shall be set free. And then let the father be the head of the family, the master of his own household; and let him treat them as an angel would treat them; and let the wives and the children say amen to what he says, and be subject to his dictates, instead of their dictating the man, instead of their trying to govern him.

"No doubt some are thinking, 'I wish br. Brigham would say what would become of the children.' I will tell you what my feelings are; I will let my wives take the children, and I have property enough to support them, and can educate them and then give them a good fortune, and I can take a fresh start.

"I do not desire to keep a particle of my property, except enough to protect me from a state of nudity. And I would say, Wives, you are welcome to the children, only do not teach them iniquity; for if you do, I will send an elder, or come myself, to teach them the gospel. You teach them life and salvation, or I will send elders to instruct them.

"Let every man thus treat his wives, keeping raiment enough to clothe his body; and say to your wives, 'Take all that I have and be set at liberty; but if you stay with me you shall comply with the law of God, and that too without any murmuring and whining. You must fulfil the law of God in every respect, and round up your shoulders to walk up to the mark without any grunting.'

"Now recollect that two weeks from to-morrow I am going to set you at liberty. But the first wife will say, 'It is hard, for I have lived with my husband twenty years, or thirty, and have raised a family of children for him, and it is a great trial to me for him to have more women;' then I say it is

[For the "Valley Tan,"
LimesWritten on the burial of Sergeant Henry C.
Tucker, of Company I, 5th Infantry, who died at Camp Floyd, U. T., March 3, 1859.

He has gone to his home—he sleeps 'neath
the sod,
In a vale, in the wilds of the west;
He has gone to his home—his soul's with his God,
And his body, though cold, is at rest.
And never again his form we'll behold,
The form of the soldier so brave;
We laid him down sadly, in death, icy cold,
In the darkness and gloom of the grave.

The reveille loudly is beat on the drum,
He hears not, he hears not, alarms;
No more at the sound of the bugle he'll come,
When it summons each soldier to arms.
But lonely he's sleeping beneath the cold ground,
Far, far from the friends he loved dear,
Beneath yonder lonely and grassless mound;
That each comrade has met with a tear.

Farewell, dear, dear comrade, we deeply regret
The loss of a friend kind and brave;
But the friends that you loved, will never forget
Thee, though thou art cold in thy grave.
Thy life, it was brief, like a flower in its bloom,
When frosty winds pierce its heart's core;
You withered and died, and you sleep in the tomb,
And, alas! we shall ne'er see thee more.
R. C. W.

Military Movements.

A correspondent of the Los Angeles
Vineyard, writing from Fort Yuma,
Feb. 15th, says:

On the 8th, Lieut. R. B. Ayres, 3rd artillery, left for the valley known as the Cuchano or Lower Mojave Valley, about seventy miles up the Colorado.
His duty is to establish an entrepot of stores for the use of Colonel Hoffman's command. He is accompanied by Lieutenants De Hart (as Quartermaster) and Tipton. Everybody here thinks that the eastern side of the Colorado would be the best for a line of operation, but an order from Department Head Quarters has settled all that, so that the command, consisting of Captain Burton's Company F, third artillery, has gone up the west bank to establish the depot. Lieutenant Ayres counts about eighty bayonets. Capt. Burton is expected in a few days, when it is supposed he will join his company. Lt.
Tipton returns with the pack trains as soon as the stores are delivered at the entrepot. He then takes charge of two mountain howitzers, which are to go up with Col. Hoffman's command on its arrival. Transportation at this post is reduced to 0.

On the 12th, we received news that the Overland Mail station up the Gila had been robbed of cattle, horses, etc.; in fact, stripped of chattels, by Jose Ma-ria's Cuchano Band. The Indian Agent here, Maj. Hentzleman, made application that the Indians be whipped. It is not known what Col. Nauman will do in the case. Certain it is, however, that he cannot move his transportation being all gone, and none to be hired. The general feeling is that the Yumas want chastisement. From their alliance with the Mojaves, they are very bold, and it is generally considered that the mail station robbery is a "throwing down the gauntlet." Everybody wishes it taken up, but the commanding officer, I suppose, will be the best judge of the necessity and of his resources. If the grand and effective Commissariat of our Government could only afford to keep a decent amount of transportation at the post, there can be but one way of answering the question, and that is for the dignity of the American people, and for the reputation of our army, whip the ruffians.

We expect the arrival of the Uncle Sam at the mouth of the Colorado about the 20th inst. If she cannot be got into the river, it will cause much trouble to lighten her with our present steamboats.
Capt. Wilson is down at the mouth superintending repairs on the Colorado, and sounding the river to discover a channel for the Uncle Sam.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.—At the conference of Gens. Scott and Twigg, in regard to the future disposition of the United States troops in Texas, we learn the following change was agreed upon:

The majority of the infantry companies are to be concentrated at Camp

Cooper, and the remainder of this arm to be scattered along the El Paso mail route, for the protection of the mails and passengers, as well as the numerous trains that pass in that way to Chihuahua and New Mexico.

The cavalry now in this department, and three or four more companies of that arm, which are to be placed under Gen.
Twigg's command, will be kept in the field, on the headwaters of the Red, Quachita and Canadian rivers, to thoroughly scout all our northwestern frontier, and prevent, if possible, any more forays into Texas of the Comanches or their allies.

MILITARY ARDOR OF THE IRISH.—
Extract of a letter from Ireland to the Boston Post:

We are still soldiers. Every bayonet and firelock from the Pyrenees to Gibraltar, is under the command of an Irishman, named O'Monnel. Every bayonet and firelock, from the Mediterranean to the range of Mount Atlas, is under the command of an Irishman named Patrick McMahon. This is entirely in spite of England, and owing, as I am persuaded, not only to the merits of the Irishmen, but likewise to the generous sympathy of Napoleon III., with the unpermitted misfortune of Ireland. A rumor is circulated that orders have been transmitted from the Emperor to Gen. McMahon for immediate concentration of all the troops in Algeria, preparatory to a campaign in Morocco. Should McMahon become master of Morocco, the two coasts of the Mediterranean, and all the forces they contain, will be under the command of two Irishmen, who might readily unite their armies and ships for the invasion of Ireland. Thus the Emperor may checkmate the English, not merely, at Cherberg, but in Morocco and Spain.—
He himself may invade England from France; McMahon and O'Donnell may invade Ireland from another direction.

A REGIMENT OF BRITISH TROOPS IN NEW YORK.—The New York Sun of the 5th February, says:

A novel sight will be witnessed here, it is probable, during the course of the present week—a sight which only those whose memory reverts to the days of Washington, can remember, viz: the disembarkation of a regiment of British soldiers. The 42nd Highlanders are expected here in two transports, on its way to Victoria, V. I., via Panama.
The kits of the regiment have arrived,
and are in bond at the Custom House.
As the steamer bringing the corps will require several days for taking in coal, &c., the regiment will, in all probability, be invited to parade, when our citizen soldiers will be able to exhibit their discipline and training side by side with "regulars."

U. S. OFFICERS MURDERED BY INDI-ANS.—A private letter from a resident in Tucson, received in this city by the Overland Mail of Thursday, mentions that two sergeants of the U. S. Army, were recently murdered by the Apache Indians, while on their way from Fort Buchanan to the San Pedro river. The same letter states that the Apaches were running off the stock, and committing all sorts of depredations within sight of Fort Buchanan.—National,
(California.)

MISSOURI RAILROADS.—A St. Louis correspondent of the National says:—

The Southwest Branch Road is finished to a point only fifty miles from St.
Louis, but possesses in the 1,100,000 acres of land, granted it by Congress, the basis on which to borrow funds sufficient to complete it to the border of the Indian Territory. If it were completed to that point now, a President's Message might be sent through from this city to San Francisco in twelve days, provided the messenger carrying it should make as good time as the stage conveying Mr. Buchanan's message between El Paso and San Francisco.—
The worst portion of the overland route is that lying between Tipton on the Pacific Railroad, in this State, to a point about three hundred miles from Fort Smith; and when that division shall have been improved and shortened, as it is possible to improve and to shorten it, the Overland Mail will be faster, by two or three days, even than the Tehuantepec route.

By the above estimate, if the message is carried by the Stockton route instead of the Butterfield route, the time can be made in ten days.

[From the Missouri Republican, Feb. 6.]
The Great Land Mails of the West.

Some weeks since, the Post Master at this place, furnished to the Merchants' Exchange, and also to the Mechanics' and Manufacturer's Exchange, a neatly got up map of the entire country, from the Ohio river on the East, to the Pacific Ocean on the West, and from the United States Northern boundary of 49 deg., South latitude 24 deg., embracing of course all Northern Mexico.
This map is known as the General Map of the Mexican Boundary Survey, and is compiled by Major Emory, the United States Commissioner.

On this map, the Post Office Department at Washington, has had laid down all the principal routes, both in operation and proposed, for carrying the United States mails between the Atlantic and Pacific.

We shall briefly describe these routes,
beginning at the North:

1st. From St. Paul or Fort Snelling, up the Mississippi to Saint Rapids; thence West by North to Moose river, a branch off the Red river of the North; thence west to Fort Union at the mouth of the Yellow Stone; thence along Milk river to Fort Benton; thence to the Blackfoot fork of Bitter Root river of the Columbia; thence to the great forks of the Columbia, where this route unites with the route from Great Salt Lake, after which union they pursue their course down the Columbia to Fort Vancouver, where they again fork, and branch north to Astoria and Olympia, and the other south to Corvallis and Albany. We are not informed of all this mail route being as yet in operation.
On the map is shown also its Eastern connections, by Presto, to La Crosse and Fort Winnebago, to Milwaukee and Chicago.

Mail route No. 2 starts from St. Joseph, Mo., thence to Fort Kearny, thence up the South Platte, until it reaches a point opposite Fort Grattan, thence along the North Platte to Fort Laramie, and until it strikes the Sweet Water, whence it skirts around the south-eastern point of the Wind River Mountains to Fort Bridger, and to Great Salt Lake City. Here the line forks, one going off north, as we have stated under route No. 1, feeling on to the Lewis fork of the Columbia, near Fort Hall, and pursuing its route down the Columbia to its intersection with route No. 1. The other branch, or rather the main route, after leaving Great Salt Lake City strikes west to the Humboldt, which it follows through the mountains, until it falls on to the Sacramento river, thence by Placerville and Sacramento to San Francisco. This mail has for some time been in operation, and is a great public convenience.

Its Eastern connections, as laid down on the map, are from St. Joseph East via Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad to Hannibal, and by North Missouri Railroad to St. Louis, and from Dubuque, Iowa, via Fort Des Moines and old Fort Calhoun to Fort Kearny.

Route No. 3 is from Independence,
Mo., West by Fort Atchinson to Santa Fe, New Mexico. This line has also been put into operation and is very regular; its Eastern connections are from Independence by stage and Missouri river to Tipton and Pacific Railroad to St.
Louis.

Route No. 4 is from Springfield, Mo., to Neosho, thence West up the Canadian river to San Antonio and Albuquerque, thence West via Zuni and Rio Puerco to Chiquota and Rio Colorado, thence to the Mojave river to Fort Tejon, where it intersects route No. 4, St. Louis and Memphis to San Francisco. From Albuquerque, a short route connects route 3 and 4 to Santa Fe, and from Springfield, Missouri, the Eastern connection is by stage to Tipton and Pacific Railroad to St. Louis.

Route No. 5 is known as the Great Overland Mail Route to the Pacific, and from its regularity, and the time in which the trips are performed, as also the distance traveled, may be regarded as the most successful stage enterprise of this wonderful age. This route leaves
St. Louis and Memphis twice each week.
The routes unite at Fort Smith, thence Southwest, it crosses Red River near Preston, thence to Fort Belknap, Fort Chadburne, to the crossing of the Concho river, thence to the Rio Pecos, thence to El Paso, thence up the Rio Grande to Fort Fillmore and Mesilla, and thence West to Fort Buchanan, thence along the Rio Gila to Fort Yuma, thence to Los Angeles by Fort Tejon to Yuisago;

Santa Cruz and San Jose, to San Francisco.

The connections of this route are, coming East, first, from El Paso by San Ignacio to Fort Davis, thence to Camp Lancaster, thence by Fort Clarke and Fort Inge to San Antonio, where it forks, one going to Indianola, on the Gulf, and the other by Gonzales, San Felipe and Houston to Galveston. The next is from Fort Smith eastward by Little Rock to Memphis, and from Fort Smith northward by Springfield to Tipton and St.
Louis.

These are the great routes laid down on this map. The connection of New Orleans with Galveston and Indianola; Texas, is also shown, also the route by water from New Orleans via Tehuantepec to San Francisco.

On the whole, this map shows a most judicious distribution of mail facilities to accommodate the present and future wants of this great interior region, and too much praise cannot be accorded to the present able head of the department, who has put these routes into operation.

[From the Rochester American, February 1st.]

A Boy Carried over Niagara Falls.

We learn from the railroad men that an adopted son of Mr. Gibbs, foreman in the Niagara Falls Paper Mill, was taken over the Cataract on Saturday afternoon last. The victim was a promising little boy about 11 years of age, and a general favorite with all who knew him.

The Niagara Falls Paper Mill is situated on Bath Island, between Goat Island and the main land, and the machinery is driven by water power.

On Saturday afternoon a number of men were engaged in clearing away the ice which obstructed the flow of water in the race, and Mr. Gibbs's boy was playing about the vicinity. In one place the race is spanned by a narrow foot-bridge of plank, destitute of a railing or other protection on either side, and somehow in crossing this, he lost his balance and fell into the water. The current was very strong, and in an instant the child was carried out through the bulkhead, at the tail end of the race, and precipitated some ten feet into the foaming flood a short distance above the bridge connecting the two islands.

The rapids were full of floating blocks of ice, and mingled with these the poor little fellow was carried down the stream. Help could not be afforded, and the horrified spectators watched him till he was lost to sight. He was observed to raise his hand once, as if to remove something from his face, and that was all. The distance from the race to the falls cannot be much over fifty rods, and the fatal leap was not long delayed. It is not probable that any vestige will ever be discovered of the remains. The remorseless vortex beneath the falls seldom returns to land anything committed to its mysterious depths.

CONGO IDEA OF HOOFED SKIRTS.—
Some of the Wanderer's Africans are in Mississippi. The Vicksburg Sun,
says:

We do not think they are valuable, from the fact that we believe that no white man would like to oversee a set of such hideous, senseless looking creatures; besides, it would, in our opinion, be a great deal of trouble to keep them at work. They can ask for tobacco and whisky, and perhaps chew the former and drink the latter, but they can do nothing else. They knew nothing about the use of clothing, and would as soon place a pair of pants on their shoulders as their legs. One of them has formed a great fancy for umbrellas, and when a couple of young ladies approached him, dressed in the present extensive fashion, he flung down his hoe, and pursued one of them with all possible speed, and, as he came near her, he vigorously grabbed at the skirt of her dress, but, before he succeeded in getting hold of it, one of the attaches of the Mississippi Railroad succeeded in knocking him down. Mr. Montague then took him in charge and asked him in his own gibberish what he pursued the lady for, when he replied that she had an umbrella under dress, and he wanted it.

IMPERIAL FLATTERERS.—Napoleon's courtiers bedaub him with fulsome compliment. We suppose they use "plaster of Paris."

A pretty woman is like a great truth, and has no more right to bundle herself under a green veil, or any other abomination, than the sun has to put on green spectacles.

KIRK ANDERSON'S VALLEY TANNER

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MARCH 29, 1859.

NUMBER 2.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

The Natchez Courier reprints the following ode which first appeared some thirty years since in the "Escutcheon," a magazine of Albany, New York:

MASONIC BROTHERHOOD.

I saw a band of brothers move,
With slow and solemn tread;
Their hearts are joined in ties of love,
In charity were wed;
And types of light illumed the ray,
Shone on the chastening rod,
And in the midst, wide open lay
The gospel of our God.

I asked a man of four score years
Why after them he ran;
He said—and melted into tears—
They feed the poor old man;
He said, I once was sick and sad,
My limbs were racked with pain;
They came, they comforted and clad;
The old man rose again.

I asked a weeping widow why
She followed those before;
She said—and wiped her weeping eyes—
They came unto my door;
They came when all the world beside
Had turned from me and fled—
They came my wants and woes to hide;
They gave my children bread.

I asked an orphan boy why he
His eager footsteps bends;
He said, they smile on all like me,
They were my father's friends;
Before he died they clothed and fed,
And all our gifts they gave,
And when we wept for father dead,
They threw gifts in his grave.

And such, I said, are Masons all,
Friends to the needy poor;
They never view a brother's fall,
They never shun his door.
And though 'tis said they are not "Free," Virtue and love are twins,
And the best grace of Charity
Hides multitudes of sins.

They worship in the Lodge of God,
Secret and solemn there;
They bow beneath his sacred rod,
And breathe a heartfelt prayer.
Free Masonry, like woman's love,
Is taught by private rules,
So deep, that should it public prove,
It would be sport for fools.

Story of the Girl Who Was Burned to Death in Cincinnati.

HER SECOND BURIAL.

We never read a story more sad than that of Josephine Ellison. A few months ago, she was a beautiful, lovely girl, the pet of an honorable family in a Missouri village. A wretch seduced her, and persuaded her to elope with him to Cincinnati, where he soon deserted her. After vainly seeking other modes of life, she entered a house of sin. But her soul revolted at the Memphis darkness of such a life. She was too disconsolate to please her visitors, too cheerless to make friends with her heartless companions. At length, last week, she unburdened her heart to one of the inmates of the house, who sympathized with her. By her advice, she resolved to return to her deserted home, bow for repentance before her outraged parents, and atone by a life of merit for months of shame. An omnibus driver was directed to call for her, and her trunk left at the office. That night the house took fire from a heater in the cellar. All the inmates escaped but one. In the morning the firemen took from the ruins the charred body of Josephine Ellison. Just as she was being borne away, an omnibus was driven up, with her neatly lettered trunk on board—but the contemplated passenger had taken another journey. Josephine was buried in the city lot. An itinerant minister performed the services. Four professed followers of that Jesus who said to the weeping Magdalen, "Woman, thy sins are forgiven thee," were asked to do it, but refused. They felt, "I am holier than thou art." The night after the burial the police caught three men coming from the graveyard, carrying a heavy bag, and pursued them. They dropped the bag and ran. On being taken to the office of the Mayor, it was found to contain the blackened remains of the lost pariah, to whom even in death repose was denied. The resurrectionists were arrested.

Several of the frail sisters of the unfortunate girl, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, having determined, as has been stated to bury the poor girl the second time, the Rev. G. T. Flanders, of the first Universalist church, in a true Christian spirit offered to preach the funeral service, which took place at that edifice on Plum street. Although no public notice had been given of the event, the church was nearly full before the appointed time, and when the hour arrived it was difficult to obtain a seat. The company, as may be supposed, was miscellaneous and singular in its character—composed of true Christians and women, idlers, courtesans, gamblers, gentlemen profligates and philanthropists, all deeply impressed with the solemnity of the occasion. To judge of the service by a hurried glance, a stranger might have thought it a fashionable wedding, perhaps, as he perceived carriage after carriage drove up and delivered their elegantly dressed inmates in front of the edifice. Observation, however, discovered by the sad faces and the sorrowing eyes that it was no occasion of joy. The Rev. Mr. Flanders' sermon was elegant and touching, from its simple truthfulness, and sank into every heart. God, he said, was all love; that he had destined every human creature for Heaven, and none had reason to despair. He alluded to the antecedents of the poor girl, and to the miserable life she must have led since her false step had brought ineffable affliction to her soul. As he spoke many persons wept, and we saw strong men bend their heads to hide the starting tears; while the poor women, to whom his words were alive with truth, sobbed like children. We have rarely witnessed a more impressive scene. All appeared to be held in sympathy, and the erring daughters of shame to be re-created for the time, and to have repented of their sins. Their hearts were purified, doubtless, in that hour, and the tablets of their souls washed clean with atoning grief. Alas! if some good angel could have held them in this mood, and spoken in a voice not to be disobeyed: "Go back no more!" Those women, doomed to a life of misery and reckless gaiety, were a spectacle and study, as their tears ran through their delicately-gloved and richly-jeweled fingers, and their breasts heaved with the first genuine and sacred emotions they had known for months, it may be for years. Some of them were gaily attired, and their cheeks blazed with rouge, and some looked sin steeped and hardened; but the most of them were plainly attired, and their features bore the subdued expression that sorrow ever yields. A number were young and very handsome, and he who had been ignorant of their profession would not have dreamed of their frailty. The coffin, of solid rosewood, with silver mountings, was exposed near the altar, and the undertaker removed the lid, that those who wished might gaze upon the dead. Many of the vulgarly curious rushed forward, but the lozettes moved not. They only wept the more, and in a few moments followed the corpse silently and with new gushing tears. The coffin was placed in the splendid hearse and as the inanimate clay of another Marie du Plessis moved forward to its second tomb, the crowd stared for a minute and separated. The sexton closed the doors of the church. The sun looked down brightly upon the cortege, and even upon the coffin of the poor girl—betrayed, burned, dead, buried and exhumed—and the funeral of the poor lozette was over.

From the Sandwich Islands.

THE VOLCANO OF "MAUNA LOA."

The correspondent of the Commercial Advertiser, whose account was published in the NATIONAL of yesterday, writes from Kailua under date of the 4th:

About three o'clock, a.m., we started to visit the new stream which had been rushing down during the night, and was glowing with intense heat. It moved slowly over the plain near our camp. On reaching it, we would stand by a small tree one hundred feet distant, and as it advanced, retreat before it. In fifteen minutes the tree was reached, and the spot where it was covered by the irresistible stream. Once, while standing on a rock with several others, perhaps two hundred feet from the stream, a loud ringing noise was heard as if the rock had been struck by an immense sledge hammer. We started, not knowing but Pelé was under and after us, but soon found our alarm groundless, though the noise was probably caused by the liquid lava running under the ground and suddenly filling up a cave beneath us. A little after a singular scene presented itself the appearance of a man sitting on a rock and riding along on the top of the fiery lava stream. So deceptive was this illusion that several of the party, when it was first observed, looked around to see if one of their number had not by accident got on to the stream. The life-like image moved slowly along, till suddenly his head tumbled off, and the whole image soon disappeared.

The tract over which the lava is now flowing is a barren waste, uninhabited, except by wild hogs. Formerly wild cattle roamed over it, but they have been driven to the side of Mauna Kea, which furnishes better food. We are not aware that any valuable land has been overrun, except it be near the village of Wainanali, where the stream entered the sea.

A second crater is said to have been in action for a short time at the commencement of the eruption, about a half a mile above the present one; but when this broke out, the upper ceased, and now sends out only a column of smoke. It is not impossible to get up to these craters, and had our party been better provided for it, some of them would have attempted it. As it was, we were reluctant to leave without it. The beauty of the eruption, as well as the fine panoramic view obtained of the whole plain through which the stream flows, will amply repay the extra exertions required in the ascent.

A Lady residing in Honolulu writes to a friend in Sacramento as follows:

This is the time of times for you to be here. If you like adventure, you should have gone with a party of twenty-three that started last Tuesday, the 1st, for the volcano. It has burst out again, and, according to all reports, the eruption is one of the most terrible known. The exact locality of the new crater is not yet determined, and some think there are several streams of lava flowing down the mountain in different directions. We shall know all about it when Willie comes back. The college has been closed, and the Rev. Professors and most of the students have joined the exploring party to invade the domains of the Goddess Pelé (pronounced Pale—a as in fate.) Now I wish you could have gone. These eruptions are awfully grand—beyond any description. Imagine a vast column of fire, thirty or forty feet in diameter and a thousand feet high, rising from the side of the mountain and falling down over in stream and flowing slowly, carrying everything before it—destroying beautiful forests and filling immense gulches, quenching streams or turning the water to a boiling heat. Such are these mighty streams of molten lava, and the lava as it is thrown by the volcanic action is carried by the wind for fifty miles, and scattered all over the country in the form of spung glass—Pelé's hair, as it is called, which the angry goddess tears in her wrath.

The Indian Campaign in the North.

We find the following in the Northern Californian of the 23d ult.:

Captain Messic is still encamped on Mudd river, with his company of volunteers, anxiously waiting the result of the effort which is being made to bring in the Indians, without more fighting.

Gen. Kibbe is actively endeavoring to induce the Indians to come in and accept a home on a reservation. The General paid a visit to the Hoopa Indians, and enlisted the services of several of the most influential among them. They were sent out to those known as "hostiles," to assure them that they should not be harmed, if they would comply with the above demand—i.e., join their friends at Mendocino. Could this be accomplished, there would be an end to the war. This result is much to be desired by every one interested in the prosperity of the country; and we are much surprised to learn from the General that he meets with opposition from some of the settlers—that his plans have been delayed by attempts to tamper with his Hoopa allies, and to poison them against him. We can conceive of no possible reason for an interference with the plans of the officers of the expedition, in their efforts to rid the country of the natives, and hope there will be no more of it.

Gen. Kibbe was in town yesterday, on his way to the lagoon north of Trinidad—where he hopes to meet some of the Redwood Indians.

The Social Tyrants of the World.

There are small as well as great tyrants in the world. There are oppressors in social life, not less than in political. It is not only the subjects of the Czar or the vassals of the Russian king, who turn pale at a frown and tremble when the anger of their master is aroused. In thousands of domestic circles, even in this free and enlightened land, the hearts of women and children turn chill at the footsteps of husbands or fathers whose misgoverned passions, intense selfishness, or brutal character, make tyrannies of the hearth-stone of home.

So common is this species of tyranny, indeed, that many are guilty of it who would not only resent the imputation, but sincerely believe themselves innocent. The uncontrolled authority which the master of a household enjoys, naturally tends to foster habits of self-will and imperiousness. It needs not only the restraining influence of the strongest affection, both as partner and as parent, but the constant remembrance of the old Greek's motto, "Know thyself," to avoid degenerating in this respect; and where these are neglected, neither education, nor refinement, nor wealth, nor position, nor official authority, is always sufficient to avert family tyranny. In some of our most splendid mansions, not less than in dirty cellars, is domestic oppression to be found. The wife of the millionaire is often not less oppressed than the help-mate of the beggar.

For it is not of physical tyranny that we speak, as much as of that which is keener and more subtle—of that which cuts to the soul—of that moral despotism which is exercised by harsh words, by cruel neglects, by unkind acts, by petty insults. Husbands go home and vent, upon unoffending wives, the irritation which the events of the day have produced. Would they dare to vent it on their partners' clerks, or customers who originated it? Fathers push innocent children angrily aside, or even strike them, because annoyed by their noise. Would they venture to lay hands on those who try their patience, a hundred times over, in the constantly recurring vexatious occurrences of the day? Too often the household is made to expiate all that the husband and father has had to endure abroad, till wife or children learn to watch for storm or sunshine on his face, with eager palpitating hearts. Too often the frown on the father's brow banishes the smile from the mother's lips, hushes the prattle of the little ones, and throws a gloom and constraint over the whole domestic circle. Oh! in how many homes, there reigns a silent, crushing tyranny of which the world knows nothing, which destroys everything like happiness there, and which pervades the moral atmosphere in which the children grow up, as miasma taints the air.

Hypothetically, every man is willing to admit that tyranny, thus exercised over the innocent and helpless, is as cowardly as it is cruel. Hypothetically, all will acknowledge that, to be a tyrant at home, makes a man, so far forth, as much the oppressor, as to crush a Poland or Hungary, or to herd slaves on the coast of Africa. But how few will concede, even to their own consciences, that they are themselves such despots. It is the curse of selfishness, more than of most other vices, that it conceals the sin from the sinner, and that the worse the man becomes, the less apt is he to see his error. There are tens of thousands of oppressed women and children, all the way from Maine to Texas, who have no one to speak for them, unless the hearts of the tyrants themselves could be softened. This, alas! would be almost a miracle.

A STRANGE FISH. — The Honolulu papers notice a very curious fish recently taken by some natives who were fishing for shrimps. It is of a dark color, about five inches long, two inches thick, and about four inches from the top of the fin on its back to the bottom of its belly. It has a remarkable large head, and four feet or claws, which enables it to creep on the sides of rocks with great ease. When placed in a stream of water it threw out quite a stream from under the fins on each side of its body, then took a circuit round the bucket by clinging to the sides and walking apparently with great pride. The feet resemble somewhat the paws of a bear. Wonder if the "sea-beast" is any relation to the sea-lion.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. & L. CITY, MARCH 29, 1859.

The Church Organ is very much exercised at the things in Provo, and particularly, at the bold and manly stand, taken by Judge Cradlebaugh. His remarks discharging the Grand Jury from farther service, and his answer to the Mayor of Provo, in relation to the presence of the troops, is pronounced to be "unprecedented," and this was deemed of such importance, as for them to get up an extra, but it did not show itself upon the streets for some reason or other.

The two articles above referred to we extract and give in another column. Several copies we understand were sent to the States, by Saturday's Mail, doubtless with a view of forestalling public opinion; they are well calculated to do so, but the capital they can make out of it.

Judge Cradlebaugh in his remarks releasing the Grand Jury, told some wholesome truths; he approached his subject too with no velvet tongue, but with all the force and power of good old fashioned Saxon.

We re-iterate what we have before asserted, and the proceedings at Provo confirms it, that the Federal Courts in this Territory are powerless, let this go to the States, aye, to the authorities at Washington, for it is true to the very letter, and it can be shown, not only by the declarations of all the civil officers of the Government, but by testimony of hundreds besides; we will abide the issue in this attempt of "this people," to bring the Federal Courts not only into contempt here, but in the States, if a bold and fearless discharge of a sworn duty, is to be the subject of complaint, let them make it, we know one thing, that whenever either Judges Cradlebaugh and Sinclair go under, that moment a nail is put into the Coffin of the Administration, public sentiment will not tolerate it, but we apprehend no such result. Both the judges are prepared to take the responsibility, and if it should be deemed necessary vindicate their official action before the authorities at Washington, and the public at large.

We make these remarks, because it is notorious that there was a here, when Federal Judges were almost dragged from their seats and threatened with violence; things are changed now, and we ask why? It is the presence of those very troops, about whom they prate so loudly, that keeps them in restraint, otherwise, there would be no telling what would be the fate of Judges Cradlebaugh and Sinclair, although a shrewd guess could be made.

We put the question in all candor, throwing all prejudices aside, if this people are loyal as they profess to be, and have accepted the President's pardon, as they profess to have done, then why throw obstructions in the way of a faithful execution of the laws? Why not unite in an honest endeavor to bring to justice the numerous crimes that have been perpetrated in this Territory. Some of which are of the most revolting nature, as good citizens who desire the protection of life and property, and the punishment of offenders should do?

What is the secret? Is there a fear of the veil being lifted, and thus present to view a record that would startle the sensibilities of the whole Union? As Mark Anthony said, over the butchered remains of a dead Caesar, whose "gaping wounds," like "mouths," aroused the indignation of a Roman populace; "We pause for a reply,"—and we might add, we may pause in vain. The mystery is locked up, and the keys are held by a power, that defies the searching scrutiny of the Federal authorities.

Every day's experience convinces us of the fact, that the Theocracy that controls this Territory, and consequently the people, is as distinct and in feeling as far separated from the Union, as the province of Canada, their official declarations to the contrary notwithstanding.

A memorial, claiming to be from American citizens in Utah Territory, has been presented to the Governor, praying for the withdrawal of the troops now stationed at Provo, and requesting him to lay the subject before the proper departments at Washington. We do not undertake to answer for his Excellency, but we think that he is as much convinced as we are, that the civil and ministerial officers attendant upon the Federal Courts are as powerless as the courts themselves. What is the army here for but to aid the civil authorities in the execution of their delicate and, so far, fruitless labors? What has created the stampede in the neighborhood of Provo and some other parts? It is not the appearance of the troops we undertake to say, but there was a more potent reason than this; they saw in the person of Judge Cradlebaugh and his energetic movements a determination to rip open hidden crimes that have slumbered for years? Why so anxious to get away, and so repugnant to testify, when the bones of murdered men, women and children at the Mountain Meadows bleach the Valley, and their flesh fattened the wolves? If it was the Indians, as has been confidently asserted, or any body else, Mormon, Jew, or Gentile, humanity and justice demands the utmost rigors of the law that justice can administer. These are our sentiments; and all good citizens, no matter of what creed or persuasion, will join with us in the opinion that it is correct.

In the memorial sent to Gov. Cumming, professing to be signed by many "American citizens," for the removal of the troops, we are informed that the name of every woman and little child is attached, even the names of babies are put down, and there is no telling how many fictitious ones. As to American citizens, they have been naturalizing very fast, more than two hundred having taken out their papers, or declared their intentions. We are by no means a Know Nothing; but this prattle about "American citizens" is all fudge. No man who has been in this territory six months but knows that there is not one in ten but are foreigners, and have never taken the initiatory steps to become citizens. The authorities of the church and others exercising civil power, are composed of native born citizens, and this is a compliment to American energy and prowess; but out upon their almost universal and ostensible display of citizenship, it is all gammon.

We have received a letter from Provo, from which we extract the following:

"The Grand Jury were two weeks in session, and refused to present any bills.

The question came up before the Judge, as to the naturalization of foreigners who had borne arms against the Government in the late rebellion, upon which the Judge put in proof the fact of their bearing arms, and showed his determination to reject all applications of foreigners, for naturalization, who had borne arms against the Government, within the last three years; upon the point, that they had not shown themselves of good moral character, well disposed to the Government, and attached to the principles of the Constitution.

Several high officials have been charged with crimes, warrants issued; and they have fled to the mountains; among them the Bishop of Springville, and the President of the Stake in this Region.

The California Mail came in a long way inside of time. We have had but one Eastern Mail for four weeks. The storms we are informed continue to rage in the Mountains.

Since writing the above, two Eastern Mails arrived here on Sunday afternoon. They have been detained for more than nine days at the South Platte, which is breaking up and flooding out, also several days at Rocky Ridge and the South Pass, by snow storms. As we are going to Press in advance, we have not had time to examine our numerous exchanges.

The weather is the greatest flirt in this Territory, we ever came in contact with, not excepting our friends of the feminine gender. Saturday, after a long winter, was a balmy spring day, but the same night it snowed incessantly, and most of the day Sunday, with a fair prospect for another one.

We devote a large space to Provo matters, especially as our Courteous Contemporary goes in very extensively, and evinces a desire to "go in," and is exceedingly sensitive. "Let the galled jades wince our withers are unstrung."

PERSONAL.—Dr. Chorpennig, of the California Overland Mail line, has been paying our city a brief visit. The Doctor was welcomed by many old friends, and a-bet he was put through. He leaves to-morrow for California again, bearing with him the best wishes of all who made his acquaintance in Zion.

After McDonald, Kearns and Bullock were arrested and placed in custody of the military, the Sheriff of Utah county, Wm. M. Wall, Esq., as we are informed, told Judge Cradlebaugh that he could take charge of all prisoners accused of offences against the laws of this Territory. The Judge asked him if he had a sufficient jail. The Sheriff replied that he had, and that if his bonds were not sufficient, he could increase them to any amount that might be required. Judge Cradlebaugh replied that he would consult Judge Sinclair on that subject.

The prisoners being continued in the custody of the soldiery and not comfortably provided for requests were made to the court and to the U. S. marshal by their attorneys and others, that they might be taken to some place where they would be more comfortable, and the answer received was that "they could not be kept in any place excepting in camp." Some blankets and food were asked for, as the prisoners were in want of both. The U. S. marshal (Dotson) replied that they could have neither, "unless they furnished themselves."

If the circumstances above occurred as related, as there is little room for doubt, they certainly place the court and its officers in no enviable position.

The above extract appeared in the last "extra." We are authorized to say that it is untrue; the prisoners have been as well, and much better taken care of in the military power, than they could have been probably in this city, much less the splendid accommodations at Provo.

The Territorial Legislature have neglected to build jails, or even pay their own officers, doubtless considering the former an obsolete institution and crime a privileged matter, and the objection now comes with a bad grace. We are assured that the prisoners have been well provided for, and the above allegation is but another phase of the deception that has been practiced so long in this Territory, but it will not win.

Second Judicial District Court.

Provo, March 22, 1859.

Court met at 10 a. m., pursuant to adjournment.

Officers present as before.

Clerk read records of yesterday's proceedings.

The Court ordered the criminals who were confined in the custody of the guard, to be brought into his presence, and addressed them briefly in substance as follows:

The Court will take occasion to inform the prisoners that on yesterday it discharged the Grand and Traverse juries. The reasons which induced the Court to adopt this course, are, that it has been fully convinced that the community here, were endeavoring to use the Court for improper party purposes. That persons who were of their own party, though guilty of the most heinous crimes known to the laws, and to humanity, were protected, screened, and secreted from justice, while those who were not of their society, had no mercy nor justice to expect from them.

The Court regrets the necessity that has induced it to adopt its present course, and admits that justice demands that you should be tried and punished for those crimes of which you might be found guilty; but prisoners have rights as well as the public, and the Court is unwilling to permit itself to be prostituted to the vile purposes of insincerity. You are therefore discharged from custody.

The Court having on yesterday resolved itself into a Committee, proceeded to hear the testimony against A. F. McDonald and others, for the murder of the Parrishes and Potter.

Though strenuous efforts are doubtless being made to suppress the testimony in this case, strong evidences of its final development begin to manifest themselves, and discloses an almost incredible state of complicity in crime.

It is astonishing to think that an almost entire community could lend themselves as accessories to the perpetration of so horrid a deed.

We understand that there are about one thousand troops camped to-night in the vicinity of Provo. This unexpected movement is attributable I suppose, to the great anxiety manifested by the Mayor of this City, for fear his indignant citizens, might murder the small military posse that had been ordered here to take charge of prisoners, and the necessity to which he had been driven, of calling out an additional Police force of 200 men, in order to prevent the dire event.

The Court had no intention of taxing the good people of Provo, with the expense of keeping such an enormous Police on its account, and I have no doubt but the City authorities will be informed at an early opportunity, (if they have not been already,) that the Court is able to protect itself from the violence of lawless indignant citizens, and that their powerful Police is unnecessary, especially as they are known to be the most indignant of the crew.

We do not think that Court will remain in session many days longer, unless the testimony in the numerous cases of murder known to have been committed in the district, should become more accessible.

P. S.—Mose and Looking Glass, can scarcely realize the change. They are quite overjoyed at the idea of regaining their liberty.

U. T.

March 23.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

The testimony of several witnesses in the Parrish case was heard. Some new items are being gathered every day in relation to this matter, and new parties connected with it. The evidence, as it now stands, implicates persons high in authority in the church; and so far as others may have been concerned, they only acted the part of slaves, doing the will of their masters.

It now appears that Bishop Hancock, of Payson, Johnson, of Springville, and Pres. J. C. Snow, of this place, have acted a conspicuous part in these bloody tragedies. Several attempts have been made to arrest two of them; but they have managed to elude the vigilance of officers.

Warrants have been issued for several others who are implicated, but they cannot be found. The town of Springville has been quite destitute of its male inhabitants for the last few days. This, as every other circumstance, goes to prove their guilt. They even look guilty, and in the eyes of all honest men and women they must ever appear so. The most strenuous efforts have been made to suppress the testimony in these cases. The lives of witnesses have been threatened, and their property seized on some trifling pretext immediately after their testimony was given, and a degree of terrorism exercised, which can only be appreciated by those who feel it.

Judge Cradlebaugh is a sower of thorns in the side of Mormon chicanery and duplicity, and charges crime home upon those who are its real authors.

The Mormons appear disconcerted. They had hoped to make a pretty thing of it, by dilly dallying for two or three months at the expense of the general government, as they have done heretofore, charging large fees for services and supplies, guarding persons, &c.; but they have been disappointed in these expectations, the Court having no disposition to prostitute itself to the position of a gew-gaw for the amusement and profit of a horde of out-laws.

Perhaps the Modern Prophet may yet find it more difficult to establish his system of Buddhism upon this continent than he at first supposed; though, at the rate of human slaughter that has been practiced for the last two years, it is quite certain that it would not require many more years in which to sacrifice the entire population of the Territory, and yet we see no evidence of his having bettered the condition of his people.

The poor Indian is more temperate in his practices, for though they occasionally sacrifice their horses, and sometimes their prisoners, to appease the wrath of the Great Spirit on the occasion of the death of some favorite warrior, yet their conscience revolts at the wholesale butchery of their Mormon neighbors, over whom the delicate sentiment of conscience seems to have lost its influence.

Bro. Brigham sets out upon his career in life by admiring the Constitution of the United States, which he is pleased to style the offspring of divine inspiration, and which inculcates the doctrine, and guarantees to her citizens the privilege of regulating the mode of his worship of the Divine Attributes by the dictates of conscience.

But would you learn how Bro. Brigham has demeaned himself under this provision of instrument, for which he himself claims a divine origin? Turn over a few files of the Deseret News, and I think you will find him discoursing in substance as follows:

"When the doctrine of a plurality of wives was first announced by the Prophet Joseph Smith, it was so revolting to my feelings that I really wished myself dead, and if there ever was a time when I prayed fervently for the Lord to remove me from the earth, it was then."

Here conscience refused to dictate, and left the Prophet no constitutional authority for accepting the new doctrine.

But vice, though frightful and hated, is a monster with which we may become familiar, and then embrace; and conscience is a delicate monitor, with which we cannot trifle with impunity.

A MUSICAL PRODIGY.—Albert Jones, a youth about 17 years of age, of foreign birth, and humble parentage, has been giving temporary concerts in vocal music, for the last few evenings, at the quarters of Lieut. Dudley, for the entertainment of the officers and their friends. He is looked upon by all who have heard him as quite a prodigy in vocal music, possessing great compass of voice, conjoined with feminine sweetness. He certainly possesses the charming gift in a most eminent degree, and has exercised a fine taste in his selections of moral and sentimental pieces.

U. T.

We take the following extract from a sermon delivered by Brigham Young, Aug.

29, 1852, together with extracts from a Revelation, purporting to be given to Joseph Smith, in 1843, and published in the Deseret News Extra, of Sept. 14, 1852:

Some are endowed with more moral courage than others. I know the spirits in men generally, are inclined to weakness and diffidence; and all men, more or less, feel their own weakness and inability. The elders of Israel, especially, feel the prejudices of the people bearing down upon their spirits, and when they once open their mouths, and say that Joseph is a Prophet, such a flood of light at once comes upon them, that they are ready to ask no odds of all the world. But in preparing to make this declaration, their hearts tremble, and their knees smite each other almost like Belshazzers; after they have once started, they are independent enough.

I suppose some of you have an experience on this subject. One of our elders with whom I am acquainted, after he got baptized, got cornered up, and was obliged to preach a sermon. He never had been able to say that he knew Joseph was a Prophet; but he was there in the meetings; the house was crowded with the congregation; the windows and doors full of people, and all around on the green, waiting to hear a Mormon preacher. There was none there but this one man, and he was called upon to preach; he thought he would pray, and dismiss the meeting; he never had known that Joseph was a Prophet; that was the lion that lay in his path, and he could not get by him, nor round about him, nor dig under him, nor leap over him; and the lion he must meet—he must say Joseph, for better or worse. As soon as he got "Joseph" out, "is a Prophet," was the next—and from that, his tongue was loosened, and he continued talking until near sundown. The Lord pours out his Spirit upon a man, when he testifies that, that the Lord gives him to testify of. From that day to this, he has never been at a loss to know that Joseph was a Prophet. I assure you his heart quaked—and that has been the case with a great many others.

When brother Joseph revealed the great mystery of being baptized for the dead, did not a great many of the elders of Israel think then, "Mormonism cannot endure; it will be overcome." Every item of doctrine brother Joseph has brought forth, had to meet with opposition from the world. We all know that it comes in contact with sectarian influence, and every other influence that is not direct from God.

When the elders went forth, the priests supposed they could easily put them down; but when they undertook to substantiate the doctrine of baptism for the dead, were the priests successful in confuting their arguments? No! The doctrine has rode triumphantly over all sectarianism; (what I mean by sectarianism, is, false religion,) and it is so far from being put to silence by all the rest of the world, that it is as popular wherever you go, as any doctrine taught; it is as readily and as quickly believed.

You can understand, from the few remarks I make with regard to the gospel, that many things which were revealed through Joseph, came in contact with our own prejudices; we did not know how to understand them. I refer to myself for an instance; I never could be persuaded that God would send every person to a lake of fire and brimstone, to be tormented by the devil, to all eternity, for any little sin he might commit—which was the doctrine handed down. After all, my traditions were such, that when the Vision came first to me, it was so directly contrary and opposed to my former education, I said wait a little; I did not reject it, but I could not understand it. I then could feel what incorrect tradition had done for me. Suppose all that I have ever heard from my priest and parents—the way they taught me to read the Bible, had been true;—my understanding would be diametrically opposed to the doctrine revealed in the Vision. I used to think and pray, to read and think, until I knew, and fully understood it for myself, by the visions of the Holy Spirit. At first, it actually came in contact with my own feelings, though I never could believe like the mass of the Christian world around me; but I did not know how high I believed as they did. I found however, that I was so high, I could shake hands with them any time I wished.

You heard Br. Pratt state, this morning, that a Revelation would be read this afternoon, which was given previous to Joseph's death. It contains a doctrine, a small portion of the world is opposed to; but I can deliver a prophecy upon it. Though that doctrine has not been preached by the elders, this people have believed in it for years.

The original copy of this revelation was burnt up; William Clayton was the man who wrote it from the mouth of the Prophet. In the meantime, it was in Bishop Whitney's possession. He wished the privilege to copy it, which Br. Joseph granted. Sister Emma burnt the original. The reason I mention this, is, because that the people who did know of the Revelation, suppose it was not now in existence.

The Revelation will be read to you. The principle spoken upon by Br. Pratt, this morning, we believe in. And I tell you, for I know it—it will all over, and ride triumphantly above all the prejudice and priestcraft of the day; it will be fostered and believed in by the more intelligent portions of the world, as one of the best doctrines ever proclaimed to any people.—Your hearts need not beat; you need not think that a mob is coming here to tread upon the sacred liberty which the Constitution of our country guarantees unto us, for it will not be. The world have known, long ago, even in Br. Joseph's days, that he had more wives than one. One of the Senators in Congress, knew it very well. Did he oppose it? No!—but he has been our friend all the day long, especially upon that subject. He said pointedly to his friends, "If the United States do not adopt that very method—let them continue as they now are—pursue the precise course they are now pursuing, and it will come to this,—that their generations will not live until they are 30 years old; they are going to destruction; disease is spreading so fast among the inhabitant born rotten are gone.

the best pl strength, a man on th very good;
Many of
are not ign social capi claim it; I ago; every there is a ready to p
This Re many year but those o tent lock anything I It pleas ous this p wish to a know whe lations sh ple? I ca continual of fear, a and this I in the old words, in the princl this; what to be a p Joseph w instance, S Sanpete, t touching t in the bui
the procla
—all of y
tion and Lord.
Now, bi is to build world; it of this po the magni
the Lord
he does n or the oth
If he m the words those who as any vi three bod Doctrine contained more reve tle that is I want cessary to the time.
over, you for theme called to any of yo received t
I preach with rega minuted;
subject; I gospel as of it, wh people.
It is al man, sho a king a his faith that this ever coul find out your wor scripture and the book, by first and principle
When a alkation, will be of years consumm has finis
Father, h
None c glory, in he receiv
then we der, for t is comple
ed, and t
it. I les will now I am t thee, my and reate it shall word; as ultery; a man rec lasting a man, an the holy ultery, a in the ne be with adultery woman, broken i tery; and but is t you, and you my power; t to take, not com ful; for for I ha power o all thin things, Verily give unt wife, w stay he I commi
it, saith Abraham
ing at y and let ceive al servant pursu be and has ts from a ven to Jos hed in the 4, 1852:

moral cour rites in me ag and diffi
t, feel their he elders of dices of the spirits, but is, and say a flood of nt they are world. But ation, their smile each after they ndependent experience with whom ptized, got o preach a ble to say het; but he house was e window ound on the preacher.

e man, and thought he feelings; he a Prophet; path, and ound about over him;
must say soon as he was the was loosen near him.
pirit upon a t the Lord that day to is to know ure you his n the case

d the great dead, did of Israel endure; it of doctrine
th, had to world. We with sec influence priests sup down; but ite the doc the priests ents? No ly over all arianism, from being he world, go, as any d as quick

w remarks that many gh Joseph, judges; wo them. I er could be very person y torment y little a the doc tradition me first to nd opposed at a little; understand ct tradition hat I have rents—the Bible, had id, be dis revealed in I pray, to new, and st, by the st, it actu feelings, he mass of it I did not ey did. I h, I could wished.
s morning, this after to Joseph's small por but I can ough that the elders, years.

ation was the man
e Prophet, Whitney's go to copy ister Em
mon: I men people who se it was

you. The ratt, this ll you, for ide trium nd priest and be ortions of rines ever earts need a mob is red liberty ntry guar
The world Joseph's than one ew it very but he has especially edly to his not adopt e as they ie they are his,—that ll they are struction;
ng the inhabitants of the United States, that they are born rotten with it, and in a few years they are gone." Said he, "Joseph has introduced the best plan for restoring and establishing

the best plan for restoring and establishing strength, and long life among men, of any strength, and long life among men, of any man on the earth; and the Mormons are a very good, and virtuous people."

Many others are of the same mind; they are not ignorant of what we are doing in our social capacity. They have cried out pro claim it; but it would not do, a few years ago; everything must come in its time, as yet there is a time to all things. I am now ready to proclaim it.

This Revelation has been in my possession many years; and who has known it? None but those who should know it. I keep a pa tent lock on my desk, and there does not anything leak out that should not.

It pleases me a little, to think how anx ious this people are for new revelation. I wish to ask you a question. Do this people know whether they have received any re velations since the death of Joseph, as a peo ple? I can tell you that you receive them continually. I would be willing; the elders of Israel should understand one principle; and I have taught often; it is also taught in the old and new scriptures; or in other words, in the former and latter scriptures, the principle is set forth simply, which is this; when a man is called, as Joseph was, to be a prophet, he writes his revelations.

Joseph wrote a great many. He would, for instance, give a revelation to a man to go to Sampeet, to labor; he would give revelations touching both temporal and spiritual things; in the building up of houses and cities, or in the proclamation of the gospel to the world
—all of which are necessary for the salva tion and exaltation of the people of the Lord.

Now, brethren, the calling of an Apostle, is to build up the Kingdom of God in all the world; it is the Apostle that holds the keys of this power, and nobody else. If an Apo stle magnifies his calling, he is the word of the Lord to this people all the time, or else he does not magnify his calling—either one or the other.

If he magnifies his calling, his words are the words of eternal life and salvation, to those who hearken to them, just as much so as any written revelations contained in these three books. (Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants.) There is nothing contained in these three books, that is any more revelation, than the words of an Apo stle that is magnifying his calling.

I want you to understand it. If it was ne cessary to write them, we would write all the time! We would rather the people how ever, would live so as to have revelations for themselves, and then do the work we are called to do; that is enough for us. Can any of you think of any revelations you have received that are not written? You can.

I preached a short sermon here yesterday, with regard to exaltation; I spoke but a fee minutes, and Br. Pratt brought up the same subject; it is all connected with the great gospel sermon; for we can but notice parts of it, when we undertake to speak to the people.

It is all connected with the exaltation of man, showing how he becomes exalted to be a king and a priest, yea, even a God, like his Father in heaven. Without the doctrine of this revelation reveals, no man on earth ever could be exalted to be a God. Do you find out now, when you are exalted, what your work will be yonder? We read in the scriptures, that Jesus declared he is the first and the last. It is written again in this book, by the Prophet Joseph, that he is the first and the last; the last and the first. This principle you see in all the works of the Lord.
When a man commences the work of his ex altation, he begins at the last thing that will be completed. Our spirits, thousands of years ago, were first begotten; and at the consummation of all things, when the Savior has finished his work, and presented it to the Father, he will be crowned.

None of you will receive your crowns of glory, immortality, and eternal lives, before he receives his; he will be crowned first, and then we will be crowned, every one in his or der, for the work is finished, and the spirit is complete in its organization with the ta ble. The world is the first to be redeemed, and the people last to be crowned upon it.
I leave these remarks with you, and we will now have the Revelation read."

REVELATION.

I am the Lord thy God, and I gave unto thee, my servant Joseph, an appointment, and restore all things, ask what ye will, and it shall be given unto you, according to my word; and as ye have asked concerning ad ultery,—verily, verily I say unto you, if a man receiveth a wife in the new and ever lasting covenant, and if she be with another man, and I have not appointed unto her by the holy anointing, she hath committed ad ultery, and shall be destroyed. If she be not in the new and everlasting covenant, and she be with another man, she has committed adultery; and if her husband be with another woman, and he was under a vow, he hath broken his vow, and hath committed ad ultery; and if she hath not committed adultery, but is innocent, and hath not broken her vow, and she knoweth it, and I reveal it unto you, my servant Joseph, then shall you have power, by the power of my Holy Priesthood, to take her, and give her unto him that hath not committed adultery, but hath been faith ful; for he shall be made ruler over many;
for I have conferred upon you the keys and power of the priesthood, wherein I restore all things, and made known unto you, all things, in due time.

Verily I say unto you, a commandment; I give unto mine handmaid, Emma Smith, your wife, whom I have given unto you, that she stay herself, and partake not of that which I commanded you to offer unto her; for I did it, saith the Lord, to prove you all, as I did Abraham; and that I might require an offer ing at your hand, by covenant and sacrifice; and let mine handmaid, Emma Smith, re ceive all those that have been given unto my servant Joseph, and who are virtuous and pure before me; and those who are not pure, and have said they were pure, shall be de stroyed, said the Lord God: for I am the Lord thy God, and ye shall obey my voice; and I give unto my servant Joseph, that he shall be made ruler over many things, for he hath been faithful over a few things; and from henceforth I will strengthen him.

And I command mine handmaid, Emma Smith, to abide and cleave unto my servant Joseph, and to none else. But if she will not abide this commandment, she shall be destroyed, saith the Lord; for I am the Lord thy God, and will destroy her, if she abide not in my law; but if she will not abide this commandment, then shall my servant Joseph do all things for her, even as he hath said; and I will bless him, and multiply him, and give unto him an hundred fold in this world, of fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, houses and lands, wives and children, and crowns of eternal lives in the eternal worlds.
And again, verily I say, let mine handmaid forgive my servant Joseph his trespasses, and then shall she be forgiven her trespasses, wherein she hath trespassed against me;
and I the Lord thy God will bless her, and multiply her, and make her heart to rejoice.

And again, I say, let not servant Joseph put his property out of his hands, lest an enemy come and destroy him; for Satan seeketh to destroy; for I am the Lord thy God, and he is my servant; and behold! and lo, I am with him; as I was with Abraham, thy father, even unto his exaltation and glory.

Now as touching the law of the priest hood, there are many things pertaining thereto. Verily, if a man be called of my Father, as was Aaron, by mine own voice, and by the voice of him that sent me, and I have endowed him with the keys of the power of this priesthood, if he do anything in my name, and according to my law, and by my word, he will not commit sin, and I will justify him. Let no one, therefore, set on my servant Joseph; for I will justify him; for he shall do the sacrifice which I require at his hands, for his transgressions, saith the Lord your God.

And again, as pertaining to the law of the Priesthood,—if any man espouse a virgin, and desire to espouse another, and the first give her consent; and if he espouse the sec ond, and they are virgins, and have vowed to no other man, then is he justified; he can not commit adultery; for they are given unto him; for he cannot commit adultery with that that belongeth unto him, and to none else; and if he have ten virgins given unto him by this law, he cannot commit adultery; for they belong to him; and they are given unto him;—therefore is he justified. But if one, or either of the ten virgins, after she is espoused, shall be with another man, she has committed adultery, and shall be de stroyed; for they are given unto him to mul tiply and replenish the earth, according to my commandment, and to fulfil the promise which was given by my Father before the foundation of the world; and for their exal tation in the eternal worlds, that they may bear the souls of men; for herein is the work of my Father continued, that he may be glorified.

And again, verily, verily I say unto you,
if any man have a wife who holds the keys of this power, and he teaches unto her the law of my Priesthood, as pertaining to these things; then shall she believe, and adminis ter unto him, or she shall be destroyed, saith the Lord your God; for I will destroy her; for I will magnify my name upon all those who receive and abide in my law. There fore, it shall be lawful in me, if she receive not this law, for him to receive all things, whatsoever I the Lord his God will give unto him, because she did not believe and administer unto him, according to my word; and she then becomes the transgressor, and he is exempt from the law of Sarah, who administered unto Abraham according to the law, when I commanded Abraham to take Hagar to wife.—And now, as pertaining to this law,—verily, verily I say unto you, I will reveal more unto you hereafter; there fore, let this suffice for the present.—Behold,
I am Alpha and Omega:—Amen.

Theatrical Notice.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T., 23rd March, 1859.

On Saturday, the 19th ult., the Dramatic Association presented Schiller's five act tra gedy, "The Robbers."

The cast was very good, and brought out the available strength of the company; it was as follows:—

Charles de Moor, Mr. R. C. White; Fran cis de Moor, Mr. H. K. Thatcher; Count de Moor, Mr. J. Rutledge; Speigelberg, Mr.
O. L. Baldwin; Switzer, Mr. W. Warren;
Roller, Mr. J. Shaw; Schutterle, Mr. J. Hale; Rasman, Mr. W. H. Jones; Herman, Mr.
W. Crawford; Grimm, Mr. A. Thorne; Com missary, Mr. J. W. Smith; Kozinski, Mr.
S. Meyers; Daniel, Mr. H. Marion; Amelia,
Mrs. Tuckett.

Mr. White, as the robber chief, displayed great histrionic power; both his acting and reciting were very good. He gave such sat isfaction to the audience, that he was clam orously called for at the fall of the curtain.
He did not appear, in consequence of an ac cident which happened to Mrs. Tuckett in the last scene, which stunned her; luckily she was not seriously hurt.

Mr. Thatcher, in the distasteful part of Francis de Moor, was very successful.

Mr. Rutledge was out of his line as the Count; but in the last scene, with his son, his acting was appropriate and effective.

Messrs. Baldwin, Warren and Shaw look ed well, and acted their respective parts with great vigor.

Mr. Crawford, as Herman, was very res pectable; it is a character not at all suited to him.

We were rather disappointed in Mrs.
Tuckett as Amelia, with the exception of the last scene, in which she was really good.

The rest of the characters were sustained with tolerable ability, the various costumes were good, and this their first attempt at tragedy, must be considered very success ful.

After which the farce of "My Neighbor's Wife."

Mr. Somerton, Mr. H. K. Thatcher, Mr.
Timothy Brown, Mr. J. Shaw; Mr. Jonathan
Smith, Mr. C. Northrop; Mrs. Somerton
Mrs. Whitlock; Mrs. Brown, Miss Whit lock; Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Westwood.

With such a cast as this the farce must succeed.

Mr. Thatcher was cool and gentlemanly.
Mr. Northrop has a look so comic in it self, that before he speaks laughter is inevi table; his dress and make up (not forgetting the shirt collar) was admirable.

Mr. Shaw was as usual excellent.

This farce, which brings out three of the leading comic actors, is a very good one, and will always be a favorite with the audience.
There are no minor parts, which too often, by being bungled, detract from the merit of the piece. The acting of the ladies was only moderate; in fact, in point of talent they shew a lamentable deficiency in com parison with the male actors.

In taking a retrospective view of the season, which has now been brought pre maturely to a close, because of the scarcity of money, we may venture a few remarks.
The Military Dramatic Association deserves great credit for the exertions they have made for the entertainment of the public.
Tragedy, comedy and farces have been se verally produced, some with the highest suc cess. Taking into consideration the diffi culty of obtaining the necessary materials for the wardrobe, scenery, &c., with very small means, they have obtained the most satisfactory results. This could only have been effected by the indomitable perseverance they have displayed throughout, and by the kindness of the officers in lending articles which it was impossible to purchase.

It would be difficult to find any amateur association whose members, generally speak ing, could afford to be judged by a higher standard than this, and some of them would bear favorable comparison with men who make acting their profession.

During the short recess, the Association will be enabled to carry those plans for the improvement of the theatre into execution, which have been contemplated some time.

It is their intention to have two private boxes fitted up, also to lower the stage, and to make various alterations which will add to the comfort and accommodation of their patrons. A due notice of this will be given, and also the time of re-opening.

"DRAMA."

The following are the remarks of Judge Cradlebaugh upon the occasion of his re leasing the Grand Jury from farther ser vice:—

Discharge of the Grand Jury.

This day makes two weeks from the time you were unpannelled. At that time, the court was very particular to impress upon your minds the fact that it was desirable to expedite business as speedily as possible. The court took occasion to call your attention to the dif ficulties under which we had to labor.—
It told you of the condition of the legis lation; it told you of the fact that the Legislature had not provided proper means to aid the court in bringing crimi nals to punishment; it told you that, aside from that, that the legislation was of such a character as to embarrass the court in the discharge of its duties; and that they had given criminal jurisdiction to courts of their own creation, which by the organic act can exercise no such ju risdiction. They had sought to throw the punishment of crimes into such tri bunals.

The court also called your attention to the fact that there had been, in con nection with this legislation, an attempt by persons within this Territory to bring the United States Courts into disrepute with this people. It particularly called your attention to the fact that Brigham Young, the late Executive of the Terri tory, at the time when he was a sworn officer of the government—sworn to see that the laws were executed—had taken occasion to denounce the courts as vile and corrupt; also that he had taken oc casion to denounce all attorneys and ju rors of the court, and that this was done to prevent the proper and due adminis tration of justice in the Territory.

The court felt it to be its duty to repel such slanders; that it owed it to the po sition it occupied and to the members of the bar, who were looked upon as hono rable men, and from its association with them, it felt it to be its duty to repel such slanders, let them come from what source they might. This was done for the pur pose of showing the difficulties that you and the court labored under in bringing criminals to justice.

Aside from this, the court took the un usual course of calling your attention to particular crimes—the horrible massacre at the Mountain meadows. It told you of the murder of young Jones and his mother, and of pulling their house down over them and making that their tomb;
it told you of the murder of the Par ishes and Potter, and Forbes, almost within sight of this court house. It took occasion to call names for the purpose of calling your particular attention to those crimes; the fact that they have been com mitted is notorious.

The court has had occasion to issue bench warrants to arrest persons connec ted with the Parrish murder; has had them brought before it and examined; the testimony presents an unparalleled con dition of affairs. It seems that the whole community were engaged in com mitting that crime. Facts go to show it.
There seems to be a combined effort on the part of the community to screen the murderers from the punishment due them for the murder they have committed.

I might call your attention to the fact that when officers seek to arrest persons accused of crimes they are not able to do so; the parties are screened and se creted by the community.—Scarcely had the officers arrived in sight of the town of Springville before a trumpet was sounded from the walls around the town.
This, no doubt, was for the purpose of giving the alarm. The officers were there to make arrests. The officers leave the town, and in a short time a trumpet sounds again from the wall for the purpose of announcing that the dan ger was over. Witnesses are screened; others are intimidated by persons in that community.

An officer of this court goes to Spring ville, meets the Bishop of the town, asks him about a certain man, for whom he has a writ, he having understood that the man was a scribe in his office. He (the Bishop) tells him that he has gone to Camp Floyd, while the fact is, the person the officer desires to find is at the time in sight in the street. We have here a Bishop lying to prevent the ser vice of the process of this court, and aiding in preventing criminals being brought to punishment.

Such are the attempts made to pre vent the administration of justice in the courts. Officers are prevented from making arrests; they are thwarted upon all points when they seek to arrest those persons who should be brought to pun ishment.

Such acts and conduct go to show that the community there do not desire to have criminals punished; it shows that the Parrishes and Potter were murdered by counsel; that it was done by authori ty; the testimony goes to show that the persons engaged in committing these murders are officers in that community, policemen, and that they have since been promoted for committing these heinous crimes.

At the commencement of this term of court, these persons were seen elbowing about the streets with the Bishops and other dignitaries, but now they are not to be found.

I say all the facts go to show that those offences were committed by officers in that town, and that there is a determi nation to cover up, and to secrete the of fenders.

You have had sufficient time to ex amine those cases; more than two days ago, you had all the testimony before you in the Parrish case and for some cause you refuse to do any thing.

Your duty is to find bills when there is sufficient testimony to satisfy you of the probability of the party's guilt. The court has been patient with you; it has given you time; it has endeavored to be patient, that you might have ample op portunity to do your duty.

The court has no desire but to do its duty; to punish offenders and enforce the law—it can have no other purpose or motive.

If it is the desire of this community that persons guilty of crimes shall be screen ed, and that high, notorious crimes shall be covered up, it will have to be done without the aid of this court.

Should my government desire such things, they must send some other per son than the one who now presides in this judicial district to accomplish such purpose.

The court cares not what position per sons hold, either civil or ecclesiastical, if they are guilty of crime, it will use its authority to bring the offenders to jus tice.

By legislation we have no jails, no means to support prisoners, no means of paying witnesses or jurors, or other officers of this court. It would seem that the whole of the legislation of this Territory was to prevent the due admin istration of justice.

It was these considerations that induc ed the court to desire you to expedite the duties devolved upon you.

The court feels that it has discharged its duty; it has furnished you every fa cility for discharging yours. Still, you make no report; to continue you longer in service would be wrong—the public interest would neither be promoted or benefited by it.

You are therefore discharged from further service.

The court will think of the propriety of venirring another grand jury.

For your service upon territorial bu siness the clerk will issue you his certi ficates. For the time you were engag ed on United States business the martial will pay you.

If it is expected that this court is to be used by this community, as a means of protecting it against the perodillos of gen tiles and Indians; unless this community will publish its own murderers, such ex pectation will not be realized. It will be used for no such purpose.

When this people come to their rea son, and manifest a disposition to punish their own high offenders, it will then be time to enforce the law also for their protection. If this court cannot bring you to a proper sense of your duty, it can at least turn the savages in custody loose upon you.

Correspondence between the Mayor of Provo and his Honor Judge Cradlebaugh:—

Provo, March 11, 1859.

To the Honorable John Cradlebaugh, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States for Utah Terri tory, and ex-officio Judge of the 2nd Judicial District.

Your memorialists, the mayor and council of Provo city, beg leave respect fully to represent that,

Whereas, The city council have re ceived petitions from the various wards of the city representing that a detach ment of the United States troops for several days past have been encamped on the seminary lot, the officers occupying the west lower room of the seminary building without the consent of the coun cil or citizens of this city, and to the no small annoyance of the community, tending directly to intimidate those per sons who have occasion to attend the District Court, now in session in the seminary, and also rendering it exceed ingly difficult for the officers of the city to preserve the peace between the un ruly portion of the citizens and soldiers, several unpleasant circumstances having already occurred and their present lo cation around the seminary favoring of a military interference with the munici pal regulations of American citizens.

Your memorialists respectfully pray, your Honor to cause the immediate re moval of the troops, now occupying the seminary and vicinity, beyond the limits of the city. And your memorialists as in duty bound will ever pray.

On behalf of the city council,

B. K. BULLOCK, Mayor.

Provo, March 12, 1859.

To the Honorable the Mayor and City Council of Provo:

Gentlemen—your letter of the 11th inst. has just been received. In reply to it I take occasion to say that the move ment of a company of infantry to this ci ty and their temporary location here was well considered before it was determi ned upon. It was a matter of necessity.
There were a number of prisoners to be tried before my court; neither the terri tory nor the city afforded a jail or other place of confinement for them. No manner of provision had been made for their support or sustenance, neither by the Territory nor your city. To secure these prisoners—and to maintain them are duties that I owe to my office and to them.

I have adopted the only means left me of accomplishing those objects. The military company, kindly furnished by the commanding General, both security and support these Prisoners. That this small force should be near the court house or the building used as such is not only a matter of convenience but of necessity to the court. This I will say, how ever, that, so soon as I can dispense with their most useful services, I shall do so.

You speak of their being here to the annoyance of the citizens of this city and intimidation of those persons hav ing business with the District Court.

When, where, or in what manner these soldiers have annoyed or interfered with the citizens of Provo, I challenge you to show. A more quiet, orderly set of men I never saw; they have deported themselves with a propriety and decorum truly remarkable.

As to your remark about intimidation, allow me to say that good American ci zens have no cause to fear American troops.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient ser vant,

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH.

BY VO
THE JES
KIL
Single co advance
The I
and Sund
By t examin in Ale
John D ercott,
Bullock aboutth council son's h elicited meeting talk ab be mad
Abo
King is time D are sel ing to residin
The
nances ness h named of thos
Bishop his bro the cit
William Curtis, and Jo
Other held, b them I
During meetin horses ter the ered to They ball B Lys holds said to Ear Willia
a pers came profes questi
His an been I this, A J. Ear
rish ab him, or across house
Owen to foll
Donal
Mr. V his h hears fallow
"M should more, widow he cou get pa his ow ed the you st never his bo
if you don't Mr

THE VALLEY TANNER

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME I.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, APRIL 5, 1859.

NUMBER 23.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

[COMMUNICATED.]

For the Valley Tan.

The Murder of the Parrishes and Potter at Springville, on Sunday night, March 14, 1857.

By testimony taken on a preliminary examination in the case pending, wherein Alex. F. McDonald, H. H. Carnes, John Daley, Abraham Durfee, — Nethercutt, Jos. Bartholomew and Kimball Bullock, are defendants, it appears that about the 1st day of March, 1857, a private council-meeting was held at Bishop Johnson's house in Springville. Nothing is elicited as to what took place in this first meeting, except that the object was to talk about apostates and the disposition to be made of them.

About a week after this another meeting is held at the same place, at which time Duff Potter and Abraham Durfee are selected for the purpose of attending to the Parrishes and some person residing at the Indian farm.

The evidence does not disclose the names of all the persons there, the witness however, recollects the following named persons, as participating in both of those meetings: Aaron Johnson, the Bishop of Springville, Lorenzo Johnson, his brother, A. F. McDonald, Mayor of the city of Springville, Andrew Wiles, William Bird, Lorin Roundy, Simmons Curtis, Duff Potter, Abraham Durfee, and Joseph Bartholomew.

Other meetings are said to have been held, but nothing definite in regard to them has appeared in the testimony. During the week following, the last meeting, Parrish was robbed of four horses and a carriage. The family, after the murder of the Parrishes, recovered two of the horses and the carriage. They were found in the stable of Kimball Bullock, present Mayor of Provo.

Lysander Gee, of Tooele Valley still holds possession of the other two horses, said to be worth about 4 or 500 dollars.

Early in the week before the murder, William Johnson, a Mr. Metcalf and a person whose name is not recollected, came to the house of Mr. Parrish, professing to be religious teachers, and questioned him in regard to his faith. His answer to them seems not to have been satisfactory. A short time after this, Alexander McDonald and Wilber J. Earl came to the house of Mr. Parrish about dusk in the evening, and took him out to talk with him; he is taken across the street behind an unfinished house belonging to a nephew of Potter's. Owen Parrish, a lad of 18 years, starts to follow, but is ordered back by McDonald. Alvira Parrish, the wife of Mr. Wm. R. Parrish, passes over into this house, and from an open window hears a conversation which she states as follows:

"McDonald told my husband that he should never see his grey horses any more, that he had stolen them from a widow woman. My husband said, that if he could go to Brigham Young's he could get papers to show that the horses were his own, and that he had honestly obtained them. McDonald or Earl replied: if you start to go to see Brigham you will never get there. My husband opened his bosom and said, you can kill me now, if you choose. McDonald replied, we don't wish to shed blood now."

Mrs. Parrish ran back home when she saw them about to part. Her husband came in in a minute or two after, when Mrs. Parrish said: "You have your orders." Her husband asked how she knew anything about it, when she told him, and told him what was said. Her husband then said, "you will be a living witness when I am gone."

Abraham Durfee is at this time working for Mr. Parrish. Durfee and Potter pretend to Parrish that they are dissatisfied with the condition of affairs here, and impress him with the belief that they are desirous of getting to California; state that threats have been made against them on account of their not living up to the faith, and that their lives are in danger.

Arrangements are made that Durfee, Potter, Parrish and his two sons shall leave on Sunday night, the 14th of March.

Durfee and Potter are at Parrish's at 10 o'clock on the morning of that day.

Parrish asked them whether they were true to their trust. Durfee replies, "yes, brother William, I am as true as a hare, but when it comes to the test I don't know how I shall do." Potter took a gun to pieces, which belonged to Mr. Parrish so that it could be carried out without being observed.

Durfee, in conversation said, that when they were leaving, they ought to go out one at a time, to avoid suspicion Parrish, the father, and Durfee left about 2 o'clock in the day. Durfee returned again about dusk to get a gun belonging to Owen Parrish; went away with the gun; afterwards returned and said that he had come from where Parrish was. Upon being interrogated by Mrs. Parrish, he said that he was outside of the Fort, and would stay there for safety, and that he had told him to tell her to send the boys out, whether they were ready or not. Durfee and the two Parrish boys then leave, the boys carrying bundles of provisions and ammunition.

Durfee parts with the boys near the South gate of the city, and directs them to the South-west corner of the city wall. Durfee comes to them there; asks the elder Parrish boy to go with him to find some things that he had hid out in a field. They go and return in about 10 minutes to the other boy, Owen, Durfee saying that he could not find his things.

While they are gone Owen hears the report of a gun in a south-east direction and apparently where they are to meet at the corner of the fence. Owen asks what is meant. Durfee allays suspicion by saying some Indians were camped down there, and also saying that it might perhaps be a signal from old man Parrish, or Potter.

Durfee and the boys start in the direction of the corner of the land fence where it had been arranged they all should meet after dark. After they had crossed the fence from the field into the road and got near the place, Durfee calls out, "Duff, Duff," (Potter's name) and stops and looks towards the fence on the east side of the road. Afterwards all proceed on, and when within fifteen or twenty feet of the corner of the fence, where all are to meet, some one called out, "Durfee," three times. Durfee answers, and immediately a gun or pistol is fired. Wm. B. Parrish, the eldest son, who is the farthest from Durfee, falls dead. Both of the sons are unarmed. Several shots are fired, one ball taking effect in a cartridge box that Owen Parrish had on. Durfee drew up his gun, pointed it at Owen and bursted a cap, but the gun failed to go off.

Owen immediately jumped over the fence into the fields and made his escape into the city, climbing the city wall where it was low. While going through the streets he heard some person behind him say, "he went this way." He ran to his uncle's house, 10 or 12 men standing in front of it, but passed them and into the house so quick that they could not stop him. Told his uncle that Beason (being his brother Wm.'s middle name) had been shot, and wanted him to go and see if he was alive. He was afraid to go, but got a man by the name of Brooks to go. Upon the following day the widow of Parrish is allowed to go and see the bodies of her husband and son, and Orrin is taken to the school house at the same time; Durfee is found there. John M. Stewart, the justice, who was at the preliminary secret councils, before-mentioned, in which the fate of the Parrishes was decided, is there pretending to hold an inquest upon the bodies. The jury composing the inquest are—

Durfee is sworn; states very little, but says that he pointed his gun at the enemy. Orrin Parrish is also sworn, who testifies that he cannot give a statement in the matter, and is very much frightened. Orrin now says that Beason told him so to state; that if he identified any of the persons and they learned who he knew, that was engaged in it, he would be put out of the way. Of course the verdict of the corner's inquest is that they were murdered by persons unknown.

In the morning of that day, Mrs. Parrish hearing that Orrin was at his Uncle's, went over to see him and found him in bed; she attempted to speak to him but was jerked away by William Johnson. He said she should not speak to him unless she spoke in a loud voice. She then spoke out and wanted to know where his father was. Orrin said that he did not know. Seeing some persons about the school house, she sent her third son, Albert, to the school house; he came back and said that his father, Beason and Potter were laying in there, dead.

On the same Sunday that the murder is committed, after church services in the city of Provo, President Snow, of the Provo stake, desired to know if there was any one there who would carry a letter which he held in his hand to Bishop Johnson, of Springville, and place it in his hands. Nethercutt stepped up and said he would take it. Snow charged him specially to deliver it safely to Bishop Johnson himself, saying at the same time, "dead men tell no tales."

The preaching that morning had been in regard to apostates and the proper disposition of them.

The body of old man Parrish was literally cut to pieces. His throat was cut on the left side, his fingers and arms, his back—in fact, his whole body was covered with knife-wounds of which he had received as is testified; at least fifteen. There were no wounds of pistol or rifle balls on his body.

Potter was killed by three balls, probably from a shot gun, which entered the body on the left breast, a little below the nipple.

Wm. Beason Parrish was shot through by four balls, which, entering, passed through his left arm and side, and came out at about the centre of his back.

Mrs. Parrish says that George McKensie told her, that Bishop Johnson ordered him to drive the wagon out, but that he did not know at the time, what he was going out for. McKensie said the bodies were thrown into the wagon like dead hogs, some one remarking, "This is the way the d—d apostates go." McKensie has since left for California.

Mrs. Parrish further testifies that her husband had a $500 Territorial order in his pocket book when he left home that day, which has never been returned. That she went to Salt Lake City in the month of July, following the murder of her husband, to see Brigham Young. Brigham said the people in Springville were fifteen years ahead of him; if he had known about the matter, he would have stopped it. Said he would try to get the horses; she told him that Gee had possession of the horses, and that he said nothing, but an order from Brigham would get them. Brigham's clerk put all that was said down in a book. Brigham said he would write to her, but never did. She went to see Brigham again between last Christmas day and New Year's; went into his office about 8 o'clock in the morning, and sat there till 4 o'clock in the afternoon. His clerks were present. At 4 o'clock they told her she could not see Brigham that day, but to call the next, between 8 and 11 o'clock in the morning. She went there the next morning about 8 o'clock, and was then told she could not see him. About the time she was leaving, Mr. John Sharp, captain of police in Salt Lake City, called her back, and asked her what she was going to do about her matters. She told him she did not know. From there she went to John Young's, and thence to Mr. Long's. She noticed Sharp and one of Brigham Young's clerks following her. One of them finally called her, and Sharp said to her, that if she wanted to get her horses back, she had better not go into court, but wait until the soldiers were gone, and then she would get them with fourfold, and that it would be best for her to drop it. While in Brigham's office, the clerk told her that Brigham did not want to see her, that she should put the matter into the hands of the Bishops; that Bishop Johnson, Bishop Hancock and Bishop Rowberry would settle it for her.

Several witnesses testify that about the time of the murder of the Parrishes, it was a very common thing to hear Bishops and Elders speak in their meetings about what was to be the fate of apostates, that as Brigham Young says, "Judgment was to be laid to the line and righteousness to the plummet," which in plainer terms meant that apostates were to have their throats cut to save them.

Orson Hyde, a short time before the murder of the Parrishes, in a discourse delivered at Springville, said that apostates would not be allowed to leave; and if they attempted it, hogholes would be stopped up with them. Elder Snow also made a similar remark at the same place.

Army Intelligence.

On Saturday Hon. Jefferson Davis reported from the Senate Committee, on Military Affairs a bill to fix the pay and regulate the allowances of officers of the army.

The first section provides that the rations allowed by the act of March 16, 1802; April 24, 1816, and March 2, 1827, shall be commuted at the price fixed by the act of February 21st, 1857, and the amount of such commutation shall be added to the pay of each officer according to his grade, and that hereafter no other commutation for said rations shall be allowed.

The second section provides that the additional ration allowed each commissioned officer for every five years of his service shall in like manner be commuted, and the amount of such commutation, shall also be added to the pay of such officer according to the length of his service.

The third section repeals that part of the law of August 23, 1842, which allows additional or double rations to the commandant of each permanent or fixed post garrisoned with troops.

The fourth section provides that officers having brevet commissions shall not be entitled to any increase of pay or emoluments because of the exercise of command according to their brevet rank.

The fifth section provides that officers of the army while absent from their duties, either with or without leave, shall not receive the allowances authorized by the existing laws for servants, forage, transportation of baggage, fuel, and quarters, either in kind or in commutation.

Col. Sumner arrived at Fort Leavenworth on the 15th ult.

Lieut. Whipple, of the 3rd infantry, has been engaged in preparing a map of the Navajo country, which will prove a valuable acquisition.

The loss of the Navajo Indians has been, during the war, over $100,000, besides lives and huts—the latter reaching at least 1,000.

The Dallas Herald has heard of Major Van Dorn's company. It is 115 miles north of Red river, and upwards of 100 west of Fort Arbuckle. His command consists of seven companies of cavalry and one of infantry. They are constantly on the scout. A party of government surveyors have been settling the lines of the Indian territory, and they find Capt. Marcy's line forty miles too far east. This will throw the surveys for the central road into the Indian territory, if the last survey is confirmed.

The same paper says that at last accounts Maj. Palmer, U. S. A., with two companies of cavalry and two pieces of ordnance, from Fort Belknap, was at the Brazos Agency, to resist every incursion on the Indian Reserves. — Washington States; D. C.

The Mining News.

The news received from the gold mines since our last is very flattering—very encouraging. The latest we have is from the St. Joseph Journal and Wyandott Gazette, though a very interesting letter will be found on our first page. Recent explorations in the mountains have resulted in the discovery of what is known as "shot gold," or coarse gold—a quality approximating the "nugget." If any doubt has existed as to the surface gold paying, the recent development of its existence in coarser quantities will allay all uncertainty and misapprehension in the minds of the thousands who have meditated upon a journey thither the coming spring. Take the mountain ranges, then, and there is a field for exploration and research many times greater in extent than those of California, throughout which but little doubt can be maintained, from the facts alluded to, of rich bed and quartz gold deposits. Indeed, the discoveries at that extensive field may be said not yet to have commenced. We now look for results—large yields, and "fortunes in a day." In the new mountain diggings, it is stated that miners are taking out from twenty-five to fifty dollars a day.

A poor young man once fell in love with an heiress and the passion being returned, it only wanted the parents' consent to make him happy. At length, meeting the father, he asked for the daughter's hand. "How much money can you command?" asked the millionaire gruffly. "I cannot command much was the reply. "What are your expectations?" "Well, to tell the truth, I expect to run away with your daughter and marry her, if you don't give your consent."

We understand that a session of the Probate Court was held in Cedar County, at Cedar Fort. A Grand Jury was empaneled, (?) and the court after sitting two or three days, adjourned without doing anything.

THE WEATHER.—The weather of late has been unusually cold, and snow-storms were the order of almost every day; but since yesterday (Saturday) morning, it looks as if it was opening for spring, unless it will snow again before we go to bed.

Before I close the remarks which I intend to make to you, I will call your attention, particularly to certain and many crimes that have been committed.

It is first my pleasure, however, to call your attention to the legislation and general condition of matters within the Territory, which affect and operate upon the administration of the criminal laws. The Legislature has not given that aid that is desired to enable the Courts to do their duty: neither have they provided means to carry on the Courts, but on the contrary, have so legislated as to embarrass and prevent the Courts from bringing public offenders to justice.

A large organized body of white persons, are to be seen leaving Cedar City, late in the evening, all armed, travelling in wagons and on horseback under the guide and direction of the prominent men of that place. The object of their mission is a secret to all but those engaged in it. To all others the movement is shrouded in mystery. They are met by another organized band from the town of Harmony. The two bands are consolidated. Speeches are made to them by their desperate leaders in regard to their mission. They proceeded in the direction of

Some cases of larceny and also of purchasing the clothing of soldiers, have occurred at Camp Floyd, to which I shall call the attention of the Attorney for the Territory.

Unless you faithfully discharge your duties, this community cannot escape the odium of the offences to which I have called your attention. To allow these matters to pass over, gives a color of authority for commission of crime.

The very fact that such an affair as the Mountain Meadow massacre should so long have been left uninvestigated, shows that there is some person high in the estimation of the people, by whose authority crime is committed. Such is the view that will be taken of it, unless you do your duty fully and fearlessly. You can know no criminal code, but the laws of Congress and of this Territory. No person can commit crimes and say that they are authorized by higher authorities. If such notions are entertained here, they must be dispelled.

ated 1

(After which the Court gave the Grand Jury the usual instructions, as to the manner of their organization, and the rules of law regulating the finding of indictments and their return into Court, &c.)

Second Judicial District Court.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday the examination of witnesses in the cases of the murder of Jones and of the Parrishes was continued, and many important facts were elicited.

The writ of a tatchment issued by the court in favor of N. Croesbeck having been served by him in person, the court ordered that the marshal should take all the property levied upon in this manner by the plaintiff, and return it to the defendant, and that the plaintiff should pay the costs.

SUNDAY, March 27.

Marshal Dotson returned from Great Salt Lake City to-day, having in his custody Abram Durfee and Joseph Bartholomew, two of the principals in the murder of the Parrishes and Potter.

These men report that Wilber J. Earl, who was the leader in the murder, came to them and told them that their lives were in imminent peril if they remained in Springville, and that it was counseled to them to leave and go to Salt Lake City. They therefore, led by Earl, left in the night, and avoiding the road altogether, traveled along the base of the mountains to the city. At the point of the mountain, south of the city, instead of coming round by the road they crossed over the mountain. When they reached Big Cottonwood creek their suspicions were aroused in regard to the motives of Earl in leading them to the city, because he was anxious to have them cross the creek at a particular point, which was out of their way, and which is very lonely, and clothed with a dense thick- et of willows and underbrush. They refused to go there and cross; but soon after they had passed the Cottonwood, a man rode down from that point and passed on to the city at full speed.

When they reached the city, they were met by a policeman carrying a gun, who exchanged some words with Earl, and soon after a gun was fired close to them, as they suppose for a signal. At the firing of this gun Earl told them not to be alarmed, that it was nothing.

A little further on they met several policemen, all carrying guns who followed them as far as the Council House. Here Earl left them, and he had not gone far when several men came up to him and commenced a low conversation. When they separated from Earl they told him they were going to Mr. Stringham's, instead of which they went immediately to the store of Messrs. Livingston, Kinkead & Co., and claimed protection. They had but just got into the store when a number of policemen walked past as they suppose to follow them. They have no doubt but that it had been planned to put them out of the way, in order to prevent the possibility of their giving any information in regard to the crimes in which they are implicated. Mr. Kinkead placed them under the care of Secretary Hartnett, with whom they remained until the arrival of Marshal Dotson. They traveled the whole distance from Springville by night; distance 60 miles.

MONDAY 28.

Court met pursuant to adjournment and adjourned to await the arrival of Mrs. Parrish and other witnesses.

Deputy marshal Brookie returned this evening, bringing with him Mrs. Parrish and two witnesses in the case of the murder of Jones and his mother.

The marshal reports that he experienced the greatest difficulty in discovering the residences of any one for whom he sought, the inhabitants generally either refused to answer his questions or else telling him direct falsehoods, sending him away from the place for which he was seeking.

The Bishops of Springville, of Payson, of Lehi and of this city are all gone, as well as the President of this State.

The marshal searched the house of George Hancock, the Bishop of Payson at an early hour, but the bird had flown. Hancock was the principal actor in the murder of Jones and his mother.

Four of the grand jurors who had been selected by the county court to serve at this term of the district court, are known to have fled to escape arrest, they having been implicated in these murders. The father-in-law of another of the grand jurors has also fled; several of the others have not called for their pay. These facts form a most striking commentary upon the working of the law prescribing that the juries shall be selected by the county court, which was passed by the Legislature at its last session and which was signed by Gov. Cumming.

Through the workings of this law the grand jury at the present session of this court, was composed of the very men who were the most guilty criminals engaged in the commission of these terrible murders of the past three years, together with their relatives, friends and accomplices.

Recent advices from Cedar City and the other towns near the scene of the Mountain Meadow massacre, report them to be almost entirely depopulated. In Cedar City there remains but twelve families out of a population of between eight or nine hundred inhabitants.

We are also informed that Ka-nosh is concentrating his tribe in that vicinity, and has been joined by two other tribes from the south. These Indians are already one thousand strong and express their determination to resist any attempt on the part of the Americans to arrest any one in that vicinity. There are many white persons now with them leading their movements.

Tuesday, 29th.

This morning, at about 3 o'clock, Marshal Dotson, accompanied by Deputy Marshal Stone, and a civil posse of five men, and a company of the 2nd Dragoons, commanded by Lieut. Gordon and Livingston, and accompanied by Lieut. Kearney of the 10th Infantry, (a requisition having previously been made by the Marshal upon Major Paul for this force), left this city with the utmost secrecy, and proceeded to the town of Springville, the scene of the murder of the Parrishes, of Potter, and of Forbes, for the purpose of determining whether any of the persons for whom warrants have been issued were se- creted therein.

Previous to the departure of the main body a small party were detached, and proceeded rapidly to a point on the road where they stationed themselves in such a manner as to intercept any express which might be sent to warn the citizens of Springville of their approach.

Upon reaching the town it was immediately surrounded by details from the company of Dragoons who were so stationed that no one could leave the city unperceived of them.

The Marshal with his posse then entered the town, and at daybreak commenced the search of all those houses in which it was suspected that the villains might be concealed. The Bishop's house was one of the first entered, but no one was found therein except his ten wives. These received the Marshal with very good grace, and in a most cheerful spirit, joking with him about the fruitlessness of his search.

After a thorough search, not one of the offenders could be found, and it was discovered that not only those who have been already implicated have run off, but also fully one half of the male inhabitants of the city have fled, leaving their numerous wives and families at home, at the mercy of the "Gentiles" and of the "licentious soldiery"—by them so much dreaded.

After the guards had been removed from about the town, several of the citizens invited the posse to breakfast, and all except the soldiers dispersed in little parties to breakfast. It having been rumored that there was a large party concealed in Hobbie Creek Canyon, a guide was procured, and the posse proceeded up the canyon some eight miles. The snow, however, here be- come very deep, so that the horses could not proceed farther, and not the slightest trace have been as yet found of them. The party returned to this city from their unsuccessful search.

The Court met this morning at 10 o'clock, and proceeded immediately with the examination of Mrs. Parrish, and her son Orin Parrish. I shall send you in a day or two a complete history of this dreadful murder. The connection of the church authorities with the murder is fully established by the testimony of Durfee and Bartholomew.

It was not until the arrest of these men that the mass of those who have left the southern settlements fled. As soon as they gave themselves up in Salt Lake City, an express was sent down from there, giving notice of that fact, and stating that they were going to turn States evidence, and this caused the general stampede.

The effect of this stampede of the digni- taries of the Church, has been to cause a general spirit of disaffection towards the church among those who are left. Men who have heretofore been staunch Mormons express themselves astounded to find that those whom they had looked up to as examples of honesty and righteousness are now fleeing before a shadow; and they reason with much force that it is guilt alone which makes them flee, for there is nothing to fear if they have not participated in these crimes. "The guilty flee when no man pursueth."

An express reached this city this afternoon, and distributed copies of the Governor's Proclamation, dated on the 27th inst.

The effect of this Proclamation has been to create a great excitement among a certain class of the people; and it is openly asserted here that the militia are to be called out shortly by the Governor to drive the troops from here by force, if they are not called away by Genl. Johnston.

An Indian trader in town informed me that this afternoon he has been besieged by persons who wished to purchase from him his powder and lead.

There is now no doubt as to which side of the fence Governor Cumming stands on. He has joined himself heart and hand with Brigham Young and his Bishops, to endeavor, even by force perhaps, to prevent the investigation of the dreadful, inhuman butcheries perpetrated by the Mormon church. The next thing which we expect to hear is, that Brigham has determined to carry into practice the doctrines which he once publicly preached from the stand in regard to human sacrifices [you re-published it recently in the columns of the Valley Tan], and that the Governor has called upon the army to assist Brigham in the butchery of his vic- tims. It will be just as reasonable and as appropriate as the present action of his Excellency.

The following affidavit was this evening made by the witnesses for the prosecution now present in this city, and copies were sent to the Judge and to Gen. Johnston:—

Territory of Utah, ss.

We, Albert Parrish, Henry Higgins, James O'Bannon, Leonard Phillips, Orin Parrish and James Gammell, do solemnly swear that we are and have been, for several years past, residents of the Territory of Utah; that we were summoned to appear as witnesses before the United States District Court for the 2nd Judicial District of said Territory, which convened at the city of Provo, on the 8th March, 1859; that we possessed certain knowledge of various crimes which had been committed in said district, on account of which said knowledge we had been so summoned; that on account of the participation in, or sanction afterwards of the said crimes, by the community in which said crimes were committed, emanating as we believe from the authorities of the Mormon church; we considered our lives and property in imminent peril from the Mormon community, should we appear and testify to the facts within our knowledge, unless a portion of the United States troops should (as they have been) be stationed in the town of Provo, near enough the Court room to guarantee safety, and that from the Mormon community we have received threats of intimidation, in case we should divulge the facts concerning said crimes, which have come to our knowledge, and which threats we believe would have been carried into execution but for the timely aid afforded by the Commanding General in the stationing of troops, now in and near this city; and further, we believe our lives to be in danger henceforward without military protection from United States troops. And further deponents saith not.

(Signed) LEONARD PHILLIPS, His JAMES O'BANNON, mark.
JAMES GAMMELL, mark.
HENRY HIGGINS, mark.
ALBERT G. PARRISH, His EVAN X PARRISH, mark.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 29th day of March, 1859.

CHARLES E. SINCLAIR,
Associate Justice Supreme Court,
Utah Territory.

WEDNESDAY, 30, 10 a. m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment of yesterday.

Judge Cradlebaugh made the following remarks in open Court, in regard to the extraordinary Proclamation lately issued by Governor Cumming:

"I have received a document from Alfred Cumming, Governor of this Territory, which in its reading purports to be a Proclamation, while in the body of the document it would seem to be a kind of protest. Instead of being addressed to the General, Commanding the Department of Utah, it seems to be intended for the public at large. Taking the whole thing together, it seems to be designed to exasperate the people of this Territory against the troops, to obstruct the course of public justice, and to excite insubordination in the Army."

In this document, Governor Cumming speaks of a company of United States Infantry, being stationed around the Court House, in which I am now holding a term of the District Court, and also of several additional companies of Infantry, one of Artillery, and one of Cavalry, being stationed in sight of the Court House.

He also says that the presence of these soldiers has a tendency, not only to terrify the inhabitants and disturb the peace of the Territory, but also to subvert the ends of justice by causing the intimidation of witnesses and jurors. He says that "this movement of troops has been made without consulta- tion, with him and against the letter and spirit, of his instructions."

In regard to his statement that troops are stationed 'around the Court House at Provo,' I have only to say that the assertion is not true. They are stationed near the Court House, and entirely on one side of it.

The additional troops referred to as being 'stationed within sight of the Court House,' are at least four miles distant. This asser- tion, must have been designed to create a false impression, as to the relative situation of the Court House and the troops.

In regard to the inhabitants being terrified by the presence of troops, it is proper to say that many of them are very much annoyed by their being here at this time, but those who seem to be stricken with terror have fled the country on account of crimes committed by them, and the fear of just punishment for their offences. Among them are to be found several of the Jurors, Presidents of "stakes," Bishops, and also civil officers of the Terri- tory.

It is perhaps proper to say that the Grand Jury was selected by the County Court, under a recent act of the Legislature of this Terri- tory, which was signed and approved by Governor Cumming, and that several notorious criminals were members of it.

That none but those who are conscious of guilt are under the influence of fear, is manifested by the fact that at all times, when the Court is in session, the Court room is crowded by hundreds of citizens.

The assertion that witnesses and Jurors are, or have been intimidated by the small military detachment near the Court House, is without foundation. While the real fact is that witnesses have been threatened and intimidated by the very inhabitants who are said to be so much terrified.

To such an extent has this been carried, that witnesses who appear and testify in behalf of the prosecution, are compelled to seek safety under the protection of the troops that are here, many of them having signed a petition requesting that the troops shall not be removed, and representing that their security and safety depended upon their presence.

In regard to the statement that the troops are here without consultation with His Ex- cellency, the Court has yet to learn that it is subservient to, and cannot act except under Executive dictation."

Time was requested by the counsel for the defence, in order to procure their witnesses. They state, that the witnesses had been here, but had "stampeded." The Marshal has been after these witnesses several times al- ready, but they have fled and are not to be found.

The Court expressed its entire willingness to adjourn the Court from day to day, and give the defence every possible assistance in its power in procuring witnesses.

Mr. Wilson, the Territorial Attorney made a statement of a great number of cases, which have come to his knowledge, and re- quested to know of the Court whether it would proceed with the investigation of them. The Judge replied that he would not examine any cases at this place, except those in which he had already issued war- rants. But that he would devote his time at his place of residence, during the ensuing summer, until the Chief Justice arrives who will supercede him in this District, to the investigation of all criminal matters within the District, and hoped to be able to probe them to the bottom.

It will be recollected that by an act of the Legislature, passed at its last session, Judge Cradlebaugh was transferred to the Carson Valley District, but he has the right to continue to act here, as a Committing Magistrate, until the arrival of Judge Eckels who was transferred to this District.

The Police Marshal of this City rode into the hall of the Court House this morning after the adjournment of the Court, on horse back. He was slightly intoxicated at the time. This looks certainly as if the Court House was under military occupation—does it not?

Not a single soldier has entered the Court House on military or other duty, since they have been stationed here. The prisoners even, have always been brought in, in the custody of the Marshal, and the soldiers have not left the guard house.

Provo, March 31, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.:

SIR—The last Deseret News states that the Grand Jury, discharged by me at the present term of the District Court, at the city of Provo, protested unanimously against their discharge and the language used to them. This is an unqualified falsehood. No such protest was ever presented to the court or came to my knowledge until I read of it in that paper. The Grand Jury dispersed very soon after they were discharged: several of them had been engaged in the commission of the very crimes they were investigating, and left precipitately, fearing that they would be arrested for the murders they had com- mitted. We will thank the church author- ities most sincerely if they will furnish the Marshal of the Territory with information as to the locality of these protestors, for the Marshal, with several vigilant deputies, have not as yet been able to find the least trace of their whereabouts.

Very Respectfully,

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH.

Upon the very interesting topic, the Overland mail question, the Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Herald, writes as follows:

I begin to think that the Overland mail between your city and California by that circuitous route to fort Yuma, over which I indulged in some "blowing" a couple of months ago, costs a great deal more than it is worth, and that the Central Mail route leading to Salt Lake City is the only one deserving of support by the Government. We all have an interest in maintaining the latter route in preference to the other for many reasons, and the most prominent among these reasons are the shortness of the route compared with the other, and the condition of things requiring the constant vigilance of the Government in the Territory of Utah.

ORSON HYDE.—This eccentric apostle of the Latter Day Saints, who, it will be remembered, delivered a lecture in the old Placer Theater, in this city, some years since, on which occasion, if we re- collect aright, promulgated the brilliant idea that the stellar universe constitutes the heaven of disembodied spirits, or in other words, the soul of every defunct individual will have the right to settle a pre-emption claim upon some particular star in the sky. It appears that Orson has an eye single to the temporal as well as spiritual land titles of the Saints, and has recently favored the San Francisco Alla with a lengthy communication upon the subject of the herd ground grants of Utah, etc., etc., upon which the Alla makes the subjoined comment:

Elder Hyde's remarks in regard to monopolies in Utah, doubtless contain a great deal of truth; but as this forms but an insignificant item in the long re- cord of sins of omission and commission perpetrated by the Mormons at Salt Lake, it is a subject of no very grave import, and we are content to receive his explanation of the matter as the cor- rect one. The Elder pays a high com- pliment to the conduct of the soldiers attached to Col. Johnston's command when he says, "I have traveled in many countries in the four quarters of the world—have resided in towns in and near which soldiers were stationed—but have seen none apparently more order- ly, and kept more within the rules of propriety and decorum, than the Ameri- can soldiers now at Camp Floyd, under the command of General Johnston." This is indeed a singular compliment to emanate from such a source. One year ago, and no epithets were too vile to apply to the army; the whole Mor- mon vocabulary being exhausted in searching for terms of denunciation to heap upon the heads of the soldiers and their officers.—Semi-Weekly Ob- server, Placerville, Cal.

Mrs. FUBBS AND MR. FUBBS.—Cor- rect Views of the Farmer.—"Fubbs, I want to talk awhile, and I want you to listen while I do it. You want to go to sleep, but I don't; I'm not one of the sleepy kind. It's a good thing for you, Mr. Fubbs, that you have a wife who imparts information by lectures, else you would be a perfect ignoramus. Not a thing about the house, to read, except a little Bible that the Christian Association gave you, and a tract which that fellow called Porter left one day, entitled 'Light to the Heathen.' It's well he left it, for you're a heathen, Fubbs; you may feel thankful you ain't a Mormon! Yes, I understand that insinuation, too, you profane wretch! You mean you're glad you haven't but one wife. You never would have known there was a Mormon, Mr. Fubbs, if I hadn't told you, 'cause you're too stingy to take a paper! Now, Fubbs, I declare your name ought to be Fibs—you tell so many of 'em. It's only last week I lost a dollar and a half on butter I sold to a ped- dler, because I didn't know the mark- et price. This would have paid for the paper the whole year. And then you are so ignorant, Fubbs. Don't you re- collect when you took the gun and walked down to the big marsh hunting, because some one said the Turkeys were marching into Rushes? Y-e-s y-o-u d-i-d. You needn't deny it, Fubbs. Didn't kill any, did you? It was a bad day for turkeys, wasn't it Fubbs? Ha! ha! ha!"

THE SUBSCRIBER HAVING MADE IMPOR- tant improvements in the manufacture of Whisky is now enabled to sell it at

THREE DOLLARS A GALLON.

This large Refiller is in successful operation, and no can now recommend it to the public as the most super- ior article ever brought into this market.

WILLIAM HOWARD,
Big Cottonwood Distillery, three miles south of the Sugar House, or at Mr. G. Clements, Salt Lake City.

22-41

THE VALLEY TANNER

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, APRIL 12, 1859.

NUMBER 24.

THE VALLEY TANNER.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:
Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

Telegraph to the Cincinnati Commercial.
The Murder of P. B. Key by W. E. Sickles—Full Particulars.

New York, Monday, 10 P. M.

The Washington correspondent of the Times sends full particulars of the fatal affair between Sickles and P. B. Key. In the early part of the week before last, Mr. Sickles went on to New York. During his absence the busy spies of society observed that the attendance of Mr. Key at his house was even more unremitting than usual. Mr. Sickles returned to Washington on the morning of the day of the Napier Ball, and from that time up to Friday last, nothing occurred to make the matter of his wife with Mr. Key more than ordinarily prominent in his mind.

So far was he from manifesting anything like inordinate or tyrannical suspicion that he allowed Mr. Key to escort Mrs. Sickles as usual on Pennsylvania avenue, and saw them in company with Mr. H. Wickoff at the theatre on Wednesday night. On Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Sickles entertained a large party at dinner. On the next day Mr. Sickles received from some enemy of mankind an anonymous letter.

[The account following, is the dispatch of Mr. Sickles' interview with his wife is the same as that given in the regular dispatch published.]

Having quitted the presence of his wife, Mr. Sickles gave way to the most terrible emotion, and passed the night in a state bordering on distraction—a feeling which was worked into madness this morning on seeing the cause of his misery, Mr. Key, with gay audacity pass opposite the window of his wife's room, and with his handkerchief, the usual signal for assignation. Asking Mr. Butterworth who was at his house, to follow Key and engage him in conversation, so that he would not get out of sight, he rushes up stairs for his pistols, and, quickly following, found Butterworth and Key together at the corner of Sixteenth street, when the tragedy took place. On coming up, Sickles walked directly to Key and said:

"You have dishonored my bed and family, you scoundrel—prepare to die," at the same time drawing his pistol; almost simultaneously Key placed his hand inside his vest and drawing what appeared to be a pistol, but was really an opera glass, said: "You had better not shoot." Sickles at once fired, Key at the same time throwing his glass at him. This shot only grazed Key, slightly raising the skin of his side, and he immediately leaped behind a tree to avoid another shot. Sickles followed, and Key catching his arm, endeavored to prevent him from firing, but Sickles disengaged himself, and firing again, shot Key in the upper part of the right thigh close to the main artery. Falling on his hip and supporting himself with his hand, Key cried, "Murder—don't shoot." Sickles, still following, fired again, with his pistol close to Key, the ball passing through his body, below the breast. In the meantime, the report of the pistol and Key's cries startled those in the neighborhood. Mr. Doyle, Mr. Upshar and Mr. Tidball, who were in the Club at the time, proceeded hastily to the spot, where they found Sickles standing over the body of Key with his pistol presented at his head, and which he tried twice to discharge, but which snapped both times, and Mr. Butterworth standing by composedly. On Mr. Doyle's touching Sickles on the shoulder, the latter at once desisted, and turning around said:

"Gentlemen, this man has dishonored my bed." Upon this, he took Butterworth's arm, and walking from the spot with the most perfect self-possession, proceeded to Attorney-General Black's and delivered himself into custody. The parties involved in this sad story all lived within the immediate circle of our daily Washington life, two at least of them being also as well known in New York as in the federal metropolis. Key was about 42 years of age, tall in stature, about six feet, with an easy and fashionable air, but by no means prepossessing in appearance.

His face had a sickly hue, and he had been for some time suffering from heart disease, or imagined he was, which gave him a sour and discontented look. Otherwise he was extremely popular, and those who knew him best said his eccentricities of manner covered a very kind and generous heart. His father, Francis S. Key, was the author of the National Song, the "Star Spangled Banner." He was a widower with four children. On his marriage he narrowly escaped a duel with Col. May, who conceived that he had unfairly ousted him from the affections of the lady who became his wife, and who was a beautiful and charming woman.

Mr. Sickles, the member for the Third District of New York, is a native of this city, and was originally a printer by occupation. He is a man of nearly forty years of age, of good presence and graceful manners. As a member of the State Senate, as well as in the House of Representatives, he had made himself remarked by a quite unusual coolness and self-possession, which gave him great advantages in debate, and had acquired for him a well deserved reputation as a rising young leader of the Democratic party.

In 1853 Mr. Sickles was married to his wife, a daughter of Mr. Baglioli, the celebrated music teacher in New York, now ruined and heart-broken, then a young girl fresh from her school-life and remarkable then, as now, for something especially soft, lovely and youthful, in the type of her peculiar beauty. She is of Italian origin, and possesses all the Italian lustre and depth of eye, united with a singular delicacy of feature.

Mr. Sickles, in jail, volunteered the remark, that "it was unavoidable" and he "could not have done otherwise." He added:

"Satisfied as I was of his guilt, we could not live together upon the same planet." The Hon. R. J. Walker and Messrs. Carlisle and Ratcliffe have been retained as his counsel. They will bring him before Judge Crawford on a writ of Habeas corpus and move his discharge upon bail. Key left no property. His family connections, it is understood, are able, and will provide for his children. Some of Key's friends intimate threats of summary vengeance against Sickles if he appears in public where they can reach him. A subsequent dispatch states that Mrs. Sickles entirely exonerates her husband.

The hot-houses of the Czars, in latitude 60 north, contain the finest collection of tropical plants in Europe. Palm trees are sixty feet in height, and there are banks of splendid orchards. The hot-houses are about a mile and a half in length.

[From the Washington Union.]
The Mormons, the War and the Army Contractors.

The New York Herald, after commenting upon the civil government of Utah and the difficulties incident to the exercise of the authority of the United States, expresses the opinion that much of the strife which has heretofore prevailed between the Mormons and the government has arisen from the intrigues of army contractors. This is a rough way of overslaughting the events of our history for a few years past, and a coarse method, we should say, of doing injustice both to the administration and to the very energetic and upright gentlemen who have been and are engaged in transporting military stores for the army. It may not be amiss, under the circumstances, to refer to some leading facts in this connection.

It is understood that the War Department has sent to Congress a communication covering a proposition from Messrs. Russell, Majors & Waddell, army contractors, to surrender and abrogate their agreement to transport military stores for the government.

It is due to the parties connected with this matter that the circumstances attending the case should be fully stated. The contractors, under various forms, have been engaged in the army service for more than eleven years. They are gentlemen of high character, and have commanded the confidence of successive administrations, including that of Mr. Fillmore. When the government determined to adopt measures to enforce the laws in Utah, anticipating a large increase of transportation over the plains, advertised for proposals in the usual way, and took special pains to invite various parties to put in bids to do the work required. After every exertion of the department none were found willing to undertake the immense service, requiring, as it did, an outlay of more than two millions of dollars. Under these circumstances, the department closed an agreement with Messrs. Russell, Majors and Waddell, the old contractors, at rates such as were deemed fair and just to all parties. These gentlemen, by universal consent, executed the duties assigned them with all energy, promptness, despatch and fairness. They have commanded the confidence of the Quartermaster's Department and of all persons connected with the service. Their outlays have been immense, and their profits, it is believed, not larger than what justice and fair dealing would awarded them. Under a previous contract, in the first expedition to Utah, running from peace into war, they had suffered the total destruction by the hostile action of the Mormons of three trains, entailing a loss upon them of about three hundred thousand dollars, for which they have received no reimbursement. Very much of the efficiency of the army—at one time its safety even—depended upon the energy and fidelity of the parties engaged in moving its military stores; and it is greatly to the credit of the latter that they have been able to command the approval of the entire service. They were prompt in the performance of every duty assigned them, to meet every order of the army, to incur vast expenses with no possibility, in many instances, of corresponding remuneration. Now these gentlemen propose to Congress, through the Secretary of War, to annul the contract, to release the government from their obligations under their contract to transport military stores. Nor has Congress yet indemnified them in any way for the loss of their property by the hostile action of the Mormons. Other trains, too, in consequence of the existence of hostilities, were ordered into the main columns of troops moving to Utah, and thus deprived of all subsistence for their animals, leading to their almost total destruction. These considerations may explain the anxiety of the contractors to withdraw from the service of the government. They have been compelled, in point of fact, to bear largely the burdens of the Mormon war, and although they have the cordial approval and endorsement of those under whose supervision they performed their part of the contract, and are charged with no failure at any point in the discharge of their duties, still, in the absence of indemnification for their losses incurred in the service on account of and produced by the enemy of the United States, for the time being, they may well appeal to Congress to be relieved from further service. The profits of a business which are made to depend upon adjustment by Congress, are not as reliable and useful as many others we could name.

Our object is to present to the country as succinctly as possible a brief review of a branch of public service about which a portion of the press have indulged in comments evidently conceived in utter ignorance of all the material facts involved. It is as much due to the people that they should not be deceived into entertaining unjust opinions concerning the past as that they should avoid being misled in the future. We doubt, indeed, if in the whole history of the government, an important work has been performed with more of energy, integrity, economy, and perfect good faith on all sides, in its origin and in its execution, than that which was initiated and executed by the War Department in the transportation of military stores to the army of Utah. The labor was excessive, the duties to be performed delicate and responsible, and the work was done with all promptness, despatch and fairness. It is a record which will find its way into history as one of those transactions which, as the London Times says, have distinguished our public service for directness and disregard of all the paralyzes and stumbling of antiquated forms. It is well, then, that the subject should be brought before Congress, and that its events should invite public scrutiny; for by that means those who have done their duty like upright business men will be rewarded not only by approval, but by the condemnation of professional grumblers and speculators. The proffer of the contractors, and its endorsement by the War Department, is a challenge, on their part, flung in the faces of all cavaliers.

"ERIN."

In reviewing an article which appeared in our last week's issue over the above signature, although written by an acknowledged champion, in point of intelligence, in the Mormon church, and done too in a style and manner which does him credit, we are not convinced that we have wronged either him or his church people by placing them in a false position before the public, and we are therefore unwilling to retract our argument in favor of a separate Territorial organization, which seems to have touched Erin in a sensitive spot. In the article which has so offended him, we made no allusion to the Mormon religion or the church, but simply referred to the distracted condition of public affairs brought about by the disobedience of the Mormons as a people, to the laws of the United States.

If the Federal officers in Utah disgraced their positions and invaded with impunity the rights of Erin and his people, why did they not apply to the parent source and seek to obtain redress from the halls of the Federal capitol instead of open rebellion?

Erin says that we have failed to particularize, and to tell wherein the condition of Utah is deplorable.

We ask, why are the courts, Federal or Territorial, powerless in this Territory? Why cannot juries be found to indict criminals unless parties arraigned are adjudged guilty by the peculiar notions entertained by Erin and his religious associates? Why has provision not been made for the adequate payment of judges, for the conviction and punishment of criminals? We might go on and particularize, and give reasons almost "ad infinitum," why we regard her condition as deplorable and show what has caused this condition, but a brief glance at the history of the origin of what is properly known throughout the United States as the Utah rebellion, will furnish sufficient data from which any unprejudiced mind can arrive at a correct conclusion as to the causes of the difficulties which brought the army of the United States into this Territory.

Again, he says "I could have told you that our citizens here were loyal and true to our government." We would inform him that we are not ignorant of the nature of that loyalty, and we have not forgotten that Provo Canyon was fortified against the military authority of the United States, and that the cannon's mouth was prepared a long time since to speak in tones of thunder the loyalty of the Saints to the General Government.

Erin complains of the existence among them—the accompaniment of the army—of robbers and gamblers, and in treasonable language says they are legalized. We ask, what American citizen who is a lover of our country with its glorious institutions of liberty and equality, could intimate that the General Government or any of its branches had legalized and sustained a band of marauders and gamblers to rob and plunder their fellow-citizens.

We acknowledge that gamblers and plunderers often accompany an army, but we have too much respect for our laws, and too much confidence in the honesty and integrity of our ministers of law to charge them with being, under Federal authority, participants in the crime of robbery and plunder.

We are asked to inform our American readers—in his own language—"why I myself was indicted by the hangers-on of an army, and tried before a jury of whom a portion were homeless wanderers, sutler's clerks, and why to complete the persecution against me, the Federal judge lent himself to be my persecutor, and aided in his own court to bring about my own conviction."

We will inform our American readers—if we are properly informed and we believe we are—that Erin's own misconduct led to his indictment, and that the Federal judge lent himself, not to be his persecutor, but to mete unto him retributive justice—that he did not prostitute himself to a groveling desire to persecute, and that if the jury for the hearing of his case had not been composed of congenial spirits, he would now be suffering the just penalty of his crime. There are portions of Erin's article to which we have not replied for the want of space.—Enterprise, Carson Valley.

Twelve births were reported in Heber C. Kimball's family, at Salt Lake, on the night of the 12th ult. This wholesale family grocer, who deals in babies by the dozen, ought to have a steam-cradle and a patent steam child's nurse! He's worse than a Turk.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, APRIL 12, 1859.

The U. S. District Court at Provo has adjourned, and we are again forcibly reminded from the circumstances connected with its recent session, that all attempts to administer impartially, the laws of our country, or even the statutes of the Territory, in this community, by Federal officers, are vain and futile.

The Mormons are determined to submit to Church authority only, and consequently use and will make use of every stratagem, every artifice, and unhesitatingly resort to any means to accomplish their designs, and to prevent the assertion of the supremacy of civil law in the Territory.

Last fall, Judge Sinclair attempted to hold a session of his Court in this City, but soon became convinced, that so complete a control did the Church authorities exercise over his Court, that he was, by continuing the session of the Court, merely subserving their own nefarious plans. The Grand Jury duly sworn and charged by him, refused even to find an indictment against a criminal, who acknowledged publicly, that he had first shot, and then cut the throat of a poor deaf and dumb boy;—this because he was acting under instructions from the Church, when he committed the deed.

The Legislature then in session, refused to furnish the necessary means to defray the expenses of the Court, and the maintenance of prisoners;—this because they knew that they could thus most effectually put a check upon the proceedings of the Court. The Judge was thus compelled to adjourn the Court, and the prisoners confined under his authority, were released by an order of the Probate Court.

At this time an unfortunate conflict of opinion between Federal officers, gave encouragement to the Mormons in the course which they seem bent upon pursuing. Alex. Wilson, the U. S. District Attorney, differing widely with Judge Sinclair in regard to the full intent of the President's pardon, assumed, that the Mormons must receive whether or no a pardon which they never asked for, and which they have ever spurned and rejected, although ungraciously complying with its provisions; and therefore refused to take notice of their treason and rebellion.

Judge Cradlebaugh, fully informed of many crimes committed in his district, determined to hold a session of his Court this spring, trusting that by avoiding the greater moral questions, which must sooner or later be adjudicated upon the Federal courts of the Territory, he would perhaps find the community willing to sustain him in the punishment of crimes committed in violation of their own code of laws.

As Judge Sinclair had been embarrassed and thwarted in his unsuccessful attempt to administer justice in his District, by the failure of the Legislature to provide means for the maintenance and security of prisoners; Judge Cradlebaugh, satisfied that none had been provided in his District, wisely took the precaution of exercising a right delegated to him, and made a requisition upon Gen. Johnston for a small military detachment to keep and maintain prisoners.

In his charge to the Grand Jury, a Jury selected by the County Court, the Judge pointedly and emphatically defined his views and position, and in order to prevent any possible misunderstanding, called their attention plainly and particularly to crimes committed in their midst.

We now find that in the teeth of positive evidence, this Jury, after a session of two weeks, refuse to find any indictments, but endeavor to create delay in order that they may accomplish the breaking up of the Court, by a scheme which in the meanwhile is vigorously prosecuted. Every endeavor is being used, every exertion made to procure the removal of the troops, and thus compel the Court to adjourn.

Now to our great regret we find them again sustained and encouraged in their deep laid plots by a Federal officer, Governor Cumming, differing widely, not only with Judge Cradlebaugh, but also with General Johnston, in regard to the extent of his control over the movements of the military force now in the Territory, attempts to interfere directly with the judiciary in the exercise of its legitimate functions, by assuming the control of the military detachment, placed, with certain restrictions, under the direction of the U. S. Marshal, by Gen. Johnston. He does this too at the solicitation of the Mormons, who by a cunningly devised memorial, appeal to his official pride in a manner well calculated to lead him into the grave error, into which, as we have heretofore stated, he has hastily and unwisely fallen.

Judge Cradlebaugh, however, determined not to be thwarted by such means, adjourned the Grand Jury, and sitting as a Committing Magistrate, has himself exposed and made public the crimes for which the Grand Jury refused to find indictments, and has clearly set forth, and made apparent the urgent reasons which induced the opposition on the part of the Church, to the sessions of the U. S. District Courts, and also the means adopted by them to accomplish their aims.

The effect of this decisive course of Judge Cradlebaugh, we have fully laid before our readers in our columns. Four of the church "executions" are now fully committed and are imprisoned; the rest implicated, including all the church leaders in that region and several of the jurors have fled.

We have now reached a most important crisis in the affairs of our Territory. The judiciary are powerless to act, unless they seek the assistance of the U. S. troops, and even with this assistance can accomplish but little; under the present circumstances they cannot punish offenders or bring criminals to justice.

The majority of this community with blind and fanatical zeal in their religion, combine to resist the execution of any law except such as emanate from their leaders. Before the arrival of the army, they compelled by force and by extreme violence, the obedience of the minority, depriving them of all of their rights of American citizens; to secure this obedience they did not hesitate to commit even publicly, the most atrocious and horrible crimes. Now they unite even more firmly to resist the punishment of the perpetrators of these crimes.

In their purpose to sustain themselves with the assistance of the army until some new provision is made, the judiciary have found themselves most unexpectedly opposed by the Governor in a manner calculated rather to strengthen the Mormon fanatics in their designs.

It is clear to our mind that the Judges have in this matter taken the proper and only course, but still we do not find fault with Gov. Cumming merely for differing in opinion with them, in regard to the extent of his authority, or the construction to be placed upon his instructions. We nevertheless do believe that he should have sent his protest to the proper Department at Washington, quietly and unostentatiously. He would not then have sustained murderers and assassins in their attempts to defeat the ends of justice, and would not have allied himself with the leaders of the Mormon Church. There is no remedy for the evils of which he complains in his protest except at Washington; why, then, address a protest to the world at large and the people of Utah in particular?

It is our firm conviction that if the Judges are not sustained and the army is removed, we may bid adieu to all safety or protection of life or property for American citizens in this, the heart of the American Republic.

Incident in Court at Provo.
Another Victim for the "Danites," or "Destroying Angels."

In summing up the evidence, in the case of the murderers of the Parrishes and Potter, Judge Cradlebaugh said:

"Until I commenced the examination of the testimony in this case, I always supposed, that I lived in a land of civil and religious liberty, in which we were secured by the Constitution of our country, the right to remove at pleasure, from one portion of our domain to another, and also that we enjoyed the privilege of 'worshipping God according to dictates of our own conscience.' But I regret to say, that the evidence in this case, clearly proves, that so far as Utah is concerned, I have been mistaken in such supposition. Men are murdered here. Coolly, deliberately, premeditatedly murdered—their murder is deliberated and determined upon by church council meetings, and that too for no other reason, than that they had apostatized from your Church, and were striving to leave the Territory."

You are the tools, the dupes, the instruments of a tyrannical Church despotism. The heads of your Church order and direct you. You are taught to obey their orders, and commit these horrid murders. Deprived of your liberty, you have lost your manhood, and become the willing instruments of bad men."

I say to you it will be my earnest effort while with you, to knock off your ecclesiastical shackles and set you free."

Just at this point in the Judges remarks, an elderly, gray-headed man, who was sitting in one of the front seats, and who was apparently engrossed with what was being said, forgetting where he was, sung out in an audible voice, so as to be heard through the dense audience, "AMEN."

Query—Will this impromptu expression of feeling, on part of the "old man" furnish a victim for the "Danites," or "Destroying Angels?"

Next August an election for Delegate to Congress comes off in this Territory. We know that our advice is not very well considered, but as the Church has it all in its own way, we would again suggest the propriety of letting Father Bernhisel repose, and send some younger and more vigorous man. The next session, as we on a previous occasion observed, is going to be an important one, and particularly to the Territories, and demands energy and ability. There are plenty of men here who will suit the occasion, among whom we might mention the names of Hosea Stout, John Taylor, Geo. A. Smith, S. M. Blair, James Ferguson, etc.

In this connection we have heard it rumored that Thomas S. Williams, Esq., proposes to take the field for Congressional honors.

Frozen.—The weather has been so severe within the last six weeks, that it has already been ascertained that eleven men have perished between this place and the South Pass. At the latter locality, three bodies were found huddled close together, and all along the road the stiffened corpses of the daring but unfortunate wayfarers, tell a story of desolation and death.

At Needle Rock the body of a Cherokee Indian was lying among some rocks, but almost entirely devoured by wolves. He had come out as a teamster for some train, and in mid-winter had started to foot it home.

A man by the name J. K. Russell, was ten days in the snow storms between the big mountain and Weber, and when he crawled into the Station, his legs were mortified, and almost ready to drop from him. The poor fellow lingered a day or two, when death put an end to his sufferings.

We understand that by the middle of next month all the stations on the Chorphepning mail route will be completed, and a lot of star coaches will be put on, which will make a trip from this city to California really one of pleasure.

On the Eastern division, Messrs. Hockaday & Co., are preparing to open early with a splendid lot of coaches; and next summer the problem will be solved to the satisfaction of every one that the shortest route from the Mississippi river, the quickest time can be made, and more comfort had on the Great Central or Salt Lake route than any other overland mail route across the continent.

From a private letter received by a gentleman in this city by the last Eastern mail, we learn that one of the Presbyterian Synods in Illinois; and the Missouri (Methodist) conference have resolved each to send a minister to this city and valley early this spring. This is a good move; and we can assure them that there is a fine field open here for missionary enterprise. While the Mormons at their conferences are sending out their elders, let the churches in the States, look to this part of the vineyard as one worthy of all their exertions.

The last dates from the States advise us that, in all probability, the President will convene an extra session of Congress, to take into consideration the Postal arrangements, which were shamefully allowed the "go by," by the Congress which has adjourned. That august body (?) Heaven save the mark, is so intent upon manufacturing Presidential capital, that every public interest is neglected.

If the good old days of the Republic, which comes down to us through history and tradition, should ever dawn upon us again, when Patriots and not Demagogues held seats in the councils of the Nation, we might expect something. Their lights and experience however, it would seem, are ignored by the modern political hucksters, who peddle out their small wares annually, at the great "variety fair" at Washington.

PIKE'S PEAK.—Our Missouri river exchanges, particularly those published in Kansas City, Leavenworth City and St. Joseph, are made up almost entirely of marvellous stories about Pike's Peak. They have a marvellous set of correspondents, and the editors of the various journals published at these rival cities we should imagine, dreamed of nothing but huge "nuggets." We have no doubt of the existence of gold more or less in the region referred to, but all this hubbalo, beating of tin pans, ringing of bells, and blowing horns, to our mind, has another object in view, it is after swarming the emigration bees, to hive them at one or the other of the three points named. In other words, to extract a little of their golden syrup in the way of out-fits, etc. The competition is quite spirited and viewed at this distance in connection with her position and railway advantages, we should judge that St. Joe, so far had the whip handle.

Winter still "lingers in the laps of spring," and at the present writing a violent snow storm is prevailing.

Important Changes.

We learn that at a special convocation of the G. R. I. O., held in this City last week, the resignation of Bishop Abel Gilbert, for the triangular district was accepted, his private business being so pressing as not to allow him to devote that time to the functions of his office, as its great importance demands.

This is to be regretted, as Bishop Gilbert has proven himself "well up" to the duties of his office.

In view of the responsibility of the station, Bishop Elias Perry, from the octagon district, has been appointed to it, and the two districts are now merged into one grand Careyard, over which he is called to preside. Bishop Perry brings with him into this new and extended field of labor, great zeal in the cause, a superior knowledge of the multifarious duties of his office, and three pair of boots, the latter item is very important as he has a large scope of country to traverse.

The retiring Bishop Abel Gilbert has been placed upon the list of "set backs," to assume again his place in the "circle" under the rules of the order, when Venus comes in conjunction with Mars.

ASSEMBLY SORCERERS.—After an interval of several weeks, on next Thursday evening, we are to be favored with another one at the usual time and place.

Mr. Holt, late commissioner of patents has been appointed by Mr. Buchanan, Post Master General, in place of Hon. A. V. Brown, deceased.

Wife killing seems to be on the increase in the United States of America just now.

The last Eastern Mail came in twenty-four hours inside of schedule time.

Of course it is needless to say that the California Mail as usual, was a long way inside of its time.—It never does miss.

DISTINGUISHED DEAD.—The last mail brought us a mournful catalogue of distinguished men who have passed away from earth. Among them we note Postmaster-General Brown, Hon. H. S. Geyer, formerly U. S. Senator from Missouri, and Hon. E. A. Hannegan, formerly U. S. Senator from Indiana.

SPORTS IN THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.—Within the last two weeks several parties of hunters had gone out into the canyons and passes of the mountains in pursuit of Elk and the Mountain Sheep.

The severity of the winter has driven them in towards the settlements in large numbers, and the sport promises to be fine. We noticed the other day a band of Ute Indians who have been across the mountains and came in loaded down with game.

There will be a large emigration from this Territory to Pike's Peak as soon as Spring fairly opens.

HIGH WATERS.—All the rocky mountain streams are up and a booming. The South Platte we understand has spread almost over the Valley to the bluffs in some places.

We perceive that the Missouri Legislature has adjourned without doing anything for the great works of Internal Improvements that were so wisely inaugurated in the State. They have an adjourned session and meet again in November. In this they are true to their antecedents and strictly within the line of precedents.

EDITOR VALLEY TAN:

Having been absent from the city for the last month, attending the session of the U. S. Court for the 2nd judicial district in and for the Territory of Utah, holden at Provo, I ask permission to publish in your columns the following remarks:

I have noticed in the "Deseret News" a short article in regard to my argument in the Parrish case. I wish to inform the public, that I have been employed by the surviving members of the Parrish family, by the consent of the U. S. Attorney, and approval of the court, to aid in the prosecution. In consequence of the article above referred to, I deem it due to myself and your readers to make the following statements:

So far as the article in the "Deseret News" speaks in regard to my assailing the civil and ecclesiastical authority of this Territory any further than the evidence justifies, it is false and a lie, as the evidence only reflected on the Bishop of Springville, his council and the justice of the peace then acting, who held the inquest over the dead bodies. For as the evidence shows, after Mr. Parrish had exhausted every recourse in that county and precinct to recover his property which had been stolen, he resolved to apply to the highest authority of the Territory, which was at that time His Excellency Brigham Young, but he was informed that if he attempted to leave that place for said purpose he never should live to see Brigham Young; and subsequent events prove that this threat was fulfilled, as upon his endeavor to leave the place he was killed.

In my arguments I alluded to these facts, and stated that these vile murderers were content with robbing him of all he possessed and then preventing him of redress, for fear that Brigham Young, the only man in whom he had confidence or hope, would redress his wrongs, they deprived him of that by taking his life. But we could expect nothing more than misrepresentation from such a lying scribbler as J. V. Long, the reporter of the "Deseret News" upon that occasion, than that he would shade the truth and furnish a falsehood, especially where it serves his personal ends. A man that would boast in the presence of American officers, and he a foreigner by birth, that if he had been in Echo Canyon bearing arms against the United States, he would consider it an honor and not be ashamed of it, which J. V. Long did, should be shown up and not accredited as a faithful reporter.

On the day following the above empty vanity, Long was introduced as a witness to prove the character and demeanor of a candidate, on application for his final papers of naturalization, when I objected to his evidence, and introduced Lieut. Dudley and myself to prove his disloyal assertion above mentioned, when he partially retracted, and qualified them by saying, that he did not say it was an honor, but he would not be ashamed of it.

Immediately after this, Court adjourned for dinner, when he (Long) informed me that he intended to give me hell, through the columns of the "Deseret News,"—that he intended to garble my action and speeches just sufficient to make me appear ridiculous, because I objected to his evidence. I refer the public to his Hon. Judge Cradlebaugh, Capt. Heath, Lieut. Dudley and P. K. Dotson, for the truth of the above statement; and I would add further, that so long as the people of the Territory are infested with such lying scribblers as the aforesaid reporter has shown himself to be, so long will they have trouble. I am satisfied that he has colored his reports for the purpose of crying persecution, when there is no necessity of the cry, for so far as the military was concerned they demeaned themselves properly, both officers and soldiers, so far as any evidence in the above case, that I have heard or know of it, cast no reflection upon Brigham Young, or the leader of the Church.

In conclusion allow me to say that I publish the above, not so much in vindication of my own character, as to let the people know the false foundation upon which the Editor of the "News," formed his opinion of the aforesaid investigation and trials, consequently the weight they should have with the people.

Yours, &c.,

T. S. WILLIAMS.

News from the Plains.
New Gold Diggings Discovered.

St. Louis, Feb. 9, 1859.
The Sioux City Register, just received, notices the arrival of major Culbertson at that place, direct from the head waters of the Missouri river. He reports the discovery of new gold diggings on the divide between the Missouri and Columbia rivers, in the neighborhood of Stevens' Pass. The gold obtained from these diggings is inferior in quality, being worth only about fourteen or fifteen dollars per ounce, but it is said to exist in great quantities.

Major Culbertson brought down about $1,300 worth, in lumps of nearly the size of a grain of corn. He says these mines can be approached within a comparatively short distance by steamboats. He also says the head waters of the above named rivers are so near together that he at one time drank from the Missouri on the east side of the Rocky Mountains, and a half-hour afterwards from the Columbia river on the Pacific slope.

It is said that Col. Colt, of Hartford, is investing a large capital in the purchase of Arizona land and mining privileges. His brother-in-law has gone out as his agent.

The City of New Orleans has encountered another drawback to her commerce. The mouth of the Mississippi is constantly filling up, and the last accounts there were only fifteen feet water on the bar. Twenty-six vessels were inside the bar trying to get out, and nineteen outside endeavoring to enter.

Glorious
A $50 Nugget

We have morning, of Times in p reliable' an has yet com reks every drives off e dio to croak truth that are a glori in extent in the know our good n lows

I have v trip. We for the fut are near I a tribu send you e sidered to flats.

Mr. H who was a mines. I relied upo he sends s by actual ty dollars, the precio the abund tript has n frequently so fine as ner. But assurance facts show they prog and it is d sibility of mines abo and that t forth are offered by Earth.—

Army: Bill was: Committe propriates ninety the the army; and seve dollars; hundred. for subsist hundred dollars; fo termaster eight hun dars; for t dollars; a two hund pinals, ni or dance thousand dred and als, one hu dollars; a two hun tacks are priation. is fifteen After: appropriat Mr. D vote of clause, a dollars f The bi nays 15.

Surge has been Overland ering ele mento, b ton. N by this in A Han ford Tim asked m ish, fleet York?

surdity, Creole w New Yo should b sitting by themself but if the would be Spaniard of Gree cows in l of butter per pour Glorious News From the Mines. A 660 Nugget Received—Rich and Encouraging Prospects.

We have the extreme pleasure this morning of placing the readers of the Times in possession of the latest, most reliable and most encouraging news that has yet come from the Gold Mines. It dispels every doubt and apprehension; it drives off every foreboding; it gives the lie to croakers, and develops the great truth that the new gold fields of Kansas are a glorious reality, destined to exceed in extent and richness any yet discovered in the known world. The letter in which our good news is conveyed reads as follows:

CLAR CREEK DIGGINGS,
February 9th, 1859.

I have written to you in regard to our trip. We are well fixed, and full hope for the future. I AM SATISFIED. We are near Long's Peak, on Clear Creek—a tributary of the South Platte. I send you a specimen by Mr. Allen, considered to be worth about forty-nine dollars.

Yours Truly,

S. E. HARRISON.

Mr. Harrison is a "Buckeye Boy," who was among the first to start for the mines. Every word he writes can be relied upon to the letter, and the nugget he sends speaks for itself. It is worth by actual weight, a fraction less than fifty dollars, and is a splendid specimen of the precious metal. Though the fact of the abundance of gold in the new district has never been denied, it has been frequently asserted that its texture was so fine as to afford little profit to the miner. But now we have a solid lump and assurance of many more. We have facts showing that the developments, as they progress, grow richer and richer; and it is demonstrated beyond the possibility of contradiction that the Kansas mines abound in every variety of gold, and that the golden prospects they hold forth are more flattering than any yet offered by any land on the broad green Earth.—Leavenworth Times.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.—This bill was disposed of in the Senate in Committee of the Whole. The act appropriates for the recruiting service ninety thousand dollars; for the pay of the army, five million ninety-one thousand and seven hundred and eighty-four dollars; for clothing, one million two hundred and twenty thousand dollars; for subsistence in kind, one million nine hundred and seventy-nine thousand dollars; for regular supplies of the Quartermaster's department, one million eight hundred and ninety thousand dollars; for transportation, three millions of dollars; for purchase of cavalry horses, two hundred thousand dollars; for hospitals, ninety-one thousand dollars; for ordnance and armament, four hundred thousand dollars; for armories, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; for arsenals, one hundred and thirty seven thousand dollars; for miscellaneous objects, about two hundred thousand dollars. Baracks are provided for by special appropriation. The total army appropriation is fifteen millions of dollars.

After several hours debate the main appropriations were agreed to as above. Mr. Davis moved and carried, by a vote of 28 against 12, an additional clause, appropriating about a million of dollars for fortifications.

The bill was finally passed by ayes 24, nays 15.

SUTTER CLAIM CONFIRMED.—News has been received at Sacramento by the Overland Mail that the Sutter grant, covering eleven leagues, including Sacramento, has been confirmed in Washington. No little feeling has been created by this intelligence at the Capitol.

A HAVANA correspondent of the Hartford Times writes: "A Spanish friend asked me yesterday, 'What if the Spanish fleet should go and bombard New York?' I could not imagine such an absurdity, and told him so. He said to a Creole with me, 'what would they do in New York if 10,000 Spanish soldiers should land there? A Yankee captain sitting by says: if the soldiers behaved themselves they would not be troubled, but if they made any disturbances they would be put into the station-houses.'—Spaniard says: 'Quien sabe.'"

The dairy farm of Zadoc Pratt, of Greene county, New York, kept 50 cows in 1858, which yielded 6,500 pounds of butter, and brought from 22 to 27 cents per pound, or over $1,500.

The Coming War.

In making their commercial or political arrangements for the future, our citizens would do well to take into their calculations the war agitation which is now shaking Europe, and which, ere long, will be succeeded by the dread reality itself, destined to convulse the continent and its islands to such an extent and such a degree as the world has not witnessed since Bonaparte, nearly half a century ago, played his sublime part and made his exit from the stage. The premonitory tremblings and rumblings of the earthquake are already felt and heard. The combustible materials beneath the surface are beginning to come into collision, and soon the terrible upheaving and the grand explosion will astonish the age.

The present emperor of the French will follow the role of his uncle, under altered circumstances, with a new generation, but with almost the same enthusiasm which had before conquered nearly all Europe. Popular liberty has made great progress since then among the nations of Europe, including England, whose old decayed aristocracy, enlisted in the cause of the Coburgs, is every day retiring before the assaults of the fresh and vigorous democracy; and the doctrine of "legitimacy" or the kingly right of hereditary descent, by which the crowned conspirators of the Congress of Vienna got rid of Napoleon I., who was the choice of the people, is no longer available to dethrone and banish into exile the nephew, who holds his throne by the same title as the uncle.

The first act of the drama has been performed in the Crimea, by which Napoleon III. has reduced two of the great Powers of Europe—Russia and England—to the second place in the scale of nations. His next move—and it is a bold one—is to bring down to the same level the only remaining first rate Power, Austria. The second act of the drama will open in Italy, the scene of the first brilliant triumphs of the elder Napoleon. Other fields, in rapid succession, will receive "the red rain which makes the harvest grow." Already the parvenu is the first potentate in Europe. He will soon be something less or something more. If he has less of genius and of the highest order of talents for a great general which distinguished the hero of Austerlitz, he excels him in tact and the art of diplomacy. In the coming struggle he has secured the neutrality of Russia, and probably the active sympathy of England, even to the removal of her present Prime Minister from office. The trend of his batallions will soon shake the plains of Lombardy and Venice, the fair garden of Italy, and the opening roar of the new cannon which he is now casting at Vincennes will speedily reverberate from the Alps and the Appenines in the awakened ear of Europe. His position, which he so clearly defines, is the very same as that of Napoleon I. He stands midway between revolution and anarchy, and levelling proletarian sans-culottism on the one side, and exclusive class privileges of hereditary nobility and the divine right of kings on the other. He is the great champion and exemplar of national independence and of democracy suited to the times and to the atmosphere of Europe. He contends for the right of every nation to choose its own rulers and adopt its own form of government. And this grand essential of human freedom is denied to a large portion of the Italian people. Austrian oppression is driving them to revolution, and to extremes beyond the principles of moderate democracy. To prevent this sweeping revolution, and the anarchy consequent upon it, is the avowed design of Napoleon. He will anticipate the stroke by striking the first blow himself. He will therefore appear in a highly favorable light to the nations of Europe—the friend alike of freedom and order. This is a grand stroke, worthy of the actor of the coup d'état.

Every steamer now, therefore, that comes from Europe, will henceforth be looked for with great anxiety; and those who are engaged in commercial or political affairs, or who contemplate such transactions in the future, will act unwisely if they do not, in making their arrangements, take into account the tempest of war which is about to sweep the Italian peninsula and the whole Continent of Europe.

An old dutch proverb says "stealing never makes a man rich." The simple old Dutchman who got up that proverb, knew little of the exploits of office-holders in the United States.

(Correspondence of the Philadelphia Press.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28, 1859.

There are many rumors in circulation in relation to the late melancholy affair between Hon. D. E. Sickles and Philip Barton Key. Many of these statements are unfounded, and most of the details are exaggerated. I have been able to glean the following as a full and reliable account of the matters connected with this fearful tragedy:—

Last Thursday evening Mr. Sickles received a bundle of letters addressed to himself. Among them was an anonymous communication, which he overlooked or did not open till Friday morning. This letter charged infidelity to her marriage vow on the part of Mrs. Sickles, and stated further that Mr. Key had hired a house on Fifteenth street, between K and L streets; and Mr. Key's motive in hiring the dwelling was for the purpose of meeting Mrs. Sickles, and that Mrs. Sickles was in the habit of visiting Mr. Key at certain hours in the day.

Mr. Sickles was, as naturally would be supposed, at first inclined to treat the anonymous firebrand as the work of malice. But the circumstance being detailed with such precision, his suspicions were aroused, and accordingly he requested Mr. George B. Woodbridge, a mutual friend of himself and his lady, to ascertain the truth or falsehood of these assertions, affecting, as they did, his own honor and that of his family.

Mr. Woodbridge undertook the mission, and visited the neighborhood indicated in the anonymous missive to see whether such a house had been let last summer, and under what circumstances the lease had been granted. He there learned that Mr. Key had hired such a dwelling at the time alleged. The landlord was a colored man named John Gray, who stated that he received fifty dollars a month rent for his house, he having furnished it, &c. The house was a two story brick; no one else occupied it. Mr. Key commenced going there with Mrs. Sickles in the month of January last; Key generally entered first, and going up stairs, would hoist the first window over the door and hang out a towel or a white handkerchief as a signal to Mrs. Sickles that all was clear. He then would leave the door ajar for Mrs. Sickles to enter.

The last time Mrs. Sickles and Key had been at this house was on Wednesday, the 23d ult. On that occasion they entered in the back way, through an alley way leading from Sixteenth street.

On this Wednesday night there came along a man closely muffled in a shawl. He asked a colored woman standing on the pavement whether the house was then occupied or not. "Yes, sir," was the response.

"Very well—that's all I want," the mysterious gentleman replied, and turning around, walked away in the direction of K street.

He was observed, however, to hang around the neighborhood for a good part of the evening. Eventually Key was seen to leave the dwelling, and the stranger, muffling his face still closer, spoke a few words to Key and then hurried off. It is supposed by many that he was the author of the anonymous letter.

Mr. Sickles knew of an intimacy existing between Mr. Key and his wife. He supposed it simply an innocent, but incautious flirtation, and on account of the scandal that it excited in many circles, he remonstrated with her. She did not pay any heed to these entreaties of her husband, but continued uninterruptedly her singular, but by her husband—unsuspected intercourse. Key was known to be in the habit of attending the theatre, opera, balls, soirees and other places of gaiety and fashion, and was almost invariably accompanied by Mrs. Sickles. He, indeed, followed her everywhere.

It is said that Key was accustomed to boast of his attentions in that quarter, and that at the National Club House the criminal intercourse between himself and Mrs. Sickles was well known, and formed the topic of conversation.

Mr. Sickles' dwelling was opposite the Club House, and Key was accustomed to go up stairs to a window in the latter building, overlooking Sickles' house, and hang out signals to Mrs. Sickles. He would also go in Lafayette square, wave his handkerchief at her, throw out kisses, and make profuse demonstrations of attachment.

Before the fatal denouncement of this unhallowed intercourse Key had been time and again warned by his friends that something dangerous would grow from his criminal attachment. He was accustomed, however, to treat these friendly admonitions with an air of haughty bravado. He would listen to no remonstrance from any quarter. He had been known to boast of his amours in society, and it is said that Mr. Buchanan, being informed of Mr. Key's character, had made out his dismissal, and was only waiting to select a successor previous to sending in the document to the Senate, when Mr. Key met his death.

I visited Sickles to-night in the prison. He appeared to be in good spirits, and had been visited during the day by many of his friends and Congressional colleagues. He positively refuses another examination, and declares his determination to remain in prison till the day of trial. He asked no favors from the law.

A dispatch was received to-day from New York city, from the friends of Mr. Sickles, sympathizing with him in his sorrows. Public opinion in that city is said to sustain Mr. Sickles in his conduct.

Mr. Sickles' affection for his daughter weighs heavily upon him. He feels that his hopes are blasted, and that his home is broken up.

The mother of Mrs. Sickles (Mrs. Baglioli) and the mother of Mr. Sickles arrived in this city to-night. Mrs. Baglioli will take charge of her daughter, while the mother of Mr. Sickles will take under her charge his daughter.

Public opinion is universally in favor of Mr. Sickles. The counsel retained by him embrace the following named gentlemen:—Messrs. Stanton, Ratcliffe, Chilton and Margruder. David Paul Brown, Esq., of your city, is not retained, as has been reported.

The remains of Mr. Key will be taken to Baltimore to-morrow afternoon, at half-past three o'clock, and will be interred from that city.

This evening's train brought many friends of Mr. Sickles from New York. The greatest excitement still prevails.

The intimacy between Mr. Key and Mrs. Sickles had been remarked in Washington circles for a year past, and had been the occasion of more than one disagreement in the families of the parties. During the last Congress notes passed between Mr. Key and Mr. Sickles on this subject, which were followed by a complete reconciliation, and Mr. Key visited, as usual, at the house of Mr. Sickles, having dined with him at a large party not more than ten days ago.

The last time the writer of this article saw Mr. Sickles and Mr. Key together was some ten or twelve days ago, at the residence of the former, the lady herself being present with other company.

Mr. Key was connected with some of the most distinguished families in this country. One of his sisters is married to the Hon. George Pendleton, member of Congress from the Cincinnati district, and another is the widow of the lamented Lieut. Blunt of the navy. Chief Justice Taney is the uncle of Mr. Key, and he is connected with the Swanns and Corrolls, of Maryland.

THE PERILS OF BATTLE.—It is rumored in Europe that in the event of a war between France and Austria, the French Emperor will take the field in person.—The London Times attempts to dissuade him from this step, and here is the way it does it:

"The French pamphlet of May tells us that King Victor Emmanuel, at the battle of Novara, received sixteen bullets in his coat. But, though the battle of Novara is a very recent event, the science of projectiles has been revolutionized since it was fought, and a 16th part of such a risk would now probably produce far more fatal result. It seems hard to say how armies are in future to be manoeuvred. As guns are now manufactured and handled they must literally sweep the field of every thing living. With such rifles and cannons as we now use the great Napoleon could have been picked off the observatory at Waterloo or the tobacco mill at Leipsic as surely as Nelson was shot down on the quarter deck of the Victory. There is a famous painting of Louis XIV standing on the bank of the Rhine with the marshal of the day imploring his Majesty to remove his sacred person from the scene of such danger, and even threatening to terminate the battle by a retreat unless his prayer is attended to. There is no longer room, however, for such affecting scenes. To enter the field, at all is to stand at the cannon's mouth, and none will go there except at the stern command of duty.

THE DECLINE AND FALL OF NIGGER IMPERIALISM.—All the accounts received from Hayti concur in describing the fortunes of his Majesty Faustin the First as hopeless. To use an emphatic Yankee vernacular, he is a "goner," but whether physically or spiritually we have yet to learn. The last news left him ready prepared for a bolt, with his interesting family and hard savings securely freighted on a vessel in the harbor of Port au Prince. It may be, however, that Gessford has got him into his clutches, and in that case, God help him. The throne of imperial niggerdom has not been built up without a vast amount of cruelty and suffering. The hardest taskmasters in the world are the blacks who own slaves, and the hardest nigger of all was, as is well known, Souleouque. If those whom his exactions have ruined, and his persecutions driven into exile, get an opportunity of revenging their wrongs upon his person, there will be but small chance for him. The law of retaliation is an instinctive principle of nigger nature, and it would not, therefore, be surprising if the next news that reaches us is, that the Haytian revolutionists have furnished a parallel to the historical tragedies of Whitehall and the Place de la Revolution.

Among the expressions given to the general grief which the recent death of the Historian has caused, the following has a peculiar beauty. It is from the remarks of one who was connected with Mr. Prescott by social bonds, and by the sympathy of kindred pursuits. He speaks of one of the few wishes made known by the dying scholar:

"He desired that, after death, his remains might rest for a time in the cherished room where he had gathered together the intellectual treasures he had so much venerated. His wish was fulfilled. There he lay—it was only yesterday—his manly form neither wasted nor shrunk by disease—the features which had expressed and inspired so much love still hardly touched by the effacing fingers of death—there he lay, and the great lettered dead of all ages, and climes, and countries, seemed to look down upon him in their earthly and passionless immortality, and claim that his name should hereafter be imperishably united with theirs." What picture could be more expressive than these few words?—Boston Courier.

New Goods! New Goods!!

MESSRS. RADFORD, CABOT & CO., HAVE just received direct from California, a large assortment of

DRY GOODS, &c, &c., consisting of BROWN DOMESTIC,
BLUE DRILLING, PRINTS OF ALL KINDS, LAWNS, FLAIDS, ALPACAS,
FLANNELS,
MUSLIN DE LAINE, THREAD, NEEDLES, PINS, RIBBONS,

Dress Trimmings, &c. &c.
Five styles of all kinds; all of which we will sell at lowest cash prices.
24—11

HAY WANTED.

SEALED proposals will be received at this Office, until 12 o'clock m., on Friday, May 6th, 1859.

For the delivery at Fort Bridger, U. T., of 500 tons of hay.
Or 300 tons at Fort Bridger, and 200 tons on the reservation within 15 miles of the Post, and on some portion of the roads leading to the Post.
Or 200 tons at Fort Bridger, 200 tons on the reservation, within 15 miles of the Post, and 100 tons at Henry's Park, at the south western corner of the reservation.

The Hay delivered at Fort Bridger to be stacked or ricked, to protect it against the weather; and the Hay to be delivered at other points to be stacked or ricked, and enclosed by a fence of rails or poles.
The A. A. Quartermaster reserves the right to reject any of his bids that he may deem unreasonable.
No bids for less than 50 tons will be considered.
E. O. JONES,
1st Lieut. 7th Infantry, A. A. Q. M.

Office of the A. A. Quartermaster, Fort Bridger,
U. T.,
April 4th, 1859.
Desired: Now please copy, try insertions, and send bill to this Office.

FOR SALE.

EIGHTEEN acres of land with the House on the same, where I reside in the town of Fairfield, Colorado.
The property is desirable, being adjacent to Camp
Floyd. For terms inquire of me.
JAMES GALLEY.
Camp Floyd, April 6th, 1859.

NOTICE.

H. F. MORRELL, Postmaster of Great Salt Lake City, is the authorized agent in this City, for the FRANCISCO EVENING BULLETIN, and will receive subscriptions for the Daily, Weekly or Tri-Weekly Bulletins. Copies may be procured at the Post Office.
24—11

Pike's Peak! Pike's Peak!!

PERSONS about to emigrate to the gold mines, or to the States, are hereby informed that they can purchase good horses or mules at reasonable prices, from Charles Moga, at the Hot Spring Brewery—point of Mountain route at G. S. L. City.
April 7th, 1859.
24—11

Going a Hundred Better; Or, Which Hand Takes the Pot?

There is such a place as "Deadwood" in California. A friend of ours passed through the town the other day, but stopped long enough to witness a trial before the chief officer of the law, vulgarly called a Justice of the Peace. The case was "Hanks vs. Breese," and the facts were:

First—That the parties had violated the law by playing "poker" on the Sabbath. (It is, perhaps, proper to state that the good folks of Deadwood had not seen the Supreme Court decisions.)

Second—That Breese played very "low down," or, in other words, cheated plaintiff.

Third—That the game broke up in a row, the parties being arrested by the Justice, who happened to be present. It was an important case. Both parties were well known, and had hosts of friends. The defendant, through his attorney, a sharp little man, demanded a jury. The people of Deadwood never go to trial without a jury. The legal preliminaries having been properly arranged, the case was called. Twelve of the best men in the locality formed the jury. The attorneys were big with the event of the hour. At length an odd looking genius, named Stephen Lick, was placed on the stand by the prosecution. The case proceeded.

"You said you were present during the game between the parties. Did we so understand you, Mr. Lick?"

The witness nodded in the affirmative.

Did you observe the progress of the game with any interest?"

"I reckon I did—licker was penden' on it."

"What was the amount at stake, at the time the row occurred?"

"Well, the ante was two bits, and Lem Hanks bet a half on his little par. Then Bill he went in—"

"Never mind the details, interrupted the lawyer, impatiently, answer my question."

That's what I'm goin' to do, replied the witness, drawing a large black plug of tobacco from his pocket.

"You see when Lem dropped his half on the pot, Bill kivered it with a big dollar, 'cause I stood just whar I could see that he helt a little par too. Lem he then tuck a drink and 'peared sort o' keekless—"

"Come, come, again interrupted the lawyer, tell us the amount of money at stake at the time the quarrel commenced."

"Steve, said the Judge, familiarly, you say that when Bill Breese shoved up his dollar, Lem Hanks took a snifter and 'peared sort o' keekless. What did he do then?"

"Why, he seed Bill and lifted him two scads. Bill he 'peared a little uneasy, but raised Lem a five. Lem he tuck another drink and said the game was gettin' interestin' at the same time shakin' a ten dollar piece out on the same pot. Bill he then said, Lem you kinder suit me, and called out 'twenty better.' Then—"

The lawyers here protested against this manner of giving evidence, but they were overruled by the Court, who asked the witness what the parties did then.

Then we all took a small drink, and Lem spread himself. I see that matter of twenty dollars, said he, and go you thirty better."

"Will the constable please keep order in the Court room, so that the jury kin ketch all the words?" cried one of the jurors.

The witness proceeded. "Bill he then got down to scratch his foot, and when he got up he lift Lem twenty more. Then Lem began to look distressed, and pushed his shirt-sleeve up to keep it from gettin' dirty, I s'pose, but cum up bineby like a man with—"

"Stop, stop, stop, shouted one of the lawyers, whose patience was exhausted. "We do not care about so much detail, but desire simple to know what amount of money is in dispute."

"Mr. Constable, followed the Judge, who was deeply interested in the witness' story, 'do your duty.' Then fixing his eyes upon the witness, he asked: 'Steve my boy, when Bill plunged his thirty better, what did Lem come up with?'"

"Why, Lem he lifted him a cool fifty."

The Judge collapsed.

"Gentlemen of the Jury, that's so, for I was thar, and seen Lem do it."

By one of the Jury: "What did Bill do then?"

"Bill he tuck another look at his hand, and then got down and scratched his foot agin. When he came up, he said to me, said he, 'Steve, lend me a hundred dollars.' Says I, 'what fur?' He said, 'to clean out Lem Hanks.' I said, 'it can't be did on your par of juces, for he's got bully sixes.' 'Good thing,' says he, giving me a wink. 'Kiver his pile, and I'll call him.' I—"

"Never mind what you did," said the lawyer for defendant, "that has nothing to do with the merits of the case."

The Judge gave the lawyer a terrible look. Then, turning to the witness, he said, "Steve, if the Court recollects herself, then you came up with the spondulicks, and Bill Breese tuck down Lem's pile."

This announcement was followed by murmurs of dissatisfaction. The attorney for the plaintiff was the first to speak.

"Now, if your Honor pleases," said he, I would like to ask one question. How comes it that the defendant got that money, if he only had a pair of deuces against my client's sixes?"

"Yes," said several members of the jury, "how could that happen?"

"Bill did have juces fust—I'll swear to that," resumed the witness, but somehow, when it come to the last, he was stronger."

The lawyers, thinking he was about to continue the story to an endless length, requested him to be brief. Taking a fresh "chaw," Steve said:

"The way it was this: When I kivered the pile, Bill called Lem. Says he, 'Lem, what have you fur yourself?' I have three of 'em, says Lem, reachin' out his arm. Three what? says Bill. 'Nice little spots, all in the middle of the keerd,' says Lem, laying his fist on the money. 'Show 'em,' says Bill. 'Thar they be,' says Lem. 'That's clever, says Bill, but they can't win this pot. How so? says Lem, puttin' his hand on his revolver. 'Cause here's four of the same sort, says Bill, puttin' one hand on the money and 't'other on his revolver. All I know is, Bill got the pot before he was arrested."

The lawyer for the plaintiff intended to have made a good case in relation to the manner in which defendant's hand became strengthened from one little pair of "juces," to four aces; but to do so, he would probably have been called on to explain how Lem got his three "spots."

The Judge saw through the case at once. He charged the jury that if they thought there was anything wrong in a man scratching his foot during a game of poker, they would so find; but if they thought such a movement was on the square, they would also be likely to pass over the act of fumbling with shirt sleeves, committed by plaintiff. The "charge" was followed by loud demonstrations of approval, such as yelling, throwing up hats, &c. The jury, after being out just three minutes, brought in a verdict to the effect that it was a "draw game," and the Judge thereupon dismissed the case.

SUR LOVINGOOD AND THE DOG.

When I wer a boy, and my legs not longer than John Wentworth's, dad fotched home a durned, worthless, mangy, fleebitten, grey old foxhoun. good for nothing but tu swaller up what orter lined the bowels or us brats. Well, I naturally tuck a distaste to him, an had a sorter hankerin arter hurtin his feelins and discomfartin ov him every time dad's back wer turned. This sorter kept a big skeer allers afore his eyes, and a orful yell ready to pure out the fust moshun he seed me make. So he larnt to swaller things as he run, and allers kept his le's well onder himself, fur he never knowd how soon he must want tu use em in totin his infernal carcus beyond the reach ov a flyin rock. He knowd the whiz ov a rock in moshun well, and he never stopped tu see who flung hit, but just let his head fly open tu gin a howl room to cum, and sot his legs a gwine the way his nose happened to be a pintin. He'd shy round every rock he seed in the road, for he looked on it as a calamity tu cum arter him sum day. I tell you, Georgy, that runnin am the greatest invenshun on arth when used keerfully. Whar'd I a been by this time if I hadn't relyed ontu these yere legs? D'y'e see em? Don't they mind you ov a 'par ov cum-pusses made to divide a mile inter quarters? They'll do.

Well, one day I tuck a pig's bladder ni ontu the size ov a duck's aig and filled hit with powder and corked hit up with a piece of spunk, rolled hit up in a thin skulp of meat and set the spunk a fire, and flung hit out; he swallerd hit at at one yerk, and sot in tu gittin away for doin hit. I hearn a noise like bustin sumthin, and his tail lit atop ov my hat. His head wer way down the hill and hed tuck a deth holt ontu a roof. His fore legs were fifty feet up the road a makin straddil over the fence. Es to the dog, hisself, as a dog, I never seed him agin. Well, dad, durn his onstantified soul, flung five or six undered onder my shurt with the dried skin oven a bull's tail, and gin me the remainder next day with a waggin whip what he borrowed from a feller while he wur a waterin his hosses; the wagoner got sorry fur me, and holtered tu me tu turn my beggin and squallin into fust-rate runnin, which I imejutly did, and the last lick missed me about ten feet.—Exchange.

RAILROAD SCIENCE.—A writer in one of the London Scientific journals has some peculiar notions in regard to the effect upon railway traveling of the earth's rotation. It is well known that, as the earth revolves on its axis once in twenty-four hours, from west to east, the velocity of any point on its surface is greater near the equator, and less further from it, in the ratio of the cosine of the latitude. Thus, according to this ratio, the difference between the relative velocity of the earth in surface motion at London and at Liverpool is about twenty-eight miles per hour; and this amount of lateral movement is to be gained or lost as respects the locomotive, in each journey, according to the direction traveled in from one place to the other; and in proportion to the speed will be the pressure against the sides of the rails, which, at a high velocity, will give the engine a tendency to climb the right hand rail in each direction.

Peale's famous painting, the "Court of Death," has been purchased by a western speculator for $20,000. He intends to have it engraved and the engravings colored, and one hundred thousand copies sold at one dollar each. The picture will then be disposed of by lottery, each purchaser of the engraving receiving a ticket, and running the one-hundred-thousandth chance of getting the original.

There are 7,779 dram-shops in New York, or one for every eighty of the population; young and old. Of the whole number, just seventy-two pay the decent respect to the law to procure a license to sell intoxicating drinks, less than one in one hundred! It is officially stated that 3,186 of those drinking saloons pursue their traffic on Sunday; and, at a low estimate, the sum of $1,348,360 is expended in them on the Sundays of a year.

QUEEN VICTORIA, who will not be forty until next May, has become entitled to the venerable title of "grandma." On the 27th of January, precisely a year and a day after her marriage with Prince Frederick William of Prussia, the Princess Royal of England had become the mother of a boy. The news reached Windsor Castle, from Berlin, exactly six minutes after the event. Had the Atlantic cable been at work, America would have had the news some four to five hours before the noted time of its occurrence in Prussia! Where is De Sautey?

The eminent musical inventor Sax, of the Saxhorn, has long been a sufferer from cancer, and the leading physicians, Velpeau and Ricord, who had been in attendance, pronounced him incurable.

OPPOSITION IS THE LIFE OF TRADE.

The Subscriber having made important improvements in the manufacture of Whisky now enabled to sell it at

THREE DOLLARS A GALLON.

It is a large Rectifier in successful operation, and he can now recommend it to the public as the most superior article ever brought into this market.

Big Cottonwood Distillery, three miles south of the Sugar House, or at Mr. G. Clements, Salt Lake City. 22-11

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS, ATTORNEY AT LAW.

Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Courts, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional engagements.

Office—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store. G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858. 1-11

LAW NOTICE. ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business intrusted to him.

Office with Dr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs. G. S. L. City. 17-11

LIQUORS!

BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell the best St. Louis Rectified Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors in proportion. MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. 16-11

LAGER BEER

HOT SPRING BEWERY.

WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

X.X.X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals, $1 00
Supper, breakfast and lodging, 2 00
For animals, from a single feed of hay, per head, 50
" " " hay and grain, " 1 00
and double those prices for feed over night.

N. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery. MCGO, BURR & CO. Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

SALT LAKE HOUSE.

JAMES TOWNSEND, Proprietor.

Prices of Board.
Board and Lodging per week, $12 50
Board, (without Lodging), 10 00
Board, per day, 2 50
Supper, Breakfast and Lodging, 2 00
Single meal, 1 00
Animals, per night, hay and grain, 2 00
Payments to be made in advance.

U. S. MAIL LINE
From St. Joseph to Great Salt Lake City.

NOTICE is hereby given that passengers will not be carried by us on any section of this mail route until further notice, and that the agents and conductors on the route are positively forbidden from taking passengers, on any conditions whatever.

J. M. ROCKADAY & CO.,
Feb. 14, 1858. By P. K. Dotson, Agent.

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co.
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS, WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco,
Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco,
Powder, Shot, Playing Cards,
Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon,
Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.
Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky,
Dark do do Bourbon do do
New York do Rectified do do
Gin, Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES.
French Mustard, Mixed Pickles,
Durham do Assorted do
Assorted Jams, do Gherkins, do do do
do Jellies, Piccolilli,
do Syrups, Pickled Onions,
do Cordials, Tomato Catsup,
Brandy Peaches, Walnut Catsup,
do Cherries, Mushroom Catsup,
do Pears, Cayenne Pepper,
Assorted West India Cellery Seed,
Preserves, Spanish Olives,
Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Pepper Sauce,
Peach do do Assorted Sauce,
Apple do do do Nat. Preserves,
Plumb do do Capers Capoties,
Raspberry do do Natural Pres'd Pines,
Gooseberry do do Roast Turkey,
Blackberry Brandy, Roast Chicken,
Raspberry Brandy, String Beans,
Fresh Lobster, Green Peas,
Pickled do do do Corn,
Fresh Clams, Assorted Herbs,
Mince Meat, do Sweetmeats,
Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved
Fresh Cauliflower, Peaches,
Pickled do Nat'l Preserved Straw-
Worcestershire Sauce, berries,
Stoughton Bitters, Natural Preserved
Fresh Salmon, Damsons,
Fresh Tomatoes, Mushrooms,
French Pickles, Asparagus,
Hotseter Bitters, Tarragon Vinegar,
Boker's do do Fields' Oysters,
Le Drard's do Cove do
Royal Windsor do Pine Apple Cheese,
Maraschino, Olive Oil,
Curacao, Assorted Candies,
Absynth, Raisins,
Scotch Ale, Almonds,
London Porter, English Walnuts,
Scheidam Schnapps, Brazil Nuts,
Golden Grape Cognac, Figs,
Old Virginia Peach Dates,
Brandy, Prunes,
Mountain Dew Whis-Pecans,
ky, Crackers,
Family Supplies, Cracknells,
Morning Call, E. D. Cheese,
Indian Queen Madria,
also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps,
Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware,
Ladies Shoes, Notions,
Woolen Gloves, Hosiery,
do Mitts, Buck Gloves,
do Scarfs, do Mitts,
Stationery, &c., do Gaunfleets,
All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce.
G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858. 611

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

A CARD.

The undersigned would most respectfully inform the citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have also established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same low form rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKADEE & CO.
In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our true and low expected. 1-11

L. & A. CARR, WHOLESALE BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS AND

BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,

No. 49 Main Street, ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetics, grammars, geography, philosophies, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY,

BLANK BOOKS,

PRINTING AND WRITING PAPER,

Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having on

EXTENSIVE BINDERY,
Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice.

14-11

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL,
AT CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY.
CHARLES HARRISON, PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders can always be accommodated with the best of the market efforts, and neat and comfortable appointments. P. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce. 19-11

NEW GOODS.
JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market. GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

ST. NEWARD.
STRAYED or stolen from point of West Mountain (Low's Ranch) one strawberry roan Horse, branded Jt on the near shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return. RADFORD, CABOT & CO. 10-11

FOR SALE.
LAGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Wm. Burr & Co. RADFORD, CABOT & CO. 10-11

FOR SALE.
ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange for them, wheat, oats, and barley. CHARLES MCGO. Hot Spring Brewery. 10-11

W. W. HAYLES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS.
WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City, and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch material, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Stubbins, at the Store at Livingston, Elkhead & Co. is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage. G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859. 10-11

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-11

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's store. 2-11

RADFORD, CABOT & CO., WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC., &c.

At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T. 1-6m

WAGONS.
A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

EMPIRE SALOON.
THE BAR is now furnished with a large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., purchased with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESOME refreshments is especially called. 2-11 JOHN E. WALLACE.

COW STRAYED.
ON the 23d October last, a small young light red COW, white face, and a thick rope around her horns, horns small, was giving milk, though she was branded Atwood on the hip, though not certain. Please bring her to Curtis R. Blinn, 12th ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded. 1-11

WORK CATTLE.
100 Yoke of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

MILLER, RUSSELL & Co., Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, BOOKS & SHOES, HATS & CAPS, HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS

and out-fitting goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has ever been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figures, for Cash or Country Produce. 1-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

WANTED:
A FEW good Mules in exchange for good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 8-11

KIRK ANDERSON'S VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, APRIL 19, 1859.

NUMBER 25.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

THE PARRISH MURDER.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. ALVIRA L. PARRISH.

"ALVIRA L. PARRISH being sworn, says, that a few days before my husband and son were murdered, Wilber J. Earl and Abram F. McDonald, came to my house about dusk in the evening, and took my husband out. My son followed, and McDonald drove him back. Then I went out and crossed the street into my nephew's house, and stood at the open window, the house being an unfinished one, and heard McDonald tell my husband that he could never see his grey horses any more. My husband replied, that if he would let him go to Brigham Young, he would bring papers to show that the horses belonged to him and no one else. McDonald said we don't care for Brigham Young, and if you start to see him you will never live to get there. My husband then opened his bedroom, and told them, if they wanted to kill him to do it now. McDonald said we don't want to shed blood now."

"On the Sunday following, after I heard this conversation, Mr. Parrish started with Abraham Durfee from our house about two o'clock in the afternoon, and in the evening Mr. Durfee came back, and took my two sons out; soon after they left the house I heard a gun fire. This was a little after dark, and shortly after the police came and searched my house for Orrin, and told me that they wanted his body dead or alive. I told them he was not there, but Carnes, the Captain of the police told them to search the house, and they searched it. I remained in the house all night, much alarmed and very lonesome. I went to the door occasionally and saw some men fixing a wagon, and passing frequently with candles in their hands, from John Daily's house to the wagon. I saw the wagon move off in the direction that my sons went. It proved to be the wagon that brought in the dead bodies. G. McKinnzie told me that he was ordered by the Bishop to drive the wagon out, but did not know at the time, what he was going after; that when they arrived at the place, they threw the dead bodies of my husband, my son and Mr. Potter, into the wagon like dead hogs, and said: 'This is the way the damned apostates go.'"

"The next morning after this, my brother-in-law, Ezra Parrish came to my house and told me that Orrin was at his house guarded by four policemen. He told me to come over, but to be as calm as possible. I went over and found Orrin there in bed guarded by four men. I knew none of the men but William Johnson. I stepped toward the bed to ask my son, if he knew where his father was, but Mr. Johnson jerked me away, and said if I wanted to talk, I must talk loud, I then asked him loud if he knew where his father was? He said he had not seen him. Soon after that, my son Albert came and told me that his father, and his brother and Mr. Potter, were all dead in the school house. Soon after that, they came and took Orrin over to the school house. I followed, but was so prostrated by the circumstances that I was not able to go alone, but was assisted by my nephew and brother-in-law. When I got to the school house, I heard them ask Orrin if he had been accessory to the murder. He stated on oath that he had not, and that he did not know who did it. Orrin was at this time very much embarrassed. He was discharged after they found that he knew nothing."

"After the burial I was required to pay $48.00, for funeral expenses, before I could get back my husband's watch, and other things he had with him. On a second visit to the school house I noticed that a knife had been drawn through my husband's left hand, the fore finger hung by the skin; his hand and left arm were all cut up with a knife, a large gash in the back of his head. One of his suspenders was cut off, the knife pierced his body, then another wound lower down and more in front. There was forty-eight holes in his coat all caused by stabs, examined and counted them myself. Mr. Parrish's throat was cut from ear to ear, his watch had saved him one stab, there was the mark of a knife on it. There was four bullet holes in the left side of my son. My husband had a territorial order in his pocket book when he left home called for $500; I never got it back, when I got this pocket-book it had a few jewels in it belonging to my sons, a medal, a half dollar, a twenty-five cent piece, the paper containing the conversation between my husband, and Earl, and McDonald was in it, but it was not returned."

"This Spring, when Bishop Johnson of Springville, went to the Legislature, I asked him why the horses had not been returned. Told him about ten yards of linen which had been stolen. Mr. Carnes had taken the linen, and restored only a few yards, the rest was missing. The linen was nineteen and a half yards—to make one shroud, not more than seven yards would have been required. Only three and a half yards were returned. Asked the Bishop about the Territorial order; he said, he had it probably among his papers, and would give it to me if he could find it. He never gave it to me."

"Mr. Dibble, who was on the coroner's inquest, said, that when he examined the pocket book on the inquest, he saw no papers of any kind. I went to Salt Lake City in July 1857, to see Brigham Young, in accordance with a promise I had made my husband. Brigham told me he knew nothing of the affair. Springville was fifteen years ahead of him. He would have stopped it, had he known anything about it. I asked him about the horses; he said, he would do every thing he could do, to have the horses restored to me, he would write to me after seeing Mr. Bullock and others. Told him Gee had possession of the horses, and that he had said nothing but an order from Brigham could get them."

"Brigham's clerk put down in a book what I said. Brigham never wrote to me. I went to see him this winter, he wouldn't see me; it was between Christmas and New Year. Couldn't see him. I went to Brigham Young's office about 8 o'clock in the morning, and sat there till 4 o'clock in the afternoon. His clerks were present. At 4 o'clock I was told that I couldn't see Brigham Young that day, but next day to call and see him, between 8 and 11 o'clock in the morning. I came next morning, and was told I couldn't see him, that he saw nobody. Mr. Sharp, chief of the police in Salt Lake City, when I was going out called me back, and asked me, what I would do about it; I told him I didn't know. I went to John Young's, from there to Mr. Long's, and noticed Mr. Sharp and one of the clerks following me, they called after me, they said I should wait till the soldiers had left, and I would get back my horses, and fourfold with them. It would be best for me to drop it. They told me to go to Bishop Hunter and try to settle the matter. I would not go."

"The first day I was in Brigham's office, I was told by the clerk, 'Brigham Young don't want to see anybody, such business should be put into the hands of the bishops—to see Bishop Hancock, Bishop Johnson, and Bishop Roeberly, and they would settle it. The clerk said, Brigham had told him to tell me, he did not want to see me."

"There had been public preaching at Springville, to the effect that no apostates would be allowed to leave, if they did, hogholes would be stopped up with them. I heard these sermons myself. Elder Hyde and President Snow, and others, preached that way. My husband was no believer in the doctrine of killing to 'save,' as taught by the teachers."

TESTIMONY OF ORRIN E. PARRISH.

"Orrin E. Parrish, being sworn, says: He was 20 years old last July; lived with his father's family in Springville in March, 1857. Family consisted of father, mother and six children. Eldest brother, William Beason, aged 22. Witness next lived in Jas. O'Bannon's house, double house; we lived in one end, O'Bannon in the other. We came here from Council Bluffs."

"Father, brother and Potter were murdered on the evening of the 14th March, 1857. About a week before the murder, Wm. Johnson, Mr. Metcalf, and a person whose name witness does not recollect, came to father's as teachers, and questioned father about his religion, whether he prayed, and what he intended to do; don't recollect all that was said, but they didn't seem pleased with father's answers."

"A night or two after, our four horses and carriage were stolen; they were in the stable on the lot where we lived. We found two of the horses before father's death, in Kim Bullock's stable in Provo; got them back, after father's death, from the Bishop. Bullock said they were brought and put in his stable at night, and he did not know who by. Lysander Gee, of Tooele city, has the other horses. Saw him driving them last fall in G. S. L. City, and riding one of them, and another man the other, in Echo Canyon, five or six days after father's death."

"Two or three days before the murder, Wilber J. Earl and Abram T. McDonald came to our house, called father out, and went across the street behind an unfinished house belonging to cousin. Witness started to follow, but was driven back by A. F. McDonald, who said they wanted to talk privately to father. Mother went over into the house, and returned in about ten minutes. Father soon after came in. Father afterwards wrote on a piece of paper what was said to him. Witness thinks it read about as follows: 'Abram F. McDonald and Wilber J. Earl says that I (William R. Parrish) will never see my grey horses any more, and if I start to the city to see Brigham Young I will never live to get there.'"

"Abraham Durfee was at our house frequently after the 1st of March, and up to the time of the murder he lived half a mile from our house. Pretended to father that he could not stand Mormonism any longer, and that he wanted to get out of the country. Durfee and Potter were there most every day. The arrangement was finally made that father, brother, Durfee, Potter and myself were to start on Sunday night, the 14th March, 1857. They talked the matter over, and concluded that it would not be safe to start in daytime; if we did we would be followed and killed as apostates. It was arranged to go out after dark, and meet about quarter of a mile south of the city wall, at a corner of the lane fence."

"Durfee and Potter were at our house at 10 o'clock on the Sunday of the murder. Durfee was there also at 2 o'clock, at which time he and father left, directing us boys where to meet after dark. Durfee came back before dark, again after dark, last time said father sent word to mother to send us out, whether ready or not. Durfee and brother started; I remained at the door talking to mother a minute or two, then overtook them; we went out through south gate of city wall. Two persons followed us on the street; did not talk much. Brother and I carried bundles of provision and ammunition."

"Durfee left us at the gate, said he was going home to get his gun; directed us to go to south west corner of city wall; went as directed. Saw no person; heard them inside the wall. Durfee came to us, had his gun; asked brother to go with him to get some things that he said he had hid out during the day; returned to me in ten minutes. Durfee said he could not find the things. While they were absent a gun was fired apparently about the corner of the lane fence where we were to meet. When they got back I asked what it meant. Durfee said some Indians might be camped down there; then he said it might be a signal from father or Potter. We then started a south east course towards the corner where we were to meet. Crossed the fence one or two hundred yards north of the place into the road. After we got into the road, Durfee called out: 'Duff, Duff, Duff' three times; Potter's name was Duff. We then stopped and looked to the fence on the east side of the road. No one answered. We went on towards the corner, when within fifteen or twenty feet of the corner, a person at the corner called out Durfee three times; Durfee answered. Immediately a gun or pistol was fired; brother Beason fell (Beason is brother William's middle name). I was nearest Durfee; brother farthest away and a head of us. Durfee had a blanket and black hat on, had a gun and revolver. Brother had a black hat on; Durfee knew we had no arms. Durfee said, 'My God, what does this mean.' Witness was close to him, but steep away; Durfee drew up his gun, and pointed it at witness and burst a cap, the gun failing to go off. Witness went further off from Durfee. Another gun then fired at corner of fence; then two or three other shots were fired, one ball passed through a cartridge box witness had on (cartridge box shown, with ball hole in it)."

"Witness jumped fence and ran for the city; climbed the wall at a place where it was low about 7 feet high, and was severely injured in getting off it; when he crossed Hobbie creek, heard person behind ask which way he went. Witness ran to his uncle's house; some ten or twelve men were standing in the street a little to the left. Witness got in so quick they could not catch him. Uncle, aunt and cousins at home. Told them that Beason had been shot. Asked uncle to go and see if he was alive. Uncle was afraid to go. Got Robert Brooks to go. Brooks went; returned in a short time (20 minutes), and said he went to the south city gate, was there met by a lot of men who told him to go back if he wanted to live."

"Half an hour after Brooks returned, Wilber J. Earl, H. H. Carnes, Daniel Stanton, Sanford Fuller, Andrew Wiles, and a man by the name of Curtis, came to uncle's; Carnes asked for me, said he wanted me dead or alive. Witness was sick from hurt in jumping the wall, and had laid down in bed; made me get up to see if I was shot. Told him I was sick; got up, set in chair; felt my shoulders and arms, and examined me to see if I was shot. Said he had a 'write for me, and I must go with him. Aunt said

I was sick and not able to go. That no matter; when they took me, she would follow them, and that they could guard me; then a guard was left over me. In the morning, John Daily, William Johnson, and a man I don't recollect were there as a guard. Ten or eleven o'clock, was taken by John Daily and others to the meeting house. John M. Stuart acted as justice of the peace; twenty or thirty men there. Durfee and I were sworn. Durfee was examined first; don't recollect all he said; he said he snapped a cap at the enemy. I told them I knew nothing about it more than Durfee had stated, that I saw no body, but saw something dark towards the corner of the fence. My uncle got a chance to speak to me in the morning, and he told me to say that I knew nothing; said if they found out that I knew anything, they would kill me. That was the reason I testified that way. They discharged me. The voice I heard at the corner of the fence calling Durfee, was Carnes' voice; he has a peculiar voice; I knew it well, and cannot be mistaken. The dead bodies were at the meeting or school when we were sworn. Father laid in the middle, his throat was cut; body was covered up. Brother fell forward when shot on his hands; five or six shots fired; four ball holes in brother's coat, entering on one side of the breast, and coming out on the back. (Coat produced and identified). Never suspected Durfee's treachery until he pointed the gun at me. Heard father say that Durfee's life had been threatened. Eight o'clock in the evening, when they were murdered."

THE FARCE OF A "COURT OF INQUIRY."

"The following is the examination referred to by Orrin E. Parrish in his testimony; it is copied from a loose sheet of paper in the docket of John M. Stuart, and must satisfy any reasonable person that the anxiety manifested by the diligent police in searching for Orrin—placing a large guard over him when injured and scarcely able to get out of bed; treating him as a criminal in custody; not allowing even his mother to speak to him, unless she spoke loud; taking him to the school-house as a prisoner, and then swearing him and Durfee;—was for no other purpose than to find out if he could identify any of the murderers. If he had said he knew any of them, no doubt he would soon after have been killed by assassins to the jurors unknown.—EDITOR."

REPORT OF THE COURT OF INQUIRY, Held in the School-house, Springville, March 16th, 1857.

Said court was held to inquire into the reasons why Abram Durfee and Orrin Parrish should be held in custody of the police."

H. H. Kearns, captain of the police, was called, and stated that Cyrus Sandford, city marshal, delivered into his custody Abram Durfee, who had stated 'that he had reason to suppose that certain men had been murdered south of this city, and as he also said that the young man Parrish was in company with him, and believed he had also come into the city.' I directed his arrest, that he also might be in safe-keeping until proper investigation could be made."

"Abram Durfee, being sworn, stated that it had been arranged between myself and G. Potter and the Parrishes, that they would leave the country—that he in company with the two sons of William Parrish left the city by the west gate, and proceeded to the south-west corner of the fort wall; he had arranged to meet with Potter and Parrish at the corner of Child's field; they were to go on before. When we reached the corner of the wall, we heard a gun fired. I thought it might be Potter and Parrish firing a gun off to let us know their whereabouts. We went on, and when we got pretty near the corner of the field, I spoke and called Potter, but no one answered. I spoke again, and some one spoke; I don't know whether it was Potter or not. Just then a gun fired, and the boy Parrish fell on my right. I ran; then another gun fired. I then heard a gun fire the third time. There must have been more than one gun fired from the reports. I did not see Potter or Parrish; I don't know whether they were there or not. I did not see any body, only the two boys, this one that is here and the one that fell. I should not have seen any body ten feet off, it was so dark. A ball passed just in front of me; at the first fire I saw the boy fall. I cannot tell how far it was from the corner; I should think we were about ten feet from the fence. I do not know whether the boy that fell went away or not, I did not see him more. I ran from the spot when I heard the fire, and saw him fall; this was about 7 o'clock in the evening."

Orrin or Oran Parrish, sworn, said he went out with his brother, as Durfee had stated. On the first gun my brother fell; there were four or five guns fired after. I don't know whether I saw any person. I saw something black. I ran off after the first fire I saw my brother fall."

The court decided that there was no just cause to hold the men in custody any longer, and that they be released."

Prisoners discharged. P.S.—Durfee also said that he had no idea of any one being aware of their intention of leaving the place."

(Signed) P. M. Westwood, Clerk.

AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH BARTHOLOMEW, TERRITORY OF UTAH, ss.

Joseph Bartholomew, of Springville, in the county of Utah aforesaid, being duly sworn, deposes and says:—

Duff Potter came to me and notified me to attend a meeting at Bishop Johnson's, about the 1st of March, 1857. In pursuance of that notice we met at Bishop Johnson's, in a private council meeting. I do not recollect what was done at this first meeting; there was merely some talk about persons leaving and matters and things connected therewith, of which I do not remember the particulars. In about a week after that they met again, and at that meeting Potter and Durfee were 'dropped off' or selected for the purpose of finding out what was going on."

"At the meeting the conversation was about the Parrishes and about persons at the Indian farm. The meeting was called to enter into arrangements to find out what these persons expected to do. That is what I understood was the purpose of these two meetings. I did not attend any meetings after this. At this meeting it was not known what the Parrishes intended to do, and nothing was decided on in regard to them. Bishop Johnson made a remark however, that some of us would yet 'see the red stuff run.' He said he had a letter, and the remark was made by some one that 'dead men tell no tales.' I do not know whether any other meetings were held or not."

"The same night that the Parrishes were killed, at about nine o'clock, I was notified by Carnes to go home and get my gun. I asked him what was up. He said there was enough up. I was just returning from a public meeting which had been held that night; they did not tell me what they wanted with me. Bishop Johnson, Lorenzo Johnson, A. F. McDonald, Mayor John M. Stewart, Justice of the Peace; Wilber J. Earl, Alderman, now captain of Police; Andrew Wiles, William Bird, Lorin Roundy, Simmons Curtis, Abraham Durfee, Duff Potter and myself were at the council meetings, and other persons I do not remember the names of. There were at least 15 present."

"I went and got my gun and came back and was told to take my post and watch west of Parrish's house 3 rods; I was told to 'stay there and watch if Orrin Parrish came back. I stayed there some 10 or 15 minutes when I was notified to repair to the school house; I don't remember who notified me."

"When I got there, there was a company formed there with a wagon and team. We were ordered to march south, down the lane; formed as a guard in front of the team; I did not know at that time for what purpose. When we got out at the south gate I learned then what was up. When we reached the bodies we were formed into two companies, one to go to the south east; and one to the west; I went to the west side of the street from where the bodies lay. They were on east side and we were on the west side. The street is 8 rods wide. The companies were divided before we came to the bodies. There were two persons beside myself in the company I was with and about 3 in the other. There were some 10 or 15 altogether that went out. Of these I remember the following: A. F. McDonald, John M. Stewart, Philo Dibble, Geo. McKinnzie went as teamster; Davis Clark, Simmons Curtis, John Daley, Moses Daley Jr., and John Curtis. Carnes, the captain of police, called us together and told us to start out."

"While I and the two with me were standing as guard, the others went and found the bodies. When the bodies were found we were called together and I saw the bodies of Potter and Wm. Parrish lying side by side. The body of Beason Parrish was lying about 50 yards to the south east of the other bodies, from the corner of the fence."

"The bodies were put into the wagon and taken to the school house. The bodies were searched and a note taken of the effects found on the bodies, the pocket books, knives, &c. A guard was put around the school house that night. I was called to take charge of the house and to wash the bodies and lay them out. Edward Hall and Thomas Cordingley (since dead) assisted me."

Old man Parrish was cut all over with

[Continued on fourth page.]

[Continued from fourth page.]

AFFIDAVIT OF ZEPHANIAH J. WARREN.
TERRITORY OF UTAH,
Provo City, Utah County, ss.
Second Judicial District.

Zephaniah J. Warren, being duly sworn, says as follows: I am fifty-seven years old; I came to Utah in the year A. D. 1852. I came from Iowa to this Territory; I settled in the town of Springville, Utah County, when I came into this valley, and have resided there ever since with the exception of about seven months absence in California, in the years 1856 and 1857. I reside at Springville now. On my way home from California in the spring of 1857, I heard of the murder of the two Parrishes and Potter; the day I arrived at Springville I saw the place where they were murdered. Seeing the place and the appearance of blood, I became somewhat excited and spoke very reproachfully of the leading men of Springville; however, tried to reconcile my mind enough to stay until I could dispose of my property, and get away with my family, I did not say much to anybody, unless I was interrogated, during the whole season. I heard of many threats being thrown out against me in the meeting house by the overseers, but I did not use much caution; I was thrown off my guard by supposing that they dare not touch me. In the latter part of August I was very feeble, from a severe cold, so that I was confined in my house and in bed much of the time. On the night of the 31st of August 1857, I arose from my bed and applied some medicine to my eyes, which occasioned great pain. During the time a person knocked at my door; I bade him come in. Two men came in. William Johnson and Oliver McBride. They asked me if Mr. Warren was at home, I told them I was the man, but was very feeble; they told me brother Earl wished to see me a few minutes just here. I said I would not go but would try to see him in the morning, if I was able. They said they were policemen and brother Earl told them, if I did not come willingly, they must bring me by force. I insisted on them to wait till my own would come home, as I did not want to go alone. They said they would not wait, and that I must and should go immediately. I told them I would go that I was not conscious of any crime, and was not afraid to go; and if it was not far I would do my best. I went out into the street in company with these two men; I found six others standing in the street; there names were Wilber J. Earl, Sanford Fuller, Abraham Durfee, John Curtis, Lehi Curtis and Simmons P. Curtis. They were all armed with pistols, knives and guns. Earl told me to be still and go with them out of the city gate. I told them I would not go one step without the knowledge of the public. Earl seized me by the throat, paying damn your old heart if you speak another loud word, applying his kn to my throat; saying, "I will cut your throat on the spot." They then, Johnson and Earl, took me by force and dragged me on the ground most of the time for about sixty rods, through the gate; they then suddenly stopped, and some one said there is some one coming; damn him, stop him, stop him," two ran back, and the other six threw me into a fence ditch. Earl then seized me by the throat, saying, you damned old American, you will never write or talk any more about people that have been murdered. They then, all but one left me, and held a private conversation on the other side of the road, lasting perhaps an hour; then six of them came back, and Earl said, we have concluded to let you live a few days, if you will now swear before us that you will never divulge what has been done to you; to night to any person, and go within a day or two and settle up your thing, as all men in these valleys have now got to be tithed; we have declared war against the whole world; and at any time we can put you aside very easy. I did promise that I would go and settle my tithing that they required. They then all addressed me, one by one, advised me to make friends with the Mormons, never to write any more or try to make myself as one of the Gentiles. They then left me. A short time after I went to the Bishop and tried to settle for my tithing. The Bishop became so much enraged at my talking to him, that I could not settle that time, and I never tried again until the spring of 1858; the Bishop then appeared in a very good humor, and soon told me what my tithing was. He did not take my note, supposed he had forgot it. Since that time, which was about the time the army came in, he always appeared very hostile sending me word to come and settle up my tithing. I always told the men he sent, that I never would settle the tithing; that I had been forced by duress to say that I would, in order to save my life.

(Signed) Z. F. WARREN.
Sworn and subscribed before me this 26th day of March, A. D. 1859.
JOHN CRADLEBAUGH JUDGE.

AFFIDAVIT OF ALVA A. WARREN.
TERRITORY OF UTAH,
Provo City, Utah County, ss.
Second Judicial District.

Alva A. Warren, being duly sworn, says as follows: I am twenty-two years old; I am the son of Zephaniah J. Warren. I came to Springville with my father in 1852, and have resided in Springville ever since, and reside there now. On the night of the 31st of August, 1857, I came up to my father's house, just as two men, William Johnson and Oliver McBride, were bringing my father out of the house. My father asked me to go with him; I said I would. The two men said, "You need not go; we are not going to hurt him." I went till I came to the other six men, and then William Johnson said, "You can't go any further, we are not going to hurt him." I stopped, and they went on till they got opposite to Earl's house, and I heard a noise that I thought was father's voice, and I went on, down to where they were; and Lehi Curtis ordered me to be taken back, and John Curtis came and took me back about one hundred and fifty yards from where they were then; and John Curtis and myself staid there till father came back. Then father and I went home, and William Johnson and Oliver McBride came and called for me, and I went up with them to Earl's house, and they made me promise never to say anything about it.

(Signed) ALVA A. WARREN.
Sworn and subscribed before me this 26th day of March, A. D. 1859.
(Signed) Jno. CRADLEBAUGH, Judge, &c.

The following affidavit, it will be observed, is given without the name. The reason for suppressing the name of the maker is, that he is residing in Springville, has his property and family there, and begged of the Judge that his name should not be made public until he had disposed of his property, and could get to where he could have his family protected, which he intends doing as soon as possible. The Judge refuses to allow us to use his name, as his life might thereby be endangered.—Ed.

TERRITORY OF UTAH, ss.
Utah County,

being duly sworn, says he has lived in Springville since 1853. Was there at the time the Parrishes and Potter were murdered; had a conversation a short time before the murder with Moses Daily, jr.; he said that they had been ordered never to let the Parrishes go out of Springville or the Territory. Said he called on me to join them. I told him I would not, that I did no such job. He then said, for God's sake, not to tell of it. He said the orders were from Orson Hyde. Orson Hyde had just been preaching at Springville. Three or four days afterwards, Daily came to me again and said, "I am glad of one thing; they have shouldered off taking care of the Parrishes onto somebody else. He appeared glad that he had got rid of it, and further said not."

Sworn to and signed before me this 1st day of April, A. D. 1859.
Jno. CRADLEBAUGH, Judge 2nd Judicial District.

COPY OF CORONER'S INQUEST,
Copied from the Justice's Docket for Springville Precinct.

SPRINGVILLE, March 15, 1857.
This day, about 10 o'clock, p.m., I, John M. Stewart, an acting justice of the peace, in the county of Utah, U. T., was called upon, and informed that some dead bodies had been found near this city. I considered the matter; and as no coroner was at hand, I considered it my duty to hold an inquest over said bodies. Accordingly I summoned twelve discreet men, and proceeded to the spot where said bodies were said to have been discovered, which is about 120 rods south of the north gate of Springville City. When we arrived there we found two dead bodies, two guns, some two or three blankets, and sack of bread, &c.

I qualified the jury, and we proceeded to examine the bodies. The first body examined was recognized to be Wm. B. Parrish. It appeared to the jury that he came to his death in consequence of many knife wounds inflicted on his body, and especially in his throat. The second was ascertained to be Gardner G. Potter, in whose breast were discovered four ball holes, which no doubt caused his death. A third body was found by the guard some fifteen rods from the two former, in almost an east direction. This body was recognized as Beason Parrish. He had been shot with two balls in the front part of his left arm, and three in the back of his left shoulder, which, no doubt, caused his death.

The decision, or verdict of the jury was as follows, viz.: "The above named bodies all came to their death by the hands of assassins, to us unknown."

JOHN M. STEWART, J. P.
A. F. McDonald, foreman,
M. N. Crandal,
N. T. Guymon,
Uriah Curtis,
S. P. Curtis,
John Daley,
Wm. Smith,
G. McKenzie,
Philo Dibble,
Wilber J. Earl,
Joseph Bartholomew,
Thos. G. Sprague.

Property found on the bodies
On the person of Wm. B. Parrish, one pair buckskin gloves; one watch, going 5 minutes past 11; a purse, with a few trinkets; 1 large dirk-knife; 1 pocket knife; 1 pistol loaded and capped; worsted, needles and thread; 1 small piece of tobacco, one small handkerchief, two combs, and a small box of matches.
On the person of G. G. Potter, 1 powder horn with powder; 4 bullets, and a few caps. On the person of Beason Parrish, pouch and powder horn, containing 1 box of caps, 1 1/2 pound balls, 1 charger, 1 pair moccasins, 1 pair bullet moulds, 1 belt and knife, 1 large box of matches, some pepper, 1 awl, small flowered cloth and ribbon, and one pipestem. Also found on the ground, 1 sistrappe, 3 blankets, one rifle loaded, not capped; 1 double-barrel gun, a Minie rifle, the other for shot. The rifle barrel shot off; 2 sacks, the first containing 7 plugs of tobacco, 2 pair socks, 1 pair fine pants, drawers inside, three cheek shirts, 1 red over-shirt, shaving implements, 2 pair cotton pants, 1 comfort, 2 suspenders, 1 butcherknife, hats lying near the bodies. Second sack, containing two large loaves of bread and quantity of biscuit, 2 tin cups, 1 lb. bullets, some coffee and sugar.

I took the bodies, and everything found on and about them, to the Springville school-house, where they were strictly guarded, washed and dressed. I ordered coffins to be prepared, graves to be dug, and the bodies to be decently interred. It was understood that the friends of the Parrishes would defray their funeral expenses. Subsequently I delivered the found property, claimed by the friends of the two Parrishes, to Orrin Parrish. I had caused the clothes of Potter to be washed and delivered them, and the found property claimed by his friends to them.

(Signed) J. M. STEWART, J. P.

COPY OF CORONER'S INQUEST,
Copied from a loose sheet of paper in the above named docket.

"Springville City, Utah County, U. T., 16th March, 1857.
We, the undersigned Jurors, being summoned on the night of the 15th inst., to hold an inquest on dead bodies found about 120 rods south of the south gate of Springville City, we repaired to the bodies. We were there and then duly sworn to examine the bodies, and render a just verdict thereon. The first body was recognized to be Wm. B. Parrish, his head lying east; three cuts and one shot in the neck; one of these a large gash on the left side throat; three stabs in back on the left side.
The second was recognized to be Gardner G. Potter, lying in the same position, beside the other body; four ball holes in the breast. Both these bodies had been apparently dragged from the middle of the State road about two and a half rods east.
A third body was found by the guard fifteen rods east from where the other bodies lay; he was recognized to be Beason Parrish, lying on his back, head east; three bullet holes under left shoulder.

From the above testimony and others which we availed ourselves of at the place of examination, we render the following verdict, viz.: That they all came to their death by the hands of assassins to us unknown.

[Signed same as inquest taken from the book.—Ed.]

The inquest taken from the book of the justice runs through several pages from the 44th to the 52nd, evidently having been written long after the time of holding the pretended inquest. It was written on small spaces left on the docket, where other regular entries had been made, in order to make it appear as though it was placed there at the time that it should have been. The reader should observe the character of these precious documents, and the fact that the justice and many of the jurors are found in the council meetings spoken of by Bartholomew and Durfee: several of them were on the Grand Jury in the District Court at the term lately held by Judge Cradlebaugh.

Murder of Henry Jones and his Mother.

AFFIDAVIT OF NATHANIEL CASE.
TERRITORY OF UTAH, ss.
Cedar County.

Nathaniel Case being sworn, says: that he has resided in the Territory of Utah since the year 1850; lived with Bishop Hancock (Charles Hancock) in the town of Payson, at the time Henry Jones and his mother were murdered, about the 15th of April, 1858. The night prior to the murder a secret council meeting was held in the upper room of Bishop Hancock's house; saw Charles Hancock, George W. Hancock, Daniel Rawson, James Bracken, George Patten and Price Nelson go into that meeting that night. Meetings had been held pretty regularly for three weeks before the last one at the same place. I was not in any of the meetings; I boarded at the bishop's. About 8 o'clock in the evening of the murder the company gathered at Bishop Hancock's; the same persons I have named above were in the company. They said they were going to guard a corral where Henry Jones was going to come that night and steal horses; they had guns.

I had a good minnie rifle and Bishop Hancock wanted to borrow it; I refused to lend it to him. The above persons all went away together; I don't know what time they got back. Next morning I heard that Henry Jones and his mother had been killed. I went down to the dug-out where they lived when the sun was about an hour high. The old woman was laying on the ground in the dug-out on a little straw, in the clothes in which she was killed. She had a bullet hole through her head, entering near the centre of the forehead. In about 15 or 20 minutes Henry Jones was brought there and laid by her side; they then threw some old bed clothes over them and an old feather bed and then pulled the dug-out on top of them. The dug-out was built on level ground, a hole about 12 feet square dug to the depth of 5 feet, a ridge pole running from the centre, back, 3 feet above the level of the ground; small poles are then laid up close together running from the sides up onto the ridge pole so that the dirt won't fall through. The dirt taken out of the hole is thrown back onto the poles for a roof, and steps cut down into the end like cellar steps for entrance. There is a great many of such houses occupied by poor people in this county who are not able to build houses, and who never will while they stay here.

The next Sunday after the murder, in a church meeting in payson, Charles Hancock, the bishop, said, as to the killing of Jones and his mother, he cared nothing about it; and it would have been done in daylight if circumstances would have permitted it.—This was said from the stand; there were 150 or 200 persons present. He gave no reasons for killing them. And further said not.

NATHANIEL CASE.
Sworn to and signed before me this 9th day of April, 1859.

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH, Judge 2nd Judicial District.

AFFIDAVIT OF ANDREW J. MOORE.
TERRITORY OF UTAH,
2nd Judicial District,
Provo City, ss.

Andrew J. Moore being duly sworn, says as follows: I live at Pondtown, in Utah co.; I had lived there only a few days, and some time in the night in the month of April, 1858, can't recollect the day of the month, there was an alarm raised in the night between 12 and 2 o'clock. Heard the alarm to raise the Fort; I jumped up and ran out without dressing. I saw nothing and went back into the house to dress myself. I thought at the time it was a break of the Indians. After dressing I went out again, and Henry Jones had just come in, and I went to where the people had gathered, and the persons, two or three men, strangers to me, were just taking Henry Jones out of the fort. I did not go outside of the fort, which is now called Pondtown, until the next morning, and then I saw Henry Jones lying dead in the middle of the road, about 80 rods west from the fort. The sun was then about an hour high. About ten or fifteen minutes after the persons left the fort with Henry Jones; I heard the report of a gun, I think I heard four reports inside of two minutes. The reports were in the direction that Jones was found, and appeared to have been fired about where the dead body was found. I saw 3 bullet holes in the body of Jones, two of them were in his side and one in his head.—The report was that the persons who took Jones out of the fort came from the town of Payson, which is about three miles in a westerly direction from Pondtown. I was not acquainted in Payson; I had gone from Provo to live at Pondtown shortly before that. I do not know anything about the mother of Henry Jones, and I do not know anything about the burial of Jones; I never heard of any inquest being held on the body of Jones.

(Signed) ANDREW J. MOORE.
Sworn and subscribed before me, this 29th day of March, 1859.
JOHN CRADLEBAUGH, Judge 2nd Judicial District.

AFFIDAVIT OF THOMAS HOLLINGSHEAD.
TERRITORY OF UTAH, ss.
Utah County.

Thomas Hollingshead being duly sworn, says: he resides in Pondtown, in Utah county; was in Pondtown at the time Henry Jones was murdered. In the night between midnight and daylight, a year ago in this coming April, we were alarmed; we supposed the Indians had made an attack upon the outposts of the town. We, that is, all of us, his son and others, jumped up and ran out; directly we heard the cry of murder; when we got put into the yard the man came up and said they were after him to kill him; said, where shall I go? where shall I hide from them? About this time his pursuers came up. He then saw them and made a bolt into a house of Mr. Lycurgus Wilson, jumped over a bed where a woman was lying on the floor and tried to secrete himself in the house. Wilson brought him out of the house; the leading man of the pursuers said, lay hold of that man, said to be a constable from Payson; they called him George. I have since seen him; it is George W. Hancock; he told them to disarm Jones. Jones had a pistol and knife, but did offer to use them. He was disarmed, there was no charge in the pistol.

I noticed blood running from his arm; he said they had shot him in the pursuit. The ball went through his arm below the elbow; one or two persons came up with George; I never heard who they were, it was kept dark—nothing said about it.

Some one spoke and wanted to know what they were going to do with the man. Geo. said, I know what I am going to do with him. Some one said, this horse stealing has got to be stopped. They passed out in the direction of Payson. Payson is distant 2 1/2 miles.

We went into the house and I was talking the matter over with my son; in about 15 minutes after we went in we heard the report of fire arms, three or four shots in succession, appeared to be pistol shots from the report; at which time we went to the door. About five or ten minutes after, some one came up and said they had shot the man. I went over and found him lying in the road, two balls had taken effect in his body and one in his head. The persons who had him in custody had fled. The body was taken away in the morning. Report says that the mother of Jones was shot at Payson while sitting in her own house at the time these persons were pursuing Jones.

THOMAS HOLLINGSHEAD.
Sworn and signed before me, this 29th day of March, 1859.

AFFIDAVIT OF ABNER M. HOLLINGSHEAD.
TERRITORY OF UTAH, ss.
Utah County.

Abner M. Hollingshead being sworn, says: lived at Pondtown at the time Jones was murdered. Heard unusual noise in the night; went out of my house, stepped back and dressed. Noise approached. A person entered the fort, stating he was pursued, asked for a hiding place. Mr. Lycurgus Wilson asked him what was the matter. Man gave no satisfactory answer. Two men suddenly came running up shouting, arrest that man; suppose one of the men to be Geo. W. Hancock, judging from his voice; don't know who the other man was. The two men took the other out towards Payson, the same way he came in. Afterwards heard that the man was H. Jones. Ten minutes after the two men left, heard report of fire arms in the direction they went; heard four shots, three shots in quick succession, the 4th shot a minute later. Heard Hancock was an officer at Payson; saw dead body next morning about 80 rods from the fort; the body was taken to Payson. No inquest held at Pondtown; no person called to give evidence.—Body lying in the road in the direction that I heard the shots. Saw blood lying in the road. Occurred in spring. I am a farmer, at that time but part of the crop was in. And further deponent said not.

(Signed) ABNER M. HOLLINGSHEAD.
Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 29th March, 1859.

AFFIDAVIT OF AMOS B. MOOR.
TERRITORY OF UTAH,
Second Judicial District, ss.
City of Provo.

Amos B. Moor, being duly sworn, says as follows: I live at Pondtown, in Utah co.; I had lived there only a few days, and some time in the night in the month of April, 1858, as follows: I live at Ford town, Utah County. One night in the month of April, 1858, can't recollect the day, an alarm was raised in the fort, and I was awakened by the guard. When I got up and went out into the fort, some men, can't tell how many nor who they were, had just taken a man out of the fort; heard afterwards that his name was Henry Jones. After standing there about ten or fifteen minutes, I heard the report of a gun or pistol in a westerly direction, on the road to Payson. I judged the distance to be from 75 to 100 rods from the fort. I heard four shots in pretty quick succession.

In about half an hour after I heard the shots I went out in company with some other persons, don't recollect their names,—to see what the shooting was about. I saw a man lying crossways in the middle of the road; he was dead, it was Henry Jones; I was told that was his name.

I don't know that any inquest was held on the body; I heard afterwards that a man named Hatch took the body to Payson. I don't know anything about Henry Jones' mother, nor about the burial of Jones. I had just a short time before that moved to Pondtown from Provo.

I heard that the men who took Jones from Pondtown had come from Payson; this was a report only, I knew nothing of it of my own knowledge.

I went out again at daylight and saw Jones again; I saw two bullet holes, one in his left side and the other in his head. I did not go close to the body. I understood that Mr. Hatch, Jones' step-father, so report said, came when the sun was about an hour high, half high, and took the body to Payson.

(Signed) Amos B. Moor.
Sworn and subscribed before me this 29th day of March, 1859.
Jno. Cradlebaugh Judge second Judicial District.

Murder of—Forbes.

AFFIDAVIT OF ABRAHAM DURFEE.
TERRITORY OF UTAH,
Second Judicial District,
Provo City, Utah County, ss.

Abram Durfee being duly sworn, says as follows: I have resided in Springville, Utah County, U. T., for about eight years. In the latter part of January, 1858, Wilber J. Earl, came to me in Springville and wanted me to go with him to assist him in killing Forbes; I told him that I could not go, he wanted some of the boys; he said it was orders to kill Forbes; he did not say from whom the orders came; he wanted me to come over to the north gate the evening that Forbes was to be killed. It was Saturday that he was telling me about it, and Forbes was to be killed the next evening. The next evening (Sunday) I went over to the north gate as requested by Earl. About a half an hour of dark Earl and Sanford Fuller came with Forbes; Wilber J. Earl ordered me to stay at the gate; he said that they were going to Provo. I staid at the gate until Wilber J. Earl and Sanford Fuller came back, which was about midnight; they said that they had got rid of Forbes, that was about all they told me that night. About a week afterwards Wilber J. Earl told me that they had killed Forbes down on Spring creek, about half way to Provo; they said they shot him; they said they had dug a hole near the creek and put him in. I don't know what became of Forbes' property; I saw Forbes' horse at Partial Terry's since and before Forbes' death; I don't know how Terry became possessed of Forbes' horse. Both Earl and Fuller told me that they had shot Forbes. I do not know where Earl or Fuller are, or either of them at this time; I saw Earl on the 22nd inst. at last at Salt Lake City. I went with him from Springville to Salt Lake City; we parted in the City between the Temple block and the Deseret Store, and I have not seen him since. I saw Fuller last in Springville, two weeks ago last Saturday in the evening.

(Signed) ABRAHAM DURFEE.
Sworn and subscribed before me this 1st day of April, 1859.

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH.
(See also Bartholomew's testimony as to the death of Forbes.)

In corroboration of the above evidence we find in a copy of the New York Daily Times of Aug. 3d 1858, the following statement made to the Times correspondent in this city by a Mr. McNeill, a gentile who was imprisoned in this Valley during the winter of '57 and '58 and who narrowly escaped being himself murdered by the Mormons. Mr. McNeill is now absent from the Territory.

"A young man, (Forbes) whose name McNeill does not remember, came here from California last year, and went to board with a man named Terry, at Springville. Some time afterwards his revolvers were stolen from the house during the day-time, and his horse carried off from the field. Terry told him that they had been carried off by Indians, and he never was able to get any trace of them. On a Sunday evening, subsequent to the Church, as he went out with the latter was days later an lying three or four miles in the woods, proved to be, and the next the scion of the pistols of

History of

We find in Hyde Jr., up

ing account of

"When the Davis Count the Mormon death society direction of I sanction of S Captain "Fe an Apostle.

ment of the o ed before f They desired combme spir able sound. first name."

er of Zion; and thy hool in peices me erate their g substance u earth." Ti pretext; it a tentions, an "Daughters was made a "daughters' ily. "Desti

the "Big Fa thorougly i dropped. ( name they f quite signif by the way, teth the hor shall fall ba (or the Dar ted: many I have been a man has fa een no mor At Salt L ferociously than seek u

Ena's made by Jud ment of 'h

This "Co and faithfu minister the this Territor object. But counter dif Men high

Church, as v ity under the to have con public justifi efforts of the The whole and organize ministration expedient ba and conceal

Witnesses hi violence fro Court; other driven to s the small del stationed ne are here on presence the lute necess has been f hstranspir To crown perform a hi awilling in position to t tuse to meet inclination I Indians and their offense tives are i "This Cou ffects, that: munity for I will do just

Not being a adjourn with Business time we ma levee a deq bert and G wagon load atalmont, a train will California. About th train from: Hbomer, Le shortly ope

Two wee Messrs. Rn train from into consid from Califo came thro well for ou market, ere El Dorado! for a big p

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, APRIL 19, 1859.

MURDER WILL OUT!

AN INCREDIBLE CATALOGUE OF CRIME.

The Mormon authorities having somewhat recovered from the effects of the shock of dread and fear which the discovery and exposure of their damning connection with the dreadful deeds of bloodshed, rapine and violence, committed of late years in the Territory, under the disguise and protection of a secret organization for this express purpose, are now exerting themselves to the utmost by every possible effort, and with the whole power and authority of their confederacy to conceal the true principals in the commission of these offences and to endeavor to induce the belief in the minds of the public that their opponents, or as we are styled by them, their persecutors are making attempts to magnify and exaggerate petty quarrels and street brawls, long since committed, into offences of the first magnitude, and of most terrible and significant import.

With this view, the editor of the Church Organ, the "Deseret News," in his last number, in an editorial comment upon the remarks made by Judge Cradlebaugh, whilst summing up the evidence in the case of the murder of the Parrishes and Potter at Springville, says, "We have carefully examined all the evidence furnished by a remarkably accurate phonographic reporter, and can only conclude that 'the evidence before the Court goes to show' that Durfee, Potter and two of the Parrishes got into a row about matters best, if not only, known to themselves, and that Potter and two Parrishes were killed."

Again the editor, in a previous comment in this same connection, says, with the utmost effrontery, "When and where, in Utah, has any person's throat been cut, or any one in the least personally injured, or in any way hindered from leaving this Territory, on the ground of his or their apostasy? Never and nowhere, so far as a long and intimate acquaintance with civil and ecclesiastical territorial affairs gives us reliable information, therefore the Judge's 'I think I am right' is widely at variance with what we are sanguine are the facts upon this point."

Under those circumstances we deem it a duty which we owe to the public to take a course which under ordinary conditions of society and of government in our country would be considered injudicious and impolitic. We have procured, and now publish to the world in this number, a portion of the evidence elicited before his Honor Judge Cradlebaugh, in his examinations into the crimes in his District. We publish however merely such of the evidence as has heretofore become public by repetition in the Court room, and which relates to crimes directly under investigation, withholding such as, although confirming and strengthening beyond the possibility of doubt or contradiction, the fact now apparent, that it is the Church which directed and instigated these murders, would defeat in a measure, by their publication at present, the ends of justice.

Shocking and incredible as the truth appears: that a community, living in the 19th century, in the heart of a great nation, whose boast it is, that it is the home of freedom, of civil and religious liberty, of enlightenment and of civilization, should publicly sacrifice human being, in accordance with the tenets of a religious creed; yet it now appears as an undeniable fact. So bold are the High Priests of this hideous and abominable system of religious fanaticism in support of their practices, that they have not only committed them we may say openly, but they have proclaimed their purposes aloud and published them to the world in the most public manner.

In the columns of the "Deseret News," dated as far back as Oct. 1st, 1856, we find the authorized Church report of two sermons preached in the Tabernacle, in this city, to a congregation of nearly 3000 persons, on the 21st day of Sept., 1856, by BRIGHAM YOUNG, and his 2nd Counselor, JEDEDIAH M. GRANT, the 3rd President of the Church (he is now dead), in which the doctrine of human sacrifice is openly proclaimed.

Brigham Young in this sermon says, "There are ains that men commit for which they cannot receive forgiveness in this world, or in that which is to come; and if they had their eyes open to see their true condition, they would be perfectly willing to have their blood spill upon the ground, that the smoke thereof might ascend to heaven as an offering for their sins, and the smoking incense could cover for their sins, whereas, if such is not the case, they will stick to them and remain upon them in the spirit world.

I know, when you hear my brethren telling about cutting people off from the earth, that you consider it in a strong doctrine; but it is to save them, not to destroy them."

Jedediah M. Grant, addressing the people the same day, at the Tabernacle, says:—

"I say that there are men and women, that I would advise to go to the President (Brigham) immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their cases and let a place be selected, and let that committee shed their blood."

We have those among us that are full of all manner of abominations, those who need to have their blood shed, for water will not do, their sins are of too deep a dye.

You may think that I am not teaching you Bible doctrine, but what says the apostle Paul? I would ask how many covenant breakers there are in this city and in this kingdom (not Territory.—Ed.). I believe there are a great many; and if they are covenant-breakers we need a place designated where we can shed their blood.

Talk about old clay; I would rather have clay from a new bank than some we have had clogging the wheels for the last nineteen years. They are a perfect nuisance, and I want them cut off, and the sooner it is done the better.

We have been trying long enough with this people, and I go in for letting the sword of the Almighty be unsheathed, not only in word, but in deed.

Brethren and sisters, we want you to repent and forsake your sins. And you who have committed sins that cannot be forgiven through baptism, let your blood be shed and let the smoke ascend, that the incense thereof may come up before God as an atonement for your sins, and that the sinners in Zion may be afraid."

It now appears that, not being able to find any voluntary victims ready to offer themselves up as a willing sacrifice on the altars of their hideous faith, the Church leaders determined to "save" several persons and secure to them an inheritance with the Mormons in the next world, by cutting their throats in this.

This cutting of throats is the prescribed mode of murder by which the victims of ecclesiastical mercy (?) are invariably sacrificed, and is the penalty attached to the violation of the oath in the first degree of the mysterious and terrible endowment ceremonies. The penalty attached to the violation of the oath in the second endowment degree is to have the throat cut, and the heart plucked out with the most agonizing details. In the third or last degree, in addition to the above, the most horrible mutilation of the body, the ripping across of the naval and the tearing out of the bowels in the most disgusting manner, are the prescribed penalties of a violation of the terrible secrets of Mormonism.

In our school days we read, and shuddered as we read, the traveler's accounts of the dreadful practices of the barbarous nations of the earth, of the burning of widows, of the self-immolation of hundreds beneath the wheels of the car of Juggernaut, of the sacrifice of infants at the terrible idol shrines, committed in order to obtain everlasting happiness in a future state; and we then thanked heaven that we lived in a land and under a government and institution which in our youthful enthusiasm we deemed omnipotent and faultless. Little could we imagine that in our manhood we should find ourselves in our own great and glorious country living in the midst of fanatical devotees claiming to be our countrymen, who are endeavoring to enact before our eyes scenes as dreadful and barbarous as any conceived by the imagination of man.

It was with incredulity that we heard repeatedly, a few years ago, that the Mormons practised Polygamy, and now with the full facts before us, we can hardly believe our own senses and realize that another and, if it is possible, more hideous doctrine is advocated and practised here, and yet it is too true.

And now we ask, are these things to be permitted and these fanatics to be allowed to take life and property unrestrained, and to spurn and trample under foot all the rights guaranteed to us by the Constitution of the United States, and in which even the subjects of the most despotic government in Christendom are secure?

If the laws of the United States now extant will not secure the desired end and are found insufficient to protect the lives and liberty of its citizens, let the necessary laws be at once enacted and enforced. If the laws of the United States at present in force can remedy the evil, let those entrusted to see those laws executed and enforced be sustained fully in the discharge of their duties, come what will of it.

The Mormons have been encouraged by the Government in the steps which they have taken. They have never made any secret of their intentions, but have proclaimed them to the world and have carried them out to the fullest extent, unchecked by any one. They have refused to be ruled by others than leaders of their organization, and with this determination they have been allowed to drive away from the Territory every single federal officer who has ever been sent here, who has not lent himself to their views and purposes and subverted their interests. If reports from the East be true they have even now succeeded in disposing and removing two of those last appointed, and in such case, also of another.

Without indulging in any farther reflections at this time, we invite the earnest attention of the reading public to the testimony and affidavits which we present in this number. Read them and ponder them well, even if they cause a shudder and make the heart sick.

Shooting Affair.

Last night (Monday) the neighborhood in the vicinity where we "hang up" were startled by the report of three pistol shots, fired in rapid succession. It was about nine o'clock, and the shots proceeded from the entrance into the corral of Capt. Wm. H. Hooper, and proved to be a fight between two sable sons of Africa.

The billigents were Tom, who belongs to Col. Johnson, of this city, and Sher, who belongs to Capt. Hooper, and love and jealousy prompted the desperate combat.

Two girls, the slaves of Thos. S. Williams Esq. are the reigning ebony belles of Great Salt Lake City, and at their shrine the cringing knees of all cuffedom bow down. The climate here is very softening and if it cannot melt a nigger's heel, it renders his heart extremely susceptible.

On the night in question Tom had been paying his "abominations" to the belles aforesaid when he was met by Sher, who also claims a franchise in that quarter, when some words passed and the parties came to blows, and directly afterwards Tom, who was armed—(Sher not having any weapons) fired rapidly at his antagonist who received two out of the three shots, one ball passing through his hand and the other through his shoulder, ranging upwards and entering the back part of his head, inflicting a severe if not fatal wound. Tom immediately fled and has not yet been arrested. It was thought last night that he made a break for the Camp where his master is at present; but we are informed that he was seen on Emigration st. this morning wending his way towards the canyon, doubtless with a view of crossing the mountain and making Fort Bridger.

We have on a previous occasion called attention to the reprehensible custom of negroes carrying fire arms, and invited the special attention of authorities to the subject; and if we mistake not shortly afterwards a petition numerously signed, was presented to the City Council covering the same ground, but we have not heard that it was ever acted upon. This second occurrence should spur the daddies of the corporation to a sense of their duty, but nous verrons.

Money.—Major Prince, paymaster U. S. Army, is en route from California to Camp Floyd with a large supply of the "spondulicks," sufficient to pay off the troops at all events. This will be gratifying intelligence to our friends in Camp, as money has been so scarce there that an enterprising officer, by some means, to use a legal phrase, "was seized" of a ten dollar gold piece which he deposited in a glass case, hired a small "Dobe" building and was exhibiting the aforesaid "full eagle" as a curiosity at the rate of two bits a sight; payable when the speck train arrived. At the last accounts he was realizing a fortune—in prospective.

We understand that a detachment of troops will leave the Camp in a few days to meet Major Prince at or near Santa Clara, when his escort to that point will return back again to California.

We have received a communication over the signature of "A man of few words," which is so courteous, and therefore so different from the many low and blackguard effusions that come to hand, that we are almost tempted to publish it. We are free to confess that there is a great deal of good sense in what "A man of few words" says; but as the old song says, "wait a little longer," and we might add a very little longer.

For some time past the mails from the East have been coming through Weber Canyon, as the snow on the Big Mountain made the old route impassable. We understand from Peter K. Dotson, Esq., the accommodating and sterling agent at this end of the line, that he will this week break a trail across the mountain, and the mails hereafter will pursue the old chute.

Owing to the pressure upon our columns, several communications, besides various editorial matter, are omitted this week.

The icy fetters of winter, after a long and vigorous campaign, have at length softened down under the genial influence of mild weather, and we think we can authoritatively announce that while we have been hoping and even indulging occasionally in the strains of the old ballad, "Springtime of year is coming, coming," that it has finally "come at last." While it is unlocking the mountain passes and canyons, we hope it will exert a similar and a tender influence upon the stiffened joints and almost rusty bones upon that portion of suffering humanity who have been caked all winter in deors by rheumatics and neuralgia.

The Eastern mail had not arrived up to the hour of our going to press. The probability is that all the mails, both going and coming from the States, are corralled by the South Platte, which is doubtless flooding out, as there is nothing to obstruct them now on this side.

The California mail came in according to its antecedents with that promptitude and dispatch that has made it a regular and welcome visitor during the entire winter. We are informed by Mr. Schell, the active and accommodating agent, that by the middle of next month the coaches, which are A No. 1 first class, will run clean through.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS.

BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE.

TAAFFE, McCANILL & CO.

IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c., Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

We respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Carson Valley, to our large and varied stock of Fancy & Staple Dry Goods.

Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induces us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of:

Brown sheeting
Bleached "drills"
"shirting"
Brown do Hickory stripes
Plaid linsey woolsey
Kentucky jeans
Bed ticking
Delaines & cashmeres
Linen diapers & towels
"napkins"
"table cloths"
Crash, Toweling and dories
Ginghams and lawns
White linen bosom shirts
Colored calico
Grey flannel
Red do
Blue do
Blue check & hickory do

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Plain all wool delaines
Fancy do
Alexander's kid gloves
Bay state long shawls Stella and merino do
Delaines in dress patterns
White cambric muslin
Jacksonets
Swiss
Mull and Namsooks
Plaid jaconet muslins
Plaid cashmere for children
Silk and cashmere gloves
Lace mitts and gloves
Dress lawns and bareges
Plain colored silk ribbons Bonnet
Velvet
Combs brushes and cutlery

Yankee notions &c., &c., &c.
Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufacturing styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. Orders promptly filled.

TAAFFE, McCANILL & CO.,
Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 250 Broadway, New York.
Agents for the Garment Print Works, and the No England Worsted Company's Goods.

NEW GOODS,

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

HAVE just received a well selected assortment of goods, consisting of Fruit, Domestic, Ginghams, Thread, Tea, O-rice,

Sugar, Dried Peaches, Dried Apples,
Egg kettles, &c., &c.,
which will be sold at the lowest cash rates.

RADFORD, CABOT & CO.

HAVE just received a supply of I X and 1 O TIN. Also a quantity of Sheet and Hoop IRON, which they offer at the lowest possible rates.

WANTED,

AT Camp Floyd, by the undersigned, a first rate Brewer, and one that understands the business thoroughly and that is capable of taking charge of a brewery. No persons need apply.
J. S. Anderson

[Continued from first page.]

knife wounds. His throat was cut on the left side. He was cut at least 15 times in the back, in front, on the arms, the hands, in fact all over.

Potter was shot with three balls on his right breast below the nipple, probably with a shot gun; there were no knife marks about Potter.

Beason Parrish was shot through the left arm with 4 balls, passing through the arm and coming out near the middle of his back. They may have entered at his back and come out through the arm; they were nearer together on his back than in front.

I was invited by Sanford Fuller to go and participate in killing Henry Forbes. He told me that there was such a thing in contemplation and wanted me to go with them, which I declined doing.

About two days after that, Wilber J. Earl spoke to me and told me that the job which they contemplated was done, and if I had a vent he wouldn't have had to. He charged me not to tell it, and I am now under the threats of death for doing so. I never saw the body. Some four or five days after Coles told that the Indians had found the body somewhere between there and Provo.

There has been several attempts to put me out of the way. Last fall was a year ago I was called upon to go with four men up the canyon to look for some valley. When we got to camp one of the men asked me to go with him to hunt bear. Their plan was for him to lead me round to a place where the others would kill me and say it was the Indians.

As I went out however, I could see their manœuvres and I suspected something; so when we got on a piece I left him, and going another course returned to camp. When I got there I found the men with whom I had started, and the others were all gone. When the other men came back they added up their horses and went to a more convenient camp. Abraham Durfee, Wilber J. Earl, Nelson Spafford and Lela Curtis were with me.

In the night, after dark, they tied my horse in an opening where the light of the fire would shine on him. When we went to get our horses they said they would take their guns. I said I would take my gun too, and went out, but took care to keep out of the light of the fire. I found my horse tied, but got him loose without getting into the fire light. They then wanted me to come where they were, and that would have brought me into the light, but I refused and tied him elsewhere.

The guards were arranged so that Spafford and I were on the first guard. I watched them all very narrowly and satisfied myself from their movements that they had determined to kill me; so making some excuse I went out with my gun and ran off. After traveling some time I laid down and slept; the next day I traveled through the brush as much as possible. Towards evening, however, I was headed by four men on foot and chased by them until dark. The next morning I found some men getting wood and came home with them. When I got back I met Earl and the Bishop, and they told me I was crazy—that nothing of the sort was thought of.

It all passed off well enough until two weeks ago, the second time that marshal Dotson came to my house; then Andrew Wiles and Sanford Fuller came to me and told me I must go into the mountains. I started from Oliver McBride's. The two McBride boys, (Oliver and Harlin) the two Curtis' (Uriah and Lela) Wm. McBride and Wm. Johnson, were at the house. Two of them followed me until I went up the mountain about eighty rods; I then stepped to one side into a little kind of a canyon and then got away up among the rocks till they passed by and lost me; I then came down the mountain again and went about half a mile north and went up Rock Canyon.

This was on Friday night; on Sunday night I came into town and went to Uriah Curtis'; there they notified me again that I must go to Wilber J. Earl and Abraham Durfee. I was notified by Wm. Johnson, the marshal, by Uriah Curtis, Harlin McBride, and Wm. Bird. We then proceeded, Oliver and Harlin McBride and myself, out to where Earl and Durfee were, up Hobbie creek apiece. As soon as we got there Wm. Bird and U. Curtis came to us with an express that we must go to the city. They would not tell who the counsel was from, but said it was counsel; and we were not to be seen by any living being, but was to travel at night and lay by in the day time and keep to the mountains.

We started and traveled along the mountains and camped the first morning between Battle creek and the mouth of Provo Canyon, up in a little canyon. The next night we crossed over the mountain, near Mount-Ainsville, and camped the next day at Dry Creek, in Salt Lake Valley. There Wilber J. Earl began to get uneasy about noon and wished to go on. Durfee and I opposed it, but Earl would go on, and we finally consented; but instead of obeying what Durfee and I had understood as counsel, to keep out of sight of men, he took a straight course for Cottonwood Fort. When we got within about a half mile of the Fort, Earl took off his pistol belt and buckled it on again so that his pistol would be right in front, and then wanted us to go up in the willows above the Fort and wait there until night.

It had been snowing all the time since we started and was still snowing.

Durfee and I believed that there was a plan laid to kill us right there and we would not go, but determined to go past the Fort. When I got opposite the Fort I stopped and asked them whether they intended to kill and butcher me, and told them that I believed that was their intention. They both denied it positively, and Earl said that I must be crazy again. About a mile past Cottonwood Fort a man passed us riding at full speed on horse back. He rode at full speed until he got out of sight. When he passed us he did not look at us or notice us at all.

At Big Cottonwood we were tired of carrying our blankets which were wet and heavy and left them at a blacksmith's shop. We went on to Gardner's mill and from there we turned right west through the willow patches. Earl wanted to go that way and would go no other. We went across until we came to a dam to turn water into a mill race, and here saw a man sitting down, and when he saw us coming he raised up and then slipped down again behind the dam out of sight. As he raised up we saw the breech of a gun. Abraham Durfee then stopped and said to Earl, "Wilber Earl, have you anything against me?" Wilber said he had not and raised his hand and said he had nothing against either of us, and that there was nothing against either of us. He seemed to be coming very much excited. We turned and went back a piece and crossed the race and went on and struck into the first street east of the State road. We then went up that street into town.

At the corners of the first cross street there were men posted at each corner. There W. J. Earl made a sign with his hand for them to go round us. They then started one way and we went another around the corner. We would not go the way Earl wanted us to go, but kept him with us. At the next corner we turned north and then at the next corner two men were stationed in the same manner as at the first corner, which we supposed were the same two we had met before. Here Earl put his hand to his pistol and then made a motion by putting his hand to his forehead. One of the men whistled.

We went up this street until we got to Brigham's House and then turned west to the Council House corner. Here we stopped right in the street, Durfee saying that he wanted to go to Stringham's. We talked about it and Earl seemed willing to have us go. He said he did not want me to go with him with the feelings which I had towards him. Durfee and me then started down towards Kinkead's. Wilber J. Earl started on west down the street. A man followed after him and when we saw him last there were three men talking with him. We went to Kinkead's store and told Mr. Kinkead about our case and told him we wanted protection until morning. He took us over to the Secretary's, Mr. Kinkead and his clerk went there with us. We claimed the Secretary's protection.

There was a gun fired close to us when we entered the city.

I have heard it said that apostates running off would never get further than the Muddy creek.

I don't think that the killing of Potter was intentional, but that he was killed through mistake. He was the one who notified me and was a leading man.

JOSEPH BARTHOLOMEW.
Sworn to and subscribed before me on the 29th day of March A. D. 1859.

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH,
Judge 2nd Judicial District.

Bartholomew was afterwards examined as a witness and made the same statements, and in addition said:

"Durfee and Potter were set off by council meeting to watch Parrish's; saw John Daley about the public meeting on the Sunday night of the murder; he did not go into the house. Council meetings were held in the upper room of Bishop Johnson's house; confident he saw McDonald there. Bro. Carnes called on witness and ordered him to get his gun on the night of the murder. Carnes called out the company; does not know that any person was sworn when we took up the bodies."

Confession of Abraham Durfee.

TERRITORY OF UTAH,
2nd Judicial District, Provo City,
Utah County.

Abraham Durfee, of his own free will and accord, and without being influenced by any promise of any kind, by any person whatever, or of the hope thereof, now this first day of April, A. D. 1859, comes before Judge Cradlebaugh, and makes the following confession, viz:

I am thirty-four years old, I have resided in Springville, Utah County, U. T., since the spring of 1851. I came from Iowa in 1850. In Springville, I was farming part of the time, and part of the time attending a saw mill and working at millwrighting.

I was notified of a council to Wilber J. Earl in the month of January 1857; he told me he wanted me to come to the Bishop's house that evening, and he said there would be others there at the room. I went, and there were a number of persons in the room; it was in the upper room in the Bishop's dwelling house, in Bishop Aaron Johnson's house. The Bishop was there, A. F. McDonald, Wilber J. Earl, Abraham Durfee, Andrew Wiles, and John W. Bird, and several others. I was notified by Wm. Bird and U. Curtis as we got there Wm. Bird and U. Curtis came to us with an express that we must go to the city. They would not tell who the counsel was from, but said it was counsel; and we were not to be seen by any living being, but was to travel at night and lay by in the day time and keep to the mountains.

We started and traveled along the mountains and camped the first morning between Battle creek and the mouth of Provo Canyon, up in a little canyon. The next night we crossed over the mountain, near Mount-Ainsville, and camped the next day at Dry Creek, in Salt Lake Valley. There Wilber J. Earl began to get uneasy about noon and wished to go on. Durfee and I opposed it, but Earl would go on, and we finally consented; but instead of obeying what Durfee and I had understood as counsel, to keep out of sight of men, he took a straight course for Cottonwood Fort. When we got within about a half mile of the Fort, Earl took off his pistol belt and buckled it on again so that his pistol would be right in front, and then wanted us to go up in the willows above the Fort and wait there until night.

It had been snowing all the time since we started and was still snowing.

Durfee and I believed that there was a plan laid to kill us right there and we would not go, but determined to go past the Fort. When I got opposite the Fort I stopped and asked them whether they intended to kill and butcher me, and told them that I believed that was their intention. They both denied it positively, and Earl said that I must be crazy again. About a mile past Cottonwood Fort a man passed us riding at full speed on horse back. He rode at full speed until he got out of sight. When he passed us he did not look at us or notice us at all.

At Big Cottonwood we were tired of carrying our blankets which were wet and heavy and left them at a blacksmith's shop. We went on to Gardner's mill and from there we turned right west through the willow patches. Earl wanted to go that way and would go no other. We went across until we came to a dam to turn water into a mill race, and here saw a man sitting down, and when he saw us coming he raised up and then slipped down again behind the dam out of sight. As he raised up we saw the breech of a gun. Abraham Durfee then stopped and said to Earl, "Wilber Earl, have you anything against me?" Wilber said he had not and raised his hand and said he had nothing against either of us, and that there was nothing against either of us. He seemed to be coming very much excited. We turned and went back a piece and crossed the race and went on and struck into the first street east of the State road. We then went up that street into town.

At the corners of the first cross street there were men posted at each corner. There W. J. Earl made a sign with his hand for them to go round us. They then started one way and we went another around the corner. We would not go the way Earl wanted us to go, but kept him with us. At the next corner we turned north and then at the next corner two men were stationed in the same manner as at the first corner, which we supposed were the same two we had met before. Here Earl put his hand to his pistol and then made a motion by putting his hand to his forehead. One of the men whistled.

We went up this street until we got to Brigham's House and then turned west to the Council House corner. Here we stopped right in the street, Durfee saying that he wanted to go to Stringham's. We talked about it and Earl seemed willing to have us go. He said he did not want me to go with him with the feelings which I had towards him. Durfee and me then started down towards Kinkead's. Wilber J. Earl started on west down the street. A man followed after him and when we saw him last there were three men talking with him. We went to Kinkead's store and told Mr. Kinkead about our case and told him we wanted protection until morning. He took us over to the Secretary's, Mr. Kinkead and his clerk went there with us. We claimed the Secretary's protection.

There was a gun fired close to us when we entered the city.

I have heard it said that apostates running off would never get further than the Muddy creek.

I don't think that the killing of Potter was intentional, but that he was killed through mistake. He was the one who notified me and was a leading man.

JOSEPH BARTHOLOMEW.
Sworn to and subscribed before me on the 29th day of March A. D. 1859.

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH,
Judge 2nd Judicial District.

He refused to do it. Parrish and I went back to Parrish's house, and Potter he came up to Parrish's, and Potter took the papers; I mean the warrants then Parrish and Potter started for Provo.

That is about all that happened before the next meeting, having gone there after the horses, but returned without them. I don't think I was at this third meeting. Potter told me that he went to the meeting after he returned from Provo. He told the meeting that he had found one span of the horses; I asked him what they said about the taking of the horses; he said that the Bishop told him in regard to an order that Parrish's son had traded to Bullock, and that he, the Bishop, wanted those horses placed where they belonged to answer the demand.

That evening at that meeting, Wilber J. Earl and A. F. McDonald, were appointed to go and find the horses; but he should not return to those horses; this was told me by Potter. Parrish the next day told me that he had given up all hopes of getting his horses, that they were gone. Parrish told me that he had seen the Bishop, and he had agreed to have the horses that had been found at Bullock's in Provo, brought back and put into the custody of Cyrus Sanford, the constable.

Parrish, after this had transpired, regarding the horses proposed leaving right away, and he said to know if Parrish would go with him; I told him we would, Potter said he would go too. Parrish made arrangements to start, I think it was the Saturday before the murder, I can't recollect the day exactly; Potter told me before this, a day or two, that they aimed to bring them, the Parrish's back, if they started, and I went to Parrish's the next Sunday morning, and there had not gone yet. Parrish told me then that he had expected to have started the evening before, but the police watched the house so closely that he could not get out of doors. Parrish said he wanted to go that day, or that evening; but he said he could not get his things out so as to start in the day time. Potter came into Parrish's while we were talking, and he proposed that he would take Parrish's things and go, and he said to go with him, and he said to go with him, some gloves, bridle, a gun, and some tape, and some things which I don't recollect. Parrish took the gun and gave it to Potter, and Potter said he would take care of them, and bring them to him.

Parrish proposed that he would start out in the day time, on account of the police, and he wanted me to go with him; we started off together, and when we got outside of the house, I asked him if he was going to take his gun, he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and asked me to go with him; he said he would like to have his gun, and he said to take his gun, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, East to the edge of the City, and then turned South, and went to the East gate, after passing through the gate we went South and crossed Hobbie Creek, till we came to Dry Creek, Parrish stopped there and said he would stay there, and

KIRK ANDERSON'S VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1859.

NUMBER 26.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:
Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

TO MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.

THE NEVADA TERRITORY.

The letter which is herewith submitted was addressed to Governor William Smith, who has charge of the bill providing for the organization of the Territory of Nevada; but as it may interest others, and give them an insight into the condition and purposes of the people praying for the establishment of the aforesaid Territory, I deem it proper that all the members of Congress should peruse it. It is as follows:

WASHINGTON, January 17, 1859.

DEAR SIR:—As you may need some facts not reported at length in the memorial, and other documents relating to the proposed Territory of Nevada, I herewith submit them:

The Mormons and anti-Mormons began the settlement of western Utah in the latter part of 1854. The former, however, succeeded, in 1855, in obtaining a numerical majority; and the Legislature of Utah, on being informed of this fact, organized the whole western part of the Territory under the name of Carson county, and Governor Young appointed Orson Hyde, the President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, its Probate Judge. Soon after the Judge arrived, adventurers from California, as well as from the Atlantic States, settled in Carson and other valleys on the eastern side of the Sierra Nevada for the purposes of mining, farming, and raising stock. As they increased very fast, the Mormons became alarmed, and they determined to expel them. They therefore ordered them to leave the country. Of course the Christians, or anti-Mormons, refused to do so. The Mormons then assembled their forces, and attempted to expel them vi et armis. The anti-Mormons also organized and fortified themselves, with the view of defending their lives and property against their assailants. For two weeks both armies camped nearly in sight of each other without coming to a direct battle. By this time news had reached the miners in California of this state of affairs, and a large number had determined to cross the mountain and afford protection to the anti-Mormons. On hearing this, the Mormons became satisfied that unless they retraced their steps they would be driven themselves from the country, instead of the anti-Mormons. They therefore proposed a truce, and agreed that all should enjoy a common heritage in that part of the Territory.

The Mormons now became satisfied that the Christians not only could, but would occupy these fertile valleys, on the ground that they were the common property of the people of the United States. When the Legislature of Utah heard of this affair, that body, in violation of every constitutional right, repealed the county organization, recalled the probate judge, and removed all the county and court records to Salt Lake City, where they have ever since remained. Among these records were several indictments against certain persons for high crimes and misdemeanors. By this flagrant violation of all sacred, individual, collective and constitutional rights, the people of Western Utah were not only denied all legal protection to life and property, but they were disfranchised. They have ever been unrepresented in the Utah Legislature, and in Congress. The history of our country presents no such a record of open defiance to the laws, and such cruelties to men under the forms of law.

For years the anti-Mormons have been applying both to the Territorial Legislature and to Congress for protection, without success. Their situation has ever been, and is still peculiarly unsafe and annoying. Recently a probate judge was surreptitiously appointed for Carson Valley, with the view of reorganizing the County of Carson, and thus extend over the people there the Mormon statutes of the Territory. The Judge, soon after he received his commission, undertook to force on an election of county officers. Enough of the anti-Mormons, however, turned out to defeat his purpose by the election of an opposite ticket, who, on being elected, refused to qualify because they were required to obey the Mormon statutes. The Judge has been notified that if he undertakes to enforce the Mormon statutes he will be resisted, peaceably if they can, but forcibly if they must.

They will not introduce, or permit others to introduce among them, the vices of that wicked, perverse and delinquent generation who have so long wielded the sceptre of authority in the Great Basin. They will not allow, with impunity, their wives and daughters to be kidnapped, dishonored and defiled; nor submit to laws made by such a people, nor allow themselves to be ruled by men who practice and uphold vices and crimes so revolting to the moral sense of the world; and if the Mormons persist in their present course, blood will flow. The only loyal people of Utah are oppressed, annoyed, and scandalized by a government intended by Congress, to secure them in their rights, and to protect them in their property; and while the present Territorial organization exists the Mormons, who have control of the Legislature, will never "let up on the Gentiles."

The only remedy for this unnatural war now raging between the Mormons and anti-Mormons in Utah is to be found in the immediate separation of these people, under two distinct governmental organizations. One thing is inevitable, the Mormons and anti-Mormons will never, and can never live together in peace under one Government. The conflicts which took place between them in Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, and Iowa, and which are now going on in Utah, ought to convince any intelligent man of the justice and truth of this declaration. Indeed, the Mormons themselves acknowledge it, and so long as they adhere to their belief—a belief founded upon their own Scriptures, that an absolute theocracy is the only government under which they can and should live, they never will be loyal to our own Government and countrymen, and hence their hostility to our institutions and people, and their inflexible devotion to their own.

In every State where the Mormons have lived it has cost the loyal people of the State thousands of dollars, as well as the loss of many lives, to compel them to obey the laws. In every instance they have resisted our laws, and in every state necessity demanded their expulsion. In Utah, while they were charged with the administration of the government and execution of the laws, they proved themselves not only traitors to our people, but treacherous to the Government, and openly rebelled against them and defied their authority; and it cost the Federal Government millions to conquer them. They have still control of the Territory, and they are inflexibly bent upon subduing the anti-Mormons of western Utah; and if the latter are not separated from them and protected by law, it will require the expenditure of millions more to restore order in Utah. Congress can count the cost of delay in this matter while we will have the melancholy duty of burying our dead, as well as to measure the amount and value of the blood that is slain. The people of Nevada will never be conquered—never be ruled by the Mormons. Come what will, they will resist to the bitter end. They prefer death to dishonor; and the Government may choose which of these shall be meted out to them.

In addition to the above considerations—considerations which should, I believe, present conclusive and imposing evidence, sufficiently satisfactory to induce Congress to organize the Territory of Nevada—I may likewise mention others. While the people of western Utah have in the Mormons open and avowed enemies, they have likewise the savage Indian tribes to defend themselves against. Some of these tribes are professed Mormons, while others are under their influence. Many convicts have taken place between the Christians and some of these tribes, as well as between the emigrants while crossing the plains to the north Pacific and the aforesaid savages. and there is no hope of establishing amicable relations with these Indian tribes until they are brought under other and better relations with the anti-Mormons of Utah. Peace does not reign in Utah, and never will, under the present order of things. Every officer—military and civil—every trader and merchant who has ever resided about Salt Lake City, in Eastern Utah, are unanimous in their judgment that the peace and prosperity of western Utah can only be secured and maintained by the separation of Eastern from Western Utah.

The length of the proposed Territory of Nevada, north and south, is about six hundred miles, and the width, east and west, about four hundred and fifty miles. Its boundaries are based upon the conditions and necessities of the country. The population ranges, as far as I am able to judge, from fifteen to eighteen thousand souls. Towns and mining camps are springing up in almost every part of it. Some of them are very flourishing villages. The valleys are so fertile and inviting that even the want of governmental protection does not deter men from locating in them. Settlements extend for over two hundred miles north and south, and over one hundred miles east and west. Some of the best enclosed and cultivated farms on the north Pacific are in Nevada. Its metallic and mineral resources are immense; and, as a stock-raising country, it is conceded by all who have ever seen it to be the finest on the American continent. All of the products of the earth peculiar to the temperate zone are grown there. All serial grains, vegetables, esculents, fruits, and even cotton, sugar, and tobacco, produce well in western Utah. All that is needed to give peace, plenty and prosperity to the country is a stable government, which will afford protection against domestic violence within, and give security against external enemies.

In conclusion, I desire to say that I can enter into no bargain or arrangement for omnibussing the Territories through Congress. The Territory of Nevada is suffering under peculiar affliction. The bill to organize it is in advance of others. Let each one come up in order and be tested upon their merits. I am the friend of the frontiersmen, and of the Territories, but if Nevada is to be defeated or passed let it be upon her merits or demerits. If she is to be consigned to the tomb of all the Capulets, let her sleep on, until other men and other times can do her justice. If an Erebus death is to be hers, then let her perish like some of the stars in the Great Vault have perished, leaving no trace behind. But, if she is to be saved and added to the many stars which now strengthen and adorn our country and its flag, then she will be obedient to the laws and loyal to the Union. When our common country shall call forth her sons to defend her honor and her rights, the people of Nevada will come forth. They will be ready and willing to meet the enemy on the beach and on the frontier, with a sword in one hand and a torch in the other. They will dispute every inch of ground, burn every blade of grass, and the last intrenchment of liberty will become their graves, rather than permit a foreign enemy to contaminate the soil of our country. Can this be said of the Mormons? I think not. If we can protect our countrymen abroad, why should we not on our own soil?

Very respectfully yours,
JAMES M. CRANE,
Delegate elect from Nevada.
To Hon. WILLIAM SMITH.

Having read the above statement of Judge Crane, delegate from the proposed Territory of Nevada, I will state that, from my own observation, having resided in the Territory of Utah, for over three years, a portion of which time I was in Carson Valley, that I heartily concur with him, and fully endorse his statement in relation to the condition of things in western Utah, and seriously believe that the wants and necessities of the people of that portion of the Territory demand its immediate organization.

GEO. P. STILES,
Late Associate Justice for Utah.
A Horrible Deed.
[From the Cleveland National Democrat.]

A young woman, elegantly dressed and of prepossessing appearance, got aboard the Erie and Cleveland cars at the depot, Tuesday noon, just before they started, having no baggage except a satchel, which she placed upon the seat by her side. After the cars started she went into the ladies' saloon several times, and was in there when Mr. Murray, conductor on board the train, came around to collect the tickets. She appeared to be suffering with pain, and told him he would find her tickets in her satchel, which lay in the seat she had occupied. He went to the seat and found them as she had represented. Mr. Murray was succeeded by Conductor Haight, who proceeded with the train to Dunkirk, the woman remaining in the saloon of the car the most of the way. At Dunkirk Mr. Haight received a telegram from Erie, stating that a new-born babe had been found by the side of the track, about two miles east of Erie; and describing the woman Conductor Murray found in the saloon, whom it was conjectured was the unnatural mother, and who, to hide her shame, had attempted the destruction of her offspring, by hurling it from the cars. He returned a reply that the woman had departed on the N. Y. and E. road.

The child was found by a woman who was passing, and although the train was going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, the child was alive when found. It was cared for in a proper manner, and was alive yesterday when Conductor Murray left Erie. No clue was obtained in regard to the name of the mother, and it is not known where she came from.

[From the St. Louis Democrat.]
Manufacture of Sorghum Molasses.

A subscriber sends us the following article, taken from some paper, he knows not what. It is a plain, practical statement of the value of the sorghum for molasses, and contains items of value respecting the manufacture. Large quantities of the sorghum will undoubtedly be grown this year, but those who desire to make sugar should grow the Imphee instead of the sorghum:

GENTLEMEN:—You requested me to inform you of my experience in the manufacture of the sorghum molasses, which I will endeavor to do.

The mill I purchased of you with the last improvement on it, I used with one horse; it is capable of grinding out three hundred gallons of juice per day, which will make thirty gallons of molasses. For boiling, I use a wooden box with sheet iron bottom, and three twelve gallon kettles put in a furnace with one flue. When we commenced making molasses, we used lime, blood, milk, eggs, and other things, for the purpose of clearing it, but found nothing equal to white ley, one pint to thirty gallons of juice; it will make, if managed properly, good molasses all the time. It will make good molasses without putting anything in it, but it is more trouble.

We made from twelve different lots of cane grown on different qualities of soil. That grown on common dry soil produced the best and most molasses. Any ground that will yield fifty bushels of corn to the acre is rich enough. Green cane will make good molasses, and cane that is beginning to sour will make good molasses by putting plenty of ley in it. The most of the cane we worked was mixed with broom corn. All who wish to cultivate it, should be careful to get pure seed; to keep it pure requires care, as it will mix if anywhere near.

We made six hundred and fifty gallons of good, thick molasses, and ground out a quantity of juice for others to make. I am satisfied that it will pay well for every family to raise at least half an acre; it is a sure crop, stands wet or dry weather well, and will yield two hundred gallons of molasses to the acre.

Three or four in each neighborhood should buy a mill; don't wait until your cane is ripe before you begin to fix, and then put up wooden rollers and lose one-third of the juice. Don't believe Holloway nor no other man that iron rollers have a tendency to darken the molasses. I have molasses made through cast iron that I will compare with any made through wooded rollers and brass kettles. I am satisfied there is no difference.

I weighed 80 stalks of cane, and found that they weighed 160 lbs., just 2 lbs. each. Out of these I pressed 123 lbs. of juice, which made 22 lbs. of molasses, or 2 gallons.

Owing to continued wet weather, we did not make sugar as we anticipated. I am satisfied that at the present price of labor, molasses can be made and sold at 40c per gallon. At present, in consequence of its scarcity, it commands a higher price.

In conclusion, I would say make mills, for everybody who can will raise sorghum next year.
Yours,
DANIEL CRANE.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. S. L. CITY, APRIL 26, 1859.

"And there have been more murders committed and more blood shed in the county, within the last eight months, than before, since its organization."

We clip the above from the Church organ of the 20th inst., and it is a piece of the whole which abounds in self-laudation, and hypocritically assumes what a good people we are.

After assuming that innumerable murders have been committed within a specified time, the very period when the "Gentiles" have been more numerous than heretofore, the Editor, although he does not say it, seeks to leave the impression that they are the offending parties. It is a species of deceit and chicanery peculiar to Mormonism, and so long practiced that we are led to believe that they esteem falsehood a virtue when it can be made to suit their own purposes.

The facts, however, are not true, and we challenge their record to their proof.

We would not pretend to say there had not been many murders committed here within the last six months. God and the Church only know this, for the Hierarchy have a peculiar way of their own to dispose of offenders; and if the Editor will count them in, we, who are not posted in the premises, will at a venture coincide with him, for the inquisition is so mysterious in its operations, and its executions so silent that "out-siders" are not informed, until some bold man like Judge Cradlebaugh rips open its dark and damning deeds and exposes them to the gaze of the world.

But why, we ask, is crime limited to certain geographical boundaries of this "county," and thus set up the county of Great Salt Lake as the standard of morals for all the balance of the Territory, or is the Organ afraid to advance beyond its precincts, else by its tramp it should startle the affrighted ghosts of hundreds of men, women and even children, who have experienced the tender charities and mercies of the church by being butchered. It is a very tender subject, we should think, for them to broach; but backed by the power of the church which, through its new jury law, enables them to pack juries, both grand and traverse, they feel doubtless a little emboldened. The bloody record of the Parish murder has already gone before the world. An investigation will doubtless be made of the wholesale slaughter at the Mountain Meadows, while crimes of equal magnitude, but not in so extensive a scale will, we are assured, be elicited, if there is power in the Federal authorities to do it—a slim chance to convict we admit—but then the facts can and will be established. The Church Organ should be very cautious how they claim all the virtue and piety, as they have done repeatedly within the last six or eight months, Pharisee-like; for if they would take our advice, they would rather be smiting their breasts like the publican of old, and calling upon God to have mercy upon them as sinners. As wickedness seems to have been charged upon a large and respectable portion of this Territory, the "Gentiles," not only by their press, but through their pulpit or platform at the Tabernacle, it may not be amiss for us to ask a few questions, although it will be considered impertinent when measured by the Mormon rule, "Mind your business."

But this is our business—it is the business of every independent journalist to expose crime no matter by whom committed; to aid in bringing offenders to justice and thus do all in his power to reform society and thus establish a more pure and healthy social and political organization. As the church by its vauntings and boastings has almost challenged the record, in addition to the Mountain Meadows massacre already referred to, and which they thought of not sufficient importance to notice, we would, in addition to what we have heretofore published, ask in relation to the following, because we have received several letters from friends of the slaughtered, one of which appears in our columns to-day. We ask, then, for information if nothing else, as follows:

The murder in the fall of 1857 of John and Thomas Aiken, Honesty Jones, Mr. Eichard and another gentleman, residents of Mariposa county, Cal., who came to this place on business connected with the army. Of this party one was killed in this city and his body thrown into the Jordan. The other four were taken South and two of them were murdered between Nephi (Salt Creek settlement) and Fillmore, by a party of white Indians, who attacked them on the road, the other two having made their escape from the murderers of their companions fled back to Nephi, where they were also killed.

The murder of two Irishmen, teamsters, who were discharged at Fort Bridger, from the employ of Messrs. Russell, Majors and Waddell, and who attempted to make their way through here to California. These were killed 4 miles below Fillmore city. The murder by a bishop of one of his wives last spring, because she had apostatized, who it is said, cut her throat as she knelt at his feet imploring him to spare her life.

The murder of Jacob Lance, at Lehi, who having apostatized, was very much feared by the church authorities. He was imprisoned at Lehi, upon a false pretence just as he was starting for California, and that night was killed whilst held in confinement by a strong guard.

The murder of — Yates, a mountaineer, taken prisoner near the camp of the army on Ham's Fork, in the fall of 1857, and murdered in Echo Canyon by one of the party who held him as a prisoner.

Also the castration of — Lewis by a party, including a bishop of one of the southern settlements, who were bringing him up towards this city as a prisoner, and of — who was castrated in — the same season.

These two latter are still living in a condition, in comparison, to which death would have been a blessing. One of these was lately at Camp Floyd. The other lives in a hole in the ground near one of the settlements San Pete Valley, and is perfectly crazy.

These questions are pertinent no matter by whom committed, whether Indian, Gentile or Mormon, and deserve the severest punishment. Let those who know speak out, for blood, although its crimson tongue may be stifled now will eventually speak in thunder tones, as sure as "murder will out" or Heaven has vengeance.

MAIL OBSTRUCTIONS, SNOW, &c.—Two Eastern mails arrived here on Sunday, making up all that are now due.

They could not come through Weber Valley, as Weber river was very high and altogether impracticable, as this stream has to be crossed in its tortuous course some fifteen or twenty times, upon which and in the canyons the snow has drifted to an enormous depth, the mules very frequently going clean out of sight, packs and all. In addition to this they soon gave out, and the men became snow blind.

Fortunately, Mr. Doison and a party went out on Saturday to break a trail across the mountain, where they met Mr. Waters, an agent, coming to this city, who informed them of the situation of the mail party. Relief was at once sent them by Mr. Doison from his party, rude sleighs were constructed, and the mail bags drawn to the top of the mountain, and from there snaked down with ropes. As the trail has now been partly broken, we have every reason to believe that the mail will come in regularly hereafter, unless detained by high water.

The company certainly have had obstacles of great magnitude to contend against, and overcome, and they done all that men could do. The winter has been a long, cold and bitter one.

CALIFORNIA MAIL.—This enterprising Company seem every trip to be running against time, and that veritable gentleman we see in the almanac with long flowing hair and who carries a scythe and an hour glass, seems in a fair way to be beaten. The last Mail came rolling into the City 10 days and 5 hours out from California, being about 5 days inside of schedule time. This is tall travelling but they say they can make taller, which we do not doubt in the least.

We have had several days of fine weather and it is comparatively good at present, the air being a little chilly. Spring however has fairly opened and everybody is gardening, while the farmers are as busy as bees. The prospects for a good wheat crop are exceedingly fine; the grass is growing and the cattle fattening, while everything betokens a good and abundant return to the industrious husbandman. Bye the bye speaking of crops we believe and are informed by those who know, that on an average this valley is the best wheat growing region on the Continent.

Lieut. JOHN BENNETT, U. S. A., died at Brownsville, Texas, on the 24th of February, 1859.

We learn that peace and order reigns in Provo, except occasionally when an unarmed government teamster after forage gets in there, when their breasts are instantaneously fired with patriotism and chivalry, and by a concentrated effort they give him fits. Our southern neighbors are as spunky as mice and as has been illustrated in the court crocus equally as nimble.

We have heard it intimated that it is the custom of the church whenever they want to rid themselves of bad elders, without resorting to violent means, the Conference politely gives them a call to go on a mission, a species of exile which, while it relieves them from their presence at home, is not the most complimentary or befitting way to propagate even Mormonism.

Duck shooting is now the "card" in the "environs" of this city. Large numbers of these "feathered insect" are brought in every day. As soon as we are able to "stand erect on our pastern joints," we intend, with the aid of a shot gun, which somebody will doubtless give us, or which somebody will doubtless loan us, to dissect a few of them to see what they are made of.

LARGE STOCKS.—There will be more goods thrown into this market this season than was ever known in any previous year. Take those that have already arrived from California, and the immense trains groaning almost under the weight of merchandise that will be in from the East, and some estimate may be formed of the value of this market.

Among the first trains that will come in from the Eastward will be those of John M. Hockaday & Co., and Livingston, Kinkead & Co., both of which are well up on the road; and if the present pleasant weather continues, these two trains will shortly roll in. The effect of this large supply will be a reduction in the prices from that of last season; another thing the demand will not be so great as last year, from the fact that the former difficulties in this Territory had checked trade, and the people last season required a two years' supply, when now they only require one.

Two men who gave their names as Thomas Pender and Ernest Chaudet, were Monday evening arrested by the U. S. Marshal Dotson, charged with stealing two government animals. They crossed the Jordan bridge after dark to come into the city, although they had previously been "spotted" and were nailed. They acknowledged that the two animals they were riding belonged to the government, but said that they were in its employ, one a teamster and the other in the quartermaster's department. The thing however was too transparent and they were sent to camp this (Tuesday) morning. They also said they had made a short distance from above Tooele City, near which is one of the government herd grounds.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Messrs. Loud, Hosmer & Co.'s wholesale Store. Country merchants and others will do well to give them a call and obtain great bargains.

Important from Washington.

The Question Decided against an Extra Session.

The President, after several days consideration of the subject in Cabinet Council, has concluded to dispense with an extra session of Congress. This decision being the result of deliberations limited to the financial embarrassments of the Post Office Department, caused by the failure of the appropriations from Congress, required for the support of this important service, it is evident that the question of an extra session, touching the critical complications of the affairs of Mexico and Central America, is still subject to the developments and exigencies which may arise from day to day during the next three or four months.

The administration, it thus appears, has determined to assume the heavy task of weathering the storm without any appropriations for the postal service, with deficient financial resources in other respects, and without any authority or encouragement from Congress, to interpose for the maintenance of our rights, or the redress of our wrongs, whatever may be the provocations or invitations that may be given us touching Mexico, Central America or Cuba. We presume that in this decision the President has been, to a great extent, controlled by the distressed and pitiful condition of the poor chopfallen democratic party. With all the efforts and plots of the factious leaders and President makers of the party of the last two years to break down his administration, Mr. Buchanan is still inclined to the exercise of forgiveness and charity. He is under no obligations to the party, he has no favors to ask, nothing to fear from it, and very little to expect; but as an extra session would probably be to the party the last parcel which breaks the camel's back.

Half of our volume being out this number, we wish those who have only subscribed for six months, to send word immediately whether they want their papers continued.

"STAR" OFFICE, Mariposa, Cal., March 26, 1859.

KIRK ANDERSON, Esq.

DEAR SIR.—Having had some little acquaintance with you while you were connected with the Missouri Republican in St. Louis, and having myself had intimations (while in Utah in November, 1857) made to me that certain persons then in Salt Lake City would be murdered, I have been requested by a friend to write to you or some other reliable person (now in Utah) to obtain, if possible, the particulars in regard to the murder and the disposition made of the bodies.

The circumstances, as far as I know, are about as follows:—Two brothers, Thomas and John Aiken, well known throughout the southern portion of this State; A. J. Jones, commonly known in this State as "Honesty Jones," and three other men (names unknown), left this State in the latter part of the summer of 1857, to join the army in Utah, as they supposed the army would be there by the time they would. In Carson Valley, they fell in with the Mormons, who were going to the city, in accordance with Brigham's call. With these Mormons they traveled to the Goose Creek Mountains, where, hearing of the hostility of the Mormons, and consequent halt of the army on Ham's Fork, they left the Mormons with whom they had been traveling, and, to avoid trouble and delay, cut across, with the intention of leaving Ogden City to their right, and reaching the army without delay or difficulty.

As soon as they had left camp, the Mormons dispatched a messenger, post haste to Brigham, to let him know that these men were passing. His Majesty sent a body of men to cut them off; they were arrested, without resistance, and brought down to the city. I was in G. S. L. City at the time. The first night they were brought in they were kept in the Social Hall; and after that they were kept up stairs in the house next above Townsend's Hotel, on the same side of the street. (If I mistake not, there was a saddler's shop in the basement.)

I left Salt Lake City, in company with Wm. Bell (of the firm of Livingston, Kinkead & Co.), Ray (of Gilbert & Gerrish), Horace Clark, and Wm. Huntington, of Springfield, as guides, Wilson and others; I left on the 7th of Nov., and I think the Aiken prisoners had been in the city about ten days. It was intimated to me, by Mormons, that these men would be murdered. I asked one Mormon (whose name I remember) why he thought so; and if any of these men had ever abused Mormons in California or elsewhere. He said one of them had; "besides," said he, "they have got $8,000 in money, and several first-rate animals, all of which we stand very much in need of, just at this time."

But to return to the subject. When we left the city, it was not known publicly what disposition would be made of the prisoners; but strange as it may appear, before we reached San Bernardino, we heard that these men were killed, and also heard where they were killed; and to this day I do not know how, when or where the report got into our camp; but certain it is, that the next mail from Utah corroborated the report in every particular.

The report was, that they were surprised and killed by the Indians, just as they were preparing to camp at Chicken Creek, near the Sevier River; four of them killed dead on the spot, and two escaped, badly wounded, and reached Salt Creek, where they died of their wounds the next day. It was also reported that Brigham discharged them, on condition that they would abandon the idea of going to the army, and return to California, and assuring them that they would have no difficulty in getting here. They must have been murdered about the 16th of November, 1857.

The widow of Andrew J. Jones ("Honesty Jones") has written to an acquaintance in this county to know the fate of her husband. She wishes to know if he was buried—if he was one of the two who reached Salt Creek—or whether or not he was left upon the plains, his flesh to be torn by the wolves, and his bones to bleach in the sunshine. His children (of whom an interesting group now mourn the untimely loss of their long-absent father) also express the most feeling anxiety to know what disposition was made of the body of their father. And as a relative of Jones has recently died, leaving him heir to a handsome fortune, it will probably become necessary to establish the fact that he is dead, in order that his widow and children may receive the benefit of his worldly goods.

I have taken the liberty of addressing you on this subject, because I believed you would do all in your power to obtain the information so earnestly solicited by the disconsolate widow of a most excellent, but unfortunate man.

Perhaps you could obtain the information from the Indian Agent. Or if he has not yet done so, you will confer a favor by suggesting to him the propriety of examining into this massacre.

Your co-operation is earnestly solicited, by,

Yours most respectfully,

J. J. G.

P.S.—If you wish it, I will give you some particulars about the scene of the massacre of the Mountain Meadows, as I passed over the ground a few weeks after the wholesale murder was committed; and as none of that body of emigrants escaped to tell the tale, and the only evidence we will ever have will be circumstantial—I think I can prove, conclusively, to every unbiased mind, that the greatest portion or that company of emigrants were killed by white men—and that it was the most cruel, cold-blooded and treacherous wholesale murder that ever blotched the dark catalogue of crime.

I have "notes and observations" taken down on the Meadows, together with conversations held with different Mormons upon the subject, which would probably be interesting to Americans, and which, I am confident, would cause great uneasiness among the faintly murderers.

Hoping to hear from you soon,

I remain, &c., J. J. G.

G. S. L. CITY, April 15, 1859.

EDITOR VALLEY TAN.—

Having been a resident of this Territory for some time, and consequently seeing and hearing much, to prove at least, to my satisfaction that a great many of the reports in circulation in the States and elsewhere, about this peculiar people, are unquestionably true. 'Tis true, that prejudice often causes a man to allow his thoughts to run out of the natural channel, but when prejudice gets so far as to instill into the minds of the leaders of a people like the Mormons, that it is essentially necessary for the future welfare of a man's soul, to rob him of his substance, under the peculiar name of tithing, and then if he dares to differ with them in any of their religious views, to deliberately murder him, then I say, it is time for such officers as our government has been pleased to send, to discharge their duty as they have commenced it, fearlessly and faithfully. The only fault being with our government, that such officers, with such an escort were not sent years ago.

There are no doubt a great many in the community who have read a letter to the Territorial Enterprise, from a person in this city, styling himself Erin, in behalf of the Mormons. Who is there, unacquainted with the Mormons, who would not have thought, why surely there is one righteous amongst the Mormon leaders? But alas! it is a worn out game amongst them, to plead loyalty and obedience when they can't help it.

Now, if the editor of the Enterprise is right in his surmises, as to who Erin is, (and I think he knows) this Erin showed his loyalty nicely and obedience to a nicety; for I had an ocular, and an auricular demonstration of it. Such men as Erin, who are the first to treat for peace, and good will for their people, ought to be the first amongst their people to practice that peace and good will they now sue for. He says, "we have adhered to the United States laws, or when have we resisted proper authority?" The United States laws adhered to, (heaven save the mark) Parrish murder, trial ranks conspicuous. "When have we resisted proper authority?" Oh, Echo Canyon, thou couldst a tale unfold.

But allow me to introduce a little poetry by way of a change:

(To the good old tune of Duda.)

Then let us be on hand,
By Brigham Young to stand;
And if our enemies do appear
We'll drive them from the land.

Well now it has struck me very forcibly, many a time, that I am a Gentile, and that I stay round here. But is it Mormon toleration that allows it? Is it the liberty of our country, which is every where respected that allows it?

I would answer in the language of Sat Lovengood, many time. There are a few hundred acres of land in this mountainous country, that have been cultivated with care and attention, the fruits thereof are not very palatable to the saints scattered abroad, the proprietors of the two farms, being much in favor of the drill-farming for crops, notwithstanding they answer the purposes they were intended for.

One of these farms is situated about forty-five miles south-west, the other about one hundred and ten east. The proximity of these gentle farms to Zion, render it necessary on account of trade, to have that liberty in all things, which were unknown in Utah before, at least since the reign of Mormonism.

Hoping that you may still continue to be a light to the unenlightened gentiles,

I remain yours,

LIBRA

CAMP FLOYD, U. T.,

21st April, 1859.

We have the painful duty of announcing the death of Capt. George H. Paige, Asst. Quarter Master U. S. Army, which took place on Monday last. The late Capt. P. Paige was born and appointed from New Hampshire, entered the army as Bvt. 2nd Lieut., 1st Infantry, July 1st, 1848; promoted 2nd Lieut., 2nd Infy., March 10, 1849, and 1st Lieut., February, 23rd, 1852; appointed Capt. Q. M., December 20th, 1856.

He was buried at Camp Floyd on Tuesday, the 19th inst., with full military honors; the funeral procession, which started from Headquarters at 4 o'clock, p.m., was headed by the band and field music of the 7th Infantry, playing solemn music; next a Captain's escort, a full company of 84 men, 7th Infy., under command of Capt. Potter.

The coffin was borne on a caisson, neatly fitted up as a hearse, and drawn by six horses appropriately decorated. The coffin was covered with black velvet and wrapped in the national flag, as is usual on such occasions.

The pall bearers, six in number, consisting of Lieut. Schunk, Ordnance Corp.; Capt. H. F. Clarke, C. S.; Dr. Williams, Medical Director; Lieut. Tyler, 2nd Drag's Disb'g Q. M.; Capt. P. T. Turnley, A. Q. M.; Capt. Simpson, Top'l Eng'r; walked in order on each side the coffin.

Next in order came his charger, dressed in black velvet, tastefully ornamented with white ribbons, his boots reversed in the stirrups.

His brother, Mr. Christopher Paige, and Mr. Tracy, with four other gentlemen, as chief mourners, followed the hearse; after which privates and non-commissioned officers of the 5th Infy., privates and non-commissioned officers of the 10th Infy.; privates and non-commissioned officers of the 7th Infy., and privates and non-commissioned officers of the 2nd Dragoons and Batteries; the procession closing with the officers of the command, including Genl. A. S. Johnston, Col. Crossman, Col. C. F. Smith, Col. F. Morrison, Col. Howe, Major Lynde, Major Eastman, &c., &c., numbering upwards of seventy.

Capt. Simpson read the burial service in a most impressive manner.

Notwithstanding the very unpleasant state of the evening from the dust, a great number of the citizens accompanied the procession. We believe we are safe in stating it was the largest funeral which has ever taken place in the Territory.

This morning Co. E, 2nd Dragoons, Co. G, 10th Infy., and Co. G, 5th Infy., left camp for Santa Clara to meet the Paymaster, under the command of Capt. Campbell, 2nd Dragoons. Capt. Cummins, 10th Infy., Lieut. Brooks, 7th Infy., Lieut. Lewis, and Webb, 5th Infy., also accompanied the expedition.

DRAMA.

The New Western Gold Fever.

Seasonable Warning to Emigrants.

We continue the publication of the latest news received from our correspondents of the Far West, in reference to the newly discovered gold fields among the Rocky Mountains, along the western frontiers of Nebraska and Kansas Territories; and to the first of the letters which we publish this morning on the subject, we would invite the special attention of all parties anticipating a fortune from a trip to these new diggings.

We know, from the experience of repeated examples, and particularly from the Fraser river furor—which, within a month from the first authentic reports, nearly depopulated the substantial gold region of California—that when once a plausible hue and cry of a new gold country is raised it is perfectly useless to attempt to arrest the general rush which is sure to follow in that direction. We shall not, therefore, undertake the useless experiment of showing up the cruel losses, disappointments and misfortunes which are sure to follow a general stampede to the wild and inhospitable region in question; but a little seasonable advice to the hopeful emigrant may, perhaps, save thousands from the clutches of the sharpers and speculators who are lying in wait for their prey.

There will be an immense emigration to the Pike's Peak and contiguous gold districts this spring, from the Western States and from the eastern settlements of Kansas and Nebraska, there can be no doubt; that various parties will make a good thing of it is morally certain; but from the broad hints thrown out by our Fontenelle correspondent, we apprehend that the provision and clothing establishments at the outfitting frontier settlements, and the town lot speculators in lithographic cities, in the mining region, will be apt to carry off the lion's share of the spoils.

In round numbers, the Pike's Peak and contiguous gold washings are a thousand miles west of our present frontier white settlements, and in the midst of a perfect wilderness of mountains. Excepting a few cattle, and such game as buffaloes, bears, deer, horses, &c., all the provisions for the miners in this wilderness, for the first season, at least, must be transported over this interval of a thousand miles. Thus, from the experience of the War Department in the late Utah campaign, the subsistence of the gold digger among the Rocky Mountains during the coming summer will hardly be less than from three to five dollars a day.

We should not be surprised if the rush during this season, now about to open, to these Rocky Mountain washings, were to embrace an aggregate of two hundred thousand emigrants. The late revelation has left the financial affairs of the great West in a very disordered condition; and thousands of men, of all pursuits, thus ruined or embarrassed, will be off for these new and comparatively convenient gold fields. The general exodus will comprehend all sorts of speculators and sharpers; and to guard against their extortions the bona fide miners should organize into companies, and provide for their own subsistence, at least for a month or so, among the mines. At the end of that time they will have discovered whether it is best to remain or return. It would be well, also, for the early mining companies to take out with them seeds and roots for cultivation; for thus, even during the first season, some very profitable returns may be made, especially from potatoes, beans, peas, onions, buckwheat, &c.

Among the little valleys and parks of the eastern range of the Rocky Mountains, in the midst of this new mining region, there are many places well adapted to agriculture; and this whole region, for grazing purposes, is scarcely excelled. Doves of cattle and sheep; therefore, may be safely taken out, and in view of the general emigration foreshadowed they will pay a handsome profit to all concerned, but particularly if the mines should prove to be as rich and extensive as they have been described. The great danger to be guarded against in the outset is the dearth of provisions; and where thousands have to be fed, and where nothing of subsistence exists, and nothing is reduced, a thousand miles of transportation will augment the cost of provisions to the point of starvation.

Perhaps during this coming summer the resources may be developed in these new gold fields, and the population established for a powerful and prosperous State among the Rocky Mountains. If so, the route of the Pacific Railroad will be fixed, and the consummation of that great enterprise will cease to be regarded as an impossible or a distant event. The importance of the consequences, therefore, which will follow the substantial confirmation of the flattering reports received concerning these new gold fields cannot be over-estimated. Commercially and politically the results will be of the greatest magnitude to this country and to the world at large. On the other hand, if it should turn out that these Rocky Mountain gold washings are too poor to pay expenses, we fear that the tales of suffering and destitution which followed the last summer's rush from California to Fraser river will sink into insignificance compared with the starving thousands of this impending crusade.

The great question of the richness or poverty of these new mines has still to be solved. The immense emigration about to move forward will soon work out the solution; and in view of reckless speculators and land sharks of all sorts, already in motion from St. Louis to Cherry Creek it would be well, we say, for the emigrant, before going out to provide for the possible necessity of a return before the next winter, with a smaller allowance of gold than the amount which he may have carried to the field of his labors.

PHILIP BARTON KEY, the victim of the late terrible tragedy in Washington, had an elder brother, who was killed many years ago, in a duel, by Midshipman Sherburne, of New Hampshire. Key's wife, who is dead, was a Miss Swan, of Baltimore. Her marriage came near causing a duel between her husband and Colonel May, of Mexican War notoriety, the latter alleging that Key had unfairly supplanted him in the lady's affections.

Army Intelligence.

The President of the United States ordered a general court-martial to assemble at Charleston, S. C., on the 26th instant, for the trial of Surgeon Bernard M. Byrne, Medical Department, United States Army. The court is composed of the following members:—

Brigadier General Churchill, Brevet Colonel May, Brevet Colonel Waite, Brevet Colonel Dimick, Brevet Lieutenant Colonel Chandler, Brevet Lieutenant Colonel Walker, Brevet Lieutenant Colonel Steptoe, Lieutenant Colonel Crittenden, Major Nicholls, and Captain Samuel Jones as Judge Advocate.

Captain Allen's company (K) Second regiment United States Artillery; has been ordered by the War Department from Fort Hamilton to Plattsburg Barracks, Lake Champlain.

Captain Z. B. Tower, corps of Engineers, has been granted a leave of absence for twelve months, with permission to go beyond the United States.

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 2.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

ADJ. GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Washington, February 24, 1859.

1. The Secretary of War desires it to be announced to the army that, as the object of the act of August 16, 1856, in holding out the inducement of a more permanent appointment, was to procure the services of a more competent body of hospital stewards; no soldier nor citizen must henceforth be recommended to him for appointment under that act, who is not known to be temperate, honest, and in every way reliable, as well as sufficiently intelligent, and skilled in pharmacy, for the proper discharge of the responsible duties likely to be devolved upon him.

And as the act of July 5, 1838, section 12, which authorizes the payment of soldiers employed as temporary stewards, is still in force, and fairly provides for the current exigencies of the service, at the same time that it affords the means for a careful probation of all soldiers detailed as hospital stewards, who may be ambitious of one day deserving permanent appointment, the Secretary wishes it to be known that he will in future only bestow the latter in cases of special merit.

2. Hospital stewards appointed by the Secretary of War, whenever stationed in places whence no post return is made to the Adjutant General's office, or when on furlough, will at the end of every month report themselves by letter to the Adj. Gen'l and Surgeon General, as well as to the Medical Director of the Military Department in which they may be serving; to each of whom they will also report each new assignment to duty or change of station ordered in their case, noting carefully the number, date and source of the order directing the same. They will likewise report monthly, when on furlough, to the medical officer in charge of the hospital to which they are attached.

3. All Hospital stewards, appointed by the Secretary of War, who are now in service, will, immediately on the receipt of this order, report by letter, to the Adjutant General and to the Surgeon General, their present station, and the number, date and source of the order under which they are acting.

By order of the Secretary of War, S. COOPER, Adj't Gen'l.

By direction of the War Department a board of officers will assemble at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, on the 8th inst., to examine into a system of evolution for Mounted Riflemen when acting as skirmishers, prepared by Lieutenant Maury, Mounted Rifles.

The Board is further directed to report fully upon the merits of this system of instruction, and give their opinion as to its adaptation to the particular corps for which it is designed.

The Board will consist of the following officers:—Lieutenant Colonel Crittenden, Brevet Lieutenant Colonel Porter and Lieutenant Maury.

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 5.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

ADJ. GENERAL'S OFFICE,

Washington, March 15, 1859.

Promotions in the army of the United States, made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, since the publication of "general orders" No. 16, of December 10, 1858:

I. PROMOTIONS.

Corps of Engineers.—Capt. John G. Barnard, to be a Major; December 13, 1858, vice Smith, deceased.

First Lieutenant Wm. H. C. Whiting, to be Captain, December 13, 1858, vice Barnard, promoted.

Second Lieutenant James B. McPherson, to be First Lieutenant, December 13, 1858, vice Whiting, promoted.

Brevet Lieutenant Edward P. Alexander, to be second lieutenant, October 10, 1858, vice N. F. Alexander, deceased.

Brevet Second Lieutenant Henry M. Roberts, to be second lieutenant, Dec. 13, 1858, vice McPherson, promoted.

Ordnance Department.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Charles C. Lee, to be second lieutenant, December 20, 1858, the date of Captain Brereton's resignation.

First Regiment of Dragoons.—Second Lieutenant Alfred B. Chaplain, to be first lieutenant, January 6, 1859, vice Orren Chapman, deceased. (Company B.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Leroy Napier, jr., to be second lieutenant, January 6, 1859, vice Chaplain, promoted. (Company K.)

First Regiment of Artillery.—Captain Erasmus D. Keyes, of the Third Artillery, to be Major, October 12, 1858, vice Taylor, deceased.

Third Regiment of Artillery.—First Lieutenant George P. Andrews, to be Captain, October 12, 1858, vice Keyes, promoted; to first artillery. (Company M.)

First Lieutenant John H. Lendrum, to be captain, December 2, 1858, vice Looser, resigned. (Company I.)

Second Lieutenant Thomas M. Saunders, to be first lieutenant, October 12, 1858, vice Andrews, promoted. (Company F.)

Second Lieutenant Henry V. De Hart, to be first lieutenant, December 3, 1858, vice Lendrum, promoted. (Company M.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Augustus G. Robinson, of the fourth artillery, to be second lieutenant, October 12, 1858, vice Saunders, promoted. (Company H.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Edward R. Warner, of the first artillery, to be second lieutenant, December 3, 1858, vice De Hart, promoted. (Company I.)

Second Regiment of Infantry.—Lieutenant Colonel Dixon S. Miles, of the third Infantry, to be Colonel, January 19, 1859, vice Lee, deceased.

Third Regiment of Infantry.—Major Electus Backus to be lieutenant colonel, January 19, 1859, vice Miles, promoted to second Infantry.

Captain Caleb C. Sibley, of the fifth Infantry, to be major, January 19, 1859, vice Backus, promoted.

First Lieutenant Henry D. Clitz, to be captain, December 6, 1858, vice Ward, deceased. (Company E.)

Second Lieutenant Alexander McD. McCook, to be first lieutenant, December 6, 1858, vice Clitz, promoted. (Company G.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Wm. H. Bell, to be second lieutenant, December 6, 1858, vice McCook, promoted. (Company D.)

Fifth Regiment of Infantry.—First Lieutenant Augustus H. Seward, to be captain, January 19, 1859, vice Sibley, promoted to the third Infantry. (Company E.)

Second Lieutenant Alex. Chambers, to be first lieutenant, January 19, 1859, vice Burns, who vacates his regiment commission. (Company E.)

Second Lieutenant Lucius L. Rich, to be first lieutenant, January 19, 1859, vice Seward, promoted. (Company F.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Bryan M. Thomas of the eighth Infantry, to be second lieutenant, January 19, 1859, vice Chambers, promoted. (Company I.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Wm. J. L. Nicodemus, to be second lieutenant, January 19, 1859, vice Rich, promoted. (Company F.)

Second Regiment of Infantry.—Brevet Second Lieutenant Asa B. Cary, of the Sixth Infantry, to be second lieutenant, October 22, 1859, vice O'Conner, resigned. (Company E.)

Eighth Regiment of Infantry.—First Lieutenant Thomas G. Pitcher, to be captain, October 19, 1858, vice Wood, deceased. (Company I.)

Second Lieutenant Wm. Craig, to be first lieutenant, October 19, 1858, vice Pitcher, promoted. (Company D.)

Brevet Second Lieutenant Royal T. Frank, of the fifth Infantry, to be second lieutenant, October 19, 1858, vice Craig, promoted. (Company E.)

II.—CASUALTIES.

Resigned (2)—Captain Lucien Looser, Third artillery, December 3d, 1858. Captain Thomas J. Brereton, Ordnance Department, December 20, 1858.

Commission Vacated under the Seventh Section of the Act of June 18, 1846.

By First Lieutenant William W. Burns, Fifth Infantry, Commissary of subsistence—his regimental commission (only) January 19, 1859.

Died (6)—Colonel Francis Lee, Second Infantry, at St. Louis, Mo. Jan. 19, 1859.

Brevet Colonel John L. Smith, Major Corps of Engineers, at New York, N. Y., Dec. 13, 1858.

Captain James N. Ward, Third Infantry, at St. Anthony, Minnesota, Dec. 6, 1858.

First Lieutenant Orren Chapman, First Dragoons, at St. Louis Mo. Jan. 6, 1859.

Second Lieutenant Junius B. Roane, Fourth Artillery at Brooklyn, Iowa, Feb. 10, 1859.

Second Lieutenant Sardine P. Reed, Tenth Infantry, at West Point, New York, Feb. 5, 1859.

III. Officers have been arranged in the foregoing order to the companies to which they succeeded, in the natural course of promotion. Should a different assignment, however, have since been made, by competent authority, it will take precedence of the former.

IV. The Officers promoted will join their proper stations and companies without delay, unless on detached service, acting under special instructions, or on leave of absence, when they will so report, by letter, to the commanders of their respective corps, regiments and posts.

By order of the Secretary of War, S. COOPER Adjutant General.

The Farnham House Re-opened.

ELIJAH ABLE has rented the premises favorably known as the "Farnham House," at South street, 18th Ward, about three blocks east of Radford, Cabot & Co.'s Store, where he designs keeping a First Class and solicits the patronage of the public.

BOARDING HOUSE,

TERMS:
Board and Lodging, per week, $11 00
" without Lodging, " 9 00
" per day, " 3 00
" " " 75
Supper, Lodging and Breakfast, " 1 50
Good stabling and carriage on the premises.
Payment required in advance. 26-2m

NEW GOODS AT WHOLESALE.

LOUD, HOSMER & CO. OF SAN FRANCISCO.

ARE now receiving and opening one of the largest and well selected ever brought to this city. Their selections were made by one well acquainted with the wants of this market, and they are offering inducements to dealers to enable their purchases from them, that cannot fail to be satisfactory. Their stock consists in part of

STOCK OF GOODS

FALL RIVER, MERRIMACK AND COCHICO PRINTS,

DRILLINGS, SHEETINGS,

DEMINS, KENTUCKY JEANS,

COTTON YARN, &c.

COTTON BATTING,

DE LAINES,

ALPACCA, &c. &c.

TEAS, TOBACCO AND CIGARS

of the best quality, all of which will be sold at the lowest market rates.

LOUD, HOSMER & CO. 26-1m

DRUGS! CHEMICALS!

PERFUMERIES.

Spring & Summer Trade of 1859.

ALEX. LEITCH.

MARBLE BUILDING,

CORNER OF FOURTH AND OLIVE

STREETS,

ST. LOUIS, MO.

TAKES pleasure in inviting attention to his SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRUGS, CHEMICALS,

PURE RE-AGENTS, and

PHARMACEUTICAL PREPARATIONS, of which he has a very full and varied assortment, and of the best and purest quality. He would also direct the attention of the Profession to his unusually large Stock of selected with care, and made by the most eminent manufacturers, and with the latest improvements.

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

He would commend to the notice of those in search of

TOILETTE ARTICLES,

including every variety, English and French, to his assortment.

PERFUMERIES.

ELEGANT EXTRACTS,

POMADES AND SOAPS.

He has replenished his Establishment with a large supply of the choicest

BRANDIES, WINES, AND GIN.

And is also prepared to fill all orders for Congress and other Mineral Waters, of which he is the sole Agent for St. Louis.

His stock of MEDICINE CHESTS and SADDLE BAGS is large, and has been selected with special reference to the PIKE'S PEAK TRADE, AND THE PLAINS.

26-14

PAT'S EVASIVE ANSWER.—Patrick O'Neil, before he became joined in the 'holy bonds of hemlock' with Bridget, was in the service of Father Conneley. One day the priest expected a call from a Protestant minister, and he wished some excuse to get rid of him. So calling Patrick he proceeded to give him some instructions.

'Patrick,' said he, 'if that minister comes here to-day, I don't wish to see him.'

'Yis, yer riverence.'

'Make some excuse and send him off.'

'What shall I tell him?'

'Tell him I am not at home.'

'Would yer have me tell him a lie, yer riverence?'

'No, Patrick, but get rid of him in some way—give him an evasive answer.'

'An evasive answer, is it? I will do it.'

'You understand me, Patrick?'

'Av course, yer riverence.'

The matter thus arranged, Father Conneley retired to his library, and Patrick went about his duties. About dusk in the afternoon, the priest came out of his room, and found Patrick in unusually good spirits.

'Well, Patrick, did the minister call to-day?'

'Yis, sir.'

'And did you get rid of him?'

'I did, sir.'

'Did he ask if I was in?'

'He did, sir.'

'And what did you say to him?'

'I gave him an evasive answer.'

'An evasive answer, Patrick?'

'Yis, yer riverence.'

'And what did you say to him?'

'He axed me was ye in, and I towld him was his grandmother a monkey!'

ARTENUS WARD ON MORAL EXHIBITIONS.—I'm travelin' with a tent which is better nor hirin' halls. My show consists of a series of wax works, a panetamy called a Grand Movin' Diaree of the War in the Crymeare, comic songs and the Cangaroo, which last little cuss continues to conduct himself in the most outrageous style. I started out to make my entertainment a great Moral Exhibition, but I'm compelled to sware so much at that air infernal Cangaroo that I'm afraid this desine will be frustrated to some extent.

And while speaking of morality reminds me that some folks turn up their noses at such shows like mine, saying they is so low and not fit for people of high degree. Shure I maintain that it is infernal nonsense. I maintain that wax figures is more elevatin' than all the plays ever wrotten.

Take Shakespeer for instance. People think he's grate but I contend he is quite the reverse to the contrary. What sort of sense is there to King Lear who goes round cussin' his darters, chawin' hay, and throwin' straws at folk, and 'larfin' like a silly old koot and a makin' a ass of himself generally? There's Mrs. Macbeth, she is a nice kind of a woman to have, ain't she, putting old Mac her husband to slayin' Duncan with a chees knife as he is paying a friendly visit to her house. O it's highly morality I spoze, when she lurs wildly and sez "give me the daggers I'll let his bowels out," or words to that effect—I say this is all strictly proper i spoze? That Jack Fawlstaf is likewise a immoral old cuss take him how ye may; and Hamlet is as crazy as a loon. Thares Richard Thurd—people thinks, but I look upon him in the life of a monster. He kills everybody he takes a noshun to, in cold blood, and then goes to sleep in his tent—Bimeby he wakes up and yells for a boss, so he can go off and kill some more people. If he is not a fit specimen for the gallus then I shud like to know ware ye find um. Thares Iergo who is more orny nor pizun. See how shamefully he treted that hilly respectable injin gentleman Mr. Otheller, making him for to believe his wife was tu thick with Cashoe. Observe how Iergo got Cashoe drunk as a biled owl on corn whisky in order to carry out his sneakin' desines. See how he works Otheller's feelings up so that he goze and makes poor Desdemony swaller a pill which caused her death. But I must stop. At some future time I shall continue my remarks on the drummer, in which I will show the superiority of wax figures, snix and other fixins in a interlectual point of view.

Why is a fashionable lady like a rigid economist? Because she makes a great deal of bustle about a little waist.

MANUFACTURING CHINESE BRAVERY.

A letter from an officer serving in the Chinese expedition, gives the following laughable order for the day, published by one of the Chinese commanders, directing his soldiers what to do in order to overcome their enemies. It is drawn up in the form of a training bill of fare for thirteen days: "This is commanded by me, the Chief of the Braves. Let all tremble and obey. On the 13th day before the battle they must eat jelly made of Tiger's flesh, in order to imbibe the rage and ferocity of that animal; twelfth day before, the roasted liver of a lion, in order to have the intrepidity of that noble beast; eleventh, stewed serpents, to acquire cunning; tenth, extract of camelion, to deceive their enemies by changing color; ninth, crocodile broth, to make them amphibious, and be able to pursue and fight their enemies both on land and on water; eighth, jaguar's liver, cooked in wine, in order to have the rapidity and fury of that quadruped; seventh, hawk's head, in order to have the quick eye of that bird in distinguishing the enemy; sixth, zebra's intestines, to be able to imitate the cry of that animal; fifth, hippopotamus' brains to make the body impenetrable to bullets; fourth, stewed monkeys, to acquire the activity of that race; third, scorpions, in order that all the wounds inflicted by them may be as venomous as the sting of those reptiles; on the day before the battle, the raw breast of a panther, in order to be as pitiless as that animal; and on the morning of the battle they must drink a drop of leopard's blood, in order that they may imitate that animal, which never turns round while devouring its prey. Tremble and obey.

GOING TO MEET A LOVER AND FINDING HIM A CORPSE.—A young lady, a Miss T., from Lockport, New York, passed through Milwaukee one day last week, on her way to St. Paul, to meet her betrothed and fulfil her engagement to be married. Between Hastings and St. Paul, the La Crosse Republican says, she met the downward stage, which had the corpse of her intended husband. This she did not learn until she arrived at St. Paul, where she hired a livery and started back to overtake the stage. She overhauled the stage at Wabashaw, and took charge of the remains of her lover. She passed through that city last Thursday night on her way home. She was a brave girl, and bore her crushing sorrows, by having a faithful hope in the future. The Republican says the livery men of St. Paul only charged her $50 for taking her to Wabashaw.

The Dial, long announced in London as the daily paper that is to annihilate the Times, will, it is said, positively appear with the first parliamentary proceedings. The Dial will complete the number of London daily papers to twenty—fourteen morning, and six evening; the Sun was to have eclipsed the Times, but the result was a total eclipse of the Sun.

The postmaster at Louisville is in great trouble. A letter has been addressed to his post office, "to the handsomest woman in Kentucky." All the Kentucky women want it, but he don't know which of them is entitled to it. What a perplexity!

Says an astronomer to a bright-eyed girl when talking of rainbows, "Did you ever see a lunar bow, Miss?" "I have seen a beau by moonlight, if that's what you mean," was the slow rejoinder.

WANTED. A first rate Brewer, one that understands the business thoroughly and that is capable of taking charge of a brewery. None other need apply. J. S. HUTCHINSON

New Goods! New Goods!! MESSRS. RADFORD, CABOT & CO., HAVE just received direct from California, a large assortment of DRY GOODS, &c., &c., consisting of

BROWN DOMESTIC, BLUE DRILLING, PRINTS OF ALL KINDS, LAUNES, PLAIDS, ALPACAS, FLANNELS, MUSLIN DE LAINE, THREAD, NEEDLES, PINS, RIBBONS, Dress Trimmings, &c., &c. Dye stuffs of all kinds, all of which we will sell at lowest cash prices. 24-11

NEW GOODS, MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. HAVE just received a well selected assortment of goods, consisting of

Prints, Domestic, Gingham, Tea, Dried Peaches, Coffee, Dried Apples, Sugar, &c., which will be sold at the lowest cash rates. 25-2

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS, BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE. TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO. IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c., Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Garash Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods. Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induce us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints Bleached do Blue Demins " shirtings " drills " White & col'd bl'kets Hickory stripes Canton flannels Plaid linsey woolsey Woolen do Kentucky jeans Quilts & comfortables Bed ticking Alpaccas and merinos Delaines & cashmeres Spun yarn Linen diapers & towels Sewing thread " napkins Curtain damasks " table cloths Satinett & cashmeres Crash, Toweling and Cottonades and pant doylesies stuffs Gingham and lawns Carpets and oil White linen bosom shirts clothes Colored calico do Apron check Grey flannel do Heavy duck (all Red do do mathes) Blue do do &c., &c., &c. Blue check & hickory do

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered Setts silks " collars & sleeves Plain all wool delaines " windw curtains Fancy do " sections Alexander's kid gloves " linen handk'fs Bay state long shawls Plaid linen cambric Stella and merino do Plaid linen cambric Delaines in dress Hem stitched do do patterns Silk do do White cambric muslin " cravats and ties Jacksonets Suspender's Swiss Dress trimmings Mull and Namsoks Buck gloves and Plaid jaconet muslins gauntlets Plaid cashmere for children Silk and cashmere gloves Lace mitts and gloves Dress lawns and barges Plain colored silk ribbons Bonnet Velvet do Combs brushes and Yankee notions &c., cutlery &c., &c., &c.

Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. (Orders promptly filled) TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York. Agents for the Farmer Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 25-11

NOTICE. H. F. MORRELL, Postmaster of Great Salt Lake City, is the authorized agent in this City, for the SAN FRANCISCO EVENING BULLETIN, and will receive subscriptions for the Daily, Weekly or Tri-Weekly Bulletin. Copies may be procured at the Post Office. 24-11

Pike's Peak! Pike's Peak!! PERSONS about to emigrate to the gold mines, or to the States, are hereby informed that they can purchase good horses or mules at reasonable prices, from Charles Mogo, at the Hot Spring Brewery—point of Mountain south of G. S. L. City. April 7th, 1859. 24-11

OPPOSITION IS THE LIFE OF TRADE. THE Subscriber having made important improvements in the manufacture of Whisky is now enabled to sell it at

THREE DOLLARS A GALLON. If a large quantity is sold, still operation, and he can now recommend it to the public as the most superior article ever brought into this market. WILLIAM HOWARD, Big Cottonwood Distillery, three miles south of the Sugar House, or at Mr. C. Clements, Salt Lake City. 22-11

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS. WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch materials, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Stubbs at the Store of Livingston, Kinkaid & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage. G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859. 10-11

LAW NOTICE. ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business intrusted to him. Office with Dr. Pomeroy, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, G. S. L. City. 17-11

STAYED OR STOLEN FROM POINT OF West Mountain, (Lewis' Ranch) one strawberry roan Horse, branded JR on the near shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return. 10-11

NEW GOODS, MILLER, RUSSELL & CO.

HAVE just received a well selected assortment of goods, consisting of

Prints, Domestic, Gingham, Tea, Dried Peaches, Coffee, Dried Apples, Sugar, &c., which will be sold at the lowest cash rates. 25-2

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS, BY THE PIECE OR PACKAGE. TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO. IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF DRY GOODS, HOSIERY &c., Corner of Front and Sacramento streets, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

WE respectfully invite the attention of the merchants of Salt Lake, Utah Territory, and Garash Valley, to our large and varied stock of

Fancy & Staple Dry Goods. Having superior facilities for the purchase of Goods in the cities of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and a long experience in the Salt Lake trade, we are enabled to supply any article of Staple or Fancy Dry Goods, at prices as low as they can be purchased at St. Louis.

The increasing facilities for transportation from San Francisco over those of the route from St. Louis, induce us to offer goods at such prices as will eventually draw the entire dry goods trade of Utah Territory to this port.

Having a resident partner in New York we are enabled to take advantage of the markets of the Eastern cities, both as regards price and style of goods. We are constantly receiving by every Clipper, Ship and Steamer, a full assortment of

Brown sheeting Merrimack Prints Bleached do Blue Demins " shirtings " drills " White & col'd bl'kets Hickory stripes Canton flannels Plaid linsey woolsey Woolen do Kentucky jeans Quilts & comfortables Bed ticking Alpaccas and merinos Delaines & cashmeres Spun yarn Linen diapers & towels Sewing thread " napkins Curtain damasks " table cloths Satinett & cashmeres Crash, Toweling and Cottonades and pant doylesies stuffs Gingham and lawns Carpets and oil White linen bosom shirts clothes Colored calico do Apron check Grey flannel do Heavy duck (all Red do do mathes) Blue do do &c., &c., &c. Blue check & hickory do

Our FANCY GOODS SALESROOM contains in part, a full assortment of the Newest Patterns and Style of Dress Goods, Embroideries, Silks, &c., such as

Bl'k and fancy dress Embroidered Setts silks " collars & sleeves Plain all wool delaines " windw curtains Fancy do " sections Alexander's kid gloves " linen handk'fs Bay state long shawls Plaid linen cambric Stella and merino do Plaid linen cambric Delaines in dress Hem stitched do do patterns Silk do do White cambric muslin " cravats and ties Jacksonets Suspender's Swiss Dress trimmings Mull and Namsoks Buck gloves and Plaid jaconet muslins gauntlets Plaid cashmere for children Silk and cashmere gloves Lace mitts and gloves Dress lawns and barges Plain colored silk ribbons Bonnet Velvet do Combs brushes and Yankee notions &c., cutlery &c., &c., &c.

Our stock of Hosiery is the largest and best assorted on this coast, and comprises all the various manufactures styles and qualities imported from Europe, together with American manufactures. (Orders promptly filled) TAAFFE, McCAHILL & CO., Corner Front and Sacramento streets, Cal., and 320 Broadway, New York. Agents for the Farmer Print Works, and the New England Worsted Company's Goods. 25-11

NOTICE. H. F. MORRELL, Postmaster of Great Salt Lake City, is the authorized agent in this City, for the SAN FRANCISCO EVENING BULLETIN, and will receive subscriptions for the Daily, Weekly or Tri-Weekly Bulletin. Copies may be procured at the Post Office. 24-11

Pike's Peak! Pike's Peak!! PERSONS about to emigrate to the gold mines, or to the States, are hereby informed that they can purchase good horses or mules at reasonable prices, from Charles Mogo, at the Hot Spring Brewery—point of Mountain south of G. S. L. City. April 7th, 1859. 24-11

OPPOSITION IS THE LIFE OF TRADE. THE Subscriber having made important improvements in the manufacture of Whisky is now enabled to sell it at

THREE DOLLARS A GALLON. If a large quantity is sold, still operation, and he can now recommend it to the public as the most superior article ever brought into this market. WILLIAM HOWARD, Big Cottonwood Distillery, three miles south of the Sugar House, or at Mr. C. Clements, Salt Lake City. 22-11

D. W. BAYLIES & SON, WATCH-MAKERS. WOULD respectfully inform the citizens of this City and Camp Floyd, that they have just received from the East, a large assortment of Watch materials, and will promptly repair any watches or other jewelry, committed to their care. Charles Stubbs at the Store of Livingston, Kinkaid & Co., is their Agent at Camp Floyd, and will promptly forward, and receive all watches placed in his hands, free of charge, for carriage. G. S. L. City, January 3rd, 1859. 10-11

LAW NOTICE. ALEXANDER WILSON, U. S. Attorney for Utah Territory, will attend promptly to professional business intrusted to him. Office with Dr. Pomeroy, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, G. S. L. City. 17-11

STAYED OR STOLEN FROM POINT OF West Mountain, (Lewis' Ranch) one strawberry roan Horse, branded JR on the near shoulder. The above reward will be given for his return. 10-11

LAGER BEER

HOT SPRING BREWERY. WE will endeavor to furnish the superior Malt Liquors of the above establishment in quantities to suit purchasers.

Y. X. ALE, PORTER, and our unrivalled BEER, furnished to customers either at the Brewery, or at our Beer Saloon in Camp Floyd.

FOR THE ACCOMMODATION OF TRAVELERS, We have opened Dining Rooms at the Brewery, where meals can be procured at all hours.

We have secured a good supply of hay and oats, and an attentive hostler is ready to take care of animals.

OUR PRICES, in consequence of the high price of provisions and the difficulty of procuring them, are as follows:

Single meals, $1 00
Supper, breakfast and lodging, 2 00
For animals, for a single feed of hay, per head, 50
" " hay and grain, " 1 00
and double those prices for feed over night.

M. B. The highest cash prices paid for BARLEY and for produce of all kinds delivered at the Brewery. Hot Springs, Point of Mountain, South of City.

SALT LAKE HOUSE. JAMES TOWNSEND, Proprietor.

Prices of Board.
Board and Lodging per week, $12 50
Board, (without Lodging), 10 00
Board, per day, 2 50
Supper, Breakfast and Lodging, 3 00
Single meal, 1 00
Animals, per night, hay and grain, 2 00
Payments to be made in advance. 16-3m

U. S. Mail Line From St. Joseph to Great Salt Lake City. NOTICE is hereby given that passengers will not be carried by us on any section of this mail route until further notice, and that the agents and conductors on the route are positively forbidden from taking passengers, on any conditions whatever. J. M. HOOK & DAY & CO., Feb. 14, 1859. By E. K. Dole, Agent.

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC GROCERIES, HATS AND CAPS, WINES, LIQUORS, CIGARS, &c.

THEIR stock consists in part of the following articles, viz:

Tea, Coffee, Chewing Tobacco, Sugar, Spice, Smoking Tobacco, Powder, Shot, Playing Cards, Pepper, Mace, Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Caps, &c., &c.

Pale Cognac Brandy, Monongahela Whisky, Dark do do Bourbon do do Rectified do do Port Wine.

FANCY GROCERIES. French Mustard, Mixed Pickles, Durham do Assorted do Assorted Jams, do Gherkins, do Jellies, do Piccolilli, do Syrups, do Pickled Onions, do Cordials, do Tomato Catsup, Brandy Peaches, do Walnut Catsup, do Cherries, do Mushroom Catsup, do Pears, do Cayenne Pepper, Assorted West India Cellery Seed, Preserves, Canned Olives, Rhubarb Pie Fruit, Pepper Sauce, Peach do do Assorted Sauce, Apple do do do Nat. Preserves, Plum do do Capers Capotes, Raspberry do Natural Preserved Pines, Gooseberry do Roast Turkey, Blackberry Brandy, Roast Chicken, Raspberry Brandy, String Beans, Fresh Lobster, Green Peas, Pickled do do Corn, Fresh Clams, do Assorted Herbs, Mince Meat, do Sweetmeats, Sausage Meat, Natural Preserved Peaches, Fresh Cauliflower, Nat'l Preserved Strawberries, Pickled do do Natural Preserved Worcestershire Sauce, Damsons, Stoughton Bitters, Mushrooms, Fresh Salmon, Asparagus, French Tomatoes, Tarragon Vinegar, Hostetter Bitters, do Fields Oysters, Boker's do do Cove do Le Drard's do Pine Apple Cheese, Royal Windsor do Olive Oil, Maraschino, do Assorted Candies, Curacao, Raisins, Abaynth, Almonds, Scotch Ale, English Walnuts, Lotion Porter, Brazil Nuts, Scheidam Schrappe, Golden Grape Cognac, Figs, Old Virginia Peach Dates, Prunes, Brandy, Mountain Dew White-Pecans, Family Supplies, Crackers, Morning Call, Cracknels, Indian Queen Maderia, E. D. Cheese, also a large and well selected stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps, Gents Boots & Shoes, Hardware, Ladies Shoes, Notions, Woolen Gloves, Hosiery, do Mitts, Buck Gloves, do Scarfs, do Mitts, Stationery, &c., do Gauntlets, All of which they offer upon the lowest terms for cash or country produce. G. S. L. City, Dec. 1st, 1858 611

WANTED. A FEW good Mules in exchange for a good Working Cattle. Apply to GILBERT & GERRISH. 2-11

A CARD.

G. S. L. City, Nov. 4, 1858. The undersigned would most respectfully inform citizens of Utah that they are still doing business at their old and well known stand in Great Salt Lake City, where the most desirable goods, adapted to the wants of the people, may always be found. They have established a house at Camp Floyd, where the same style of goods as kept here may be had at the same form rates. It may be an object for those families living south, to know that they can procure their supplies at Camp Floyd, at the same prices as they are selling at in this city.

Thankful for former patronage extended by the people of this Territory, they would respectfully solicit continuance of the same.

LIVINGSTON, KINKAID & CO. In the course of ten days we shall be able to inform our friends with certainty concerning our train as last expected. 1-11

LIQUORS! BEING desirous of closing out our extensive stock of liquors, we will hereafter sell the best St. Louis Bottled Whisky, at three dollars and fifty cents per gallon. Other liquors in proportion. MILLER, RUSSELL & CO. 16-11

L. & A. CARR, WHOLESALE BOOKSELLERS, STATIONERS AND BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS, No. 49 Main Street, ST. LOUIS MO.

KEEP constantly on hand, all the spelling books, arithmetic, grammar, geography, philosophy, reading books, histories, dictionaries, &c., now in use, which they offer at the LOWEST PRICES.

Their stock of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC STATIONERY, BLANK BOOKS, PRINTING AND WRITING PAPER, Has been selected with the greatest care, and is equal to any in the West. Having an

EXTENSIVE BINDERY, Attached to their establishment, they are prepared to manufacture all kinds of Blank Books to order, and at the shortest notice. 14-11

MOUNT VERNON HOTEL, AT CAMP FLOYD, UTAH TERRITORY. CHARLES HARRISON, PROPRIETOR.

TRAVELERS and boarders, can always be accommodated with the best market affords, and neat and comfortable apartments. F. S. Farmers will be paid the highest cash price for all kinds of country produce. 12-11

NEW GOODS. JUST received a full stock of Staple GOODS, selected expressly for this market. GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

FOR SALE, LAGER Beer and Ale, in lots to suit purchasers. Manufactured by Mogo, Berry & Co. RADFORD, CABOT & CO. 10-11

FOR SALE, ONE Thousand head of SHEEP in lots to suit purchasers. I will take in exchange in them, wheat, oats, and barley. CHARLES MOGO. Hot Spring Brewery. 10-11

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS, ATTORNEY AT LAW. Will practice in all the courts of the Territory, and especially in the U. S. District Court, and Supreme Court. He will give efficient attention to all professional engagements. OFFICE—West side of East Temple st., opposite Miller, Russell & Co.'s store. G. S. L. City, Nov. 6, 1858. 1-11

CHAS. MAURICE SMITH, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW. Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory. 2-11

S. M. BLAIR, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW. Office—Council House st., opposite Miller & Russell's store. 2-11

RADFORD, CABOT & CO., WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN GROCERIES, DRY GOODS, INDIAN GOODS, ETC. At the old stand of Mr. Howard, Great Salt Lake City, U. T. 1-6m

WAGONS. A FEW light kanyon wagons for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

EMPIRE SALOON. THE BAR is now furnished with a large and choice lot of liquors, wines, &c., purchased with great care, and to which the attention of those desiring WHOLESALE refreshments is especially called. JOHN M. WALLACE. 2-11

WORK CATTLE. 100 YOKE of Work Cattle in good working condition, for sale by GILBERT & GERRISH. 1-11

MILLER, RUSSELL & CO., Wholesale and retail dealers in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC GROCERIES, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, HARDWARE, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS, and outland goods generally, are now receiving the most complete stock of goods in their line that has yet been brought to this Territory, which they offer at very low figure, for cash or country produce. 1-11

COW STRAYED. ON the 23d October last, a small young light red cow, white face, and a thick rope tied around her horns, horns small, was giving milk and had been branded Atwood on the horn, black not certain. Please bring her to Curtis E. Bolton, third ward, G. S. L. City, opposite the School House and well rewarded. 1-11

BY

VO

THE

is by

KIL

Single co

advance.

T

She lot

Her

All ot

Who

As fro

To r

And o

Tha

She Jo

With

A stal

Ahl r

Tha

Who l

Who

She lo

Was

The at

For al

I w

That

A b

MAR

</

KIRK ANDERSON'S THE VALLEY TAN.

BY KIRK ANDERSON.

EIGHT DOLLARS IN ADVANCE.

VOLUME 1.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., TUESDAY, MAY 3, 1859.

NUMBER 27.

THE VALLEY TAN.

IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY BY
KIRK ANDERSON.

TERMS:

Single copy for one year, $8, invariably in advance.

The Thoughtless Vow.

She loved him—but she heeded not—
Her heart had only room for pride;
All other feelings were forgot,
When she became another's bride.
As from a dream she then awoke,
To realize her lonely state,
And own it was the vow she broke
That left her drear and desolate!

She loved him—but the slanderer came,
With words of hate that all believed;
A stain thus rested on his name—
But he was wronged, and she deceived!
A rash act that gave her hand,
That drove her lover from her side—
Who hid him to a distant land,
Where, battling for a name, he died!

She loved him—and his memory now
Was treasured from the world apart;
The shade of thought was on her brow,
The seeds of death were in her heart.
For all the world that thing forlorn
I would not, could not be, and live—
That casket with its jewel gone,
A bride who has no heart to give!

Military Force of Europe.

The Commercial Union, of Antwerp, has the following statistics of the military and naval forces of the different States of the Continent of Europe. The figures which this journal publishes, without being official, appear to be taken from reliable sources:

France—Army (effective force on June 1, 1859), 672,400 men, 163 field batteries. Navy, 417 vessels of war; 600 sailing, 117 steam; 27,000 mariners.
Austria—Army, 670,477 men; of which 520,400 infantry, 70,300 cavalry, 59,292 artillery, 11,116 engineers and staff, 9,217 pontonniers. Navy, 104 vessels of war.

Prussia—Army, 525,000 men; of which 410,000 of the active army and Landwehr of first ban, 115,000 Landwehr of second ban. Navy, 50 vessels of war, 3,500 mariners.

England—Army, 223,000 men, including those dispersed in the colonies. Navy, 600 vessels of war; 309 sailing, 251 steam, 40 ships of the line, carrying 17,291 guns and 69,500 sailors.

Russia—Army, 1,067,600 men, including the reserve, and 226,000 irregulars. Navy, 177 vessels, 62,000 mariners and gunners.

Turkey—Army, 178,000 men; reserve 148,680, irregulars 61,000, different contingents 110,000. Navy, 70 vessels, 38,000 mariners.

Spain—Army, 75,000 men peace establishment, 500,600 war establishment. Navy, 410 vessels, 15,000 mariners.

Sardinia—Army, 50,600 men. Navy, 40 vessels, 2,860 sailors.

Two Sicilies—Army, 100,000 men; of which 10,000 are Swiss. Navy, 60 vessels; 12 sailing, 28 steamers, 100 cannonier (gun boats), 5,362 sailors.

Modena—Army, 3,800 men.
Parma—Army, 2,802 men.

Rome—Army, 1,600 infantry, 1,315 cavalry.
Tuscany—Army, 16,000 men.

Denmark—Army, 60,000 men. Navy, 126 vessels of war.

Sweden and Norway—Army of Sweden, 144,000 men; of Norway, 24,000. Navy, 349 vessels and 126 chaloupes cannonier (gun boats).

Portugal—Army, 35,000 men, including colonial corps. Navy, 44 vessels of war.

Netherlands—Army, 58,647. Navy, 72 vessels, 68 gunboats, 7,000 sailors.

Belgium—Army, 31,400 men, 7,322 cavalry, peace establishment; 84,000 men, 14,000 cavalry, war establishment. Navy, 1 brig of 20 guns, 1 goelette, 120 chaloupes cannonier.

Switzerland—Army, 125,000 men, the reserve included; Landwehr, 150,000 men.

Greece—Army, 10,000 men, Navy, 25 vessels.

German States—Federal army, 250,000 men.

German Confederation—Army 525,000 men; 49,500 cavalry, including the Austrian and Prussian contingents.

Total of army, 4,962,066.

Navy, stated and estimated, 263,222.

The Cadiz correspondent of the Havana Diario de la Marina, writing on the 11th February, says that the Spanish Minister of Marine asks an appropriation by the Cortes of more than nine hundred millions of reales de vellon (forty-five millions of dollars) for the construction of 156 vessels of war, as follows:

AUXILIARY SCREW STEAMERS.

6 ships of the line of from 90 to 100 guns.

12 frigates of from 50 to 60 guns.

18 corvettes of from 30 to 36 guns.

18 corvettes of from 20 to 24 guns.

60 smaller vessels of from 4 to 20 guns.

PADDLE WHEEL STEAMERS.

4 steamships of 500 horse power and 16 guns.

8 steamships of 359 horse power and 16 guns.

6 steamships of from 160 to 350 horse power and various tonnage.

12 steamships of from 100 to 160 horse power and various tonnage.

SAILING VESSELS.

12 store ships.

Besides this squadron there are to be constructed three naval school ships, the first for the instruction of midshipmen and naval apprentices, the second for the marines, and the third for the artillery; also one hundred despatch boats for the coast service. In the said sum there is not included the expense for maintaining and improving of the Navy Yards.

The project of law which the Cortes are discussing appropriates only 449,950 95 reales (twenty-two millions of dollars) for the navy, distributed in the following way:

For maintaining and improving Navy Yards..... 100,000,000

For the construction of two screw steamships of the line of from 90 to 100 guns..... 47,368,000

For that of eight screw steam frigates of from 50 to 60 guns 115,546,200

For that of nine screw steam corvettes of from 30 to 36 guns 78,204,060

For that of 14 screw steam corvettes of from 20 to 24 guns..... 71,867,690

For that of 30 smaller screw steamers..... 36,819,990

Total..... 449,805,950

The Army Register for 1850 has just made its appearance. It appears that our present force of regular soldiers consists of nineteen regiments, all told, as follows:

Ten regiments of infantry, averaging ten companies of seventy men each; four of artillery, averaging twelve companies of about fifty men each; one of mounted riflemen; two of cavalry, and two of dragoons, each of the latter numbering about ten companies of about fifty men. It would be difficult to arrive at a correct estimate of the actual fighting material at the disposal of the War Department, but we presume the entire strength of our army is little over or under 16,000 fighting men. The Register shows the grand aggregate of the militia, all told, to be 2,763,426.

Home and Women.

Our homes, of what is their cornerstone but virtue of women, and on what does our social well-being rest but our homes? Must we not trace all other blessings of civilized life to the doors of our private dwellings? Are not our hearthstones guarded by the holy forms of conjugal, filial and parental love, the corner-stone of Church and State; more sacred than either, more necessary than both? Let our temples crumble, and our academies decay; let every public edifice, our halls of justice and our capital of State, be levelled with the dust; but spare our homes. Let no Socialist invade them with his wild plans of community. Man did not invent, and he cannot improve or abrogate. A private shelter to cover in two hearts dearer to each other than all the world, high walls to exclude the profane eye of every human being; seclusion enough for children to feel that mother is a holy and peculiar name—this is home; and here is the birth-place of every virtuous impulse, of every sacred thought. Here the Church and State must come for origin and their support. Oh, spare our homes! The love we experience there gives us more faith in an infinite goodness; the purity, disinterestedness and tenderness of home is our foretaste and our earnest of a better world. In the relation there established and fostered, do we feel through life the chief solace and joy of existence. What friends deserve the name, compared with those who a birth-right gave us. Our mother is worth a thousand friends, one sister truer and dearer than twenty companions. We who have played on the same hearth, under the lights of the same scene and season of innocence and hope, in whose veins run the same blood; do we not find, that years only make the more sacred and important the tie that binds us? Coldness may spring up, distance may separate, different spheres may divide; but those who can love anything—who continue to love at all—must find that the friends whom God himself gave; are wholly unlike any we can choose for ourselves, and that the yearning for these is the strongest spark in the expiring affections.—Christian Advocate.

BACHELORDOM AND MATRIMONY.

"Man is like a napkin, the more neatly the housewife doubles him, the more carefully she lays him on the shelf. Neither can a man once doubled know how often he may be doubled. Not only his wife folds him in two, but every child quarters him into a new double, till what was a wide and handsome substance, large enough for anything in reason, dwindles into a pitiful square that will not cover one platter—all puckers and creases—smaller and smaller with every double—with every double a new crease. Then, my friend, comes the washing bill! and, besides all the hurts one receives in the mangle, consider the hourly wear and tare of the linen press! In short, Shakespeare vindicates the single life, and depicts the double in the famous line, which is no doubt intended to be allegorical of marriage—

"Double, double, toil and trouble."

Besides, no single man can be fairly called poor. What double man can with certainty be called rich? A single man can lodge in a garret and dine on a herring; nobody knows, nobody cares. Let him marry and he invites the world to witness where he lodges and how he dines. The first necessary a wife demands is the most ruinous, the most indefinite superfluity; it is gentility according to what her neighbors call genteel. Gentility commences with the honeymoon; it is its shadow, and lengthens as the moon declines. When the honey is all gone, your bride says, 'We can have our tea without sugar when quite alone, love; but in case Gentility drop in, here's a bill for silver sugar-tongs!' That's why I'm single."

STANDING UPON DIGNITY.—Yesterday, while the session of Congress was drawing rapidly to its close, Senator Broderick became very indignant, because a favorite measure had failed to pass; and to show his resentment he availed himself of his extreme rights and called for the reading of a very voluminous bill, avowing that it was his object to exhaust the remaining hours of the session and prevent any business from being done, because his bill had been rejected. Being a Senator distinguished for "firmness," he persevered in this action for an hour or two, until finally the unanimous remonstrances of the other Senators prevailed upon him to withdraw and allow the public business to proceed. Is this statesmanship, or only pig-headedness?—[New York Times.]

THE DEATH WATCH.—This name evidently has its origin from dark and superstitious times. It is nothing more nor less than a diminutive beetle, the little creature that perforates the round-holes in the worm-eaten furniture and woodwork. "The ticking," says an eminent naturalist, "is produced by striking its head against the wood," in the progress of these perforations; and yet how often has it struck terror in the minds of the attendants of the sick, and, from communicating the omen to the patient, the skill of the physician has been completely baffled! Even yet, in isolated rural districts, the belief that it is the harbinger of death remains unshaken.

THERE is one warning lesson in life which few of us have not received, and no book that I can call to memory has noted down with an adequate emphasis. It is this. "Beware of parting." The true sadness is not in the pain of the parting, it is in the When and the How you are to meet again with the face about to vanish from your view.

THE LATEST STYLE—"Lo Nees."

Mary Jane, a city servant girl, thus describes the latest style of dress to Martha Ann, a country cousin:

"As for the lo nees the loer it is the more fashionable you are, an the less cloz you ware the more you are dressed. Miss Goolra gave me a blu silk ov hern an I cut its nec orf and susan simminz cut orf hern and we atraxx a grate dele of attenshun to our nees promenadin in the streets like other ladies and holdin up our cloz. Nobody isn't nothing now which duns't hold up her cloz and the hier you holz them the moar you are thot of."

ABOUT SO.—A bachelor says: "A woman will cling to the chosen object of her heart like a possum to a gum tree, and you can't separate her without snapping strings no art can mend, and leaving a portion of her soul on the upper leather of your affections. She will sometimes see something to love where others see nothing to admire; and when fondness is once fastened on a fellow; it sticks like glue and molasses in a bushy head of hair."

"Oh! scissors!" is the most appropriate oath for an editor to make use of when news is scarce.

Important from Fort Washita.

Two Fights with the Comanches near Fort Arbuckle.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

LEAVENWORTH CITY, March 19.

A letter dated Fort Washita, Cherokee Nation, March 6, says:

"Lieut. Powell, of Fort Arbuckle, in command of fifty U. S. soldiers, and fifty Wichita, as guides, started on a scouting expedition. When twenty miles from Fort Arbuckle they came up with a large party of Comanche Indians and a severe fight took place, in which two Comanches were killed and two soldiers wounded. The Comanches then withdrew, probably to renew the attack."

"The Comanches had previously sent in word that they were coming to take the Fort on the 1st inst."

"Capt. Carr left this place in command of fifty soldiers for the seat of war on the 4th inst."

"Another express arrived with the intelligence that another fight had taken place between the U. S. troops, fifty in number, under command of Lieut. Stanley, 1st Cavalry, and the Comanches in which eight Comanches were killed and several wounded. Uncle Sam lost one man, and two slightly wounded."

"Capt. Carr arrived at Fort Arbuckle on the 21st inst, and was marching towards the Washita Mountains, where another battle is anticipated. It is stated the Indians number upwards of three thousand."

PROGRESS OF THE SUICIDE MANIA.

A little girl in Indianapolis, lately swallowed a large dose of laudanum, but the act having been fortunately discovered in time, the little one's life was saved. She gave as a reason for the attempted suicide that she wished to join her little brother who was in Heaven.

ADJOURNED.—A board of officers, convened by the Secretary of War to devise means for reducing the expenses of the army, adjourned during the week, without making any suggestions. That certainly is a new kind of arm, which goes off without a report.

STRAWBERRIES and Asparagus are already in the New York market, from Charleston. The strawberries brought by the steamer last Tuesday, sold for $4 a quart, and the small bunches of asparagus at fifty cents a bunch.

SPANISH QUARTERS.—This depreciated coin, which has been so successfully driven out of use East, is in extensive circulation in the West. The quarters are bought up at 21½ cents a piece at the East, and put off at 25. Quite a handsome profit.

A NUT FOR BOSTON.—The London Standard speaks of the "Modern Athens" as "a rich, gay and godless city!" What do you think of your European reputation, you pious gentlemen of Boston?

EXPEDITION.—The shaft of the steamship Great Eastern, now fitting in England, although weighing forty tons, was put on board that vessel in seventeen minutes, by the agency of a new patent derrick.

PAYMENT OF TAXES.—The citizens of Chicago seem to be either unwilling or unable to pay their taxes, there being no less than 13,600 lots in that city advertised by the collector, to be sold this spring for non-payment.

THE VALLEY TAN.

KIRK ANDERSON, Editor.

G. & L. CITY, MAY 3, 1859.

We have received another letter from "A Man of but Few Words," and subjoin some extracts from it without altering in the least the sense of the whole, and with no hope either of convincing him, because he says he is a Mormon of twenty years standing, but merely to show the manner in which intelligent men apologize and reason for the corruptions of the Church.

Here is the extract:—

"There is a class of men in every community, 'if you give them an inch, will take an ell,' which has been the case with many bloody-minded men among 'this people,' who, when they have heard the Mormon leaders enforce the scriptural doctrine, that 'there is no remission of sins without the shedding of blood,' have acted on their own responsibility, and put the law in force without orders or authority, forgetting the great fundamental doctrine of 'first plucking the beam out of their own eye,' and having been placed in a little brief authority, feel their oats to such a degree, that it sticks out upon the most trivial occasions; and such of them as have been the bitterest Gentile and apostate haters, have turned out to be the greatest apostates themselves. Live and let live, and help to live, is my motto; but Bigotry and Intolerance I could never agree with; and, to me, it is more hateful in a Mormon than in a Gentile, because their religion teaches them better things.

Now, Brigham Young, as the late Executive head of the Mormons, I presume had as much right to order men to be executed for crimes proved against them while under his jurisdiction as any other presiding officer has in this or any other country, and cannot be responsible for others who have committed overt acts, any more than the Governor of the State of New York can be responsible for all the garroting, coining, counterfeiting, murdering, swindling, &c., done in the territory over which he presides; and which it seems has not the power to suppress, although he has a complete and numerous staff of officials whose duty it is to detect and bring to justice. But, you will say, how is it there are so many leading men among the Mormons who have been allowed to retain office, who have been proved to have been either the instigators or perpetrators of these overt acts? Perhaps it may be urged that Brigham had it in contemplation to deal out justice and judgment to such characters, if he had not been interfered with, and a course taken by the Federal Government to overawe him by sending troops, and assuming a dictatorial and insulting bearing, and not treating him with the respect due to a man who had strictly and satisfactorily attended to the duties of his office as Governor of the Territory."

Then our correspondent acknowledges that some of the Mormons have taken the bit in their mouth, and practised blood upon their own hook, either supposing that they were doing God and the Church service, or from an innate love of slaughter. But he farther says that this has been done "without orders or authority," which would plainly indicate or presuppose the existence of a rule that blood flowed, and would when an "order" was given. As somebody must hold this high prerogative of "Off with his head," it may be well for mortals who exist only by tolerance from a secular authority to inquire a little into it. This has been done by a portion at least of the Federal authorities in this Territory, and the result of it is that this conflict of jurisdiction (!) between the Federal Government and the Church has not a little exercised some of the "brethren."

We will take the admission of "A man of but few words," who concedes that some have gone off too quick upon the doctrine that there is "no remission of sins without the shedding of blood," and without knowing how many throats have been cut, or how much blood has been spilt by this over zeal upon the part of the faithful. It is not improper to inquire whether this over enthusiasm and mistaken right to slay, has ever been punished! The civil records of the Territory does not show it certainly, but then it is probable that the Church reprimanded them upon their haste, nor is it any excuse or justification that these slayers, although the "bitterest Gentile and apostate haters" afterwards turned out to be the greatest apostates themselves. It does not matter in the least, for the principle is clearly recognized, and men who have the God gift of life are impertinent enough to enquire who it is that holds it so cheap that a word or a nod may sever it forever.

It is against this summary and secret way of putting poor mortals out of the way that we have combated, which it is a fact that is perfectly notorious that the Federal authorities are utterly powerless to punish crimes, particularly of this grade; and why? because the church hierarchy is greater and more potent than the Government itself in this latitude, and thwarts, conceals and laughs to scorn all attempts to punish them. He says "Brigham as late Executive head of the Mormons had a right to order men to be executed, &c.; and here our correspondent, with all his shrewdness, 'lets the cat out of the bag' inadvertently, and indicates pretty plainly who holds the keys of the grand inquisition. His reasoning is bad, and his phraseology unfortunate, when he undertakes to draw a parallel between the 'late Executive head of the Mormons' and the Executive of any other sovereign state in the Union, by stating that crimes exist there, but the Governors are not responsible, etc. Our correspondent knows that the executive department is perfectly distinct, and that no man holding this trust in the States sits as Governor, Judge and Juror, and that no man's life was ever sacrificed under a simple order of do it; this would be exercising, to use the Mormon word which we have read in their sermons, onesness with a vengeance, and which they have practised with so liberal a hand.

In the political economy and social arrangements that exist in our country, crime necessarily exists, but then the common sentiment of a whole people denounce it and the courts punish it. Do they do it here or have they ever done it? And again we ask, why? because we presume in most instances it was "ordered" and in others where over zealous were too fast they were and are now suffered to go unmolested, and whether they apostatized, afterwards or not, is no matter, we have no means of knowing by the records that they ever were punished unless indeed under the onesness and summary principle they "went under" in some mysterious manner. One thing is sure the Parrish and Potter, and the wholesale slaughter at the Mountain Meadows have never received any penal consideration at the hands of those who heretofore have opposed to have dispensed justice in this Territory, while the damning fact has been developed that the federal authorities have been thwarted at every step in bringing the guilty parties to justice.

But then we are kindly assured that probably, &c., that Brigham had it in "contemplation" to punish many offenders, but the existence of the troops and federal officers, and their bearing, etc., may have prevented it, etc. We refer to the extract for the exact words.

Now, here is the whole thing in a nut shell again; Brigham I may be, "contemplated" it, in other words it was altogether discretionary, but no he didn't do it, because the troops and civil officers were sent out here, and wanted to insult him and overawe him. How, we ask? Why, we suppose by assuming and exercising the functions of officers of the Federal Government they poached upon his franchises, and therefore it was not done. If the sentence means anything at all it means this:

The "Church and State" are one thing in this Territory, two codes of laws—that is, the ecclesiastical and "higher" and the civil, a discipline and distinctiveness that is entirely at war with the spirit of our institutions, and in the very nature of our progress they ought to know that they must politically amalgamate, and whilst they are preaching morals reform some of their own social customs else they cannot come in.

Already Pike's Peak and its region is forming an embryo State, and as westward the star of Empire takes its way, the Pacific slope will be carved out into new States whose political and social relations they are bound to conform to. Mormonism has yet to meet this, sure.

They need not be particularly frightened at bayonets for contact will do the work.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Forney, the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, arrived in this city from his late visit to the southern portion of the Territory. The Doctor looks well and is in good health, and reports the Indians in that vicinity as peaceable. He brought with him three of the children, survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre, the others as will be seen by reference to another paragraph, are at the Indian farm at the Spanish Fork. The children that he brought up are apparently very intelligent and have a lively recollection of the bloody deeds that consigned their parents and friends to death, if there were no other proof know the difference between an Indian and a white man.

DEAD.—The negro boy SHEP who belonged to Capt. Hooper and who was shot several days since, by another negro boy belonging to Col. Johnson, has since died from the effect of his wounds.

This is an immense country for small excitements. For the last few days rumors have prevailed that have set our Mormon "brethren" on the alert, and if we could believe all we hear, old muskets have been burnished up, cannons that have been cached have been exhumed and choked with deadly missiles, while small arms, too tedious to mention, are on hand to play their part. The rumor is that some of the troops are coming in to the city. We can assure our dearly beloved that they need not exercise themselves too much, there are no soldiers coming unless there is a necessity for it, when they will come, sure.

MAILS.—The last Eastern mail came in four days inside of schedule time.

The regulations have been changed in regard to arrival and departure, to which we refer in another column.

The Big Mountain has finally been overcome, and as the trail is now almost complete the utmost regularity may be expected.

Our California inland came in as usual "a kiting" inside of time.

It is reported that several white men openly boast in the vicinity of Santa Clara, that they were present and assisted at the Mountain Meadow massacre. This thing has got to come to ahead, and it rests with the Government officials who are presumed to exercise some power in this Territory. "Lo the poor Indian."

LIVERY STABLES.

By reference to an advertisement in another column, it will be seen that Messrs. Williams and Jackson have gone into the livery business "heavy." They have ever been prompt in the discharge of their duty as mail carriers between this point and Camp Floyd, and obliging to a degree that entitles them to the thanks not only of us here, but our neighbors at the Camp. We are glad to see also that they will shortly receive a fine lot of buggies from California, which with a good stock of horses will let the boys "ger-lang."

Mr. Frank D. Gilbert is the agent of the mail line, always clever and accommodating, and withal good looking—but that is no fault of Frank's.

The office is one door north of the Post Office.

Our old friends Capt. A. R. Miller, of the firm of Miller, Russell and Co., and Mr. C. C. Branham leave by this stage for the East. Their old friends will doubtless be on hand to welcome them; we can "vouch" for both of the gentlemen as being "sound" upon all the questions of the day, so far of course as we understand them in the Rocky Mountains.

RETURN OF SUP'T FORNEY FROM THE MOUNTAIN MEADOWS.—J. Forney, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, in a note to Governor Cumming, announces his arrival at Fillmore, on the 27th of April, with sixteen children, survivors of the Mountain Meadows Massacre. He proposes to leave the children at the Spanish Fork Farm, until he can secure more comfortable quarters at or near this city, where they will remain until the Commissioners arrive who have been appointed to receive and restore them to their friends.

The Indians in the southern portion of the Territory are reported to be quiet.

The military command detailed as an escort for Paymaster Prince, were a few miles south of Fillmore, on the morning of the 29th.

WE understand that at a meeting of the Red Wing of the Dobe "Cycle" of the Utah encampment Independent order Sons of Malta, held a few evenings since, that Mr. KIT BRANHAM was detailed on a mission to certain parts of the States. This distinction was conferred upon him for his eminent services by the brotherhood, and Bishop Perry, in view of the magnitude of the operations, has generously conferred all his rights upon him, and resigned.

THE TABERNACLE District will be supplied next week.

CAMP FLOYD, April 27, 1859.

MR. EDITOR:—Never having seen in your paper any correspondence professing, or in reality emanating from the rank and file of the army, the circumstances has been a matter of surprise to myself and others. It has also been a subject of regret to me and many others that there has been no more interest taken in your paper by the soldiers at our Camp than we believe has been done. The object of the present communication is to make a feeble attempt to change this want of interest, or apparent neglect or carelessness of the rank and file of the army, in Utah, into something like the proper feeling on this subject.

The press is a powerful agent of instruction, and can be made one of intellectual improvement and amusement. There are hundreds of private soldiers in our Camp who can appreciate this sentiment, and who are capable of contributing to the moral and mental improvement of their comrades by the means of your paper; yet, with hundreds who have leisure and intelligence to comprehend the value and importance of the enjoyment to be so derived, no attempt has yet been made that I am aware of, to introduce a soldier's corner or column into the Valley Tan. Such an introduction would be a source of pleasure to myself to see weekly, in the paper, a part set aside and donated to the rank and file. I am certain that there are hundreds who will contribute to the idea and assist in supporting our character for intelligence, morality and love of progress. So hoping that the General commanding the columns of the Valley Tan will give the order in his next for the corner to be appropriated—columns forward, guide right, march.

You no doubt are aware of the fact that a number of our officers have been indisposed; Colonel Morrison of the 7th has perfectly recovered, and is as vigorous as ever. You of course have heard of the death of Capt. Paige and Lieut. Pettis; the former a staff officer and the latter a lieutenant in the 7th regiment. The Captain was not much known to the rank and file, but Lieut. Pettis was, and it is no exaggeration to remark that he is sincerely regretted by every private soldier in the army that knew him; he was both amiable and generous towards his inferiors, with charity for their failings and sympathy for their misfortunes, and the man who has these principles is always brave. I have never seen a man more truly lament in any community than the deceased is here; a more noble specimen of Young America we have seldom seen. The private soldier lost a true friend when the lieut. was taken from us.

May he rest in Paradise and be attached to the bodyguard of the Captain of our salvation in realms of peace, is the fervent prayer of a PRIVATE SOLDIER.

P. S. The drum is just beating for fatigue so I must say adieu.

The Latest Intelligence.

LONDON, Saturday morning.

Rumors are circulated that France and Austria have consented to suspend or diminish their armaments. There is no doubt entertained that some important intelligence has been received.

Among the rumors in circulation is one to the effect that Lord Cowley's mission had attained some important result in the interest of peace. Rumors prevail of the disorganization of the British Cabinet.

Lord Manners being stung by the response of the House to his appeal on the Church-rates question, tendered his resignation, but was induced by Lord Derby to withdraw it.

A meeting of forty of the conservative members of Parliament had sent a deputation to Premier Derby, requesting the withdrawal of the Ministerial Reform Bill. His reported reply is interpreted by the Daily News to mean that the moment he admitted his inability to grapple with the reform, he virtually surrendered his position.

Arrival of the Granada.

New York, Tuesday, March 29.

The steam-ship Granada has arrived here, bringing the remainder of the California passengers, together with upward of $1,000,000 in treasure. The principal consignees are Messrs. Wells, Fargo & Co., $237,000; American Exchange Bank, $70,000; W. T. Coleman, $70,000; Freeman & Co., $90,000; James Patrick, $70,000; Strauss Brothers, $80,000; Homes & Crowell, $60,000; S. G. Reid, $7,000; Treadwell & Co., $12,000.

General Wm. Walker sailed for California in the Golden Age.

A revolution has broken out in the Mexican State of Chiapas. The city of Comitán has been taken by assault, and many lives lost. The insurgents were meditating an attack upon other places, and the Guatemalan forces have been dispatched to the frontier to protect the property situated there.

Datos from Valparaiso to Feb. 15 had been received at Panama. The disturbances in Chili continued. Caldera and Cassijo were in the hands of the rebels. Talca was also still in their possession, and they were making formidable opposition to the government troops, which were besieging that city. The cities of Concepcion and Talcahuano, which had been in the possession of the revolted, had been re-taken. The difficulties between Peru and Ecuador still remained unadjusted. A Peruvian squadron was anchored abreast of Guayaquil, but no conflict had occurred.

The blockading squadron had seized a Spanish vessel which attempted to evade the blockade. The Spanish Consul at Guayaquil had demanded reparation for this act.

LINES

To the Memory of the late E. K. Potts, 2nd Lieutenant, 7th Infantry, who departed this life, at Camp Floyd, U. T., April 23rd, 1859.

He is gone, the good, the kind and brave;
Like youth's young dream, his life is o'er;
In silence he sleeps in a warrior's grave;
In memory past, the praise of his corps.

'Twas with hearts full of sadness we gazed
On the grave of him whom we buried;
Mournfully the last tribute was paid;
The farewell to him whom we cherished.

Then slumber in peace, thou honored one,
For earth shall never disturb thee more;
To heaven thy pure spirit has gone,
The soul's brightest and happiest hope.

G. V. SULLIVAN,

April 26, 1859. Co. I, 7th Infy.

California News Items.

JUST PUNISHMENT.—A man named John Monk has been sent to jail for fifty days for selling obscene books in San Francisco.—Exchange.

A 26 POUND LUMP.—We learn, says the Stockton Republican, that on Thursday last a miner passed through this city on his way to San Francisco, with a lump of nearly pure gold, weighing twenty-six pounds, and valued at over $5000! It was taken out of Jones' Creek, near Quartzburg, Mariposa County.

The Calaveras Chronicle says that the ghost which has recently developed itself at Vallecito, has become quite communicative, and is divulging the secrets of the county politicians.

The total amount of funds in the State Treasury on Saturday, March 26th, was $596,178 18.

Mike Mitchell, the negro maverick, was fined, in Marysville, $100 and costs, for fraudulent voting. Mike, says the Democrat, tried to help the Lecompton side of the house, and did to the extent of one vote (his own) to which he was not entitled.

The Calaveras river is said to be higher at present than it has been since 1852. The Stockton Republican says, all the bottom lands on either side of the stream are overflowed, injuring the cereal crops to a considerable extent. The wheat crop on many of the ranches, located immediately on the river banks, is entirely destroyed. The gophers, however, had a bad time of it, which will be some benefit, as they are the greatest pests in the agricultural districts.

Considerable damage was occasioned last week at Auburn, Placer Co., by the flooding of the ravine. Several bridges were carried away, and the mining claims on the ravine were damaged to the amount of $10,000 or $20,000.

The Amador-Sentinel says: The water in the Mokelumne river, Jackson, and Dry Creeks, was higher last Monday and Tuesday than ever known before by the oldest inhabitant.

At Nevada, Francis Durkin and Jacob B. Brown were killed at one o'clock, Saturday morning, by the caving of the bank of the claim of Johnson, on American Hill. Durkin was from Maine; Brown was at one time editor of the Pathfinder.

The Indian War is nearly ended on Monday afternoon, 14th March Capt. Messic, with a portion of his command, arrived in Union, bringing 117 captives, and next day Lieut. Prosser, with a detachment, brought in 53 more—making 175 now ready to be forwarded to some reservation. Lieut. Winlett is still on Mad River, where, with a detachment of twenty-five men, he has been for several days. Gen. Kibbe returned from a hurried visit to the Lieutenant's camp on the 15th, bringing with him 16 of the captives. Capt. Messic will leave to-day, with the main body of the company, to operate a few days on upper Mad River.

Th
W. Garri Orizaba, follows:
$100; first

Th
Capt. Bill been sent
He says to be hun

Th received submarin extending ex from of about inch in d covered covered w wire. It William
of Capt.
6,500 pou

Th
A birth-day at Stony 12th of A

Th
V
News tha nel Comp last week ounces of

Th
D Chinese veras cou were she affair gre lend mon leaves a China.

Th
S says: On of this ci Mail Co
a pack tr provision company route bet
The good tains on will be fr nation i

Th
H ter, a vast ranging there in them, bu chief obj the deliv has been prompte on this ci volumes they cont
this Sum the route Winter as comfort stage rou

Th
S rate lette Butterfie
rived at ing met a stream horses w lost, pass box was however

Th n through ain, the and twer

Th
H. Rhod tled the tends to atres, wit purely A mons in Prophet, death of
tor. Th Speak hi erary me that it w
—Sun E

Th
On the clock in stock, la sensibly venerabl very nea office int cold snap we are about "ci

The price of tickets sold by C. W. Garrison & Co., for the steamer Orizaba, to leave on the 5th inst., is as follows:—steage, $50; second cabin, $100; first cabin, $150 and $175.

The negro Tate, who murdered Capt. Billman, in San Francisco, has been sentenced to State Prison for life. He says he is satisfied, as he deserved to be hung.

The Alta Telegraph Company received by the Sea Nymph, lately, a submarine cable, which they purpose extending across the straits of Carquinez, from Martinez to Benicia, a distance of about a mile. The cable is about an inch in diameter, composed of copper, covered with gutta percha, the whole covered with rope yarn and galvanized wire. It will be laid down by the cutter William L. Marcy, under the direction of Capt. Pease. The cable weighs 6,500 pounds.

A ball, in commemoration of the birth-day of Henry Clay, will take place at Stony Point, Sonoma county, on the 12th of April.

We learn from the Columbia News that the Rough and Ready Tunnel Company, Table Mountain, took out last week three hundred and sixty-five ounces of gold.

During a little fight among some Chinese living near Poverty Bar, Calaveras county, last week, three Celestials were shot—one of them killed. The affair grew out of the refusal of one to lend money to another. The deceased leaves a wife and nine small children in China.

The Semi-Weekly (Cal.) Observer, says: On Monday last Geo. F. Jones, of this city, the agent of the Salt Lake Mail Company, started from this place a pack train laden with 2,000 pounds of provisions and goods for the use of the company at the various stations along the route between Genoa and Salt Lake. The goods will be packed over the mountains on mules, and from Cason Valley will be forwarded to their places of destination in wagons.

We have heard, during the past Winter, a vast deal of complaint about the arrangements along the central route, and there may have been some justice in them; but it is a significant fact that the chief object of the enterprise, namely, the delivery of the mails in contract time, has been accomplished with surprising promptness and punctuality—especially on this end of the route. This speaks volumes in favor of the company, and if they continue to manifest the same zeal this Summer, by preparing and stocking the route, by the approach of another Winter passengers can travel overland as comfortably and safely as upon any stage route on the continent.

ACCIDENT TO THE OVERLAND STAGE.—The Stockton Argus learns by a private letter that one of the stages of the Butterfield route, from San Francisco arrived at Visalia on Wednesday last, having met with an accident while crossing a stream near Pacheco's Pass. Three horses were drowned, and one mail bag lost, passengers all saved. The express box was saved, the contents of which, however, were well soaked.

The number of letters which passed through the post-offices of Great Britain, the past year, was five hundred and twenty-three millions.

"THE MORMON PROPHECY."—Mr. W. H. Rhodes has written a tragedy entitled the "Mormon Prophet," which he intends to produce in some one of our theatres within a short time. The piece is purely American, and treats of the Mormons in the time of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, and the incidents leading to the death of that arch impostor and impostor. Those who have read this piece speak highly of its dramatic and its literary merit, and entertain the opinion that it will meet with flattering success. —San Francisco Herald.

On the 26th of March, about two o'clock in the afternoon, an earthquake shock, lasting for nearly a minute, was sensibly felt in this city. It shook the venerable adobes to the centre, and came very near knocking a lot of type in our office into pi. What with earthquakes, cold snaps, west winds and hard times, we are somewhat fearful the town is about "caving in." —San Diego Herald.

[From the Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch.]

Sketches of Religious Sects.

MORMONS, OR LATTER DAY SAINTS.

